I carried Mr Kennedy into the scrub. He said, "Don't carry me a good way;" then Mr. Ken. . . . a little way," very bad (Jackey rolling his eyes). I said to him "Don't look far away," as I thought he would be frightened. I asked him often, "Are you well now?' and he said, "I don't care for the spear wound in my leg, Jackey, but for other two spear wounds in my side and back," and said, "I am bad inside, Jackey." I could see him black fellow always lie when he got spear in him (in the body); he said, "I am out of wind, Jackey." I asked him, "Mr. Kennedy, are you going to leave me?" and he said, "Yes, my boy, I am going to leave you" he said, "I am very bad, Jackey, you take the horse, Jackey, to the capitals, but not the big ones; the Governor will give anything for them." I then find up the papers. He then said, "Jackey, give me paper, and I will write." I gave him the paper and pencil, and he tried to write, and he then fell back and died; and I caught him as he fell, and held him; and I then turned round myself and cried. I was crying a good while until I got well; that was about an hour, and then I turned round, and I digged up the ground with a tomahawk, and covered him over with logs, then grass, and my shirt and trousers: that night I left him near dark.

Poor Jackey having thus paid the last duty to his master's corpse, proceeded through the scrub, the blacks pursuing him with their spears, but at length he got clear of them by walking for half a mile with only his head above water, in the creek which runs into Escape River: he continued to walk nearly all night, and slept for a short time, in the bush without a fire. At length he reached Port Albany, on the 23rd of December, where he communicated to Captain Dobson, of the Albion, the death of Mr. Kennedy, and the unfortunate fate of the expedition. The schooner then proceeded with Jackey to Shelbourne Bay, where they landed and went in quest of the three men whom Kennedy had left there, but they could nowhere be found: two natives were, however, seen wearing cloaks of blue shirts, which induced Captain Dobson and Jackey to conclude the men had perished. The Albion next proceeded to Weymouth Bay, and there rescued Mr. Carron and Goddard; in doing which they had to fight for their natives in great numbers, who, as soon as the explorers had left, rifled the camp.

Immediately on the death of Kennedy being known at Sydney, the Colonial Government passed the following high eulogium on the brave leader and his unfortunate companions:—

The Government desires to record, without delay, the high sense which it entertains of their undaunted zeal and inflexible courage, under the circumstances of great peril by which he appears to have been surrounded, especially during the last days of his life, when, after the most fatigable exertions he made, faithfully and zealously to carry out the objects of the expedition, no less than the great personal risk to which he exposed himself in his anxious endeavours to relief for the unfortunate individuals of his party, whom he found it necessary, from their feebleness and exhausted condition, to leave at Weymouth Bay; and which, however, would have enabled him, had he survived, to the warmest thanks of the Government; as it is his noble exertions have called forth the highest admiration: and it is not doubted that the deep sympathy which is felt for his sudden and premature death, at a time when he was on the eve of overcoming the greatest difficulties of his position, is warmly participated in by the whole of the community. By the calmness and distressing event, the public service has been deprived of one of its most zealous and efficient officers.

We learn from a letter from Captain Owen Stanley, R.M.S. Rattlesnake, at Sydney, that the Colonial Government have generously rewarded Mr. Kennedy's papers by sending the black man, Jackey Jackey, to Escape River by the first ship bound through the inner passage. Jackey is quite confident that he can find the spot where he planted the saddle-bags, which contain Mr. Kennedy's journals, maps, and papers; as he says the saddle-bags were planted in a hollow log of wood, where they would be protected from the weather, and, at the same time, not likely to be found by the natives.

The name of Edmund B. Kennedy has been often most honourably mentioned in connexion with the exploration of the interior of Australia; and his untimely death is not less a misfortune to the cause of science than a source of deep affliction to his estimable family. He was the son of Colonel Kennedy, of Guernsey; he reached Sydney in the year 1840, and shortly afterwards entered the service of Government as an Assistant-Surveyor. He was first stationed in the Maitland Bay district, and was employed in surveying that locality, then entirely new: this work he completed in 1843. Since that period, he had been almost constantly employed in active, arduous, and hazardous services, which he performed most ably and efficiently. In March, 1847, Mr. Kennedy accompanied the Surveyor-General, Sir Thomas Mitchell, in his expedition to the newly-discovered Victoria River, with a view of establishing by it a practicable route to the Gulf of Carpentaria. After much suffering from want of water and other privations, the party found it impossible to proceed in the proper direction, and thus ascertained the fallacy of expecting any advantage to the country from the Victoria River.

CHOLERA AT MEVAGISSEY.

A PARAGRAPH has lately appeared in the public journals, stating that, "on application to the authorities by the Board of Health, the Ordnance Department have ordered tents to be supplied to the inhabitants of Megaseney, Cornwall, for them to live under whilst their village is being cleaned." "Megaveney" is, however, a misprint for "Mevagissey," where this extraordinary aid has been rendered to the inhabitants by the Ordnance. Mevagissey is a small town on the coast of the Channel, on Mevagissey Bay, seven miles to the left of the road by St. Austell and Grampound to Truro and Falmouth.

This town has been fearfully visited by the cholera; the number of deaths from the first breaking out of the disease to the 16th last. being 111, in a population never exceeding 1800, and reduced, from the panic on the appearance of the disease, through people leaving the town, to about 1600 or 1700. We learn from the West Briton, that the most active sanitary measures have been carried into effect. Ordnance tents have been brought from the capable of holding four or five hundred persons, and have been erected at Port Mellon, on the side of a hill; and in these tents, on Wednesday the 15th, about two hundred of the people of Mevagissey were located. The fish cellars at Port Mellon are also occupied, having been divided into compartments with canvass, under the direction of Mr. Bowle, the Government Inspector from the General Board of Health. A corps of scavengers is established, and a sluice is fitted at the bottom of the river, so as to flush the water through the greater part of the town, and cleanse the filth. So many people have left, and so disastrous has been the calamity, that the town does not now contain more than five or six hundred persons. Under the advice of the medical officers, it is determined that no party shall be worked about the fishery more than eight hours in the twenty-four, so that disease shall not be brought on by fatigue; also that every attention shall be paid to the food and conduct of those employed; and that the whole of the fish brought on shore shall at once be placed in bulk without being gutted, so as to produce as little filth as possible.

The West Briton records a singular exception to the general kindness shown towards the afflicted people of Mevagissey, by the neighbouring landowners and owners of property. Mr. Kendall, the owner of some unoccupied fish-cellars at Port Mellon, was applied to by the Mevagissey authorities for the use of one of his accommodation, for locating the sufferers. Mr. Kendall refused to let the premises, when Mr. Bowle, the Government Inspector, broke open the cellars, and fitted them up for the people.

In the Sketch, with which we have been favoured by a correspondent at Mevagissey, a refers to Mr. Kendall's cellars; b, other cellars; c, hospital, recently an inn; d, cellars; e, encampment of ordnance tents; f g, h, cottages occupied by refugees; i, the Bay of Mevagissey.

REMEDY FOR CHOLERA.—Mr. Leonard, registrar and district surgeon, Charing-cross, states, that "the cases of diarrhœa running into cholera increased rapidly in my district; but as long as the white or serous hæmorrhage from the bowels has not reduced the vital power so as to produce coldness of surface, anxiety of countenance, and failure of pulse, the following practice has been of service in 114 out of 120 cases. On first application a grown-up person has had administered a draught composed of powder of opium 2 grains, sulphuric æther 20 drops, and strong peppermint water an ounce and a half, mixed, and in an hour afterwards the following styptic mixture :A table-spoonful after each liquid motion," or if less urgent 'every four hours.'

Mixture of precipitated carbonate of iron, 3 ounces;
Powder of opium, 2 grains;
Mucilage, 3 ounces;
Peppermint water, 2 ounces; mixed.

Having used at first Dr. Saunders' formula with the rubigo ferri, I stated to Mr. Linder, the chemist, 104, Strand, that I thought it would have a more certain effect if more finely levigated; he suggested the use of the precipitate, which is thus prepared—

Sulphate of iron, 3 ounces	} Dissolve each in any quantity of water,
Carbonate of soda, 3½ drachms	} and mix.

Allow the precipitate to fall; pour off the supernatant solution of sulphate of soda, wash the precipitate with two fresh waters, and allow the precipitate thus formed to be suspended in 30 ounces of water for the mixture. After checking the serous hæmorrhage, other treatment, well known to the profession, is required to restore tone."

At the farmers' weekly tea, held at the King's Head Inn, Ipswich, on Thursday week, Mr. Hall, of the Bridge Farm, placed upon the table a substantial loaf from the wheat of the present harvest. It was of good colour and very firm.

A society has been projected at Hull, under the designation of the "Hull Penny Bank," upon a plan recently adopted in Greenock, where there is a population of 40,000; and from 9000 depositors £1106 17. 4d. was collected in 701 days. The object of these institutions is to create and foster habits of regularity and frugal economy—affording an opportunity for the weekly and daily deposit of the smallest sums of money, repayable at the end of every year. At Greenock the "Penny Bank" is open every evening, and the amount received is invested in the Savings-bank.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, August 26.—Twelfth Sunday after Trinity. Prince Albert born, 1819
MONDAY, 27. Sun rises 5h. 5m., sets 6h. 57m.
TUESDAY, 28. St Augustin
WEDNESDAY 29. St. John the Baptist beheaded
THURSDAY, 30.—The Slave Trade abolished by Act of Parliament, 1833.
FRIDAY, 31.—John Bunyan author of "Pilgrim's Progress," died, 1688.
SATURDAY, September 1.—Nicholas Breakespeare (Adrian IV.), the only Englishman that ever obtained the Pontifical chair, died, 1159. Partridge shooting begins.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING SEPTEMBER 1.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M. 7 15	M. 7 40	M. 8 10	M. 8 50, 9	M. 9 25	M. 10 5	M. 10 45
A. 7	A. 8	A. 8	A. 9	A. 9	A. 10	A. 11
m. 15	m. 0	m. 30	m. 20	m. 10	m. 0	m. 0
h. 11 20	h. 11 55	h. Tide	h. 0 35	h. 0 50	h. 1 20	h. 1 50
M. 11	M.	M.	M.	M.	M.	M.
A. 11	A.	A.	A.	A.	A.	A.
m. 45	m.	m.	m.	m.	m.	m.
h.	h.	h.	h.	h.	h.	h.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"E. F. F.," St. Albans.—Declined.
"L. L. D."—We cannot avail ourselves of the sketches. The beheading-block in the Tower of London is of wood.
"M." should take his presumed old picture to a dealer.
"A. Z."—The price of Professor Smyth's "Evidences of Christianity" is 5s.
"Piston."—Apply, respecting the Pedometer, at Payne's, 68, New Bond-street.
"C. G."—It is frequently done.
"R. T." Brighton, shall be attended to.
"A. R. M." must give six months' notice, so as to leave on the same quarter-day he entered.
"P. C. G.," Manchester.—Carter, Bowyer, 36, Store-street, Bedford-square.
"Buttercup" and "W. C. G."—Your questions are not sufficiently explicit.
"Brighton."—Xylos are a Scotch breed of oxen.
"A Constant Reader."—A ship letter cannot be sent as you wish.
"M."—Apply, respecting the Photographic Apparatus, to Horne and Co., 113, Strand-street.
"A. C. K.," Atherstone.—Declined.
"A Subscriber for Two Years."—Trinity Church, Paddington, is engraved in No. 178 of our Journal.
"Pertinax."—We cannot inform you.
"Jessie."—The poetry of "The Treasures of the Deep" is by Mrs. Hemans, the name by her own desire.
"E. J. W."—Lola Montes was the assumed Spanish name under which she appeared on the stage.
"J. B. O'."—Declined.
"A. M. W."—Apply to the secretary of the college.
"A Subscriber," Sheffield.—The phrenological state the development of the skull of Rush to have corresponded with his career of evil.
"W. W. P." and "J. O. T. A."—Yours are cases for a solicitor.
"Graf."—Apply to Williams and Norgate, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden.
"A Constant Reader."—Declined.
"S. G.," Bamphall-street.—The books in question are 5s. each, to be had of any bookseller.
"J. S."—We do not know of any work published on the subject.
"A Cork Subscriber."—We do not interfere in disputes at cards.
"W. C.," Great Grimsby.—We have not room.
"J. S." Lurgan.—We have not seen the work.
"W. H. V." Truro.—Apply to Mr. Pickering, publisher, Piccadilly.
"J. H." Long Acre.—Declined.
"A. Q." Truro.—We cannot advise you.
"A. B."—The Haymarket Theatre will be reopened next month.
"J. M. M." Whitehaven. We believe not.
"G. F. B." Aylesham, is thanked; but we have not room for the lines.
"H. B." Guernsey.—Foster on "Book-Keeping."
"J. O. M." Wexford.—We have not Mr. Ward's work: it may be had at No. 1, Paternoster-row
"J. W." Isle of Wight.—Thanks. We have not room for the subjects suggested.
"Juliet," Burningham.—Consult the most eminent actor in your own town.
"W. G." Cirencester.—We cannot give any opinion on the matter.
"Hamlet."—Apply to the directions of "Shakspeare," as also edited by Mr. Charles Knight; and the edition of Miss Edgeworth's works, published by Baldwin.
"Geo. Edmondson," "A Regular Subscriber," Making-place Hall, "E. T. C., Nantwich, and "A Subscriber," Athlone.—The address of Mr. Mounfield, the inventor of the new Liverpool gas-light apparatus, may be learned of Mr. Hare, 108, Fleet-street.
"Zeta."—To register an invention, apply at the office, 135, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
"A Lover of Fun," Hull.—Give your order to any music-seller.
"Nethouse" The work may be seen in the British Museum.
"J. S."—Taylor's "Short-hand," improved by Harding.
"Pisentor."—The work belongs to many proprietors.
"Jute" and "W. A. P."—We cannot spare room to give pronunciations, generally.
"L. E. L," Isle of Wight.—Say £50 per annum.
"Chirurgus."—Fitzpatrick.—A small "Companion to the Greenhouse" may be had of Groombridge and Sons, Paternoster-row.
"W. C. O."—The Ordnance Maps may be had of Mr. Wyld, Charing-cross.
"J. B."—We cannot inform you.
"D. S." St. John's, Newfoundland.—We have not room for the illustration.
"Maria."—The war impressions sent are from a sixpence of Elizabeth and a small copper medal. There is no value attached to either.
"A. H. T." Apply by letter to either the Secretary of Legation or the Consul of Austria in London. There is a Prussian Consul in Dublin.
"Argent." The widow of a person entitled to supporters has a right to continue them.
"B." The supporters are not included.
"An Old Subscriber" gives the following information in answer to the enquiry of a former correspondent:—Sir William Baynes, Bart., and Sir Edward Stuart Baynes, Consul at St. Petersburgh, are of different branches of the same family, which diverged from a common ancestor several generations back. Sir W. Baynes bears a different coat of arms. The Baynes's of Westmoreland and Shropshire a deuth's head in addition to the other bearings; but the elder branch, that of Sir E. S. Baynes, of which Edward Dacres Baynes, the present Governor of Montserrat, is the representative, was neither the death's head nor the vulture.
"1 W."—Apply to a solicitor.
"A Subscriber."—On receiving the appointment of Solicitor-General, a member of Parliament must vacate his seat.
"Sunken," Cephalonia.—Papers more than seven days old cannot be sent postage free to foreign parts.
"R. E." "E. L. C." Waltham; "Jesse;" "Dramatis;" "J. E. C." Snisp.—Declined.

FARNHAM.—The Royal party arrived in Lochleng on Monday, and not on Sunday, as stated in our Journal of last week.—At page 115, col. 3, para. 10 and 11, for Salisbury read Dorchester.

BOOKS, &c. RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

James's Guide to Building Societies.——Sinai and Golgotha.——Earp's Handbook to New Zealand.——Hurstthouse's Account of New Plymouth.——Before and After (3 vols.)——Man from the Cradle to the Grave.——The Pilot.——Sense and Sensibility.——Tales of the First French Revolution.
MUSIC.—My Childhood's Days.——The Duchess Polka.

THE QUEEN IN IRELAND.—The auspicious event of HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO IRELAND, and the "Excursions to the Lakes of Killarney," is Published in a separate Part of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, entitled the "Part for Ireland," in an appropriate wrapper, containing Six Numbers of the Journal, price 3s.

THE DOUBLE NUMBER OF THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS—containing "The Royal Visit to Ireland"—published August 11, may be had at the original price (1s.) until September 8, after which the charge will be 2s.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, AUGUST 25, 1849.

It was but a few days ago that the Hungarians seemed marching from success to success, and gaining such splendid and repeated victories over the combined forces of Austria and Russia, as to justify the anticipation that they would finally triumph in their arduous struggle. The fortune of war appeared to be on their side, and the very elements to be contending in their favour. Now, however, the case is reversed, and accounts have been received so positive and so circumstantial as to leave no room for doubt that the war is virtually at an end, by the defeat and unconditional surrender to the Russians of General Görgey, and the total rout of General Bem. The details, as far as yet known, will be found in another column. Some of our contemporaries, who saw no merit in the Hungarian cause, except when Fortune smiled upon its arms, and whose policy is to support the winning side, have already begun to qualify the praises which they formerly bestowed upon Kossuth and his able generals. We shall not imitate their example, but reiterate, in the day of their adversity, the opinion we expressed when they held the hordes of Russia in check, that their cause was a good one, and ably conducted, and that it deserved a better fortune than has befallen it. At the same time, while it is evident that the Austrian Emperor without Russian aid would have been unable to coerce the Magyars into obedience, there is ground to hope that the support of Russian bayonets will not be sought or given in the settlement of the future relationship in which Austria and Hungary must stand towards each other. A still more difficult task than the gaining of battles lies before the Austrian Court. The Hungarians, by a wise concession to reasonable and just demands, and by a prudent oblivion of the past, must be converted into firm friends and faithful subjects, or Russian aid will have been given in vain, and at some future, and not remote period, the struggle now closed will be recommenced with three-fold animosity. It is idle in the face of the Hungarian question to attempt to justify the bunders—not to say the crimes —of Austria, by picking holes in the private or public reputation of the men who have been thrown by circumstances into the foremost rank of the Hungarian leaders. The question must be considered without reference to such matters as these, upon the broad ground of its own merits. Unless the Emperor of Austria and his advisers will look upon it in that light, and endeavour—untrammelled by personal considerations or dislikes, or any questions of vengeance or severity—to convert the Magyars into friends, it is not even the overwhelming masses of troops that the Emperor of Russia may spare for her protection that will save from future destruction the Empire of Austria.

CONSIDERABLE alarm has been felt in Ireland in consequence of reports that the potatoes were again diseased. It appears, however, that these reports have been much exaggerated, and that, although the blight has certainly appeared in many districts, its ravages have not been, and are not likely to be, extensive. A very considerable breadth of land has been planted with potatoes this year. The peasantry, to use the words of Lord Clarendon, "cling with desperate pertinacity" to their favourite food; and not alone the great bulk of the lower classes, but all the rate-payers and landlords of Ireland look to the potato as the only means of enabling the country to pass the next twelvemonth without a renewal of the horrors of the years 1846-47. A failure of the crop would be indeed disastrous, and we rejoice to learn that as yet there is no real reason to anticipate such a calamity. The crop of oats and barley is beyond the average. The green crop—of which Ireland this year has exhibited a far greater breadth than was ever before known—is also abundant, and generally the harvest promises to be favourable. But so much, unfortunately, still depends upon the potato, that any change in the weather is watched with the most painful anxiety. Every gleam of sunshine sends hope into the hearts of millions. So fair was the prospect only a few days ago, that the workhouses even in the distressed districts of Cork and Kerry were rapidly thinning. In the month of July, the persons receiving out-door relief in the Tralee Union amounted to 10,000, and the workhouses were full. At present, the numbers receiving out-door relief are but 4000, and there is room in the in-door lists for 1000 persons. Similar accounts have been received from other districts; but the satisfaction derived from such statements has been checked by the apprehension that the potatoes have already suffered to some extent. There appears, however, to be no real ground for alarm, as the latest accounts represent that a sufficient quantity of the new crop has been already stored, to render anything like a dearth impossible.

THE Overland Mail conveys intelligence from India of a nature calculated to raise a suspicion that the power of the Sikhs has not yet been sufficiently humbled, and that another attempt will be made by their leaders against British supremacy, unless vigorous measures be immediately taken to prove to them the utter hopelessness of further hostility. The rumour, and it is yet but nothing more, alleges that Gholab Singh, our nominal and very cold ally during the late war, has, by some means not very clearly explained, contrived to possess himself of no less than one hundred and fifty pieces of artillery. It further states that he has increased his army beyond all necessity; and that disclosures have been made with reference to the complicity of Gholab in the plans of Shere Singh, which make it expedient for the Governor-General of India to keep a sharp watch upon his movements. It appears to be certain that he has been desired by the British Government to disarm, and that he has replied to the command by stating his own willingness to give up his guns, but the impossibility of his enforcing such a decree upon his unwilling soldiery. If the order have been really given, the British Government has no alternative but to compel obedience; but it seems scarcely credible, with the signal defeat of Shere Singh and the annexation of the Punjaub staring him in the face, that Gholab Singh or any other chieftain should run the risk of a second war. Such a game would be too desperate; and Gholab Singh, unless compromised to such an extent as to make desperation his only chance of safety, is too prudent and sagacious a man to play it. The intelligence, though not positive, is well calculated to excite anxiety for the next arrivals.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT BALMORAL.

Her Majesty and the Prince, accompanied by the Prince of Wales, the Princess Royal, Princess Alice, and Prince Alfred, and attended by their suite, arrived at Balmoral on Wednesday, the 15th inst.

The Court has since enjoyed uninterrupted retirement. Her Majesty and the Prince take their usual walking exercise. The Queen drives out daily in the Forest, and Prince Albert has already been out deer-stalking more than once. On Sunday, her Majesty and the Prince, with the Royal household, attended divine service in the parish church at Crathie.

Lord John Russell arrived at Balmoral on Wednesday, on a visit to her Majesty. Sir George Grey has left on his return to the south.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge is expected in town next week, from Hanover.

The Duke and Duchess of Bedford have arrived at the Viceregal Lodge, Dublin, on a visit to the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland and the Countess of Clarendon.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Worcester have gone to Ireland for the autumn. The noble Marquis's otter hounds and stud have just been started for the county Tipperary.

The Earl of Ellesmere, accompanied by his two younger sons, has left town on a continental tour.

THE LORD CHANCELLOR.—The noble and learned Lord, with Lady Cottenham and family, is at present staying at the Ship Hotel, Dover. The Duke of Wellington visited his Lordship a few days since.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE NORTH KENT RAILWAY.—The half-past eight o'clock train from London arrived on Sunday evening safely at Woolwich, the station of which place was much crowded on both sides, owing to the London trains being insufficient to convey the passengers. The entrance to the platform is by arches on the down-train; this train had just begun to start for Gravesend when a frightful scream was heard—a woman had fallen from the platform between the carriages. The last two carriages passed over her chest. She was conveyed into the station, but soon died.

The American idea of floating appears a little odd to the European mind. A general fast-day, which had been proclaimed by the President of the Republic on account of the cholera, has been solemnly kept through the country, in a novel fashion. The churches were filled, and prayers were devoutly offered up for the cessation of the cholera, but food was not rejected. Of all the religious denominations in the Union, the only dissentients from the observance of the fast were the Mormons, who denounced the measure as an act of hypocrisy, and General Taylor, in advising it, as "a base hypocrite, a bloody robber and murderer, and a usurper of power and authority that did not belong to him."

POSTSCRIPT.

THE BERMONDSEY MURDER.

ARRIVAL OF MRS. MANNING IN LONDON.—On Friday (yesterday) morning, at [illegible], Mrs. Manning arrived at the Euston station of the North-Western Railway (in custody of three officers of the Edinburgh police), by the mail train from Edinburgh. Inspector Sheppy and Sergeant Durkin, of the Adelphian, were in readiness to take charge of the prisoner. She was very respectably dressed in a brown silk gown, light shawl, white straw bonnet, and a white veil over her face. She walked with a firm step from the carriage, across the platform, to a cab that was there in readiness. At ten o'clock she was brought before the magistrates at Southwark police-court was in readiness, and placed in the felons' dock, when Mr. Yates, the Inspector of the M division, charged her with being concerned with another in the murder of Mr. Patrick O'Connor, a gauger in the Customs, at No. 3, Minver-place, Bermondsey, on the 9th instant. Having been proved, the case was remanded for a week, and she was conveyed [illegible] Gaol

THE ADJOURNED INQUEST.—Mr. Carter, coroner for Surrey, resumed yesterday (Friday), at the Leather Market Tavern, Bermondsey, an inquiry into the circumstances of the deceased's death, which he had formally opened on Saturday last. A vast quantity of evidence of a deeply crim natory character against the accused parties was adduced, and the proceedings, after extending over eight hours, were adjourned.

VISIT OF THE COUNT AND COUNTESS DE NEUILLY TO THE LORD MAYOR.—On Thursday the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress were honoured with a visit from the Count and Countess de Neuilly, at the Mansion House, at half-past two o'clock. They were accompanied by La Duchesse d'Orleans, Le Comte de Paris, and Le Comte de Chartres, and attended by La Duchesse de Marnalier, Le Marquise de Vieas, General le Comte de Chabannes, General le Comte de Dumas, &c. In order to give the ex-King and Queen some idea of the magnificent room in which the hospitality of the Lord Mayor of London is principally displayed, his Lordship caused the Egyptian Hall to be decorated, the Mansion-house plate to be exhibited, and the tables to be laid out in the style of splendour to which they have been accustomed during the present mayoralty. The drawing-room and the lofty corridor were prepared for the reception of the illustrious guests with equal care, and in the long parlour a dejeûner à la fourchette was laid, consisting of every delicacy of the season, and of wines of the finest quality. His Lordship invited the following distinguished persons to meet their late Majesties:—The Governor and Deputy-Governor of the Bank of England, the Chairman of the East India Company, the Deputy-Chairman of the East India Company, the Lord Provost of Edinburgh, Mr. Masterman, M.P., and Miss Masterman; Mr. Hume, M.P., &c. Having been shown over the Mansion House, the Royal party partook of dejeûner, at which some complimentary toasts were given, and they withdrew at four o'clock.

DEATH OF MR. ASTON KEY.—It is our painful duty to record the death of this highly-esteemed and justly-celebrated surgeon, from a sudden attack of Asiatic cholera, at his house in St. Helen's-place, Bishopsgate, which melancholy event took place at seven o'clock on Thursday morning.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY.—Yesterday (Friday) morning, about eight o'clock, a dreadful circumstance took place on this railway, near the metropolis. A portion of the line, over which the express [illegible] passed to the up where the earth was emptied into, was insecure, and undergoing repair. Two trucks, drawn by two horses, were at some distance from the bridge, when suddenly the horses, frightened by the engine, ran behind the trucks. The driver was called on to stop, and cautioned as to the danger. The foreman, with an oath, ordered the driver to go on; and, on arriving on the centre of the bridge, it broke in: the beams or props, together with the horses and trucks, fell upon a driver named Jones, who was killed on the spot, whilst others narrowly escaped. One of the horses was also killed. The foreman was given into custody.

FIRE ON THE NORTH KENT RAILWAY.—Yesterday (Friday) morning), about two o'clock, a serious destruction of property took place at the North Kent Railway Station, opposite Charlton, Kent. The fire originated at some buildings on the platform, which with their contents, have been almost totally destroyed.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

From yesterday's Paris papers we learn that M. Léon Faucher continues seriously indisposed

The President of the Republic will assist at the inauguration of the Strasbourg Railway, on the 2nd of September; and that of the Lyons Railway on the 9th of September.

M. Odilon Barrot is about to propose a revision of the penal code.

The gentlemen forming the Peace Congress held their second sitting on Thursday. Much less interest was excited than at that on the previous day.

ITALY.

The latest accounts from Turin state that the Chamber of Deputies will grant the indemnity of seventy-five millions of livres, demanded by the Government of Austria. The committee to whom the question was referred has reported in its favour.

AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY.

Nearly all the German journals consider the war with Hungary at an end; for they contend that whether the submission of the insurgents be general or confined to the troops under Görgey will be of little moment, since the fact of the Dictator's surrender is undeniable, and this must have such a moral effect upon the whole army as to render all further attempts to oppose the Russo-Austrian troops worse than useless. Ozmorn and Arad, it is said, have surrendered to the imperialists.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

OXFORD

The late Dr. Dowdeswell, Canon of Christ Church for the long period of forty-one years, has bequeathed the sum of £1000 to be expended in the restoration of the Cathedral, or on some public building belonging to Christ Church

ST. MARY'S HALL.—George Sidney Read, M.A., of this Hall, has been appointed Professor of Logic and Metaphysics in the new Government College at Cork. Mr. Read was placed in the first class in literis humanioribus in Michaelmas Term, 1846.

ORDINATIONS.

The Lord Bishop of Worcester purposes to hold his ordinations in future on the Sunday following the Ember Days of the spring and autumn in each year. The Lord Bishop will hold his next ordination in the Cathedral Church of Worcester on Sunday, the 23d day of September next. Candidates for deacon's orders are desired to make application to the Bishop through his Lordship's examining chaplain, the Rev. H. J. Stevenson, Hallord Vicarage, near Worcester, for permission to offer themselves, stating their age, college, academical degree, and usual place of residence. It is not necessary that the candidate so applying should be provided with a title at the time of his application. All candidates are requested to send their papers to his Lordship's secretary, Charles Evans, Esq., College-yard, Worcester, on or before the 1st of September next, after which due notice will be given of the time and place of examination.

The Lord Bishop of Lichfield purposes to hold an ordination for the diocese of Lichfield on Sunday, the 23d day of September next. The examination will commence at ten o'clock on Thursday, the 20th of September. Candidates for deacon's orders are requested to notify immediately to the Bishop their intention of offering themselves for ordination; and all candidates are requested to transmit the requisite papers, on or before the 1st of September next, to the Bishop's secretary. Candidates for deacon's orders from the University of Cambridge are required to send, with their other papers, a certificate of having passed the voluntary theological examination in that University. For forms and instructions, apply to the Bishop's secretary, R. W. Hand, Esq., Stafford.

The Lord Bishop of Chester intends to hold his next ordination at Chester, on Sunday, the 23d day of September next. Candidates are required to transmit the necessary papers, on or before the 1st of September, to Charles T. W. Parry, Esq., Chester; or John Burder, Esq., 27, Parliament-street, London, his Lordship's secretaries.

CONFIRMATIONS

The Lord Bishop of Exeter will hold confirmations at the following places and times: Sowton, on Wednesday, the 10th of September next, at two P.M.; at Broadclist, on Friday, the 21st, at eleven A.M.; at Ide, on Monday, the 24th, at ten A.M.

The Lord Bishop of Rochester purposes to hold confirmations at the following places in the neighbourhood of Dorking; notice will be given to the clergy of the days on which the confirmations will be held:—Chipping Barnet, Watford, Rickmansworth, Hemel Hempstead, St. Alban's, Ware, Cheshunt, Epping, Harlow, Ryefield, Much Hadham, Barkway, Saffron Walden, Thaxted, Great Dunmow, Bishop's Stortford.

MANCHESTER CATHEDRAL.—The Lord Bishop of Manchester has been pleased to collate the venerable archdeacon Rushton, and the Rev. F. R. Raines, Rural Dean of Rochdale, to Honorary Canonries in the Cathedral of Manchester.

CRANBORNE.—The neat little church at Alderholt, in the parish of Cranborne, Dorset, which has been erected at the expense of the Bishop of Salisbury, was consecrated on the 2nd inst. by the Bishop of Salisbury. The Rev. A. J. Lowth has been appointed by the Vicar of Cranborne the first minister of the new church.

PREFERMENTS.—The Rev. R. S. Barter to the rectory of Grinton, Somerset. The Rev. C Bridges to the rectory of St Mary's, Wearmouth. The Rev. R E. Reynolds to the vicarage of Whittlesey, St. Andrew, Cambridgeshire. The Rev. R Evans to the rectory of Wenvoe, Glamorganshire. The Rev. F. H Sewell to the vicarage of Cockersham, near Lancaster. The Rev. J. Theodosius to the vicarage of Renton, Staffordshire. The Rev. D. F. Jarmin to the incumbency of Bedford Chapel, Bloomsbury. The Rev. C. Bellamy to be chaplain to the new Borough Prison, Plymouth. The Rev. T. Bacon to be chaplain to the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, Eyde.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

EXTRAORDINARY MURDER.

On Friday week a discovery was made of the mutilated remains of a man in a cap of the [illegible] in a house in New Leather-market, Bye Weston-street, Bermondsey. The house in question is at present unoccupied, but belongs to Mr. Coleman, a builder, residing at No. 1. About six months ago he let it to a man named Manning, a discharged railway servant, who was accustomed to be frequently seen at their house, and subsequently in the company of Mrs. Manning. The name of the deceased was Patrick O'Connor: he was a gauger in the Customs at the London Docks, where he had for some time received a salary of £300 a year. He was in possession of nearly £4000 in foreign railway bonds and securities, which was well known to Manning and his wife, who were frequently in the habit of visiting him at his lodgings, 21, Greenwood-street, Mile-end road

On Thursday morning, the 9th inst., he left the latter place about half-past seven o'clock, and at five the same afternoon he was met by a friend near Manning's house, where he said he was going. He was not afterwards seen by any of his friends, but being in the habit of leaving home for days at a time, no notice was taken of it at the time; however, not returning on Saturday, handbills were circulated, offering a reward of £10 for his discovery.

Nothing further has been heard of O'Connor for some days, Barnes, an officer of the K division, was employed to look after him; and on that officer going to the deceased's lodgings, he found that his boxes had been opened, and emptied of all their valuable contents. He then ascertained that Manning had been there alone on Thursday evening, the 9th inst., which excited his suspicion.

On Saturday last Barnes and Burton, of the M division, proceeded to No. 3, Minver-place, which had been lately occupied by Manning, when Mr. Coleman, the landlord, afforded them easy access. Barnes had heard that Manning had used threats towards O'Connor, which led him to suspect that some unfair means had been used against him; he accordingly suggested to Burton the necessity of digging in the garden. They did so, but found nothing to excite their suspicions. Barnes then looked over the lower part of the house, and on searching the back-kitchen, he removed one of the flags, and, buried deep in the ground beneath, he discovered the body of the unfortunate man. He was lying on his face, with his legs doubled up, and tied with a rope to the haunches.

Mr Lockwood, a medical gentleman who was called in, examined the body, and found that the deceased had been murdered where he had been shot, as the slugs were discovered near the temple or frontal bone. The back of his head was also completely smashed as with a hammer.

Manning and his wife had all their goods by a broker in Bermondsey-street, on Tuesday, the 14th inst., and immediately absconded. Mrs. Manning, when at the murdered man's lodgings on the day he left and the day after, unlocked the drawers of the mahogany bedstead in the front room, for the purpose of doing so in his absence. £4000, chiefly consisting of foreign railway bonds and shares, and about £300 in cash, were taken away by her on the occasion.

The police have been ever since on the alert, and on Tuesday last Mrs. Manning was apprehended in Edinburgh. She is a very fine woman, a native of Lausanne, in Switzerland: her maiden name was Marie de Roux, and she had been formerly a lady's maid in the service of the Duchess of Sutherland. At the time of her arrest there were found in her possession letters addressed to the deceased to herself; also the following property:—Seventy-three sovereigns in gold, one £50 note, and six £10 notes—five of these latter bearing the numbers advertised as having been paid to Manning on Saturday, the 11th inst., on the presentation of one of deceased's cheques at the Bank. In addition to this money, there was also found on her all the missing scrip of the Sambre and Meuse and Boulogne and Amiens Railways, known to have been in the possession of the deceased man, and some articles of wearing-apparel belonging to him.

The circumstances connected with the arrest are curious. The cabman who conveyed her from her house on Monday afternoon, the 13th inst., having been found after much difficulty, on last Monday, by Shaw, a detective officer, he furnished the following intelligence. He said that about three o'clock that day he had with her three large boxes and a carpet bag. She directed him to drive to the London Bridge Station of the South-Eastern Railway, stopping, however, at the door of Mr. Ash, stationer and printer, of No. 1, Wellington-street, Borough, where she purchased half a dozen plain white cards, on four of which she wrote directions respectively as follows:—"Mrs. Smith, passenger to Paris, to be left till called for;" "Mrs. Smith, passenger, to be left till called for;" "Mrs. Smith, passenger to Paris, to be left till called for:" and "Mrs. Smith, passenger, to be left till called for." These were then, by the woman's desire, conveyed into the luggage office, with directions that they were to be taken care of until called for. She then re-entered the cab, and was driven to the London and North-Western Railway station, where she remained about a quarter to six o'clock. Kirk, the cabman, saw her luggage, consisting of one box and a carpet-bag, taken into the station; and, having been paid the amount of his fare, drove away and saw no more of the woman. Subsequent information, the police found it to be perfectly correct, and that a female passenger, whose luggage was marked with the name of Smith, had left the Euston station on the morning of Tuesday, the 14th instant, by the 6 15 A.M. train, having booked her place through to Edinburgh.

This intelligence was telegraphed to the police of the latter place, who in the early part of last week succeeded in arresting the above stated, in a house where she had taken an apartment. On Wednesday morning, at ten o'clock, the wretched woman was brought up from the Calton-hill gaol, for exam nation before Mr. Sheriff Arkley, Edinburgh, charged with the murder, or participating in the murder, of Patrick O'Connor. After being duly cautioned, she replied, and was asked what she had to say to the charge. She replied that she had nothing to say; whereupon she was remanded back to prison to await the arrival of officers to convey her to London

Manning has not yet been arrested He is supposed to be somewhere in the west of England.

DEATH OF A BURGLAR.—On Monday an inquest was held, before Mr. Bedford, at the St. James's workhouse, Poland-street, on the body of Henry Edgar Blackwell, aged nineteen. Mr. John Rables, farrier to her Majesty, residing at 332, Oxford-street, deposed that on Sunday morning last, between one and two o'clock, his servant disturbed him, and told him that two men were endeavouring to break into the first floor back window of the house. Witness immediately proceeded downstairs. The sight of him appeared to frighten the men. He heard a groan, and, on further investigation, discovered the deceased lying in the yard quite dead, his skull fractured, and the head surrounded by a pool of blood. After some further evidence of a general character, Mr. Thomas Wilkinson, a medical gentleman, of No. 270, Regent-street, was called. He briefly described the injuries which deceased had suffered, and gave it as his opinion that deceased must have fallen almost perpendicularly upon his head. Dennis Sullivan, who characterised himself as a "bad character," spoke to the generally depraved character of the deceased. Verdict, "Death from fractured skull, when attempting to commit a burglary."

DARING BURGLARY.—About nine o'clock on Saturday evening last, the premises of Mr. George Simmons, cut-glass, chandelier, and lustre manufacturer, 531, New Oxford-street, were broken open and robbed of a large amount of richly-cut glass, consisting of decanters, lustres, jugs, and tumblers; bottles with silver tops, amounting in value to from £40 to £50. The outer-door in Oxford-street was supposed to have been entered by false keys, but the inner door by a crow-bar, which the thieves left behind. A man about five feet four inches in height, of a sallow complexion, and shabbily dressed, was seen with a basket load of glass, about a dozen doors from the scene of the burglary, by a policeman in the E division, and some of the articles falling out of the basket, were broken, several pieces of which were picked up, and have been since identified

BIRTHS AND DEATHS FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, AUG. 18, 1849.—Registered in the week ending Saturday, Aug. 18, 1849. Deaths:—Males, 1116; females, 1114: total, 2230 of which 1230 were by cholera, 188 by diarrhœa. The deaths from all causes in the last seven weeks were 1070, 1305, 1741, 1931, 1997, 1905, and 2230; the deaths from cholera, 169, 339, 678, 783, 936, 823, and 1230. The deaths from cholera exceed those in the previous week by 407; but in that week the mortality declined. The population is about 2,320,000, so that one in 1900 of the inhabitants now die weekly. The deaths from all diseases, except cholera, are 1000, which is the average number of the season; and 539 were at ages under 15, 956 at the ages 15–60, 205 at the age of 60 and upwards. Of the 1230 persons who died from cholera, 318 were under 5 ages of 15; 721 were 15 60, and 191 were 60 and upwards: it carries off an excessive proportion of people in the prime of life. 597 males and 633 females died of the disease last week; at an earlier period of the epidemic, the deaths of males exceeded those of females. Of 1230 persons who have died of cholera in London since September, 1848, 3524 died on the south side of the Thames. It has now crossed the river. The mortality last week increased in the districts of St. George, Southwark, Newington, and Lambeth; it broke out with extraordinary violence at Greenwich; and on the north side of the Thames, in Stepney, Shoreditch, and Bethnal-green, there were 86, and 153 deaths were registered from this cholera. In the last two weeks were 35 and 125 in Bethnal-green, 21 and 93 in Shoreditch, 24 and 55 in Stepney, 42 and 76 in the districts of the east, west, and city of London, comprehending the jurisdiction of the city police. So called, 7 and 24 in Marylebone, 17 and 34 in Westminster district, 5 and 20 in Chelsea. The excessive mortality must be viewed with great regret. Looking to the numerous reports of the effects of general sanitary measures, and of domestic medical relief placed within the reach, or carried to the homes of the people, it is quite evident that the measures now in operation are unequal to the emergency. The deaths of which the sole or greatest claim for public succour are not idle, habitual paupers, but the hard-working artizans, in a state of want, due to some parishes the arrangements are such that medical relief is not procurable directly from the district medical officers, who are, to the utmost extent of their powers, discharging their painful duties with praiseworthy diligence and humanity. In a disease which so often attacks in the night, and is fatal in twenty-four hours, the poor have to procure orders before they can be treated. Unless some change be made in these simple administrative arrangements, the mortality from cholera may be higher than it has yet been in London. It is one of the characters of epidemic diseases, that in some years their fatality is inconsiderable, in other years excessive. Since 1832 and 1833, cases of cholera have appeared in the tables, but the deaths in the second week of August during the past five years have fluctuated from one to twenty-three.

THE POOR AND THE CHOLERA.—On Tuesday, at a meeting of directors of the poor of the parish of St. Pancras, held at the new vestry-room, King's-road, Camden-town, Mr. Carrickwarden Healey in the chair, Mr. McGahey, the clerk to the board, read the fifth notification from the General Board of Health, dated on the 17th instant, with respect to the measures to be taken with a view to the prevention of the spread of cholera. After some discussion, the board of directors resolved to carry out that portion of the recommendation which relates the production of an order from the relieving officer necessary for a medical man to visit a patient; and it was ordered that all the medical officers of St. Pancras be requested to attend every case immediately on application, without an order from the relieving officer.

PARLIAMENTARY AND FINANCIAL REFORM.—On Monday evening, a preliminary meeting, for the purpose of forming a branch society of the National Association in the parish of Lewisham, was held at the Beehive Tavern, Sydenham. The Rev. Wm. Linwood in the chair. The following resolution was agreed to: "That it is desirable that the members of the National Reform Association resident in Sydenham form themselves into a local association for the purpose of extending the influence and promoting the objects of the council; that the association meet weekly, viz. every Monday evening at the Beehive Tavern, Sydenham, to enrol members, hear lectures, and generally advance the cause of parliamentary and financial reform.

NEGLECT OF MEDICAL OFFICERS.—On Tuesday, Mr. Payne, jun., held an inquest at the Three Tuns, High-street, Southwark, on the body of Thomas Lee Payne, who died of cholera, at the Talbot inn, within a few doors of the place where the inquest was held. Deceased, it appeared, had twice sent for medical aid, and had since applied for admission to the workhouse, but no attention was paid to him. Mr. Foljambe, the landlord of the Talbot, stated that deceased resided at his house, where he was subject to quarter. On Saturday night he came from his bed-room, and complained of being ill of cholera. He was recommended to go to Mr. Woolridge, the parish surgeon of St. Saviour's. The medical gentleman gave him a pill, but refused him a draught, as he had no bottle with him. Deceased at the time vomited and purged violently. Deceased then went to the parish workhouse, where he was refused admission. He was then taken back to the surgery of Mr. Woolridge, who said the case was out of his district, and could not be assisted by him. Mr. Candell, another of the parish medical officers, was then applied to, but unsuccessfully. After hearing the evidence, which included the parochial medical officers, the jury returned as their verdict, "That they unanimously agreed that the deceased died of cholera;" and we also beg to express our deep regret that the deceased had not proper medical aid, and that he was not visited either by Mr. Woolridge or Mr. Candell, the medical officers appointed to the parish of St. Saviour's.

EMBEZZLEMENT BY POOR-RATE COLLECTORS.—In the act passed in the late session for the relief of the poor there is a provision with respect to indictments for offences which will obviate the difficulties that have arisen in indictments against such persons for embezzlement. It is now provided by the 11th section of the 12th and 13th Vic. cap. 103, as follows: "And whereas the guardians of certain unions and parishes under the said recited act and of the Poor-Law Commissioners, and of the Poor-Law Board, are empowered to appoint collectors of poor-rates and assistant overseers, for some one or more of the parishes comprised within their union, or for their parish, as the case may be, who collect and receive the money and other property of the parish or parishes for which they are appointed, and in cases of embezzlement or larceny of such money or property by such collector or assistant overseer, difficulty has arisen as to the proper description of his office in the indictment or other proceeding: Be it therefore enacted, that, in respect of such indictment or other criminal proceeding, every collector or assistant overseer appointed under the authority of any order of the Poor-Law Commissioners, or the Poor-Law Board, shall be deemed and taken to be the servant of the inhabitants of the parish whose money or other property he shall be charged to have embezzled or stolen, and shall be so described; and it shall be sufficient to state any such money or property to belong to the inhabitants of such parish, without the names of such inhabitants being specified."

VENICE.

VENICE, the "glorious city in the sea," which poets have for ages enshrined in their verse, and with which painters have ennobled their art, has for some time been beleaguered by the demon of war, and been threatened with entire destruction. A strong appeal to the sympathies of the besieging powers of Austria, on behalf of the doomed city, has appeared since our last publication, in a long letter addressed by the Archbishop of Paris to the Minister of Foreign Affairs; the rev. prelate considering the case of Venice as a question of justice, of humanity, and of civilisation, and proceeding as follows:—

> Austria refuses all concessions and all promise of a constitution; she no longer listens to the timid representations of the Powers: she refuses to negotiate. She will hear only Radetzki, the rebel city the conditions of its present and future existence. And [illegible] Venice? Is she a city of luxury only? Are there no arts flourishing in her confined walls? Venice in which the slightest generosity is to be seen? Does she not impose on that unfortunate city the necessity of choosing between disgrace and despair? To surrender at discretion, that is to say, to burden the people with an enormous load of debt, under which they cannot fail to fall; to drive from the city 300 officers of the marine, with their families, and to send [illegible] into exile! to select amongst the first citizens 40 victims on whom to wreak the pardon of an amnesty shall not be applied; to re-establish an unbridled and unlimited military despotism, with an indefinite state of siege, accompanied by daily executions and arbitrary taxes. Such, it is said, are the conditions of Austria. this is the manner in which she [illegible] to a people who dared at a particular moment to take advantage of the favourable circumstances to remember their former existence, and to wish [illegible] Venice cannot accept such conditions, and she is resolved to bury herself beneath her ruins rather than subscribe to them.

The rev. prelate then asks whether France or civilised Europe can permit these conditions to be imposed; and next urges the peaceful interference of France, and England also, by way of remonstrance with Austria, who, it is thought, won't not long resist, notwithstanding her known obstinacy. "That she should push things to the last extremity," says the Archbishop, "if required to do any thing dishonourable to her, may be comprehended; but when she is only asked not to be too cruel and too inexorable towards an unfortunate people, become by the force of arms, and the play of revolutions, an integra part of her empire, who can credit that she will refuse to listen to the voice of humanity and of universal civilisation? The accompanying pair of pictures, engraved from Drawings by Viscount Maidstone, present two of these scenes—one characteristic of the external peculiarities of the city, and the companion illustrative of its internal curiosities, which have excited the admiration of ages, but which the mysterious of modern warfare would soon reduce to a heap of ruins.

We shall not describe the construction of the city upon 72 islands, with pile and stone foundations for the buildings; or its division by the grand canal, and subdivision by 146 smaller canals, crossed by 306 public bridges. It is approached from Vienna by 41¼ miles of railway, and from Padua by 23¾ miles; a stupendous bridge carrying the line over the Lagoon of St. Giuliano, and entering Venice on the island of St. Lucia.

Rogers gives a general description of Venice, which is pleasing, and was correct when written; but the railroad has superseded the passage from the mainland in a gondola, and in more senses than one interfered with the poetry of the scene:—

> There is a glorious city in the sea
> The sea is in the broad and narrow streets,
> Ebbing and flowing; and the salt sea-weed
> Clings to the marble of her palaces:
> No trunk of man, no footsteps to and fro,
> Lead to her gates. The path lies o'er the sea,
> Invisible; and from the land we went,
> As to a floating city—steering in,
> And gliding up her streets, as in a dream,
> So smoothly, silently, by many a dome,
> Mosque-like, and many a [illegible] tower,
> The sunrise ranged; and, as we drew along
> By many a pile, in more than Eastern splendour
> Of old the residence of merchant-kings;
> The fronts of [illegible] with alien hand
> Still glow—with the richest hues of art,
> As though [illegible] would turn them back to [illegible]

One of the peculiarities of Venice is that her finest buildings can only be seen from the water, out of which they seem to rise. The first of the accompanying views—The lagoons, with the fine church of St. Maria della Salute—is an illustration. This cluster of buildings is situated at the mouth of the Grand Canal: The Dogana del Mare, or Custom House, is a noble edifice, with a magnificent marble colonnade, and a beautiful tower, crowned with a statue bearing a golden globe, to represent the world, emblematic of the ancient glory of the city. Santa Maria della Salute is one of the 120 churches of Venice, and was erected in 1632, as a monument of thanksgiving after the cessation of the great pestilence, of which 60,000 of the inhabitants are said to have died. It is a large octagonal edifice, crowned with a large dome and two smaller ones, and most sumptuously ornamented externally. Interiorly, the dome is supported on eight pilars. The side contains eight arched [illegible]; and there are eight recesses, seven of which are chapels, and the eighth forms the entrance. The effect is beautiful and picturesque. The interior is splendidly decorated by Titian, in his first manner; by Tintoretto, Salvati, and others. The right foreground of the illustration shows a portion of the Molo, near the southern end of the Paratta, showing one of the two famous granite columns, surmounted by the celebrated bronze "winged lion of St. Mark," and the symbol of the far-extended power of the Venetians. This point is considered as "the state entrance" to Venice from the sea.

In the left foreground we have the Orologa, or clock-tower, on the northern side of the great square, and in a portion corresponding with that of the Campanile; both these structures being almost regarded as appendages to the Cathedral of St. Mark, in front of which they stand. The Orologio is named from the dial which shares in the centre, resplendent with gold and azure, the sun travelling round the zodiacal signs which decorate it, and marking the time of twice twelve hours. Above are two figures of bronze, which strike the said hours upon a bell.

John Evelyn relates in his "Diary," that, towards the middle of the seventeenth century, a man is stated to have been killed by the famous clock in the square of St. Mark: which is repairing the works, he stooped his head in such a position, and in such a nick of time, that the quarter-boy struck it with his hammer, and knocked him over the battlements.

The Virgin, of gilt bronze, and, above, a gigantic lion of St. Mark, upon an azure and stellated ground, decorate the two upper stories. The tower was designed by Pietro Lombardo, 1494. The wings were added in the sixteenth century. Beneath the tower is the entrance to the Mercería, where nearly all the principal shops are concentrated.

VENICE.

FROM DRAWINGS BY VISCOUNT MAIDSTONE.

THE DOGANA AND THE CHURCH OF STA. MARIA DELLA SALUTE, FROM THE HARBOUR.

This view is taken from the roof of the western porch of the Cathedral of St. Mark, in the centre of which stand the celebrated bronze horses. They were brought from the Hippodrome, at Constantinople, being part of the share of the Venetians in the plunder when that city was taken by the Crusaders. Antiquaries hesitate concerning the date and even the country of these horses. Their most generally received history is that Augustus brought them from Alexandria, after his conquest of Antony, and erected them on a triumphal arch at Rome; hence they were successively removed by Nero, Domitian, Trajan, and Constantine to arches of their own; and in each of these positions it is believed they were attached to a chariot. Constantine in the end transferred them to his new capital, since their removal from whence they have occupied their present position at Venice, except during their short visit to Paris, whither they were re-conveyed in 1815 the captain of the vessel selected for this service claiming descent from the great Dandolo. The horses are of gilt bronze, and not in the highest style of art. Poets have mostly been accustomed to regard Venice as ——the pleasant place of all festivity,

The revel of the earth, the masque of Italy

This sunny picture has, however, its reverse; for, curiously enough, we find a great living poet (Moore) thus premonitorily picturing the realities of the scene:—

If you would save some dreams of youth
From the torpedo touch of Truth,
Go not to Venice, do not sail
Your early fancies with the sight
Of her true, real, dismal state—
Her mansions, foul and desolate;
Her slave canals exhaling wide
Such fetid airs as work more deaths
Of secret guilt by their side,
Where step of living thing or gress or creeps
And those black barges plying round,
With melancholy, plashing sound,
Seem like a city where the dead holding her last visitation;
And all, ere long, will be at rest—
The dead, save rest of dead men,
So look'd at nightfall oft to me
That ruin'd City of the Sea.—Metropolitan Magazine, 1832.

Who does not remember how exquisitely Lord Byron has sung the olden glories of Venice? The following stanza has, however, a peculiar interest at this moment, especially in association with the appeal of the Archbishop of Paris to the honour of England as well as France:—

Thus Venice, if no stronger claim were thine,
Were all thy proud historic deeds forgot,
Thy choral memory of the lofty drama,
Thy love of Tasso should have cut the knot
Which ties thee to thy tyrants: and thy lot
Is shameful to the nations,—most of all,
Albion! to thee: the Ocean-queen should not Abandon Ocean's children, in the fall
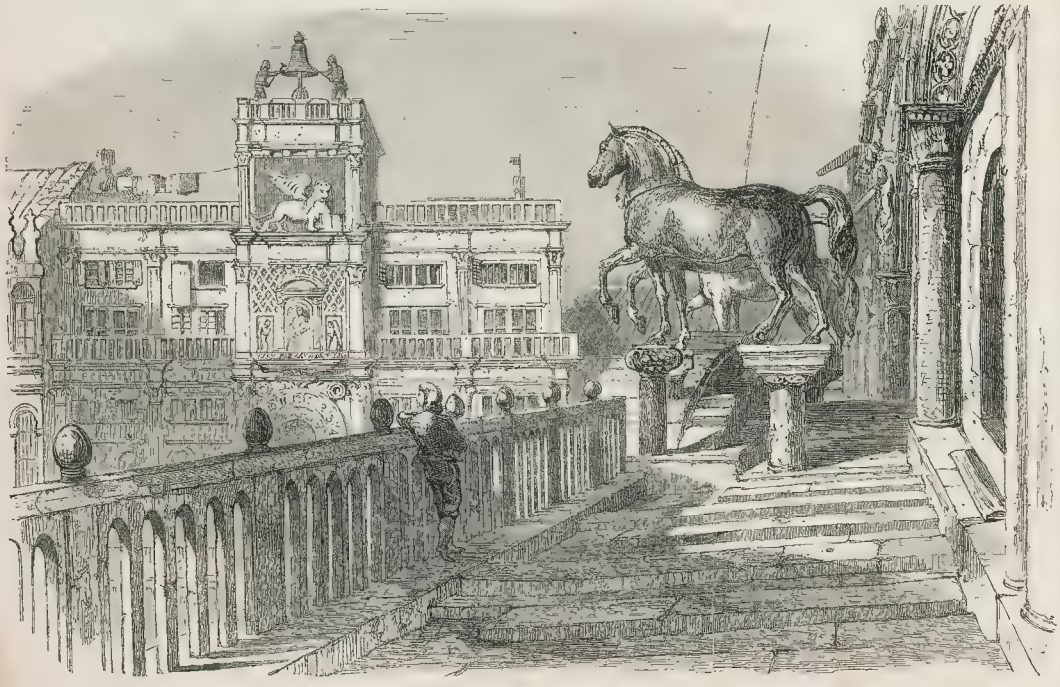
Of Venice, think of thine, despite thy watery wall.



TOWER OF THE OROLOGIO THE HORSES OF ST. MARK, &c.

WATERING-PLACES OF ENGLAND.

WORTHING, FROM THE BEACH.

It is an ill wind that blows nobody good;" and the Revolutions of the Continent—the wars and the rumours of wars—the marchings and the counter-marchings of civil and uncivil battalions—the roar of artillery—the elevation of demagogues and the humiliation of Kings—and all the confusion worse confounded that reigns in central Europe, have made the hearts of one class of Englishmen and Englishwomen—the lodging-house keepers—rejoice. They have kept English travellers in England, and diverted from the long-used foreign channel into the home canal the fructifying gold of the tourist. People who, in ordinary seasons, ere Louis Philippe and M. de Lamartine threw politics off the rail, thought of the Long Vacation but as a time for visiting Italy, Switzerland, and Germany, have this year condescended to remember that there are numerous spots on the sea-coast and in the interior of England, Wales, Scotland, and Ireland, deserving of all admiration from men of leisure and refinement; that their own country, in fact, is rich in the loveliness of scenery, and offers attractions to all the lovers of the grand, the wild, the secluded the peaceful, and the beautiful. There can be no doubt that, in one of the great charms of foreign travel, our home scenery is in some degree deficient. It is not entirely the change of air and of locality that is refreshing to the jaded mind and weary brain of the overwrought man of business; it is the change of manners, customs, language, and character, that offers most novelty, and therefore most delight, to him who seeks relaxation. For this reason, foreign travel will always have its votaries, whenever the luxury is obtainable without such risks to comfort, or even to life and limb, as now attend it in many of the once favourite haunts of English idlers on the Continent. This class of tourists may even yet indulge themselves in the manner they prefer. Egypt is not shut up. Asia Minor is accessible, and as safe as ever it was; though that is not saying much for it. Norway, with its magnificent mountains and fiords, offers hospitable welcome to all who come with money in their pockets. Brother Jonathan loves all tourists who do not come to perpetrate a book of travels; and the hardy adventurer may try his fortunes in Mexico or Brazil, and give us, with advantage to the world, a book when he returns. But such wanderers are few; and the watering-places of England will, for a time at least, command the patronage of the vast majority of people, who delight at this season to throw off care and indulge in draughts of a pure atmosphere, after long residence in this smoke and filth-producing, but, alas! not smoke and filth-consuming metropolis.

Some of these places, both inland and on the coast, have long suffered from comparative neglect, and have been shorn of their ancient glories. The present convulsions of European politics will have the effect of making them better known; and, with the view of doing our part in guiding the wandering steps of those who pursue health, pleasure, and recreation, we have commenced the present series of Illustrations of the

TUNBRIDGE WELLS, FROM THE RACE-COURSE.

"WATERING-PLACES OF ENGLAND." We commence our series with Worthing and Tunbridge Wells.

WORTHING, SUSSEX.

WORTHING lies 56 miles from the metropolis, and 10 miles west of Brighton, by the road over the suspension-bridge, across the Adur, at Shoreham. The air is remarkably mild; the sands extend for a considerable distance, and the bathing is excellent. Not many years ago, it was an obscure fishing station; but at the close of the last century, when fashion caused the best points of the southern coast to be resorted to for health and pleasure, this town sprang up, and in consequence of its proximity to the Downs, and the richness of the surrounding country, it has continued to increase. The streets, squares, &c. are well built. Like Brighton, the town follows the line of the sea, the Esplanade extending for three-quarters of a mile along the shore.

Among the earliest patrons of Worthing was the Princess Amelia, who visited the place so early as 1798. In 1805 it had much increased in the number of elegant and first-rate houses, "particularly since the Princess Amelia bathed here." In 1807 the Princess Charlotte of Wales visited Worthing: it was, also, a favourite residence of her daughter, the Princess Charlotte.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS, KENT.

IT is like going back a century and a half to walk under the old trees of the Parade at Tunbridge Wells. The trees, the houses, and the walk are alike antique and quaint. The walk appears to have undergone but little external change since the days when gentlemen wore bag-wigs and swords, and strutted in all the majesty of court suits through public thoroughfares; and when ladies wore rouge and patches, high-heeled shoes and hoops—indulged in the luxury of monkeys instead of lapdogs, and talked scandal about the beaux and belles of the court of Queen Anne. As it is represented in the old drawing of Loggan, in the year 1748, it exists now, with a few changes, it is true, but with none of sufficient magnitude or importance to make it look very much less juvenile than it did then.

The town is situated in a beautiful country near the boundary-line between the counties of Kent and Sussex. When the famous Dudley North, to whom it owes its origin and prosperity, first tasted the waters of the spring, this part of Kent was considered very wild and rude; but now, with the sole exception of the fine common, at the foot of which the town is built, the landscape is rich and varied, and presents at every point some striking and beautiful view of waving woods and swelling hills. The Parade, however, turns its back upon the landscape, and all its splendid panoramas. The invalid, for whose benefit it was originally constructed, desires shelter from, rather than exposure to, the free air of the common, when indulging in a walk and a gossip, after the morning's draught of the chalybeate; and those who love scenery must leave the fountain and its attendant nymphs, and seek it upon the higher grounds of the common and the immediate vicinity.

Dudley North had seriously damaged his constitution by early excesses of various kinds, and had retired for awhile from the dissipations of the capital to recruit his health in retirement at Eridge House, not far from Tunbridge. He accidentally discovered a spring of water upon this common, the sourness and red appearance of which excited his curiosity. He took some of the water away in a bottle—submitted it to the inspection of a fashionable physician of that day, who pronounced it to be strongly impregnated with iron, highly valuable, and exactly suited to restore to their pristine vigour such constitutions as suffered from the effects of excess, or to impart vigour to constitutions that had never been strong. He highly recommended its use to Dudley North, who took the physician's advice, drank the water himself, recommended it to his friends, made the place fashionable, and laid the foundation of a prosperity which has never since departed from it. The real friend of the age of eighty—but whether from the effects of the Tunbridge Wells water we need not affirm, although, no doubt, the people of Tunbridge Wells were, and are, well contented that the fact should be so stated.

A new impetus to the fame of the Tunbridge water was given in 1630, by the arrival of Queen Henrietta Maria, wife of Charles I., who was sent to the Wells by her physicians, for the re-establishment of her health, after the birth of her son, Prince Charles. In 1670, Dr. Rowzee published a treatise on the waters, and named them "The Queen's Wells." The place participated largely in the galeties of the Restoration; Charles and his Queen, sojourning there for two months, as pleasantly chronicled in Grammont's "Memoirs." In 1652, we find John Evelyn and his wife, and Lady Browne, "in their little cottage by the Wells." In 1670, the Duke and Duchess of York, and their two daughters, the Princesses Mary and Anne, were at the Wells; in 1688, the Princess Anne of Denmark was some time there. Richardson the novelist, has left us agreeable gossip of the manners of the place in 1748, and a drawing of the Upper-walk, with the names in his hand-writing of the visitors then at the Wells; among whom are Dr. Johnson, Gilbert (Bishop of Salisbury), Lord Harcourt, Colley Cibber, Garrick, Beau Nash, Miss Chudleigh (afterwards Duchess of Kingston), the Earl of Chatham, the Speaker Onslow, Lord Powis, Lady Lincoln, Mr. Waiston, Mrs. Johnson, &c. Cumberland, the dramatist, wrote several of his plays here. Among the Royal visitors are the late Duchess of York, the Princess Sophia, and the Duke of Sussex. Her Majesty Queen Adelaide, the Duchess of Kent, and Queen Victoria (when Princess) have also honoured the Wells with their visits. Queen Adelaide was sojourning here a short time since; and the Duchess of Kent is at this moment staying here. On Friday last, the 17th, the anniversary of her Royal Highness's birthday was celebrated by public dinners, fireworks, and other rejoicings.

Tunbridge Wells may now be reached by railway, by a branch from the town of Tunbridge, on the South-Eastern Line.

TUNBRIDGE CASTLE

This once important fortress was held by Richard de Tonbridge at the Domesday Survey, and the town must likely grew around it, and was subordinate to it. Richard was a Norman, a kinsman of the Conqueror, and here, it is said, he built the castle, and congregated his retainers and vassals. After the death of William I., Richard espoused the cause of Robert Curtoise, in opposition to William Rufus, who had seized the Crown; when the latter marched an army to Tunbridge, and compelled Richard to submit. In the civil troubles of the reign of Henry III., the Castle was besieged and taken from its owner, Gilbert Rufus, Earl of Clare, Gloucester, and Hereford, by Prince Edward; and during the siege the garrison burnt the town. The history of the Castle is a long list of sieges, burnings, sappings, and slaughter.

Of the fortress, some fragments remain, seated on the northern bank of the river, which formerly flowed not only round the whole in a broad moat, but also around the base of the keep-tower. The exterior walls enclosed an area of about six acres. Part of the outer walls remain; also the lower portion of the water-tower, the mound of the keep, and the entrance gateway, flanked with round towers, and tolerably perfect, presenting a fine specimen of the baronial castle. The towers are very massive, and the only external apertures are the oillets, through which the archers discharged their arrows. In front of this entrance was a drawbridge across the moat, the archway and the interior doorways being guarded by portcullises. The towers are divided into four stories or floors, the lower being dungeons or prisons, and the upper a large and noble hall. It is contended that this part of the castle was raised in the time of King John or Henry III.

Our illustration shows the inner face of the castle remains adjoining which is a well-appointed dwelling-house; advantage having been taken of the very fine situation to render the site of the stronghold grounds a picturesque scene of rural quiet.

MUSIC.

THE MUSICAL FESTIVALS.—For the guidance of amateurs, we have to remind them that the great musical gatherings this year are at Liverpool, Birmingham, and Hereford; the first commencing on Monday next, the 27th inst., the second on the 3d of September, and the last on the 10th of September, each festival lasting through the week.

ITALIAN OPERA AT MANCHESTER.—Three performances, on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, have been announced for this week, with Madame Sontag, Signor Calzolari, Signor Bellati, Signor Meriani, and the two Lablaches, with Balfe as conductor.

DEATH OF SIGNOR DE BEGNIS.—A letter from New York, of the 8th instant, announces the death, from cholera, of the celebrated basso-comico, Signor Giuseppe de Begnis. He was born at Lugo, in the Pontifical States, in 1794; and in 1813 made his first début at Modena, as Geronimo, in Paer's opera, "Marco Antonio." After playing at Sienna, Ferrara, Badia, Trieste, Cesena, Mantua, Udine, Rome, Milan, Parma, Bologna, in succession, it was at the last-mentioned town that he was united to the beautiful Mdlle. Ronzi Dandini, in "Cenerentola," was expressly written for De Begnis by Rossini. After seasons at Florence, Vicenza, and Verona, Rossini engaged De Begnis and his wife for the opening of the new theatre at Pesaro, and they appeared as the Podesta and Martha in "La Gazza Ladra." Afterwards they sang at Lucca, and in 1819 made their débuts at the Italian Opera House in Paris, with extraordinary success. After passing three brilliant seasons in the French capital, they engaged at the King's Theatre in London, in 1821, for £1200; 1822, £1800; 1823, £1900; 1824, £2200. In 1826 and 1827 De Begnis was engaged alone at £800: his popularity in this country was very great, and his rounds in the country at festivals and concerts were remarkably successful. Separation having taken place between De Begnis and his wife, the career of the Signor of late years was confined to the United States and South America, where he accumulated a handsome fortune. De Begnis's comic acting, like that of Rovere, was essentially Italian, that is, of the exaggerated Polichinello school. Mdme. Ronzi de Begnis is still living, and appeared at the Coventgarden Theatre as Norma a few seasons since.

MUSIC ON THE CONTINENT.—The spirits of the opera-going public have been raised by the announcement of the re-opening of the French Grand Opera on Monday, Sept. 3, with a new ballet for Carlotta Grisi, of which Perrot is the author, and M. Adolphe Adam the composer of the music.—Madame Viardot is to return in October, to resume her part of Fides, in "Le Prophète." Mdlle. Antonia de Mendi, cousin of Madame Viardot, has just been married to M. Leonard, a distinguished violin professor of the Brussels Conservatoire.—M. Meyerbeer passed through Berlin on the 10th, on his way to Gastein, a watering-place in Salzburg, in Austria.—Richard Wagner, the famed German composer, is now at large in Switzerland.—Weber's "Der Freyschütz" has been performed at the Italian Opera in Barcelona, with the greatest success [illegible] Mdlle. Rosa Garcia, and Signor Ronconi. Madame Sanchioli, Signor Rovere, Signor Tamberlick, Signor Bassi, and Signor Gardoni.

GRAND NATIONAL OPERA.—A general meeting of the professors and amateurs interested in the establishment of an English Opera House in London took place on Wednesday, for the consideration the report of the committee nominated, as to the best means to be adopted to establish a National Opera in this country. Sir H. R. Bishop was in the chair, and the resolutions of the provisional committee, with some verbal amendments, were agreed to. It was then resolved that the following committee should be appointed to carry out the objects of the meeting, and to report progress in the month of December next:—Sir H. R. Bishop, Messrs. Balfe, Planché, Chorley, Sims Reeves, Harrison, Morris, Grüneisen, Lucas, Blagrove, Lindley, and T. Chappell. Mr. Stretton was named Hon. Secretary, and Mr. T. Chappell Hon. Treasurer. It is proposed to arrange such a plan of action as will secure the working of the lyric establishment for three seasons, to begin in October, 1850, and that although English talent is to be fostered and encouraged, foreign aid is to be employed, whenever the efficiency of the ensemble can be secured. The choral and orchestral forces, as well as principals, are to be first-rate.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

On Saturday, the third of the additional nights, this theatre closed with "Le Nozze di Figaro," in which Sontag, Alboni, and Parodi sung with great brilliancy. After the performance the National Anthem was sung. The entertainments closed with the popular ballet of "Les Plaisirs d'Hiver." The house was crowded; and the principal artistes, at the close of the opera, were greeted with prolonged applause.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

The subscription season, which commenced on Thursday, March 15, was completed last Saturday, the 18th inst., on which occasion Donizetti's "Lucrezia Borgia" was performed, for the benefit of Signor Tamberlik and Mdlle. Nissen's "Prophète." The Duchess of Cambridge, the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, and the Princess Mary of Cambridge were present in her Majesty's box. The acting and singing of Grisi and Mario in "Lucrezia," and of Viardot and Mario in the "Prophète," were immensely applauded, and the recalls were frequent. The coup d'œil, when the suil encs rose at the singing of the National Anthem, was superb. Viardot, Angri, and Grisi sang the three verses with such power and fervour that the most loyal demonstrations were elicited.

Although the subscription terminated on Saturday, the example of the two former seasons, in giving the additional representations at reduced prices, for the private boxes, pit, and orchestra stalls, was followed this week; and, on Tuesday, "Le Prophète" was played for the tenth time; on Thursday, the second and third acts of the "Huguenots," for the fourteenth time, and the second and third acts of the "Prophète" were performed; and, on Friday, the farewell night of the season, Mozart's "Don Giovanni" was represented for the fifth time, with the novelty of Madame Viardot's first appearance in this country in the part of Zerlina, one of her most popular assumptions at St. Petersburgh and in Germany.

The fourth season (1850) will commence early in March with a musical triumvirate in the direction, viz. Mario, Tamberlik, and Costa.

SURREY.

The production of Meyerbeer's "Huguenots" in an English form has been attended with entire success. It is a satisfactory sign of the times to find that the Surrey audiences will listen to such a grand musical work, occupying upwards of three hours in the performance, with such attention and enthusiasm. Miss Romer performs Valentina with great feeling and spirit; and the Raoul of Mr. Travers presents some clever points in the vocalization. Weiss's fine voice tells in Marcel, but he is not gifted with much histrionic ability. Leffler's Nevers is artistically rendered. Mr. Lodor deserves great credit for the general efficiency of the execution, considering the limited resources at his command. The most unexceptionable performers in the "Huguenots" is the Page of Miss Poole, who, both in acting and singing, can claim a comparison with any of her foreign competitors in the part. She is nightly encored in the second cavatina.

THE LAW OF BANKRUPTCY.—There are 278 clauses in the new act to amend and consolidate the laws relating to bankrupts, which act will take effect from and after the 11th of October next, except in so far as any part is by statutes now in force. By this act power is given to the commissioners to make rules and orders for regulating the practice of the Court, to be approved of by the Lord Chancellor. As to business agents, solicitors, accountants, brokers, and messengers in London are to be reduced to four. In certain cases an appeal is given to the Vice-Chancellor sitting in bankruptcy, to the Lord Chancellor, and to the House of Lords. As to adjudication of bankruptcy is to be obtained by petition either by a creditor or creditors, or by the trader himself, which petition is to be filed, and the Court, by virtue of the same, and without any fiat or special authority, is to have full power over the bankrupt and his property. It is imperative on the Court, under a trader's petition, to dismiss the same unless he can show an available estate, besides expenses, of at least 8s. in the pound. In case a trader against whom a petition has been filed is about to leave England, or to remove his goods with intent to defraud his creditors, he may be arrested, and his goods seized; he may apply to the Court to be discharged. Notice is to be given to the trader before all adjudication of bankruptcy. Under this act a trader, unable to meet his engagement, may petition for protection, and if three-fifths of his creditors agree to accept his terms, they are to be binding on all; so under a deed of arrangement, if six-sevenths agree, they are to bind the rest. In what are called the penal clauses there are nine offences specified to preclude a bankrupt from protection.

The Queen has been pleased to give and grant unto Francis Richard Haggitt, of Belmont, in the county of Hereford, Esq., M.P., her royal licence and authority that he and his issue may, in compliance with a condition contained in a codicil annexed to the last will and testament of his maternal great uncle, Dr. Richard Prosser, take and henceforth use the surname of Wegg Prosser, in lieu of his present surname of Haggitt, and that he and they may bear the arms of Wegg and Prosser quarterly with his and their own family arms.

The Duke of Richmond, availing himself of the new act for the amendment of the the law of entail, has applied for authority to disentail the waste estates of the Marquisate of Huntly—of the estates of Glenlivat and Kinrara; and of the baronies of Strathnaven, Kincardine, and others, in the counties of Aberdeen, Banff, Moray, and Inverness.

IRELAND.

THE CORPORATION OF DUBLIN.—Captain Larcom and Mr. Lynch, Q.C., have been appointed to re-divide the Dublin wards. The names appear to have given satisfaction. Mr. Lynch was the junior counsel for the Crown at the treason trials of last year.

THE CHOLERA.—The mortality is considerable amongst the upper classes in Dublin and Kingstown, and in various parts of the country.

THE FARMERS AND THE POOR-LAW.—In the decreased unions there is exceeding difficulty in enforcing the payment of poor-rate from the smaller class of farmers. Even in the northern union of Cavan, it has been proposed to extend the time for payment until the completion of the harvest.

IRISH REPRESENTATIVE PEERAGE.—George John Danvers, Earl of Lanesborough, has been chosen by a majority of votes to be the Peer to sit in the House of Lords of the United Kingdom, in the room of John Earl of Mayo, deceased.

PROJECTED PIER AT QUEENSTOWN, CORK HARBOUR.—The inhabitants of Queenstown, late Cove, are most anxious for the expected visit of the Lords of the Admiralty at their port. It is supposed that arrangements will now be speedily made for at once commencing the long-talked-of pier at Queenstown, to the erection of which their Lord-ships are known to be favourable. The miserable landing-place where the present mail-packets of the town has been for years conducted would be a disgrace to the meanest fishing-village; how much more so to the shores of a town which looks over at the stronghold, handsome storehouses and quays of Haulbowline Island, only a few hundred yards distant. These works were raised with massive stones from the ancient Carrigacrump quarries, which have been, from time to time, employed in all the large public and private works in the neighbourhood of Cork, and are far from being exhausted. It is proposed about two miles (?) from the present quay, in the bay, and only three miles water-carriage from Queenstown, a free and continuous supply of this admirable limestone might be depended upon, and a pier speedily raised. The Government will, we are sure, be anxious to carry on the work with the greatest celerity, consistent with strength and security. In this they will be readily met by the inhabitants of the town and the landed proprietors around. To the Lords of the Admiralty Queenstown especially looks for support in this matter; for the pier will be hardly a greater convenience to the town than to the men-of-war in the harbour.

ARRANGEMENTS WITH TENANTS.—The trustees of the extensive estates of the Earl Annesley, in the counties of Down, Cavan, Queen's County, and Meath, have issued a circular, authorising the agents on those estates to grant a reduction to all tenants of 15 per cent. on the half-year's rent due November, 1848; and a reduction of 20 per cent. on the half-year's rent due May, 1849. These estates are chiefly under the direction of the Court of Chancery, and managed by kind and considerate agents.

POST-OFFICE, AUGHRIM.—The Post-Office, Aughrim, County Wicklow, is now established, and the necessity of reconstructing the board. The report was adopted, the interest on extension stock ordered to be paid, and a resolution carried requesting four of the directors to retire at the meeting for the election of three directors of navigation in their places, to form a pro tempore board of directors in conjunction with Messrs. Flews and Wood, two of the old board. The meeting was then adjourned; and on the business being completed with the above resolution at a board meeting, an extraordinary meeting of the company was held, the Lord Mayor of York (James Meek, Esq.) in the chair, at which the report of the committee of management was adopted, and resolutions passed, directing the board of directors to take legal proceedings against Mr. Hudson, a bill in equity for such purpose being already prepared. After some further resolutions for carrying out the recommendations of the report, the meetings were adjourned till the 4th of October, when the fourth and final report of the committees will be laid before the proprietors. In the course of the proceedings it was explained, that on the last half of the year 1848, after paying all expences, there is a deficit of £38,789, which has to be provided for.

LLYNVI VALLEY.—Aug. 23: London: Half-yearly Meeting: W. Matthews, Esq. in the chair. The report stated that there had been a slight improvement in the tonnage of the traffic during the last half-year, and there was every prospect of an early opening of the South Wales Railway, which would materially increase the receipts on this line. The chairman then moved the adoption of the report, which was carried unanimously. The declaration of a dividend, at the rate of 2½ per cent per annum, upon the paid-up capital of the company (without prejudice to the claim made on behalf of the holders of the new 2000 ordinary stock created under the agreement), was confirmed by the shareholders. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the business of the day.

MIDLAND.—August 22: Special Meeting: Derby: Mr. Ellis, M.P., in the chair. After considerable opposition from certain shareholders, who complained of the incompleteness of its statements, the shareholders adopted the report of the committee of investigation, which declares certain differences between the accountants and the auditors committee. The accountants set down £776,000 as charged improperly to capital account, in the relaying of the line, declaration of stock, and the interest on unproductive capital. The committee strike a total of £1,485,000 as wrongly charged to capital account. They recommend an addition to the present direction, and a stipendiary chairman. They report on the guaranteed lines, in which the directors are found to have acted fairly, and not to hold an undue interest. If these items of capital as suggested by the accountants are laid aside, £2,500,000 will be required for all the authorised works. If the works are stopped, £2,000,000 will remain for discharge of debts. The Leeds and Bradford will, it is expected, soon average its guaranteed income. The works in hand will require £800,000. Reduced dividends have been necessitated by the increase of capital for extensions, and by the unprofitable guaranteed lines. General working economy is suggested. Arrears should be forthwith paid. The dissentient shareholders were assured that fuller explanations should be given respecting the Leeds and Bradford Guarantee and the South Midland lines.

LONDON AND SOUTH-WESTERN.—Aug. 18: Half-yearly Meeting: Nine-elms: Mr. Chaplin, M.P., in the chair. The report declared a dividend of 3½ per cent. The capital entitled to dividend has increased, but there is no falling off in the revenue, nor is the average expenditure greater. After the present month all the branches will have been completed. Strict economy has been practised. All repairs and renewals are at the expense of revenue. The directors anticipate a progressive amendment in the dividend, as there are no outstanding liabilities, as all the lines in course of construction are nearly completed, and as no period will again occur in which the capital entitled to dividend will be so great in proportion to the earnings as at the present half-year. The chairman declared his wish of the directors to obtain the fullest possible audit. He reviewed at length the topics of the report, which he confirmed. A series of questions was submitted from a gentleman representing the Manchester proprietors, but no resolutions were introduced. Mr. Croker moved for a committee, but without success, to inquire into the connexion with the South-Western Steamboat Company. After much debating of no public moment the report and its resolutions were adopted.

LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN.—August 17: Half-yearly Meeting: London: Mr. Glyn, M.P., in the chair. The report stated a diminution in passenger traffic, but an increase in the goods returns. The working expenses have been reduced, and a sum of £22,000 per annum is to be laid aside for repairs and renewal of the line, &c. Amicable arrangements with competing lines have been entered into on all sides. The question of constructing the Birmingham and Lichfield is to be referred to a committee of directors. By carrying forward £71,493, balance from last half-year, the directors declare a dividend of 3½ per cent. for the six months, and carry forward £5,500 to the next half-year's account. The chairman attributed the decrease in passenger traffic to the lingering results of the disastrous year 1847, and to reckless railway legislation, which had drained away all spare capital from the country. The goods traffic was admirably managed. They would further reduce expenses by working all their supplies under contract. He renewed his protest against a Government audit. Relief from the present system is to be obtained by further combination of the large companies. The report and its recommendations were adopted, and certain shares were consolidated into the general stock.

NORTHERN AND EASTERN.—August 20: Half-yearly Meeting: Shoreditch: Mr. Paterson in the chair.—The dividend on the 5 per cent. and 6 per cent. shares is payable on and after the 25th. The report stated that the undistributed shares had produced £744, to be divided pro rata among the proprietors. The directors recommended the interest to be raised to four. The expenditure will be within the capital. The report was adopted.

A total of 120,574 passengers travelled on the DUBLIN and KINGSTOWN during the late visit of the Queen to Dublin.

THE half-yearly Report of the BUCKINGHAMSHIRE declares that the lines will probably be ready for traffic in the spring.

THE EDINBURGH and GLASGOW proprietors, at their Special Meeting on the 21st, left the question of Sunday traffic in the hands of the directors, and negatived a direct proposition for adopting Sunday trains.

The loop line to Hounslow, through Brentford, from the WINDSOR, STAINES, and SOUTH-WESTERN, was opened on the 22nd. The South-Western Company, it was announced at the meeting, will take the lines at 4½ per cent. and half profits, or will purchase the remaining shares at £4 premium without interest.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—We were in error last week in stating that the injury sustained by a young lady in Dublin resulted in death after amputation. The nature of the injury was fracture of the thigh, which has been most successfully reduced, and the patient is going on favourably.

RAILWAY INTELLIGENCE.

YORK, NEWCASTLE, AND BERWICK.—August 23: Half-yearly Meeting: York: R. Davis, Esq., in the chair.—A report was read, which stated that, in consequence of the two auditors having sent in their resignations immediately after the extraordinary meeting on the 4th of May last, the accounts had not been audited in the manner required by the Act of Parliament; but it would, no doubt, be satisfactory to the shareholders to know that the accounts for the half-year had been placed under the supervision of an able and experienced accountant. The nett revenue for the last half-year was £73,378 18s. 7d., which was more than sufficient to pay a dividend after the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum upon the sum of £4 283,560. The directors concurred with the committee of audit as to the necessity of reconstructing the board. The report was adopted, the interest on extension stock ordered to be paid, and a resolution carried requesting four of the directors to retire at the meeting for the election of three directors of navigation in their places, to form a pro tempore board of directors in conjunction with Messrs. Flews and Wood, two of the old board. The meeting was then adjourned; and on the business being completed with the above resolution at a board meeting, an extraordinary meeting of the company was held, the Lord Mayor of York (James Meek, Esq.) in the chair, at which the report of the committee of management was adopted, and resolutions passed, directing the board of directors to take legal proceedings against Mr. Hudson, a bill in equity for such purpose being already prepared. After some further resolutions for carrying out the recommendations of the report, the meetings were adjourned till the 4th of October, when the fourth and final report of the committees will be laid before the proprietors. In the course of the proceedings it was explained, that on the last half of the year 1848, after paying all expences, there is a deficit of £38,789, which has to be provided for.

LLYNVI VALLEY.—Aug. 23: London: Half-yearly Meeting: W. Matthews, Esq. in the chair. The report stated that there had been a slight improvement in the tonnage of the traffic during the last half-year, and there was every prospect of an early opening of the South Wales Railway, which would materially increase the receipts on this line. The chairman then moved the adoption of the report, which was carried unanimously. The declaration of a dividend, at the rate of 2½ per cent per annum, upon the paid-up capital of the company (without prejudice to the claim made on behalf of the holders of the new 2000 ordinary stock created under the agreement), was confirmed by the shareholders. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the business of the day.

MIDLAND.—August 22: Special Meeting: Derby: Mr. Ellis, M.P., in the chair. After considerable opposition from certain shareholders, who complained of the incompleteness of its statements, the shareholders adopted the report of the committee of investigation, which declares certain differences between the accountants and the auditors committee. The accountants set down £776,000 as charged improperly to capital account, in the relaying of the line, declaration of stock, and the interest on unproductive capital. The committee strike a total of £1,485,000 as wrongly charged to capital account. They recommend an addition to the present direction, and a stipendiary chairman. They report on the guaranteed lines, in which the directors are found to have acted fairly, and not to hold an undue interest. If these items of capital as suggested by the accountants are laid aside, £2,500,000 will be required for all the authorised works. If the works are stopped, £2,000,000 will remain for discharge of debts. The Leeds and Bradford will, it is expected, soon average its guaranteed income. The works in hand will require £800,000. Reduced dividends have been necessitated by the increase of capital for extensions, and by the unprofitable guaranteed lines. General working economy is suggested. Arrears should be forthwith paid. The dissentient shareholders were assured that fuller explanations should be given respecting the Leeds and Bradford Guarantee and the South Midland lines.

LONDON AND SOUTH-WESTERN.—Aug. 18: Half-yearly Meeting: Nine-elms: Mr. Chaplin, M.P., in the chair. The report declared a dividend of 3½ per cent. The capital entitled to dividend has increased, but there is no falling off in the revenue, nor is the average expenditure greater. After the present month all the branches will have been completed. Strict economy has been practised. All repairs and renewals are at the expense of revenue. The directors anticipate a progressive amendment in the dividend, as there are no outstanding liabilities, as all the lines in course of construction are nearly completed, and as no period will again occur in which the capital entitled to dividend will be so great in proportion to the earnings as at the present half-year. The chairman declared his wish of the directors to obtain the fullest possible audit. He reviewed at length the topics of the report, which he confirmed. A series of questions was submitted from a gentleman representing the Manchester proprietors, but no resolutions were introduced. Mr. Croker moved for a committee, but without success, to inquire into the connexion with the South-Western Steamboat Company. After much debating of no public moment the report and its resolutions were adopted.

LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN.—August 17: Half-yearly Meeting: London: Mr. Glyn, M.P., in the chair. The report stated a diminution in passenger traffic, but an increase in the goods returns. The working expenses have been reduced, and a sum of £22,000 per annum is to be laid aside for repairs and renewal of the line, &c. Amicable arrangements with competing lines have been entered into on all sides. The question of constructing the Birmingham and Lichfield is to be referred to a committee of directors. By carrying forward £71,493, balance from last half-year, the directors declare a dividend of 3½ per cent. for the six months, and carry forward £5,500 to the next half-year's account. The chairman attributed the decrease in passenger traffic to the lingering results of the disastrous year 1847, and to reckless railway legislation, which had drained away all spare capital from the country. The goods traffic was admirably managed. They would further reduce expenses by working all their supplies under contract. He renewed his protest against a Government audit. Relief from the present system is to be obtained by further combination of the large companies. The report and its recommendations were adopted, and certain shares were consolidated into the general stock.

NORTHERN AND EASTERN.—August 20: Half-yearly Meeting: Shoreditch: Mr. Paterson in the chair.—The dividend on the 5 per cent. and 6 per cent. shares is payable on and after the 25th. The report stated that the undistributed shares had produced £744, to be divided pro rata among the proprietors. The directors recommended the interest to be raised to four. The expenditure will be within the capital. The report was adopted.

A total of 120,574 passengers travelled on the DUBLIN and KINGSTOWN during the late visit of the Queen to Dublin.

THE half-yearly Report of the BUCKINGHAMSHIRE declares that the lines will probably be ready for traffic in the spring.

THE EDINBURGH and GLASGOW proprietors, at their Special Meeting on the 21st, left the question of Sunday traffic in the hands of the directors, and negatived a direct proposition for adopting Sunday trains.

The loop line to Hounslow, through Brentford, from the WINDSOR, STAINES, and SOUTH-WESTERN, was opened on the 22nd. The South-Western Company, it was announced at the meeting, will take the lines at 4½ per cent. and half profits, or will purchase the remaining shares at £4 premium without interest.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—We were in error last week in stating that the injury sustained by a young lady in Dublin resulted in death after amputation. The nature of the injury was fracture of the thigh, which has been most successfully reduced, and the patient is going on favourably.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The forthcoming week does not promise to be a very lively one on the turf, particularly with the denizens of Cockaigne, who have no other attraction than Egham, which does not appear likely to be above par. The fixtures are:—Monday, Eccles and Stourbridge; Tuesday, Great Yarmouth and Harlesden Green; Wednesday, Egham, Radcliffe, and Hereford; and Thursday, the Lothians, Tiverton, and Paisley. The aquatic register embraces a great number of events, chiefly in the Thames. They are thus arranged:—Monday, regattas at Richmond, Gravesend, Deptford, Lonchouse, Paul's Wharf, Lea Bridge, and Carnarvon; the London Yacht Club Challenge Cup Match from Buckwall to Gravesend and back, and oars' matches from Millbank and Westminster Bridge. Tuesday, Royal Western (Plymouth) and Reading regattas. Wednesday, St. Katharine's Regatta. Thursday, Dartmouth Regatta. Friday, Norwich Regatta. If, therefore, the racing events lack interest, the rowing and sailing communities will be kept on the qui vive. The cricket calendar includes the Al England match at Derby (eleven of all England against twenty-two of Derby and Burton-upon-Trent); a match at Kennington Oval, between eleven players and twenty pensioners; and one between the M.C.C. and the Amberies, all to commence on Monday. The North and South return match will be played at Leamington, on Thursday; and the return match at Brixton, on Wednesday, between the Montpelier and West Wickham Clubs, besides several others of inor interest.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—London is now so completely deserted by the influentials, that business at the Corner is almost at a stand-still; the transactions, therefore, continue to be on a small scale, and of a character to require nothing beyond a quotation of the market prices:—

EBOR HANDICAP.

5 to 1 agst Glen Saddal	10 to 1 agst Cockermouth	16 to 1 agst Blacker
7 to 1 — Gibelle	10 to 1 — Westow	30 to 1 — Miss Whip
7 to 1 — Ellerdale	14 to 1 — Fern Hill

EBOR ST. LEGER.

3 to 1 offered on Ellthron and Honeycomb.

4 on Flying Dutchman	15 to 1 agst Nunnykirk	15 to 1 agst Uriel

DERBY.

20 to 1 agst Cyprus	25 to 1 agst Bro. to Epirotus	33 to 1 agst Compass
20 to 1 — John-o'-Groat	30 to 1 — Mosltan	33 to 1 — Windmand
	33 to 1 agst Mildew

THURSDAY.—A blank day.

YORK AUGUST MEETING.—WEDNESDAY.

The DUNDAS STAKES of 15 sovs each, 10 ft, with 30 added.

Mr. Shepherd's Alp, 3 yrs, 6st 8lb	.. ..	.. (Arnold)	1
Mr. B. Green's Athelstane, 8 st 6lb	.. ..	.. (Whitringham)	2

The PRINCE OF WALES'S STAKES of 10 sovs each, and 50 added.

Mr. Meldham's Italian (21b extra)	.. ..	.. (Templeman)	1
Lord Chesterfield's Penang	.. ..	.. (Flatman)	2

The KNAVESMIRE STAKES of 100 sovs. each.

Mr. Bowes's Thrisgarth, 8st 7lb.	.. ..	.. walked over.

HER MAJESTY'S PLATE of 100 guineas. 2 miles.

Lord Stanley's Canezon, 4 yrs, 8st 12lb	.. ..	.. (F. Butler)	1
Lord Exeter's Gemalvon, 3 yrs, 7st 9lb	.. ..	.. (Flatman)	2

The COLT SAPLING STAKES of 50 sovs. each.

Mr. Jaques's Mildew	.. ..	.. (F. Butler)	1
Lord Zetland's Cantab	.. ..	.. (J. Marson)	2

The EBOR ST. LEGER STAKES of 25 sovs each, with 100 sovs added for the second

Lord Eglinton's Ethiron	.. ..	.. (Marlow)	1
Lord Clifden's Honeycomb	.. ..	.. (Robinson)	2

The YORKSHIRE OAKS STAKES of 15 sovs each. 100 sovs added, the second to receive £40, and the third save his stake.

Lord Zetland's Elland Middleton ..	.. ..	(J. Marson)	1
Mr. Pattison's Maid of Team Valley	.. ..	(Marlow)	2

THURSDAY.

The CHESTERFIELD STAKES.

Solthead	.. ..	..	1
Cotton Lord	.. ..	..	2

The COUNTY CUP.

Canezon	.. ..	..	1
Wensleydale	.. ..	..	2

The BRAHAM PARK STAKES.

Strongbow walked over.

The GREAT EBOR HANDICAP.

The Hero	.. ..	..	1
Fernhill	.. ..	..	2

SAPLING STAKES

Rybinska and Laura ran a dead heat.

CONSOLATION SCRAMBLE.

Iron Duke	.. ..	..	1
Dolly Varden	.. ..	..	2

The THREE-YEAR-OLDS PRODUCE STAKES of 100 sovs each, h ft.

Sir R. Bulkeley's Piccaroon	.. ..	walked over

The LOTTERY PLATE of 25 sovs, added to a Sweepstakes of 5 sovs each.

Mr. Pedley's ch f The Pride, 3 yrs, 6st 5lb	..	(W. Sharpe)	1
Colonel Anson's Bon-bon, 3 yrs, 8st 12lb	..	(Charlton)	2

FRIDAY.

The CONVIVIAL STAKES.

The Italian	.. ..	..	(walked over)

GREAT YORKSHIRE STAKES

Old Dan Tucker	.. ..	..	1
Nunnykirk	.. ..	..	2

12 ran. Won by a neck.

ROYAL YACHT SQUADRON REGATTA.

The match for Prince Albert's Cup came off on Monday last, when the following yachts started from Cowes, at 11.30 A.M., with a light air from the westward:—

Vessels.	Tons.	Owners.
Gitana	168	the Earl of Lincoln.
Cygnet	313	C. R. M. Talbot, Esq., M.P.
Wyvern	205	the Duke of Marlborough.
Brilliant	392	J. Adams, Esq.

The Brilliant took the lead at starting, standing away before the wind, but it was not till one o'clock that they passed Ryde; the breeze then freshened, Capricorn and then ahead, followed by Brilliant, Gitana, and Wyvern. On rounding the Nab, the Capricorn was one minute ahead; she gradually increased her distance, working down the Wight, and on passing the Needles, about six P.M., was nineteen minutes ahead of the Brilliant; the others were still further astern. The Capricorn passed the starting vessel at 7.35.

GREAT ROWING MATCHES.

The two great rowing-matches which have for some time past engaged the attention of aquatic men, came off on Thursday, and attracted an assemblage of some thousands of persons.

The first was a match for £200, between Thomas Coombes, of Westminster, brother of the champion of the Thames, and Thomas Mackinney, of Richmond; the distance contested for being from Putney-bridge to the Ship at Mortlake. Shortly after noon in the evening the two crack watermen made their appearance in very beautiful light outrigger wager-boats. At twenty minutes to six the men effected a capital start, Coombes having the choice of station, and being at the Middlesex side of the centre arch of Putney-bridge, his opponent on the opposite side, towards the Surrey shore. Mackinney won by 12 or 15 lengths, completing the distance, upwards of 4¼ miles, in 35 minutes and a few seconds

The second race, for a pair of silver cups, also created considerable interest. The competitors were Messrs. Harpour and Ravenshaw against Messrs. J. C. and J. D. Chillingworth. All four have acquired great celebrity as gentlemen amateurs. The first-named pair reside at Richmond, the latter at Teddington. The course was from the Railway-bridge at Barnes to Hammersmith-bridge. They started very evenly, the Chillingworths taking for the first few strokes a very trifling lead. Messrs. Harpour and Ravenshaw won by three or four lengths.

METROPOLITAN SEWERS COMMISSION.

On Monday morning an extraordinary Court was held at Greek-street, Soho. Sir J. Burgoyne presided. The commissioners from the city of London, and a large body of the metropolitan Justices, with a crowd of civil engineers, were present. Fifty-four plans for the effective drainage of the metropolis were presented. Resolutions were passed to extend the time for receiving the plans to the 1st of October.

FELL'S NEW SYSTEM OF RAILWAY PROPULSION.

Some interesting experiments were made on Wednesday at a piece of ground adjoining Frost's rope-walk, Shadwell, with the view of practically illustrating the properties of Mr. Fell's invention. A good-sized model was set at work on a line of rails, and every appliance introduced necessary to the complete elucidation of the principle according to which the motive power is produced and applied. The motive power is that of compressed air, a stationary engine communicates with a small iron pipe placed between the rails along the whole length of the line, and by this means air-vessels of requisite size, placed at certain distances along the pipe, are filled with air of the supply for density. These air-vessels supply the momentum to the engine-truck, a lever-bar attached to the truck opening, as it passes along, a valve or cock, which causes the compressed air to escape into a "chamber" running along the bottom of the truck, and from which it becomes available for propulsion. As the "lever-bar" is under the perfect control of the driver, it is evident that the engine truck itself must be rendered completely manageable, for, if the compressed air only confined in the air vessels be not liberated by the "lever-bar," the propelling power is cut off and safety secured. As regards cost, the calculation is that it will be 50 per cent. less than that of steam. It is said that the invention is susceptible of being applied to railways already in operation, that the present locomotives may be made available after a slight alteration, that there will be neither fire, smoke, nor smell, and that the difficulty of steep inclines will be overcome. It is said that considerable advance has been made in the formation of a company, whose preliminary object is to test the principle in the most rigid manner, by laying down a mile on the heaviest incline that exists in England.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"T. T. L."—If we mistake not, you will find on examination that in the game referred to no such opportunity as you suggest for winning occurs.

"Jacobus Balina."—We are unacquainted with the game.

"A Subscriber."—Have no objection to work out the position.

"A. J. H."—The last is an improvement on your former attempts, but is still below our standard.

"Sonus."—The Glasgow Chess-club have decided upon changing their place of meeting from the Athenæum to the Regent Hotel, in Buchanan-street, and the new rooms were to be opened on the 23rd instant.

"P. C."—When a Pawn reaches the 8th square it must be exchanged for a Piece directly, before another move is made on either side, whether the piece it belongs to has lost a Piece or not. It follows then that you may have two Queens, two Castles, &c., on the board at one time.

"S. B." Bath—They have both some features of interest, and shall have a niche whenever we can spare room.

"W. W. C."—The solution of Enigma No. 462 is 1. R to K 8th. 1. Ptakes R; or, P to K R 4th. 2. K to K 4th, or to R 4th. 2. B moves. 3. Kt takes P—Mate.

"H. P." Woodstock—The move should obviously be Kt to Kt 5th, not Kt to Kt 8th.

"W. V." York.—They are welcome always.

"R. G."—You can have no better railway companion than a book of Chess problems or diagrams. Get Kling's "Chess Euclid."

"Alcon."—You quote the position incorrectly. First the men thus:—White: K at his 2d, B at K 4th, Kts at K sq and Q B sq. Black: K at his Kt 8th; Ps at K R 7th, K 6th, and Q B 7th—and show how White mates in four moves.

Solutions by "Bellary," "F. C." "S. U." "J. J. M." "M. B. R." "A Constant Reader," "J. B." Worcester, "F. R. S." "G. T." "M. P." "Rev. C. R." "Rev. H. B." "D. D." "Cantab," "M. M." Hoddleston; "Dudu," "M. E. R." "Otho," "A Constant Reader," "Eliza," are correct.

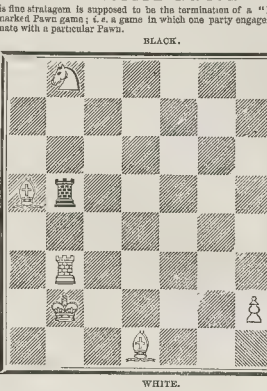
SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 291.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Q to K R 4th	K to Q R 3rd	3. Q to K 4th	K to Q R 3d
2. Q to K R 7th	K to Q R 4th	4. Q to her R 8th	Mate

PROBLEM NO. 292.

This fine stratagem is supposed to be the termination of a "Pion Coiffé," or marked Pawn game; i. e. a game in which one party engages to give checkmate with a particular Pawn.

BLACK.



WHITE.

White, playing first, undertakes to mate in six moves with his K Kt Pawn.

MATCH BY CORRESPONDENCE,

BETWEEN THE CHESS CLUBS OF LONDON AND AMSTERDAM.

WHITE (Amsterdam).	BLACK (London).
40. K to Kt 3d

London to play.

CHESS IN INDIA.

Game played between the Brahmin, Venoot Ayar, and a European Amateur.

(Sicilian opening.)

WHITE (V. A.)	BLACK (Mr. M.)	WHITE (V. A.)	BLACK (Mr. M.)
1. P to K 4th	P to Q B 4th	17. P to Q Kt 4th	Q R to K Kt sq
2. P to Q 3d	P to K 3d	18. K B to his 3d	Kt to K 2d
3. P to Q B 3d (a)	Q Kt to B 3d	19. Q R to Q B 2d (d)	Kt to K B 4th
4. K Kt to B 3d	P to Q 4th	20. Q Kt to K 3d	Kt takes Kt
5. P takes P	P takes P	21. P takes Kt	Q to her B 3d
6. K B to K 2d	K B to Q 3d	22. Q takes Q	P takes Q
7. Castles	K Kt to B 3d	23. Q R to K sq	K to Q B 2d
8. Q B to K Kt 5th	Q to Q B 2d (b)	24. Q R to K 2d	Q B to K B 4th
9. Q Kt to B 3d	P to Q R 3d	25. P to K 4th	B takes P
10. P to K R 3d	K R to Kt sq	26. B takes B	P takes B
11. Q to her Kt 3d	P to K R 3d	27. K R takes K B P	P to K R 4th
12. B takes Kt	P takes B	28. Q R to K B 2d	P to K 6th (e)
13. K to R sq	Q B to K 3d	29. R takes B P (ch)	K to Kt 2d (f)
14. Q to Q R 4th	Castles	30. Q R to K 5th	R takes K Kt P
15. P to Q 4th	P to Q B 5th	31. Kt to K B 3d	P to K 7th
16. K Kt to his sq (c)	K B to Kt 2d	32. R takes B	R to Kt 8th (ch)

And White surrenders.

(a) This style of opening is quite characteristic of Eastern chess tactics.

(b) Intending to Castle on the Q side

(c) Much better to advance bold y with the Pawns on the Q's side. A breach is practicable on that side; and once made, the after attack ought to be irresistible.

(d) If P to Q Kt 5th, Black could reply with B to Q 2d, &c.

(e) Well played.

(f) This also is well conceived, and wins by force.

CHESS IN PARIS.

Game in a match now pending between M. Kieseritzky and M. Martin St. Leon.

(Allgaier Gambit.)

WHITE (M. St. L.)	BLACK (M. K.)	WHITE (M. St. L.)	BLACK (M. K.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	20. K R to B 2d	P to Q R 4th
2. P to K B 4th	P takes P	21. Q to her 3d (h)	Q to K Kt 3d
3. K Kt to B 3d	P to K Kt 4th	22. P to K 5th	Q B to Q R 3d
4. K B to Q B 4th	P to K Kt 5th	23. Q to K 4th	K to Q B 2d
5. Castles	P takes Kt	24. P to K 6th (f)	Q R to Q sq
6. Q takes P	P takes K	25. K R to B 7th	Q to K Kt 4th (k)
7. P to Q 4th	Q to K 2d (a)	26. Q R takes P (ch)	R takes R
8. Q takes P	Q Kt to B 3d	27. It takes R (ch)	K to Q Kt sq
9. Q takes P	Q Kt to Q sq	28. Kt to Q sq	Q B to Q Kt 2d
10. Q to K B 2d	P to Q B 3d	29. R takes K R P	K B to K Kt 2d
11. P to Q 4th	Q Kt to Q sq (c)	30. R to K R 4th	P to Q B 4th
12. Q B to K 3d	K Kt to K B 3d (d)	31. Q to K B 4th (ch)	Q takes Q
13. B takes Kt	B takes B	32. R takes Q	B to Q 4th (ch)
14. P to Q 6th (e)	Q takes Q P	33. K to B sq	Q B to R 3d (ch)
15. P B takes P P (e)	Kt takes B	34. K to his sq	It takes K Kt P
16. Q takes Kt (ch)	K to Q sq	35. Kt to K B 2d	K B to h 6th (l)
17. Q R to Q sq (f)	Q to K R 3d	36. R to B 8th (ch)	K to B 2d
18. Q to her B 4th	K R to Kt sq (g)	37. P to K 7th	R mates
19. Q to K 2d	P to Q Kt 3d

(a) This is not so good a defence as the ordinary one of Q to K B 3d, but M. Kieseritzky a object in adopting it was probably to baffle his less experienced antagonist by a deviation from the beaten track.

(b) Better than taking P thus B P

(c) Black has sufficiently himself to a great deal of unnecessary embarrassment by his ch-lonsonable move of Q to K 2d.

(d) Intending to play it to Kt's 5th, exchange it for the Q B, and then force an exchange of Queens by Q to her B 4th.

(e) Finely played.

(f) Had an move. K R to B 6th, an inviting mode of continuing the attack, Black would have answered with K R to B sq; or, gr.—

	17. K B to B 5th	K R to B sq
(g) From that point Black begins to retort the attack	18. K takes Q	B to K 6th (ch)
(h) Preventing the immediate sortie of the adverse Bishop.	19. K moves	R takes Q, &c

(i) A good move.

(k) With an eye to the long-sought exchange of Queens

(l) Threatening mate next move

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 476.—By A. B. S.

White: K at Q B 3d, R at K B 6th, B at Q B sq, Ps at Q B 4th and K B 2d.

Black: K at his 5th.

White to play, and mate in two moves.

No. 477.—By an AMATEUR.

White: K at Q B 4th, B at Q sq, Kt at K sq, P at Q Kt 2d.

Black: K at Q B 5th, P at Q Kt 6th.

White, playing first, mates in five moves.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The Queen's Highland residence at Balmoral has been much improved since her Majesty's last visit. The pleasure-grounds about the house have been laid out anew in an exceedingly tasteful style, and are now in complete order and maintenance. A large addition has also been made to the castle itself, an entire wing having been joined to the north side.

The French have decided to add notices of the inviolability of the personal liberty of the subject. On Saturday last, at Paris, MM. Vidal and Toussenel, the editors of the journal Transit Afranchi, who were accused of being engaged in the affair of the 13th June, were set at liberty, after being fifty-seven days in prison, it being found that there was no ground for the charges brought against them!! Several other persons have also been set at liberty, who were also grandelessly arrested and incarcerated.

No American city has suffered more from cholera than Cincinnati. During the prevalence of the epidemic there, in six weeks fourteen physicians died—eight or nine of cholera, the others of diseases induced by over-exertion and fatigue

The cholera reports from Sandusky, in Ohio (United States), are deplorable. Such was the terror prevailing, that all the medical men who had not fallen victims to the disease up to the 31st ult. had fled the plague-struck city.

Two pamphlets were seized in Paris last week by orders of the Procureur of the Republic. The one is called "Simples explications à mes amis et mes commettans," by Victor Considerant: and the other "Histoire complète du drapeau tricolore et du drapeau blanc," by M. Dorlogas. The French Republic has effectually dispelled the erroneous belief that the "liberty of the press" is to a Republic "the breath of its nostrils."

During the three months preceding the 4th inst, 99,941 emigrants arrived at New York from Europe, being nearly 1000 per day, on the average.

In accordance with a letter from the Lord High Commissioner to the President of the Senate of the Ionian Islands, proposing an amnesty for political offences committed on the 26th of September, 1848, the Senate accord the amnesty, as far as it does not extend to those who proclaimed their own guilt by flying their country, nor to those who may hereafter have been found to have been implicated in the cold-blooded murders committed in the island in the month of May, 1849.

Although exposed to many privations, and to every variety of climate, there are now 800 claimants for medals for the battle of Maida, fought in 1806.

The old ministers of Louis Philippe are gradually returning to France. We have seen M. Guizot's return to Val Richer; now M. Duchâtel has returned to Paris.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert has graciously consented to become patron of the Scottish Gardeners' and Land Stewards' Association.

Lieutenant-General Robert Ellice, the commander of the forces in Malta, has been compelled by serious illness to leave that island; and he embarked on the 13th instant for Southampton, in the Peninsular and Oriental Company's steam-packet Hindostan. The command of the forces devolves upon Colonel Rice Jones, commanding the Royal Engineers, as next in seniority.

The Earl of Hardwicke, captain of the Vengeance, 84, has given a donation of £40 towards the relief of several refugees arrived at Malta by the Medusa, and afterwards transferred to another ship, from which they were not allowed to land. They subsequently left for Greece.

Crowded meetings have been held during the last week in North and South Durham for the establishment of societies to create 40s. freeholders, with a view of "working" both divisions from their present political companies; and the result has been resolutions unanimously passed to commence forthwith freehold-and societies.

The Comte de Chambord (Duke de Bordeaux) arrived at Cologne on the 17th inst. by the railway, from Hamburgh, on his way to Ems. He was accompanied by the Duc de Levis, the Duc de Riviére, and M. de Barrande

The Princess Charlotte Marianne of the Netherlands arrived on the 8th inst. at Seville, from Cadiz. It is said her Royal Highness has announced her project of proceeding to Palestine, and will, after visiting Madrid, return home by way of France and Belgium.

A letter from Christiana (Norway) states that the King of Sweden intends to prolong his stay there for two months His Majesty has commanded thither the Italian singers from the Stockholm theatre. The Italian opera has never, hitherto, been performed in Norway.

Signor de Begnis, the celebrated vocalist, has lately died in New York, of cholera.

The collectorship of customs at Newcastle is vacant by the death of Sir Cuthbert Sharp.

A letter from Christiana (Norway) states that the King of Sweden intends to prolong his stay there for two months His Majesty has commanded thither the Italian singers from the Stockholm theatre. The Italian opera has never, hitherto, been performed in Norway.

Signor de Begnis, the celebrated vocalist, has lately died in New York, of cholera.

The collectorship of customs at Newcastle is vacant by the death of Sir Cuthbert Sharp.

On the evening of Sunday last some thieves gained access to the premises of Mr. Clayton, the swapaper and advertising agent, of 320, Strand, and forced open the desks in the counting-house, without obtaining anything. They next tried their skill on the lock of the till, but their efforts were useless. They made off with a lot of postage stamps and some volumes of the "Parlour Library."

All the Carlist Generals, and almost all the leaders who commanded in Catalonia, have returned to Spain. There are only Valdespina, Santa Cecilia, Gomez, Elio, and Cabrera who persist in not recognising the Government of Isabella II.

A Romish Episcopal church in the suburbs of Manchester is to be sold by auction, on the 4th of September. It is a remarkably handsome structure, with accommodation for at least 1500 persons, in an improving and exceedingly interesting neighbourhood.

On the 18th instant, T. Harne, Esq., shot, in the Langwell preserve, Orkney, two fine young stags, right and left; and on the 13th the same keen sportsman shot a noble stag of about twenty stones weight.

Ballynahinch Castle, in Galway, the seat of the late Mr. Martin, M.P., has been converted into a hotel.

Two of the crew of the Dreadnought, emigrant ship, bound for Port Natal, and now lying off Deal, having died of diarrhœa, a report has been circulated that the cholera has been raging on board. Dr. Taylor has contradicted this report, and, for the satisfaction of the relatives and friends of the passengers, state that no sickness has been experienced beyond the cases already referred to, and that at the present time every one on board is in perfect health.

At a meeting of the Privy Council, held before the Queen's arrival at Dublin, the Attorney-General politely inquired after the health of a distinguished judge, who had been ailing for some days. "Mr. Attorney," was the humorous reply, "you may feel quite easy about me. I am in horrible good health."

The Dublin Customs Bills of entry for the month of July last show that the increased quantity of foreign brandy, upon which the duty has been paid, amounts to the large quantity of 23,000 gallons, or nearly 1000 gallons per diem beyond the average of former years. This extraordinary increase is traced to the substitution, by a large number of the public, of brandy diluted with water with their meals, in the place of malt liquors. The French dealers have already taken advantage of the increase, and simultaneously raised their prices ten francs per hectolitre, or about 9d. per gallon.

We are glad to announce an increase in the wages of the handloom weavers of the Carlisle district, who have long suffered privation. The reason is obvious. The harvest will call away most of the weavers from the loom.

The postponement of the re-opening of the parish church of Maidstone is occasioned by the indisposition of his grace the primate.

The barque Princess Royal, Captain Sinclair, from Hong-Kong for Melbourne (Australia), struck, in February last, on Lonsdale Reef, outside the Straits of Sunda, and became a total wreck. No lives were lost. The cause of the disaster was the light being placed on the inner instead of the outer head.

Seven cases of bar gold, value about £75,000, received from St. Petersburgh by the steamer Victoria, sailed Hull, were sent into the Bank of England on Tuesday by Mr. Oliver Lyndall. The amount received per Camilla on Saturday last was £90,000, on account of the Russian government.

The dyers and dressers of Manchester and Salford struck on Monday for an advance of wages. The strike is a general one, and some thousands are consequently out of employment. Those who have struck went in procession through the streets of Manchester, were well dressed, looked remarkably well, and behaved in the most peaceable manner.

On the 2d inst., John Wise, a clerk in the Post-Office, St. Louis (United States), quarrelled on the score of jealousy with Thomas Hart, also of St. Louis, when Wise shot Hart with a pistol, and then hacked him to pieces with a bowie-knife

The coloured people of Boston have presented William Lloyd Garrison with a silver pitcher, in testimony of their appreciation of his devotion to the cause of emancipation.

The following is one of the many instances which daily prove the utter barbarism of the remote Western and Southern States of North America. William Rumsey, of Lawrence county, Arkansas, killed James Marshall in April last. On the 5th ult. some of Marshall's friends attacked Berry in his corn-field and killed him on the spot. The murderers have not been found..

Two young coloured men, named Charles Hanson and Levi Smith, recently fought a duel with knives, by themselves, in an upper room of a house in Yeager's-court, Philadelphia. The parties hitherto had been on friendly terms. Hanson was mortally wounded in the lungs, and died at Pennsylvania Hospital. Smith was covered with slashing though not fatal gashes, one of his ears being nearly severed. He is in prison.

A California adventurer writes from Mazatlan:—"We all travelled through Mexico without passports, and were treated very well, except that they stole every thing from us they could lay their hands on."

The Royal West India Mail steam-ship Avon, which arrived on Tuesday, brought on freight 1,326,615 dollars on merchants' account, 374 serons of cochineal, 16 serons of jalapa, 10 serons of indigo, 2 pieces of coffee, 81 cases of cigars, 50 bales of tobacco, 31 casks of pine-apples, and a general cargo consisting of 47 packages sundries. One of the passengers in the Avon from Chagres to Jamaica was returning to America, having made in California 75,000 dollars in 71 days.

On Saturday two beautiful iron steam-boats, built for the Liverpool corporation, to ply between that place and Birkenhead Ferry, were launched almost simultaneously, from the respective building-yards of Messrs. Vernon and Co. and Messrs. P. Cato and Co., 31, Bathe-street, Liverpool. The vessels bear the respective names of the builders, the Vernon and the Cato.

HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO GLASGOW CATHEDRAL.

ROYAL VISIT TO GLASGOW CATHEDRAL.

ONE of the most interesting incidents of the recent Royal Visit to Glasgow was the inspection of the venerable Cathedral. Her Majesty and Prince Albert were received at the entrance by Principal Macfarlan. The Queen and the Prince were accompanied by Sir G. Grey, Lady Jocelyn, the Lord Provost, Mr. Hastie, M.P., &c. Principal Macfarlan was accompanied by two members of his kirk-session, viz. Mr. A. Clark and Mr. J. Reid. The representatives of the press were the only other individuals admitted within the ancient edifice during her Majesty's inspection. The Cathedral is the only entire piece o. ancient ecclesiastical architecture remaining in Scotland, except the Cathedral at Orkney. It has of late years undergone a series of extensive repairs, which have in a great measure restored it to its pristine grandeur. The Cathedral is dedicated to St. Kentigern, better known in Glasgow as St. Mungo. It was commenced in 1123, by John Achaius, Bishop of Glasgow; rebuilt in 1197, and completed in 1223-50. It occupies the highest ground in the city. On entering the edifice, her Majesty was shown an ancient copy of the bible, lately recovered from obscurity, and which was the same which was chained to the desk of the Public Reader, whence he made known its revelations to an eager and excited auditory in times when the possession of it by the common people was prohibited. This ancient copy of the Scriptures is bound in oak, and the boards are an inch thick. It is printed in the old Saxon character. The weight of the whole amounts to about twenty-nine pounds. Along with the bible was shown to her Majesty the old sand-glass which was wont to measure the time during public worship.

The Royal party descended to the Crypt, which has undergone a thorough renovation under the directions of Mr. Blore, the Government architect. Blackadder's Aisle alone must have been an object of much interest to the Royal visitors; so, doubtless, was the tomb of St. Kentigern or St. Mungo, the founder of the ecclesiastical establishment in this city. The successful stand which the craftsmen and deacons of the city made in 1570 against the iconoclastic zeal which would have levelled this noble structure with the dust, is still a subject of honest pride to their successors, and to the citizens generally.

Her Majesty and Prince Albert would probably recall to mind that it was here, in 1638, that the great General Assembly was held which abolished prelacy, deposed the bishops, and restored the Presbyterian form of Church government—an Assembly presided over by Alexander Henderson, and which, in spite of the protest and retirement of the King's Commissioner, the Marquis of Hamilton, sat from the 21st of November till the 20th of December, and triumphantly completed the Second Reformation. The second centenary of the great Glasgow Assembly was celebrated in 1838. Oliver Cromwell worshipped here in 1650 while occupying as a temporary residence a house at the foot of the Saltmarket, removed only a few years ago.

Or, suggestive of lighter memories, the Royal party might, perhaps, be reminded that it was amongst the sepulchral vaults under the nave of the structure that Sir W. Scott made Rob Roy appoint the assignation with Francis Osbaldiston; and the solid masonry of the venerable pile might bring to mind the expressive and picturesque Doric in which Andrew Fairservice panegyrised the Hie Kirk:—"Ah, it's a brave kirk; none o' yere whigmaleeries and curliewurlies and open-steek hems about it; a solid, weel-jointed mason-wark that will stand as long as the warld, keep hands and gunpowder off it."

We may mention that the Royal children did not at first accompany the Queen in her visit to the different parts of the Cathedral, but were sent for by her Majesty before leaving it, when some of the more interesting objects were pointed out to them.

On leaving the Cathedral, her Majesty and Prince Albert graciously acknowledged the cheers which proceeded from the platform inside the burial-ground, occupied by ministers of various denominations and their families. The Royal party having resumed their places in the carriage, the procession was re-formed, and the cortège returned down High-street to the College.

The visit to Glasgow afforded her Majesty and Prince Albert the highest satis-

THE ROYAL PARTY IN THE CRYPT OF GLASGOW CATHEDRAL.

CARRICKFERGUS CASTLE.—SALUTE OF THE ROYAL SQUADRON ON ITS LEAVING BELFAST LOUGH.

faction. At the Civic Dinner, given in honour of the event, Sheriff Alison stated that the interest which the Queen took in the city seemed unbounded. "She seemed to be aware (said the learned Sheriff) of everything worth being seen, and possessed a knowledge of the localities of the city which was quite remarkable. Much as she admired the sight of the Cathedral, it excited even a deeper interest when informed that it was one of the scenes delineated in 'Rob Roy;' and, in coming down the High-street, one request she addressed to him was, that he was to be sure to point out to her the Saltmarket and the dwelling of 'Bailie Nicol Jarvis.' (Cheers and laughter.) Her Majesty addressed other observations to him, which he was sorry the continuous cheering prevented him from hearing distinctly; but he believed them to be expressive of the pleasure, satisfaction, and delight which she experienced, and which had never been excelled at any former period of her life."

CARRICKFERGUS CASTLE.

In the narrative of the Royal Visit, it has been stated that her Majesty remained in Belfast Harbour all night, and the greater part of Sunday. In the morning, some cream, fresh fruit, and flowers were sent on board the Royal Yacht, by Mrs. Crawford, of Wellington, which were graciously accepted by her Majesty. At two o'clock exactly the Victoria and Albert was observed to get under weigh, and left the harbour at a rapid rate, followed closely by the Fairy, and, at short intervals, by the various steamers and men-of war composing the Royal squadron. A strong breeze was blowing at the time, and a slight shower of rain was falling, which, however, soon cleared off. The Royal Yacht was going at the rate of between thirteen and fourteen knots, steering N.N.E., and was out of sight of land in half-an-hour after leaving the anchorage. Her Majesty received a Royal salute from Carrickfergus Castle and Crawfordsburn on her departure.

Carrickfergus Castle stands on a rocky peninsula, jutting into the sea on the south-eastern side of the town. The rock, from which the town takes its name (meaning the rock of Fergus, an Irish King of that name, drowned there in pagan times), rises gradually to an elevation of about thirty feet towards the sea, and is entirely occupied by the works of the fortress, consisting of a double ballium or upper and lower yard, with batteries mounting about twenty-five pieces of cannon, and two ancient half-moons protecting the entrance on the land side. In the upper yard stands the Keep, a square tower ninety feet high.

The castle is supposed to have been founded by De Courcy, about the middle of the twelfth century, and is a place of considerable importance in the history of Ireland. The last scene of violence connected with the records of the veteran fort was the capture of the Drake, a British sloop of-war, in the roads opposite the town, by Paul Jones, in the Ranger, an American vessel, on the 24th of April, 1778.

The accompanying Engraving is from a spirited drawing by Mr. J. H. Burgess, of Belfast.

INVERCAULD.

We are indebted to a Correspondent for this Illustration of her Majesty's route to her Highland residence, Balmoral. The Royal party arrived at the Invercauld Arms, in the Spittal of Glenshee, in Perthshire, on Wednesday, the 15th instant, at half-past one o'clock. The Queen halted at this little wayside inn, amid the giant chain of the Grampian Hills, and partook of luncheon. A triumphal arch of pine-wood and heather had been hastily erected; and, as the cavalcade swept down the road, escorted by a large assemblage of mounted farmers and yeomen, the several lairds and their retainers assembled in front of the little inn, and set up a loyal hurrah, that made the hills echo. Her Majesty seemed much gratified and surprised at her reception, and conversed most affably with Mr. Grant, the worthy landlord of the Invercauld Arms, and his pretty daughters. Prince Albert and the Royal children appeared in excellent health, and were objects of great interest to the Highland lads and lasses, who assembled in large numbers. Mr. Farquharson, of Invercauld, and Mr. Macdonald, of St. Martin, were the chief among the Highland lairds in attendance. They and their retainers escorted her Majesty on her way to Castletown, in company with Lord Lorton and Mr. Campbell. The country is wild and beautiful, and extremely precipitous.

We now proceed with the details of the Royal route to Balmoral.

Our readers are aware that her Majesty, after visiting Glasgow, went on to Perth, and tarried for the night at the George Inn. The house was similarly honoured last year, but the stay was then next to compulsory. But now it was one of free choice—by no means necessary—no extemporised arrangement to meet a difficulty. It was included, from the outset, in the plan proposed for the tour, and it satisfactorily evinces her Majesty's approval of the accommodation and attendance formerly provided for her.

The Royal party left at eight in the morning. Instead of availing themselves of the railway, which proceeds a certain way on the route followed, it was preferred to post the whole distance. Of course, there were the usual demonstrations of loyalty and respect at the places through which her Majesty had to pass in the early part of her journey.

Relays of horses were in waiting at the different stages on the road, and the Grampians were scrambled over with all celerity possible. The Duke of Leeds, Sir Alexander Duff and his two sons—the representatives of Banffshire and the Elgin district of burghs, and Farquharson of Invercauld, were at Braemar to receive the Queen, and had their respective retainers, arrayed in the Celtic costume, drawn up on either side of the road for that purpose. Her Majesty with the utmost courtesy acknowledged their salutation.

Thereafter Balmoral was speedily reached. At it there was no display. Several farmers in the vicinity had carted their families thither to see the arrival, and they formed a small group about the entrance-gate. It was exactly four o'clock when the first carriage drove up. Her Majesty looked extremely well and animated, and seemed in no degree fatigued by her long and wearisome journey.

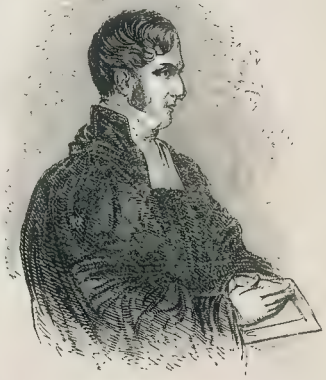
ARRIVAL OF THE QUEEN AT INVERCAULD, PERTHSHIRE.

THE HON. AND REV. BAPTIST W. NOEL, M.A.

The name of this gentleman, since his secession from the Church Establishment, has been so frequently and so prominently before the world, that we are persuaded the accompanying portrait, with the following Sketch of Mr. Noel's public life, will be acceptable to our readers.

Baptist Wriothesley Noel is descended from, or connected with ancient Scotch families—maternally derived from a distinguished one in Kincardineshire, and paternally related to the noble house of Hamilton.

"It would be possible to write (says a biographer in the Christian Times) a little romance of a certain Charles Middleton, born in Scotland, in 1726, who entered the navy, rose in his profession, and piqued his fortunes till he was created a peer by the title of Lord Barham, was made a member of his Majesty's Privy Council, and was First Lord of the Admiralty from May, 1805, to February, 1806, during which short administration not fewer than four memorable victories were gained over the French.



THE HON AND REV. BAPTIST WRIOTHESLEY NOEL, M.A.

"Lord Barham had one child, a daughter, the wife of Sir Gerard Noel, great-grandson of the fourth Duke of Hamilton, who became Lady Barham in her own right; her eldest son succeeding to the title, which has since been changed, by his obtaining a step in the peerage, to that of the Earl of Gainsborough. Lady Barham, the solitary child of her father, born to Sir Gerard Noel eighteen children, of whom Baptist is the sixteenth child, and eleventh son, born at Leithmont, near Leith, N.B., July 10, 1799."

Mr. Noel was educated partly at Westminster, and partly at a private school, took his degree at Cambridge, and studied for the law. He was thus engaged when, in May, 1824, at the anniversary meeting of the London Missionary Society, held in the Wesleyan Chapel, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Mr. Noel first appeared in public life. He is described to have been, for some time, firm and decided in his religious character and views, and was already identified with religious men and religious movements Evangelical in character and spirit. "Mr. Noel's youthful appearance," says the biographer already quoted, and who witnessed the scene he describes, "his elegant and gentlemanly bearing, the polish of his language, and the grace and propriety of his manner, combined with his quiet but deep and vivid enthusiasm, his freshness as a public speaker, and the exciting nature of his theme (the martyred missionary, Smith), together with the power and directness of his appeal, all tended to give interest and memorableness to his entrance on public life, and to raise the feelings and expectations of his auditors to the highest pitch." Very soon after this event Mr. Noel took orders—we are not aware on what title, nor whether he sustained any pastoral charge previous to his undertaking St. John's Chapel, as Minister of which he has been for so many years known to the public.

As a preacher, Mr. Noel soon became popular, though rather by richness of fancy and copiousness of language, than by originality or profundity of thought, compact or convincing argument, or imaginative reasoning. His views settled at once into the Evangelical form: his sermons, therefore, were always distinguished by the prominence given in them to the Gospel, as emphatically the truth, by his allusions to the inward life of the believer, and by his earnest appeals to the worldly and unconverted. He was devoted, as a pastor, to the interests of his flock, especially of the young; and his Bible classes, and other modes of pastoral occupation, are thought to have rendered him occasionally less effective in the pulpit; yet, when he girded himself up for any theme, few men could handle it with more vigour, clearness, or closeness, either of thought, reasoning, or application."

Mr. Noel's merits as a speaker at public meetings are of a high order. "He is always self-possessed, calm, serious, flowing, elegant—rising, at times, into eloquence and passion. He delights in statistics, numbers, particulars, facts, and would seem often to have very carefully prepared and arranged these beforehand, though he may have left his language a good deal to the prompting of the moment. Few men have done more than Mr. Noel to make the platform respectable to the minister, or, through it, to promote everything connected with religion and philanthropy."

As an author, Mr. Noel has been frequently before the public, and in various characters. He has published a "Journey in Switzerland," and "Notes of a Tour through Ireland in 1836," both interesting for their information, tone, and tendency. His religious works range from the "Infant Piety"—a book for Little Children," to two volumes of sermons preached in the Chapel Royal by Mr. Noel, as Chaplain in Ordinary to the Queen. The second of these volumes was published last year, and is characterised by earnest evangelical spirit, elevated thought, and clear mode of accomplished writing.

Mr. Noel has taken part in controversial topics oftener than has been gratifying to his admirers. He prominently advocated the exclusion of Socinians from membership and office in the Bible society, from which he withdrew; but afterwards reviewed his opinions, and returned. In the agitation upon "Church Reform," some sixteen years since, Mr. Noel stood up for a sweeping modification of the Episcopacy of the Establishment. His next last his improvements to the building, and endowment by public money, of a very large number of new churches. "The Case of the Free Church of Scotland," in book and lecture illustration, has also been warmly taken up by Mr. Noel, as the position of the Irish Church; and during the agitation for the repeal of the Corn Laws, Mr. Noel pub lished a powerful tract, entitled "A Plea for the Poor," of which near y 50,000 copies were circulated. Mr. Noel has also materially aided in the foundation of the "Evangelical Alliance."

Mr. Noel's recent secession from the Establishment could scarcely have surprised the attentive reader of his works, which are remarkable for their bearing against conformity to clerical régime. This was followed by the publication of his "Essay on the Union of the Church with the State," of which a large edition was sold within a few days.

To Mr Noel's recent baptism we need only briefly revert. The ceremony took place on Thursday evening, the 9th inst., in the Rev. Mr. Evans's Chapel., Johnstreet, Bedford-row. As might be expected, the chapel was crowded.

After a hymn had been sung, the Rev. Mr. Shepherd, Mr. Evans's co-pastor, read the latter part of the 8th chapter of the Acts, beginning at the 25th verse. Prayer was then offered by the Rev. Mr. Morris. Mr. Shepherd delivered an introductory address; and another hymn having been sung, the Rev. Mr. Noel then entered the pulpit, and addressed his brethren on this particular point, "Why a person who is unbaptized should be baptized, after having made a profession of faith in Jesus in other ways, and having for many years" ad ing, that he had not come to the resolution to obey what he believed to be Christ's command without having fully weighed the grounds upon which that step was to be taken. The baptismal service was then read, Mr. Noel proceeded in his discourse at some length on Christian Baptism, thus forcibly illustrating his position:—"Our blessed Saviour has set us an example in this matter. At the age of thirty, when his ministry was to begin, he knew that he devoted to God when his whole life was a profession of devotedness, not in the least requiring baptism as an expression either of repentance or of faith—when John was baptizing converts, because the Kingdom was at hand, and all were summoning men to believe in Christ as the Saviour about to appear—then it was that Jesus, not certainly needing to be baptized into faith in Himself, and needing no repentance, was yet at that age baptized, after long years of study. This He did because He would honour the ordinance of God, not needing it Himself, but with a view to the welfare of others and the honour of God. He was therefore baptized. On these grounds, I had resolved by him to be day not to shrink from a public acknowledgment of Christ's authority, but with his brethren around to be baptized, to acknowledge that He has a right to our subjection."

After singing, and prayer over the pool, Mr. Noel and thirteen others, six of them females, were baptized in the usual manner by the Rev. Mr. Shepherd.

Mr. Noel married, in 1826, the eldest daughter of Peter Ballie, Esq., of Dochfour, by whom he has a numerous family.

COUNTRY NEWS.

FINANCIAL AND PARLIAMENTARY REFORM.—A meeting took place at Norwich, on Tuesday, to promote these objects. Mr. J. D. Smith was called to the chair, and resolutions were adopted, affirming that the only right to the suffrages and confidence of the people arises, not from wealth, Government favour, or party professions, but from a manly and steady adherence, on all occasions, to those principles which will secure a large extension of popular rights, and the utmost economy in the public expenditure.

GAS STATISTICS.—From the Sheffield gas-reports we came into the hands of the Editor of the Times, the number of consumers has been on the increase. In the years 1846, 7, 8, and 9, the number of consumers was 904, 1150, 1261, and 1396. The money amount of gas sold to private consumers for the past year is, £.... 2s. 4d., and the amount for the public is large £9069 3s. 8d., at prices per 1,000 cubic feet lamps, and the charge per 10.0 feet for these street lamps is £4 .... The number of hours these street lamps were burned during the last year was 2060. To large consumers there is a discount allowed varying from 5 to 25 per cent.

AWKWARD ADVENTURE.—On Thursday week, during the visit of the Sheffield Brunswick Schools to the Dore and Totley Station, a boy, about the age of about twelve years of age, rambled away from the party a distance of 200 or 300 yards, and was inadvertently locked in the cave for three or four hours, when he was discovered by Mr. Thomas Ellis, a gentleman who at the time was conducting another party in the evening. The special train by which he came was by this time far on the road to Sheffield, but the railway authorities liberal y forwarded the little fellow home free of expense. He did not appear to have any idea as to how long he had been in the cave, but thought he had been sleeping.

THE HOP DUTY.—An answer has been received from the Lords of the Treasury to the memorial presented by the Earl of Winchilsea, requesting from a recent meeting of hop growers at Hastings The prayer of the memorial was to the effect that the collection of the hop duty for 1848, falling due in October and November, might not be enforced. To this prayer their Lordships state that they cannot accede EXTENSIVE ROBBERY BY A CLERK.—On Wednesday information was received by the Metropolitan Police, that William Holman Brunson, clerk to Messrs. Strange, of Hatton-street, Liverpool, Solicitors to the Bank of Gold, the property of his employers. He has been traced to London, and is now supposed to be trying to get out to Australia.

THE LEVESON-STREET MURDERS IN LIVERPOOL.—On Wednesday, at the Crown Court, Liverpool, before Mr. Justice Patteson, John Gleeson Wilson, alias Maurice Wilson, was tried for the murder of Ann Herrichson, George Herrichson, John Alfred Herrichson, Jeremiah Driscoll, and Mary Parr (her servant), in March last, at their residences, in Leveson-street, in that town. The court was crowded, and on the bench with its Lordship were W. Brown, Esq., M.P., and Mrs. Brown, R. Rushton, Esq., the stipendiary magistrate, &c. The circumstances of the case were fully published at the time of the occurrence. Evidence in support of the charge having been adduced, the Jury, after a short consultation, returned a verdict of "Guilty." The Court, after expatiating on the enormity of the crime, and cautioning the prisoner against cherishing any hopes of pardon, passed upon him sentence of death. Wilson, though apparently excited, showed much firmness throughout

THE LIVERPOOL TRAGEDIES.—The unfortunate man Colkin, who murdered his two children in Oriel-street, still lies at the Northern Hospital, and is favourably progressing towards recovery. He is very peaceable and reserved in his demeanour, and speaks but little. Depositions have been taken by his brother in Cumlife-street, also progresses well. Of course neither of the cases can be tried at the present assizes.

THE PORT OF LIVERPOOL.—A letter in the Liverpool letters mention a curious fact relative to the marine of that port, viz. that on Tuesday last not one arrival took place in the Mersey from any foreign port. This circumstance is almost unexampled. On Thursday last there were upwards of 900 vessels in the river and docks of Liverpool. We may add another fact, in the same character—a vessel lately arrived in the Mersey from an Irish port, bringing on freight 17 cases of pant.

DISCOVERY OF ROMAN REMAINS AT CIRENCESTER.—During the past week, some workmen engaged in making a drain in one of the principal streets of this city unexpectedly laid bare one of the finest specimens of Roman tessellated pavements which have ever been discovered; and, on prosecuting their work, a quantity of fine tiles, bronze implements, pottery, and other indications leading to the supposition that this was originally the site of a Roman villa, were brought to light. Information being promptly conveyed to Earl Bathurst, his Lordship, with praiseworthy public spirit, immediately adopted measures with the officers of the Archæological Institute for the effectual preservation of these interesting relics of bygone ages. That the town of Cirencester was a Roman station of some importance is quite clear from the remains with which the town itself and its immediate neighbourhood abounds.

ACCIDENT.—On Tuesday last, whilst shooting on the Moors at Abergeldie with a party, the Hon. Mr. Perceval, eldest son of Lord Perceval, was unfortunately struck in the eye by a shot from one of the party. Although the medical men can as yet give no positive opinion as to the result, there is reason to hope that he is going on favourably.

BANK FORGERIES.—An extensive forgery on the Manchester and Liverpool District Bank has just been discovered. Two men implicated in the matter have been apprehended, and it is supposed that the investigations which are about to be commenced will lead to the discovery of a number of serious forgeries upon the same company. On the 20th ult., in consequence of an advertisement which appeared in the Liverpool Mercury, a person named Lindley applied for a situation, and received an answer appointing a meeting with the writer, a Mr. Robinson, at the Stock Hotel, in that town. A further interview, in consequence, took place at the Corn Exchange in Manchester, at which Robinson gave Lindley a cheque upon the Bank for £9 9s., and a further sum of £437 5s., desiring him to get it cashed. This Lindley did, and returned with the notes, the remainder of the amount being in gold. The notes, at Robinson's request, were subsequently issued at the Bank of England, who pocketed the money without taking the trouble to count the notes, a few days afterwards, Robinson offered Lindley a situation, but refused him in relation to Liverpool—promising to communicate with him upon the subject, and giving him money to defray his expenses. On the Tuesday following, they left Liverpool, to suspect, from various circumstances, that he was beset by a gang, called at the branch bank in Liverpool, and were detained for further inquiries, and an investigation having taken place, the cashier, Mr. Walsh, pointed out Robinson as the man from whom he received the notes. Robinson was accordingly pronounced by Mr. Simpson to be a forgery. On Friday (last week) Robinson was apprehended by one of the Liverpool detective force, in the shop of a man named Macaulay, who was supposed to be an accomplice. They Robinson was clearly identified, and a young man of the name of McIntyre were examined before the magistrates on the following (Saturday) morning, related another instance of having been duped by the same individual. We understand that the above is only one of a series of forgeries which have been recently committed, and from which the Manchester and Liverpool District Bank have been sufferers to a considerable amount, probably not less than from £1200 to £.500. The prisoner have been remanded, to afford time for instituting further inquiries into the subject.

A MAN KILLED BY A BULL.—A fatal accident happened to Mr. Samuel Crumpler, of Lytchet, near Poole, on Sunday last. About five o'clock in the morning, whilst passing a field, a young Norman bull ran at him, and knocked him down; he immediately regained his feet, and was about to chastise the ferocious animal, when he was again knocked down and gored. Some children who witnessed the occurrence then ran for assistance, but on his arrival Mr. Crampler was dead, and the enraged animal standing over the body, which presented a most distressing spectacle. The clothes, excepting the boots, were all torn off, and the body torn and pierced in many parts. Mr. Crumpler's hat and stick were found about 100 yards from the body, and the impression is that the animal had taken the body on its horns, and either carried or dragged it to the place where it was found. The bull was shot by Mr. Bailey, a boy being forbid to do it. O. Chislett, deputy-coroner for the hundred of Cogdean, when the jury gave directions that the bull should be killed. Had caps been on the horns of the bull the consequences would not, probably, have been so distressing.

The execution of Mary Ann Geering, who was found guilty at the Lewes Assizes of the murder of Benjamin Geering, her husband, by the administration of arsenic, took place at Lewes on Tuesday. The wretched woman confessed to the chaplain that she was guilty of the murder of her husband, and that she had also administered arsenic to her sons James and George, who had died of the effects of it, and that she afterwards attempted to destroy her son Benjamin by the same means, but in vain.

EMBEZZLEMENT BY THE SECRETARY OF THE LEEDS INFIRMARY.—After two remands, William Beckwith, the secretary and collector of the Leeds Infirmary, was brought up at the Leeds Court-House for final examination on Tuesday. He was charged with embezzling the amount of £6 7s. 2d., alleged to have embezzled having been collected by him during the last three years. Nothing was urged in his defence, and he was committed for trial at the Borough Sessions, which will take place next month.

EJECTION OF REBECCA SMITH.—The execution of Rebecca Smith, [illegible] at Stockton on Thursday forenoon, in front of the New Gaol, [illegible] The culprit was about thirty-four years of age, married eighteen years, and had eleven children—the eldest only, a daughter, is now alive. The second, a boy, died of a bowel complaint, at the age of fourteen weeks. All the children were baptized on the last day of the unhappy woman acknowledged that she poisoned a day or two after their birth.

PASSENGER TRAFFIC WITH IRELAND.—A document has been issued by the Board of Trade, enforcing a new series of regulations in relation to the carriage of passengers between Ireland and the United Kingdom, and communication is dated from the Council Chamber, Whitehall, August 7, and contains the following clauses:—Art. 1. The number of deck passengers to be carried by a paddle steamer, having no cargo on deck, shall be one passenger for every ton of the builder's tonnage. 2. The number to be carried by a paddle-steamer, having cargo on deck, but none of it stowed abaft the paddle-shaft, shall be one passenger to every registered ton. 3. The number to be carried when cargo (not live animals or poultry) is stowed abaft the paddle-shaft, shall be three passengers to every two square yards of clear space abaft the paddle-shaft. 4. The number to be carried, when live animals or poultry are stowed abaft the paddle-shaft, shall be fixed with reference to the arrangement of the vessel and cargo, so as to provide, as nearly as possible, two square yards for every three passengers, a part of the vessel separate from the cattle and live stock. 5. Screw steamers, in which the deck passengers are allowed to go below, and are accommodated with space on the lower deck for one-half their numbers, or on that on which the berths are raised, and a spar-deck constructed so as to afford protection to the passengers on deck, shall be licensed to carry the same number of passengers in each case as paddle steamers. 6. Screw steamers on which no such accommodation shall be found to exist, only one passenger to every four tons of the registered tonnage. 7. The proportion of passengers to be carried in the months of November, December, January, February, March, and October, to be two-thirds of the number allowed in the other months." Captain Denham has also addressed a memorandum to the owners of steamers employed in the conveyance of passengers, recommending additional regulations, as follow:—"Custom-house, Liverpool, August 10.—I am commanded by the Commissioners of the Customs to request that you will be strongly impress upon the owners of steam-vessels employed in the conveyance of passengers the propriety of making some provision for the health and comfortless of those on board during the passage, and to call your attention to the provisions to compel the adoption of these reasonable measures. —H. M. DENHAM, Captain, R.N., Steam Navigation Inspector."

EMIGRATION FROM THE SOUTH OF IRELAND.—Proposals have been put forward, under this title, for the formation of a society, under the auspices of the City of London, for the employment of the Irish peasantry in their own country. It is proposed, under the sanction of Government, that the Corporation enter into negotiations for the purchase or the right of occupation of lands in suitable districts in Ireland, and expend the necessary sums in adapting them to productive agricultural enterprise, by effecting arterial and thorough drainage, by making roads and other necessary improvements, by building convenient farm-houses and cottages, in laying out settlements, and dividing the same into allotments expedient for the purposes of sale and disposal. The purchase-money or rents to be paid in money, or in stock created to be created by the Corporation, at the option of that body. The lands so improved to be sold to persons of the requisite capital to cultivate the same, or conveyed in fee, subject to certain conditions and charges, chiefly to a terminable rent-charge. This rent-charge to represent the annual payment which, on the ordinary system of tenure, he would pay to the landlord for the use of the soil; together with the sum therein necessary to enable the Corporation to re-assure the value of the property, and so replace the amount of their investment on the decease of the occupier. The value of the fee simple would be assessed by a jury, upon the basis of the annual premium: the property, during the lifetime of the occupier, remaining mortgaged to the association, as security for the rent and premium, and for the due observance of all necessary covenants.

On the occasion of the Queen's visit to Dublin, a considerable sum was placed by her Majesty in the hands of the LORD-LIEUTENANT for distribution amongst the charities of Dublin, £50 of which was given to the Sick and Indigent Roomkeepers' Society.

HOPS.—The first packet of new hops arrived on Saturday last, the growth of Mr Henry Sen th, of Etchingham, Sussex, and was sold by Mr. George Russell, of the Borough, at £10 per cwt.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

Business in all the Stock Markets during the past week has been extremely limited in amount, the principal dealers being absent from town, and the public showing no disposition to enter into any speculation. The fluctuations are only fluctuated ⅛ per cent., and the unfunded debt has again become firm in price. A probable termination of the Hungarian war gave a slight impetus to prices on Wednesday, the demands for money being 92¼ to 93, and 93 to ⅛ for the September account. These quotations have been since maintained, and although absence of business generally tends to a fall in prices, at present the state of the Money Market (re ved from the trifling pressure of last week) has a supporting influence. The following are the closing quotations yesterday afternoon, the following being the latest registered:—Bank Stock, 199½; Reduced, 93; Consols, 93⅛; New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent. Annuities, 94; Long Annuities, 9-16 Dito, Old Annuities, 11-16; Exchequer Bills, 22s.; India Bonds, £1000, 73 pr; Ditto, under £1000, 73 pr; Consols for Account, 93⅛; Exchequer Bills, £1000, Aug., 43 pr; £500, June, 43 p., Small, June, 43 p.

Prices in the foreign market continue well supported, with the exception of Mexican, which has receded about 1 per cent., in consequence of the West India mail packet not having brought any specie on account of dividends. The price of Mexican on Monday was, on coupons, 29¾ on Wednesday it declined to 29⅞. An improvement has, however, taken place since, 28 having been registered. Some speculations in the low-priced stocks, such as Ecuador and Spanish 1 ive per Cents, have effected a trifling amount in the transactions reported, but generally have not materially varied. The closing prices are—Brazilian Bonds, 86¾; Ditto, Account, 85; Danish Bonds, 1825, Five per Cent., 99; Equador Bonds, 4; Mexican, Four per Cent. Coupons, 28; Ditto, Account, 28; Ditto, Small, 28; Portuguese, Four per Cent., 28¾; Russian Bonds, 107¾; Spanish, Five per Cent., 1840, Account, 18¾; Ditto, Three per Cent., 34¼; French, Three per Cent., 53f. 75c.; Belgian, 5-per-cent-Half per Cent., 99⅛; Ditto, Four-and-a-Half per Cent., 97; Ditto, Four per Cent. Certificates, 89¾.

With at any marked improvement in Railway Shares, prices have been, notwithstanding, tolerably maintained. The Midland meeting has not affected the price of the stock, but it is believed that at the present prices many loans are maintained from the jobbers turning bulls, to make the public, who are bearing heavily, pay for the speculation. Prices at the close of business yesterday were as follow:—Caledonian, 15¾; Chester and Holyhead, 7¾; Eastern Counties, 1¾; Great Northern, 8½ Ditto, ½ A Deferred, 3½; Ditto, 5 per Cents, 103; Great North of England, 223 x.d.; Great Western, 75¾; Ditto, 5 shares, 103½; Ditto, Half Cent, 89½; Lancaster and Carlisle, 33; Ditto, for cash re and Yorkshire, 57½; Leeds and Bradford, 100; London and Blackwall, 3½; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 37½; Lo., Gr.at. 5 per Cents, ...; London and North Western, 124½; Ditto, New Quarters, 14¾; Ditto, Fives, ...; Midland, 63½; Ditto, Consolidated P.ef (£50 Shares), 16; Ditto, Consolidated Bonds, and birming..am, 6 per Cent., 126; Newcastle and Carlisle, 24; North Staffordshire, 11¾; Reading, Guildford, and Reigate, 17; Shrewsbury and Wes.mouth, 33; York, Newcastle, and Berwick, 19½; Ditto, Newcastle Extension, 13½; Ditto, Great Northern and Eastern, Pref., 4½; York and North Midland, 28.—Anglo-Italian (late Danish and Austrian), 1; Great Indian Peninsular, ... Northern of France, 8⅜ dis.; Paris and Strasbourg, 5.

SATURDAY MORNING.—Consols remained yesterday at the preceding prices, until towards the close of business, when a slight decline left prices at 93⅛ for money, and 93⅜ 93 for account. Shares and Foreign Stock were duller, without any material changes

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—During the present week the arrivals of English wheat have amounted to 1870 quarters, chiefly of the present year's growth, and of full average quality. The receipts fresh up to-day were very limited, and the show of samples was small. All kinds owing to the late attendance of both town and country buyers, moved off slowly, at about Monday's prices. The imports of foreign wheat have consisted of 6460 quarters. Secondi and superior qualities were in moderate demand, at about last week's currencies, but the middling and inferior kinds were in per quarter lower to purchase. Scarcely any English barley was offering; but the supply of foreign was in fair increase. The demand ruled heavy, at late rates. We had a full average supply of malt on show. Fine samples were quite as dear, but the value of other kinds had a downward tendency. The show of English oats was small—that of foreign tolerably good. All kinds were in fair request, at full prices. Beans, however, pardered cautiously. Beans and peas ruled dull. Indian corn and flour sold at the late terms. In flour very few sales took place.

ARRIVALS.—English: Wheat, 1670; barley, 130; malt, 3970; oats, 1090; flour, 3660. Foreign: Wheat, 2400; barley, 610; oats, 19,250; flour, 1000.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 38s to 42s, ditto, white, 42s to 52s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 36s to 42s; ditto, white, 40s to 48s; rye, 25s to 26s; grinding barley, 22s to 25s; distilling ditto 26s to 28s; malting ditto, 29s to 35s; Norfolk and Lincoln malt, 57s to 62s; brown ditto, 54s to 57s; Kingston and Ware, 58s to 63s; Chevalier, 58s to 63s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 15s to 20s, potato ditto, 18s to 21s; Youghal and Cork, black, 14s to 17s, ditto, white, 16s to 18s; Irish potato, 20s to 23s; ditto, seed, 23s to 25s; beans, 34s to 36s, maple, 34s to 38s; white, 32s to 37s; boilers, 32s to 38s, tic quarter. Town-made flour, 37s to 42s; Suffolk, 32s to 34s, Stockton and Yorkshire, 32s to 34s, per 280 lbs.—Foreign.—Barley, nominal. Wheat, 44s to 46s per quarter. Flour, American, 22s to 24s per barrel; Baltic, 22s to 24s per barrel.

The Seed Market.—Now reposed in a very moderate request at barely stationary prices. Cloverseed is selling 62s to 64s per cwt. Canary, 42s per bushel. Of coriander, an extra, very little is doing

Linseed, [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

Bread. The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 7d to 7½d; of household ditto, 5d to 6d per 4lb loaf.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 45s 3d; barley, 26s 1d; oats, 19s 0d; rye, 27s 0d; beans, 34s 7d; peas, 27s 2d.

The Six Weeks' Average.—Wheat, 46s 10d; barley, 26s 0d; oats, 19s 3d; rye, 28s 10d; beans, 34s 9d; peas, 31s 0d.

Foreign Grain and Foreign Corn.—Wheat, 1s 0d; barley, 1s 0d; oats, 1s 0d; rye, 1s 0d; beans, 1s 0d; peas, 1s 0d.

Flour.—The market for all descriptions is firm, and prices are well supported in every instance. Common sound congous is quoted at 9d per lb. Duty was paid up to Saturday last on [illegible] Assam, 58,6[illegible]; and Ceylon, 24,[illegible]; against 18,[illegible] in 1848.

Sugar.—The best qualities of raw sugar have been in moderate request, at full prices; but low and middling and inferior kinds are somewhat lower to purchase. Foreign sugars have a downward tendency. Refined goods steady. Brown lumps, 49s; and fine grocery, 50s to 50s 6d per cwt. Duty, 24s 6d per cwt.

Coffee.—Plantation kinds are in better request. In prices, however, we have no improvement to notice. Ceylon qualities are sold at the late advance.

Provisions.—The arrivals of foreign butter into the Thames have been tolerably steady, at about last week's quotations. In the middling and inferior kinds scarcely any business is doing. Fine Belfast is selling at 78s to 80s; fine Limerick, 76s to 78s; fine Kerry, 74s to 76s; fine Cork and Waterford, 72s to 74s; fine Dublin, 72s to 74s per cwt.; fresh, 8s to 11s per dozen pounds. Irish bacon is in good request, at 50s to 52s per cwt.

All other kinds of provisions are extremely dull

Tallow.—The demand for all kinds of tallow is inactive, at [illegible] in the spot, 38s 9d to 39s, and for forward delivery, 38s 3d to 38s 6d per cwt. Rough fat, 2s per 8lbs, net cash.

Hay and Straw.—Old meadow hay, £2 5s to £3 0s; old clover ditto, £4 0s to £4 10s; new ditto, 1[illegible] to £4; and straw, £1 6s to £1 15s per load

Wool.—Imports of wool continue large, yet the dealers are purchasing extensively, at fully the late advance in the quotations.

Potatoes.—The supplies are large and of excellent quality. Very little is doing, at from 4s to 5s per ton.

Coals (Friday).—Wylam, 15s 6d; Hetton, 15s 3d; Bell, 16s 3d; Hilton, 18s; Kelloe, 18s 9d; Tees, 17s 3d; and Hartley, 16s per ton.

Hops (Friday).—Three packets of new hops have arrived from Sussex since our last report, viz., one of 3 cwt. from Ardingly, and two of 4 cwt. each from Etchingham. Some weeks since we shall receive anything like a supply. The pandation accounts are still unfavourable, but duty is cancelled. The duty is cancelled. The market is dull, and prices unchanged, which move off steadily, on the following terms:—Sussex pockets, 42s 1ds to 44s 1ds; Weald of Kent ditto, 42s to 44s; Mid and East Kent ditto, 43s to to 47s per cwt.

Smithfield (Friday).—The supply of beasts here to-day was rather short of the average quantity, and the demand was heavy, at from 2¼d to 2½d per 8lbs. Some of the best Scots realised 2½d per 8lbs. without obtaining a clearance. Although the stock were 24 head from Upcote and 20 from France. With sheep we were not moderately supplied, and the demand was heavy, at 3d per 8lbs. Calves were in steady request, at 4d per 8lbs. Pigs were in fair demand, at 3d per 8lbs.

Newgate and Leadenhall (Friday).—The supply of beasts fresh up from our own grazing districts has been moderate, but from Scotland and Norfolk large. The trade was somewhat heavy. Calves, the number of which was somewhat large, ran slowly at late rates. In pigs next to nothing was doing. Much cows sold at late rates, at from £14 to £18 each, including their small calf

Per 8lb sinking the offals:—Coarse and inferior beasts, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; second quality ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; prime large oxen, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; prime Scots, &c., 3s 8d to 3s 10d; coarse calves, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; prime small ditto, 4s 2d to 4s 4d; coarse sheep, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; prime ditto, 4s 2d to 4s 4d; large coarse hogs, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; neat small porkers, 3s 8d to 3s 10d, which, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; suckling calves, 4s 6d to 4s 8d; and quarter old store pigs, 18s to 20s each. Total supplies: Beasts, 6[illegible]; cows, 20; sheep and lambs, 12,500; calves, 410; pigs, 300. Foreign supplies: Beasts, 70; sheep, 750; calves, 240. Scotch: Beasts, 70; sheep, 120

Newgate and Leadenhall (Friday). We had a very inactive demand here to-day, at [illegible] prices.

Per 8lb sinking the offals:—Inferior beef, 2s 8d to 3s 0d; middling ditto, 2s 6d to 2s 8d; prime large ditto, 2s 10d to 3s 0d; prime small ditto, 3s 2d to 3s 4d; large coarse ditto, 2s 4d to 2s 6d; middling ditto, 2s 6d to 2s 8d; prime ditto, 2s 8d to 3s 0d; veal, 2s 10d to 3s 6d; small pork, 3s 8s to 4s 1emb, 3s 10d to 4s 10d.

MORT. ELLERAY.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 21.

WAR OFFICE, AUGUST 21.

6th Foot: T E Gordon to be Ensign, vice Lieut G J Stewart to be First Lieutenant, vice Lieut and Captain W Hall, who exchanges; and Lieutenant, vice Stewart, 6th Light Dragoons, vice Lieut and Captain, vice Colchester, who exchanges. 7th Foot: Ensign Davies, from Lieut J C Baker to be Captain, vice Lewis, Ensign F Hagnell to Lieutenant, vice Davies, J F Bowen to be Ensign, vice Hagnell. 8th Foot: Ensign H Carey to be Ensign, vice Lynch. 16th Foot: Ensign W Ashmore to be Major, vice Brandt; Lieutenant P Fitzgerald to be Captain, vice Ashmore; and Adjutant C C Grant to be Lieutenant, vice Fitzgerald. 17th Foot: Lieut and Adjutant C C Grant to be Lieutenant, vice Hamilton, who resigns the Adjutancy only. Lieut H Gerrard to be Adjutant, vice Grant. 24th Foot: Lieut W Armitage to be Lieutenant, vice Goodall, 17th Light Dragoons, who exchanges. Ensign J Dunbar to be Lieutenant, vice Percival, Regmon. Staff: Ensign A Hill to be Lieutenant, vice A Miller. 32nd: Major G Critchley to be Lieut-Colonel, vice Hamilton, who exchanges. Lieut H Gerrard to be Major, vice Critchley. Lieut R Lee to be Captain, vice Chester. Lieut F K Campbell to be Captain, vice Chester. E G Bulwer to be Second Lieutenant, vice Brady. Staff: W Moore to be Ensign, vice Hamilton. 40th Foot: Ensign A Hill to be Lieutenant, vice A Miller. 72nd: Major G Critchley to be Lieut-Colonel, vice Hamilton, who exchanges. Lieut H Gerrard to be Major, vice Critchley. Lieut R Lee to be Captain, vice Chester. E G Bulwer to be Second Lieutenant, vice Brady. Staff: W Moore to be Ensign, vice Hamilton. 90th Foot: Ensign A Hill to be Lieutenant, vice A Miller. 92nd: Major G Critchley to be Lieut-Colonel, vice Hamilton, who exchanges. Lieut H Gerrard to be Major, vice Critchley. Lieut R Lee to be Captain, vice Chester. E G Bulwer to be Second Lieutenant, vice Brady. Staff: W Moore to be Ensign, vice Hamilton. 97th Foot: Ensign A Hill to be Lieutenant, vice A Miller. 98th: Major G Critchley to be Lieut-Colonel, vice Hamilton, who exchanges. Lieut H Gerrard to be Major, vice Critchley. Lieut R Lee to be Captain, vice Chester. E G Bulwer to be Second Lieutenant, vice Brady. Staff: W Moore to be Ensign, vice Hamilton. 99th: Lieut F Bowen to be Lieutenant, vice Robinson. Ensign G Gooch to be Lieutenant, vice Bowen. W Whitehead to be Ensign, vice Wood. Staff: Paymaster J D Gunning to be Deputy to be Captain, vice Lamert. Philip W T Cockburn to be Ensign, vice Hall. Lieut G R Halliday to be Captain, vice Bray-Major Moore: Ensign W A Ballie to be Lieutenant, vice Halliday. 90 D A S Armstrong, Gent., to be Ensign, vice Fraser. 93rd: A Rose to be Ensign, vice Maclellan. 98th: Lieut J Jordan to be Quartermaster, vice Fagan, Quartermaster of Depôt. Paymaster, vice Skinner

BANKRUPTS.

A PAINE and G F DAVIES, Southwark, woollendrapers. H F DODSON, Romford, Essex, grocer. J BOWERS, Worcester, victualler. J and H HUMPHREYS, Birmingham, tinplate manufacturers. F BURT, Plymouth, bonding-house keeper. J SKINNER, Dover, Brixton, and Clapham, gentleman. E and A GANT-IDE, Oldham, Lancashire, cotton spinners.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATION.

W BROWN, Glasgow, corn-factor.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 24.

FOREIGN OFFICE, AUGUST 21.

The Queen has been pleased to approve of Mr John Farrell Robertson as Consul in Great Britain for the Republic of the Equator.

COMMISSION SIGNED BY THE LORD-LIEUTENANT

Royal North Lincoln Militia: T F Dymoke, of Scrivelsby, to be Major.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE, AUGUST 21.

Ordnance Medical Department: J H Halahan, M.D, to be Assistant-Surgeon, vice Dassett.

Royal Regiment of Artill'y: J S Stocks to be Veterinary Surgeon, vice Burt.

Corps of Royal Marines: First Lieut C O Hamley to be Captain, vice P I J Dansaloy; Second Lieut W H Bennett to be First Lieutenant, vice Hamley.

BANKRUPTS.

F D LEWIS, Castle-court, Birchin-lane, printer. J CALDWALL, King William-street, City, ac-fe-tioning wiolens manufacturers. J H SPENCER, South Benfleet, Essex, builder. H BLAKE, Market-place, Wakefield, Yorkshire, ironmonger. R MICHELL, Gloucester Priory, Warwickshire, publisher. W HOLMES, Plymouth, baker. J SANES, Kingston-upon-Thames, tailor. J JACKSON, South Shields, brewer. W HIRD, Great Yarmouth, Norfolk, hotel keeper ELIZABETH BIDWELL, R HOWELL, [illegible] FLOWER, [illegible]

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATION.

W FRASER, Breahorn, Rosse, cement manufacturer. J THAIN, Dundee, merchant. D FORBES, Edinburgh, draper. P LOW, Edinburgh, draper. MACIN NAIR and BALLARDIE, tobacconists, Glasgow, plumbers.

BIRTHS.

At Wilmore Rectory, Staffordshire, the lady of the Rev Charles Henry Molyneux, of a daughter.—At Mark-side, the wife of Dr. Stark, of a son.—In Gordon-street the wife of Henry Hughes, of a son.—In Burton-square, Lady Heath, of a daughter.—At Lee-house, Pensanger, Gambe, well, the wife of the Rev Henry Drayton, of a daughter.—At Worcester, the wife of the Rev George Henry Sumner, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES

At All Saints' Church, Southampton, John Wainman Conway Hughes, SCL, New Inn, Oxford, to Sarah Anne Menzies.—[illegible] only surviving child of the Rev James Jarrett, vicar of Lydd, Kent, to Frederick Cardigan [illegible] of the Royal Artillery.—At the Isle of Bute, by chapelry to the Queen the Duke of Buccleuch, [illegible] Sir Colquhoun Grant, Bart., of Monymusk, to Lady Anne Montagu, [illegible] daughter of the late Admiral Thomas Bladen Capel, [illegible] of the Worldham, Shrewsbury, and [illegible]

At Ashton-under-Lyne, Lancashire, Thomas Ashton, Esq., of Hyde, to Mary Ann, eldest daughter of the late John Mayall, Esq., of Ashton-under-Lyne.—

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr W BATTY.—Last Six Nights of the present Season.—Positively on MONDAY, AUGUST 27th, the performance will commence at Seven o'clock, with Mr. Stocqueler's Grand Military Equestrian Spectacle of MOGUL AND MAHRATTA; or, the Conquest of the Sikhs. To be succeeded by Batty's inimitable FEMALE CIRCUS OF THE ARENA, supported by an unprecedented array of the talent of this Establishment. To conclude with a favourite Afterpiece.

Box-office open from Eleven till Four.—Stage Manager, Mr W. West.

ROYAL GARDENS, VAUXHALL.—ONE MORE SHILLING ADMISSION MONDAY AUG. 27 and four following Nights. In Preparation, to organise the Public that the Management has engaged the Price of Admission to the Royal Pleasure Gardens, VAUXHALL, on Opportunity to the Million to witness for the First Time a Horsemanship ever performed by MADAME D'ERKMANN, the Female Wonder in equestrian Wonder, is re-engaged for a limited Number of Nights, on her return of whose engagement she leaves this country. He will appear every night with a splendid TROUPE of EQUESTRIANS. In the Circle, and will appear the celebrated Arab, MOHAMMED BEN ALHAGGIN, the most extraordinary Vaulter in the World, who will go through his astonishing feats of Gymnastics, in which he will bear upon his Head, Lion, &c., and throw the most wonderful somersaults ever witnessed. A NATIVE of AGRA will exhibit the Manners and Customs of the Sikhs and other natives of India by the assistance of Mr MOODY, the celebrated Comic Singer of the New Regent's Park, Military Band, and Pyrotechnic Display. The World Renowned Clown, Mr. HERNANDEZ, and the Unrivalled Equestrian Acrobat, Antonio Drake, have kindly volunteered their Services, and will conclude their engagement this season. In Rehearsal, and will be produced this season, the Ballet of Doors open at Seven. Admittance, ONE SHILLING.

LAST FEW WEEKS OF THE PRESENT MATCHLESS ATTRACTIONS

FIRST PERFORMANCE of a GRAND MUSICAL MELANGE arranged in honour of Her MAJESTY'S VISIT to IRELAND.

ROYAL SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.—MONDAY, TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY, and THURSDAY, Grand Musical Representation of the TOWN and FORESTS of BARADOYE. Superb Monuments. Promenade Concerts, conducted by Mr Godfrey. Songs and Dances by Miss Maude Wells, Mr. G. Vedder, and Mr. Herrmann. Solos by Richardson, Messrs Collins, and Herr Koenig. Aerial Bridge &c. Concluding with the Storming of Bardoyo, beyond the Companion Gate Grande Pyrotechnic Display ever witnessed.

Doors open at Nine. Feeding of the Animals, Half-past Four. Concert at Half-past Five. Pyrotechnic Exhibition at Nine. Admittance One Shilling.

CREMORNE.—GRAND MORNING ENTERTAINMENTS, EQUINOCTIAL QUINCAILLERIE and SPORTS at the HIPPODROME.—MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and FRIDAY, RACES by Trades: STUD of 50 HORSES and Trained Equestrian Company, and Chinese Gymnastic Spectacle, representative of the Equinoctial Quincaillerie and Sports and Pastimes of the Hippodrome at Paris.—Entrance to Ko-ghis ground, 2s.—Jockeys: Cowboys with the Mexican Double-handed Sword and Quarter-staff Fights, &c. Olympian Games, Charlie Rose, and Races on Bare-boned Steeds: Sword, Pistol, and Axe in Practice, Race by Monkeys, mounted on diminutive Ponies, Splendid Equestrian Quadrille, composed Tableaux, &c. The numerous attractions of this Establishment as usual. No additional charges.

Doors open at Two; commence at Half-past Three. Admission One Shilling.

N.B.—Tuesday, Thursday, and saturday, a variety of Novel and Unique Entertainments.

BANVARD'S GREAT ORIGINAL PAINTING of the MISSISSIPPI RIVER.—Beware of Imposition.—Several spurious and incorrect imitations of the above-named picture having been hastily prepared by parties of unprincipled persons, who are now travelling the same as the original, in various parts of the kingdom, the public are informed that BANVARD'S GREAT PAINTING, as exhibited before her Majesty the Queen and H.R.H. Prince Albert, at Cubitt's, is still at the EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly.

Open every Morning at Half-past Two; Evening, at Half-past Seven.—Admission, Lower Seats, 2s; Gallery, 1s.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION. —First Series of DISSOLVING VIEWS, illustrating ROME, with a Lecture, including the most interesting parts of its ancient and modern history. Daily, at Half past Four; and every Evening, at a Quarter to Ten o'Clock. Lectures on Chemistry, by Mr. J. SCOFFERN, at Half-past Seven and Half-past Three, and a Lecture on Steam, at Noon. Clock. Lecture by Dr. Bachhoffner, on Master's Patent Process of Dressing Cloth. Lecture by Mr. HOGHTON on Electricity, &c. Exhibition of the Chronotrope. The Oxy-hydrogen Microscope. Diver and Diving-bell.—Admission, 1s, Schools, Half-price.

DANCING TAUGHT in the most fashionable style by MR and MRS. GEORGE BARNETT at WILLIS'S ROOMS, 41, Brewer street, Golden-square. Terms—Quadrille Class at 8s. honour. Juvenile Classes on Saturday mornings, at 10 o'clock. Evening Assembly will open Friday, September the 7th. The Rooms to be let for Balls, &c.

A SOLICITOR in an ASSIZE TOWN in the South of England wishes to take an ARTICLED PUPIL, who would be required to reside in the house, where he would meet with every domestic comfort. A premium not required.—Address, J. S., at Messrs. Waterlow and Son, Law Stationers, Birchin-lane, London.

MADEIRA.—YATES'S FAMILY HOTEL. —Visitors to Madeira are informed, that, on their arrival, they will find good accommodation at the above Hotel, where Mr. Yates, as English agent, will give them every information they may require as to climate, Board-lodging, &c. &c.

N.B. English money is current in Madeira.

ROYAL HOTEL, LOWESTOFT.—GEORGE W. HOUSE respectfully informs the Nobility, Gentry and Visitors to this delightful Watering-place, that the above HOTEL is now OPEN, and he trusts that in every department it will be found to equal, should it not be first character in the kingdom. Hot, Cold, and Shower Baths of fresh and Salt Water, Look-up Coach-houses, Flys, and Post-horses.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the usual DIVIDEND of five per cent, free of income tax) on the shares and deposits in this Society will be PAYABLE at its side office on and after MONDAY, the 20th day of August next.

INVALID LIVES.—In addition to assurances on healthy lives, this Society continues to grant Policies on the lives of persons more or less deviating from the standard, on the payment of a premium proportioned to the increased risk

Particular information can be obtained (free of expense) by addressing as under

G. H. PINCKARD, Resident Secretary.

No. 99, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London

LINENDRAPERS TO THE QUEEN.
ESTABLISHED IN 1778.

WEDDING AND GENERAL OUTFITS.
JOHN CAPPER AND SON, 69, Oracechurch-street, have added a warerooms for LADIES' READY-MADE LINEN,
under female superintendence. Materials good, needlework excellent, and prices economics.
Decidedly cheap BABY LINEN, of superior work.
Parcels above £5 sent carriage free, per rail, throughout England.
LISTS, with PRICES,
sent FREE to ladies, on application

ON MONDAY, TUESDAY, and Following Days, will be offered by BEECH and BERRALL, 63 and 64, Edgware-road, upwards of 80,000 yards of elegant Striped, Checked, Brocaded, and Grass Cambrics, in all the new Autumnal Colours and Designs, at 9½d, 1s 11½d, 2s 9½d, and 3s 4½d per yard.

It is believed that these goods are bought of a manufacturer retiring from business.

Patterns sent for inspection to any part, postage free

Address, BEECH and BERRALL, 63 and 64, Edgware-road.

TO LADIES.—THE PRINCE ALBERT BELT.—The distinguishing feature of this Belt consists in the fastening, which has no prongs, and yet is perfectly secure. The great success which has attended the introduction of this article for Boys seats, has led to imitations, which are worthless, from the fact of the fastening being insecure. The words "PRINCE ALBERT" has stamped on the under side of the fastening "PRINCE ALBERT, London, registered, August 17, 1847;" and the tradesmen have been cautioned that the words, if used for sale, will be considered as a breach of trade, punishable in London, which, in order to protect the Public, the proprietor will enforce.

TO LADIES.—On the grave the ride, the promenade, or the social excursion, Ladies should ever be provided with ROW. ANDS KALYDOR, which will instantly and effectually refreshing to the complexion, dispelling the cloud of languor and exhaustion, allaying all fretful irritation, and imparting a delicate, healthy glow, the pleasing sensation attendant on restored activity and a healthy state of the skin. The numerous varieties of cutaneous eruptions, together with freckles, tan, and discolorations. By before its application, and give ease to delicate sensitiveness and transparency of the satin complexion. In cases of sunburn or stings of insects, it will have long and extensively been acknowledged as unrivalled. Sold by A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20, Hatton-garden, London; and by chemists and perfumers.

NEW BOOKS, &c.

SEA WEEDS.—Instructions to Find, Preserve, and Class fy them, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 2d, monthly, London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN.

WAXEN FLOWERS.—Instructions how to Model them, by a PRACTICAL BOTANIST, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 2d, monthly. London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN

LEAVES of PLANTS.—How to take Impressions of them, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 2d, monthly London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN

WASHING WITHOUT RUBBING the CLOTHES.—Mr Twelvetree's Expeditious Method of Washing Without Hard Labour, in the FAMILY FRIEND, No 7, price 2d London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN

MRS. WARREN'S SUPERB DESIGNS in FANCY WORK, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 2d, monthly London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN

THE FIRST EIGHT NUMBERS of the FAMILY FRIEND, containing TWO HUNDRED and FORTY-SIX PAGES, Beautifully Printed and Wrapped, price 2d each; or 1s 6d the whole

London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN; and all Booksellers.

PRIZE ENIGMA!—The Editor of the FAMILY FRIEND offers a prize of FIVE POUNDS to the person who shall correctly solve a Poetical Enigma contained in the 1 amily Friend for September. Price 2d.

London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN, and all Booksellers.

TWO THOUSAND ANECDOTES FOR ONE SHILLING.

Now publishing, price One Shilling, the RAILWAY ANECDOTE BOOK; for the Reading of Railway Travellers. Illustrated with EIGHT CHARACTERISTIC PORTRAITS

To be had at all the Railway Stations.

W. H. SMITH and Co., 186, Strand.

NEW PLYMOUTH SETTLEMENT

Now ready, in One Volume, post 8vo, with a Plan and Five Views, price 6s cloth,

AN ACCOUNT of the SETTLEMENT of NEW PLYMOUTH, in NEW ZEALAND, from Personal Observation during a Residence of Five Years. By CHARLES HURSTHOUSE, Jun

London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 65, Cornhill.

THE ITALIAN REVOLUTION.

Now ready, and may be had at all the Libraries, in 2 vols, post 8vo.

ERNESTO DI RIPALTA, a Tale of the Italian Revolution. By the Author of "Notes of a Two Years' Residence in Italy."

SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 65, Cornhill. Dublin: JAMES MCGLASHAN, 21, D'Olier-street

MAN IS EARTHFULLY ILLUSTRATED.

Now ready, Royal 4to, price 1s; on tinted paper, 2s 6d,

MAN from the Cradle to the Grave. Being Shakspeare's Seven Ages of Life: Illustrated in a Series of Seven Original Designs on Wood, by John Gilbert, Marshall, Gaston, and D. H. Hay. Engraved by Dalziel Brothers. With an Introduction by W. Bridges.—London: W. H. SMITH and SON, 136, Strand. Edinburgh: J. MENZIES. Dublin: J. MCGLASHAN.

In 8vo, with an Engraving of a Roman Osmarium from Pompeii, price 12s,

AN ACCOUNT of WALTON and WEYBRIDGE, Chiefly Camp: the Passage of Cæsar at Coway-Stakes; and the Origin of the Names of Walton-upon-Thames, Weybridge, Oatlands, Goodtree of Monmouth, Milton, &c.

London: LEAD ENHALL PRESS, Leadenhall-street; MANN, 39, Cornhill, LAMB, Chertsey; the Stations of the south-Western Railway; and all Booksellers

In one volume, price 12s 6d,

MRS. S. C. HALL'S WEEK at KILLARNEY. Combining a Variety of Lively Scenes Book with the entertainment of a witty and well-informed Travelling Companion, and forming a Complete Guide to the Lakes of Killarney, abounding in wood and mist, it unravels of all that is remarkable in that romantic district, and pointing to the hands of every visitor a correct guide to all of what are the men and manners.

London: A. HALL, VIRTUE, and Co., 25 Paternoster-row

Now ready, price Eighteen Shillings, VOLUME XIV. of THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, elegantly bound in cloth, gilt edges, rich in Illustrations of the Events of the past Six Months, forming the most complete and valuable ILLUSTRATED CHRONOLOGY, together with a mass of useful and lively Information on Art, Literature, and Science.

The COVERS for Volume XIV., with the New Design, price 2s 6d each.

May be obtained, by order, of all Booksellers, &c. in the kingdom, as also all the previous Volumes.

Just published, five parts is, or sent post-free for 1s 6d,

BRIDGMAN'S PARIAN or PAPIER MACHE FRAMES, containing 12 Engravings, including the machine-made Frame Mouldings, which may be had in 19-ft. lengths, without join, of every pattern and size required. The frames of Mr. Bridgman possess the best characteristic of fine carving.—Art-Union Journal. "The work Mr. Bridgman has prepared is one of remarkable elaborateness and beauty."—Douglas Jerrold's Shilling Magazine.

By her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent.

The Works, 13, Wellington-street North, Strand

GEMS OF ART.

Now ready, Part II., price seven pence (or post-free, 13 stamps), of THE DOMESTIC JOURNAL,

Consisting of 64 quarto pages of letterpress, from the pens of the most talented and most popular of the living authors of the day, and illustrated with about

FORTY SUPERB ENGRAVINGS

Many of which have been the Property of Fifty Guineas Each

Not a house in the British Empire should be without this work; the gems of literature it contains, rolling in for a farthing companion, and the low price charged for it rendering is available to the artisan and the labourer. Such is the literary banquet prepared for ALL in its ample pages, that each of those who read will arise from the perusal conscious of having laughed with its amusing, instructive, and useful contents

London: W. and G. CLARK, 17, Warwick-lane; and all booksellers

* * Agents in the trade are informed that Part I. will be issued on MAY or return for three months

A PRIZE FOR FAMILIES

THE DOMESTIC ALMANACK for 1850 Is now ready, Price 1s, containing Seven Engravings, Twenty-eight Pages of Letterpress, Notices of Events, Lists of Fairs, Tables of Duties, &c. &c. Also, Part I. of the Domestic Journal, price 7d, containing Forty Engravings, and Sixty-four Pages of Letterpress, forming a complete Library of Amusement and Instruction for Winter Evenings.

London: W. and G. CLARK, 17, Warwick-lane; and all booksellers

* * Agents in the trade are informed that Part I. will be issued on MAY or return for three months

NEW EDITION, 11,000.

Now ready, Price One Shilling; or Post-free, 1s 6d.,

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON

This work is rendered peculiarly attractive by the EASY ARRANGEMENT of SPELLING, which smoothes all difficulties except those arising from the Pronunciation. It is NATURAL READING LESSONS, which enable the learner to advance of his own accord; while the NEW and ELEGANT SERIES of UPWARDS of ONE HUNDRED and SEVENTY BEAUTIFUL WOOD-CUTS of objects and scenes selected, forms a perfect Picture Gallery for the mind, affording information to learning ever published. (144 Pages.)

ATWOOD and CHANDLER, 186, Strand.

Published at the Office of THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 196, Strand, London. Printed by WILLIAM CLOWES, Duke-street, Stamford-street, and Charles Lamb Printer, 26 Poet-lane.

NEW MUSIC.

LE PROPHETE.—The Vocal Music is now ready. Also, various arrangements for the Pianoforte, as Duets—CRAMER, BEALE, and Co., 201, Regent-street, and 67, Conduit-street.

BEMS MARCH.—Just Published, Price 2s. Performed by the Band of the 1st Regt. of Life Guards, in Hyde Park, a spirited and characteristic and full of national character. Also the last post from the Band of HOPKINSON, Music sellers, 97, Oxford-street.

ITALIAN OPERAS, 2s. each, full music size. "Lo Huguenots," "Lucia," "La Figlia," "Don Giovanni," "Sonnambula," "Linda," "Der Freischutz," "Norma" and 30 others (see catalogue), all in THE PIANISTA, 2s each, post free, 30 stamps. "Pianista" Office, 33, Paternoster-row.

NEW SONG.—"YES! I HAVE DARED TO LOVE THEE" by the Author of "Will you leave me then as now?" "Dearest, then I'll love you more." "The Secret," &c., published next week. "The Song will be the greatest favorite of the day. The music and words are of the most pleasing and effective character. We recommend it to vocalists as a gem deserving their best attention.—London: DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW CHEAP MUSIC.—New Music of the best ease and character, bound in volumes, Eighty Stillings and pence, selling for EIGHT, to clear off stock. Best plates of Cx ray Horn, Cuckoo, Sleigh, Lumbering, and all other comic pieces, forming at half price and quarter price. Orders for exportation, and lists from country friends, meets with prompt attention which count and defy competition. Every sort of cheap music kept, without prejudice or favour.—WALKER, 17, Soho-square. New Catalogues Gratis for Two Stamps.—17, Soho-square, WALKER'S

PIANOFORTES.—CRAMER, BEALE, and Co have second-hand PIANOFORTES of every description, by Broadwood, Collard, Erard, Clementi, and all the best makers, foreign and English. Warranted, and may be exchanged if not approved of. 201, Regent-street, and 67, Conduit-street

PIANOFORTES.—TOLKIEN'S splendidly-toned Piccolos, with 6½ octaves, O. G. Fall, Metallic Plate, only 25 guineas. Parties requiring a first-rate Pianoforte, for a little money, will do well to purchase at TOLKIEN'S, 7, Established house, 27, Poultry, E.C., immediately opposite the Mansion-house. Second-hand Pianofortes on hire. Old Instruments taken in exchange.

ORNAMENTS for the DRAWINGROOM, LIBRARY, and DINING-ROOM.—Mr. TENNANT, 149, Strand, has recommenced selling off the last remaining portion of his magnificent assortment of Ormolu, Figures, Vases, Candlesticks, Inkstands, beautiful inlaid Tables, Paper-weights, &c., in Italian Alabaster, Marble, Bronze, &c.

PARIAN BROOCHES and STATUARY in Parian, Statuary Marble, and Terra-cotta Statuettes. A large assortment of Miss Mary Bradshaw, Burslem, Staffordshire. Inspection invited.—149, Strand.

JONES'S £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES, at the Manufactory, opposite Somerset House, are warranted not to vary more than half a minute per week. The great reduction now given at once and sets all rivalry, either of the Swiss manufacturers, or any other house. On receipt of a Post-office Order, payable to JOHN JONES, for £4 4s., one will be sent Free.—Mead Jones's Search of Watchwork, sent free for a Twopenny Stamp.

ELECTRO SILVER PLATED SPOONS and FORKS of the best quality: Table spoons or forks, per dozen; dessert spoons or forks, 28s per dozen; tea spoons, 18s per dozen; gravy spoons, 30s; ladles, 14s each. Sold by T. COX SAVORY and Co., Silversmiths, &c., 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street), London.

THE BEST ENGLISH WATCHES.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Watchmakers, by Special Appointment to her Majesty the Queen, and to H.R.H. Prince Albert, 28, Cornhill, London (a-street; MANN, 39, Cornhill, LAMB, Chertsey; the Stations of the south-Western Railway; and all Booksellers

JONES'S £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES, at the Manufactory, opposite Somerset House, are warranted not to vary more than half a minute per week. The great reduction now given at once and sets all rivalry, either of the Swiss manufacturers, or any other house. On receipt of a Post-office Order, payable to JOHN JONES, for £4 4s., one will be sent Free.—Mead Jones's Search of Watchwork, sent free for a Twopenny Stamp.

ELECTRO SILVER PLATED SPOONS and FORKS of the best quality: Table spoons or forks, per dozen; dessert spoons or forks, 28s per dozen; tea spoons, 18s per dozen; gravy spoons, 30s; ladles, 14s each. Sold by T. COX SAVORY and Co., Silversmiths, &c., 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street), London.

THE BEST ENGLISH WATCHES.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Watchmakers, 9 Cornhill, [illegible] to her Majesty the Queen, and to H.R.H. Prince Albert, 28, Cornhill, London, [illegible] PATENT LEVER WATCHES, which are strongly recommended by themselves in their own hands. In silver Cases, with the Detached Escapement and Jewelled, the prices are Four Guineas each in the Full Size, and Eighteen Guineas each. The Full Size Gold Cases are of rich Gothic and Etruscan Guinea

VAUXHALL GARDENS.

THE ITALIAN WALK.

THE season at this still popular place of amusement has proved, on the whole, successful to the new entrepreneurs. This result has been fairly earned; for the proprietors have provided for their visitors a succession of novel attractions of a superior class.

The circle scenes in the Rotunda Theatre, by young Hernandez and the two Auriols, and the equestrianism of Mdlle. Hinne, from Paris, are performances of great spirit and elegance; indeed, those of Hernandez have never been surpassed for what may be termed the poetry of the art. Equestrianism, however, forms but one feature of the evening's entertainments; and we must recollect that, not long since, performances of this class were considered of sufficient mark for one of our national theatres.

On Wednesday the great attraction was the Night Ascent of Mr. Green in his superb Victoria Balloon, which was seen to great advantage, by aid of the Electric Light, at the back of the spectators' gallery, as shown in our Illustration.

The Balloon ascent did not take place till eleven o'clock. The occupants of the car were but two—Mr. Green and a friend. When set at liberty, the Balloon rose slowly, and, after poising itself, soared easily into the air, and was soon lost in the shadow of the starless sky. The display of fireworks made from the car, however, soon rendered its course observable for a considerable time.

The pyrotechnic display was profuse and fine. In the Waterloo-ground, also, a most beautiful and exceedingly grand exhibition of fireworks took place, on which Mr. Mortram appears to have lavished all the resources of his art.

The illuminations on Wednesday were on an extended scale of magnificence and effect.

In the decoration of the Gardens, it must be acknowledged that a great improvement has been made of late years in the character of what may, perhaps, be termed the scenic contrivances. We remember when the tinkling tin waterfall and the hermit in the dark walk were the best ingenuities of Vauxhall. In their place, we have, certainly, indications of more artistic taste and feeling: such as the Italian Walk, with its sculpture and fountain, illumined by the electric rays. The proprietors have this season extended this walk, and we hear of a further addition. It is, certainly, one of the most elegant localities of the Gardens.

In the group of Gothic Ruins, the advantage of the Colosseum work of this kind has not been lost sight of, and the real appearance amidst the trees is very effective. There is a picturesqueness in the style of decoration, as well as an object and meaning, which should not be lost sight of, in viewing it merely as a graceful combination of art and nature. By nice attention to the judicious selection of the architectural portion, the place is capable of better things than have yet been wrought in this line.

GOTHIC RUINS.

ASCENT OF MR GREEN'S BALLOON, ON WEDNESDAY NIGHT.

The Fountains, with their sculpture, and what some one called "lines of limpid refreshment," are old favourites at Vauxhall; and the past has been a season to increase their popularity. We have Engraved one of them—the Ocean God—in full play.

The Electric Light has been a very available ingenuity for the artistes of the Gardens; its effulgence upon the Victoria Balloon, on Wednesday night, was very striking.

This Balloon was constructed by Mr. Green in 1847, when he made his first ascent in it from Parker's Piece, Cambridge, in the presence of her Majesty and Prince Albert, the Duke of Wellington, and other distinguished personages who were attending the Prince Chancellor's Installation. The Balloon is made of 1200 yards of silk, manufactured for the purpose, in alternate gores of crimson and gold; and around the middle is a zone, or belt, inscribed "Royal Victoria," in gold letters three feet high, and ornamented with crowns, stars, and other regal insignia. The Balloon measures 120 feet in circumference; contains 30,000 cubic feet of gas, when fully inflated, and, with the car attached, is 66 feet high.

By the way, fireworks at Vauxhall almost date within the present century, notwithstanding the Gardens have been a place of public resort from the reign of Charles II. to the present time. Fireworks are stated by Mr. Fillinham not to have been exhibited till 1798, and even then not constantly displayed. The price of admission was 1s. up to the summer of 1792, when it was raised to 2s.; subsequently it was raised to 4s.; in 1848, it was 1s.; and now it is 2s. 6d. The title of Spring Gardens, according to Mr. Fillinham, was continued till 1785.

We quote these details chiefly from Mr. Cunningham's "Handbook for London," just published; in which the author illustrates the history of the Gardens by no fewer than twenty-two quotations from the diarists, dramatists, and memoir writers of a century, or from Evelyn and Pepys to Beswell and Walpole. This article on Vauxhall presents a fair specimen of the clever illustration from contemporary authors which is the staple merit of the "Handbook." By this literary spirit, the work is distinguished beyond all its predecessors.

THE NEPTUNE FOUNTAIN.

HAYMARKET.—On Monday the "Hop Pickers" was performed, with its original cast. The house has continued during the week to be occupied by the Adelphi company.

SADLER'S WELLS.—In order to give sufficient time for rehearsal, the tragedy of "Antony and Cleopatra" will be deferred till Monday week. The theatre opens, however, this evening; the piece announced is the "Tempest."

STRAND.—A slight one-act piece, called "My First and Last Courtship," was produced on Monday. Its evident purpose is to exhibit Mr. Farren in a state of senility; and this end is admirably accomplished. The gist of the plot lies in the successful attempt of a mischievous nephew and a volatile lady, Beatrice (Mrs. Stirling), with whom the old gentleman is in love, to get the affair off by making it appear ridiculous. In this they succeeded, and are permitted to marry for their pains. The performance excited much laughter; nor is the trifle, for such it is, without merit.

AN INCIDENT ON LOCH LOMOND.—On Monday week, when her Majesty was on Loch Lomond, a gentleman came ashore from the Royal Yacht, and men toned to a tourist, who was loitering at the door of the inn, that her Majesty desired to lunch, and that the provisions had unfortunately been sent to Tarbet, adding a question as to whether anything could be had at the inn. The gentleman thus addressed procured two dozen of fresh herrings and seven large loaves, with which three of the visitors in the inn, Mr. Mackenzie, Union Bank, Edinburgh; Mr. Lamb, bookbinder, Edinburgh; and Mr Francis Taylor, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, pulled off to the yacht. On nearing the vessel they were asked what was wanted, and replying "Provisions for her Majesty," were ordered to come on board, and were soon informed by the purveyor that what they had brought was very acceptable; and it afterwards appeared that her Majesty lunched on the loaves and fishes, and felt much obliged to the good subjects who had come to the relief of her necessities.

London: Printed and published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLER, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, AUGUST 25, 1849.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 388.—VOL. XV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1849. [SIXPENCE.

THE PEACE CONGRESS.

THE week that has just closed has exhibited a singular and interesting spectacle. The apostles—we will not say the friends—of Peace (for all sensible men are included under the latter designation) have held a Congress in a time of revolutionary excitement and turmoil, in the midst of the most warlike population of Europe, and in a city where, to judge from its outside show, war would seem to be almost the sole business and the chief glory of life. The members of the Congress were earnest, zealous, indefatigable and many of them highly distinguished, men. Some of them proved their zeal by crossing the Atlantic to give their testimony in favour of the inestimable blessings of peace, and to lift their voices in condemnation of the folly and wickedness of war. Not a few of them had to travel a thousand miles or upwards before reaching the port of embarkation. The hearts of all these men were in the business; and the feelings, if not the judgment, of the rest were enlisted in the cause. Some of them were politicians and men of the world. Some were philanthropists, without being politicians; and many of them were imbued with no other feelings than those of pure religion, and strict adherence to the sublime and beautiful commandment, "Love one another." These men held their Congress in the sight of the nations, and preached their doctrine to all people. If not greeted with loud acclamation, they were certainly received with cordiality and respect in the city which they honoured with their visit. Paris, bristling with bayonets, noisy with drums and fifes, gay with banners, and swarming with men in military uniforms, paid homage to the pure motives of its sober-suited guests, and did its utmost to make their stay agreeable.

There was nothing said in the Congress that could well be gainsaid. Nothing was aimed at that would not be to the permanent advantage of men and nations, if it could be realised. The sentiments of the wise and good of all ages, and of all creeds and climes, were expressed by the various speakers. Their maxims were of that class which merit, in the best sense, the appellation of truisms, and combined the finest philosophy with the purest religion. Yet, now that the Congress has closed—that the wisdom has been uttered—that the good seed has been left to fructify in congenial, or to rot and perish in uncongenial, soil—and that full justice has been done to the kindly intentions of the men who preached peace in the camp, and inveighed, to a glory-loving people, against the wickedness of glory, purchased by the blood and tears of myriads—the question forces itself upon us, Of what use was this Congress? It was a pretty sight while it lasted; but can anything come of it?

Men of business and of practical acquaintance with the world and the world's affairs wish to have an answer to these queries. For our own part, we have the most implicit faith in the abstract truth of the doctrines of the Peace Society; and the most fervent hope that, as men become more civilised, and more thoroughly imbued with the loving spirit of Christianity, the more the abhorrence of war will increase among them. We believe, too, that the sword settles nothing; that physical force never was and never will be of service to any cause that had not moral force to back it; and that moral force will be the ultimate arbiter of the destinies of humanity. But, while we believe all these things, and would join the most enthusiastic lover of peace in laudation of the countless and inestimable benefits that would result to the world were the swords of all nations turned into ploughshares, and guns only remembered as the barbarous implements of a savage race, we must confess that, after all, while men are men, and earth is earth, the doctrine of peace at all hazards seems to us to be more sentimental than sensible, and far more amiable than wise. In short, we utterly deny that war in all cases is an evil. We admit offensive war to be the concentration of all imaginable horror and atrocity; but we assert defensive war, in support of the right, to be necessary, and wise, and holy. Were offensive war never made, of course defensive war would cease; and it is here that the sentimentalists, who preach the beautiful doctrine of peace, commit an error. They include offensive and defensive war in one condemnation; and they throw doctrine upon a devotion that cannot too often and too zealously be enforced upon the world, by their unfortunate incapacity to make the distinction between force employed to commit, and force employed to resist, iniquity. That the members of the Society of Friends should continue to praise this doctrine, is not extraordinary. It is a matter of religion with them—a matter of faith, upon which reason is thrown away. We are as much accustomed to thes things in their mouths, as we are to the broad-brims upon their heads, or to the cut of the coats they wear. But that men who aspire to be the guides and teachers of nations—men who would govern men—and who would lend a hand in the actual business of life, should link themselves to this Quixotism, surprises us not a little. They owe it to their own reputations, and they owe it to society—which they have already served, and may hereafter serve again—to undertake no tasks that are of impossible fulfilment; and to give no countenance to the mere abstractions of theorists who ignore that man has passions and prejudices to sway, as well as reason to guide him—that he is not a creature compact entirely of intellect, and that flesh and blood enter somewhat largely into his composition. Most people will admit that there has been too much war in the world—too much ignorance—too much poverty—too much oppression, and too much misery of every kind; but if any man in these times will rise and tell us, in the face of society, that there shall be no more war—no more ignorance—no more poverty—no more oppression—no more misery, we shall very scrupulously refrain from giving him a seat in our councils, or entrusting him with the management of our affairs. We may praise his amiability, but it will be at the expense of his judgment; and he shall neither sail our ship, nor superintend our farm, sit as a director at our bank, nor have a vote in the business of our state.

BALMORAL, HER MAJESTY'S HIGHLAND RESIDENCE, FROM THE SOUTH SIDE OF THE RIVER.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

In this Journal of the 16th of June, we expressed our opinions upon the arbitration scheme brought forward in the House of Commons by Mr. Cobden. We reiterate those opinions now, after having perused with attention all the speeches at the Great Peace Congress, and endeavoured to discover some practical utility in their eloquence. The whole tendency of our civilisation is eminently pacific; and wars of aggression and conquest on the part of Kings become every day more unlikely. But it is not from any sentimental horror of war, or any purely religious motive, on the part either of Kings or nations, that this desirable result has been attained. War has been found to be too costly and too clumsy, and, after having done its work, to have left things no better, but much worse than it found them. In times of utter ignorance, it was the only arbiter between individuals and nations. In our time, when civilisation has made some progress, it is an arbiter only resorted to when all other means have failed; and the hardworking men of our age acknowledge the fact, that armies and navies are becoming matters of police—the mere agents of the law employed to keep the peace, and quite as necessary to nations as police-constables are to towns.

Our friends of the Peace Congress would put an end to war, and abolish armies and navies by arbitrating in all cases of national or international differences. But they forget that an arbitration that cannot be enforced, in case of refusal to submit to it, by one or both of the parties, is a mere mockery. In private cases, he who refuses the arbitration he has once consented to, is confronted with the law. The arbitrator may be despised, but the courts of justice, backed by the power of fine or imprisonment, by policemen, gaolers, and dungeons, come to the support of both, who demands his right, and physical force ultimately settles the business. It cannot be otherwise. Physical force, in a wrong cause, has been the curse of the world; but physical force employed in support of the right, cannot be considered as an evil against which the efforts of good men ought to be directed. On the contrary, it is the hope and reliance of mankind, without which, in case of need, the world would be overrun by the wicked and the unscrupulous, our fair civilisation blotted out, and society thrown back into that barbarous stage when every man is his own policeman and soldier, and war, instead of being the calamity of a century, is the curse of every individual every day of his life.

Arbitration has of late years been largely employed in the differences that have arisen in various states of Europe. It will continue to be employed; and the more civilisation advances amongst us, the less disposed will nations be to rush into sanguinary conflicts with one another. But until the Millennium shall burst in all its glory upon us, cases will continually occur in which arbitration will be impossible, until war shall have been appealed to by each party as the last resource. The case of Hungary is one in point. The case of Rome is another. So, in its day, was the miserable affair of Ballingarry. Who was to arbitrate between Smith O'Brien and the British Government? Who shall tell the Emperor of Russia that he shall never again interfere in the affairs of Austria? The fact is, that the arbitration scheme and the objects of the Peace Congress are matters for harmless debating-clubs. Let those enthusiastic friends of Peace who condemn alike the war which is offensive and that which is defensive, continue to meet, and to promulgate their doctrine. The world, though it smile at them, will appreciate the purity of their intentions; but let practical men come out from amongst them, lest they, too, be considered as visionaries, and so be deprived of the power of doing the good which they have at heart, and of aiding that great cause of human improvement to which their lives have hitherto been devoted.

THE QUEEN AT BALMORAL.

We have engraved upon the preceding page a view of the Royal residence, sketched from the south side of the river, and a different point to those from which our previous views have been drawn.

Balmoral has been much improved since her Majesty's last visit. The pleasure-grounds have been laid out anew, in a tasteful style. The castle has been enlarged; and the pile, as it now stands, reminds one of Abbotsford.

The Royal Family pursue there the life of a country squire's household, with this distinction, that they create apparently less stir and commotion in the neighbourhood of their abode.

Lord John Russell arrived on the 22nd ult., on a visit to the Queen.

On the 24th ult., her Majesty and Prince Albert, attended by Viscountess Jocelyn, went to the top of Lochnagar.

On the 19th and the 26th, her Majesty and the Prince, and suite, attended divine service at the parish church of Crathie.

It is contemplated by her Majesty and Prince Albert to quit Balmoral for a few days, and repair to a small shooting-lodge, or "box," as it is designated, on the banks of Loch Muick, situate at the base of Lochnagar. A trim little boat has been built by the Messrs Hall, ship-carpenters at Aberdeen, and conveyed to the place, for the use of the Royal party in making excursions on the loch.

It is said that the Court will not leave Balmoral before the end of September; and rumours are afloat that it is intended then to visit either Lord Aberdeen, at Haddo-house, or the Duke of Sutherland, at Dunrobin; or both.

INAUGURATION OF ROBERT BURNS.

A curious picture, thus untitled, is now on view at 14, Great Queen-street. It represents the inauguration of the Scottish bard as poet laureate of the Lodge Canongate, Kilwinning, Edinburgh; and as we are told, the only picture ever taken in connexion with Masonic mysteries. It includes numerous portraits of the poet's patrons and friends—among them, Lord Monboddo, Mackenzie, Dundas Stewart, Dr. Gregory, Nasmith, and Captain Grose. These have been copied from originals by Sir Joshua Reynolds, Sir H. Raeburn, Mr. G. Watson, and other authentic family portraits. A lithographic print is in progress.

The Masonic inauguration took place in Canongate in 1787, at which time Masonry was at high estimation. The picture is by Dr. Stewart Watson. Everything connected with the bard of Ayr is interesting; but his Masonic relations are peculiarly so. Burns, indeed, was greatly indebted to his initiation for the graces of his literary style, the comparative elegance of his manners, and the ease of his oratory. The artist has been exceedingly successful in his grouping, and has, indeed, produced a vigorous, if not highly-finished painting.

THE DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE.

—On Saturday morning his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, attended by Baron Knesebeck, arrived at Cambridge House, Piccadilly, from a visit to his Majesty, the King of Hanover, at Hanover. His Royal Highness proceeded to his residence at Kew in the afternoon. His Royal Highness the Hereditary Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz returned to the residence of the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, at Kew, on Saturday, from the Continent.

A NOBLE ACT.—A few years since a profound mathematician died in Liverpool, leaving a wife and family unprovided for. Those who knew and esteemed the deceased raised £200, and invested it for the widow and children in a railway. Subsequently the stock was greatly depreciated, but the gentleman who recommended the investment took up the shares, and paid the difference; that gentleman is the one who never tires in acts of benevolence and unostentatious charity—Mr. William Rathbone.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The dearth of news from Paris this week is positively astonishing; even on dits about the "Reds" cease to appear, and that ready-to-bubble description of rumours which the Parisians call canards, no longer float through the public at time-phere; and if it were not for the Peace Congress, Paris would be dullness itself. We have nothing to record since last week but the display of the "Great Waters" at Versailles was repeated on Monday, in compliment to the English and American visitors. At Versailles they played at five o'clock, and at 8t cloud at eight; in the evening, At St. Cloud the rare treat was seen of the fountains being illuminated, and the effect was very magnificent. The crowd present was immense, and nothing could be more favourable to this fête than the weather. The palaces and private apartments at both places were entirely thrown open, and the honours were done by the authorities towards their visitors with a ready and cordial hospitality that added largely to the gratification arising from this act of graceful hospitality on the part of the Government, which was evidently felt and appreciated by all.

In the morning, the English delegates of the Peace Society had given a handsome déjeûner at Versailles to the American delegates, and passed a resolution in favour of them. Mr. Cobden, as chairman of the English delegates made a speech, in which he spoke with great kindness of the American delegates, and afterwards presented to each of them a copy of the New Testament, in French, with an inscription beneath his signature. The speech of Mr. Cobden was replied to by Mr. Allen, of Massachusetts.

The French Government has altogether shown great liberality and good feeling in its treatment of the Peace Congress. The utmost facility was given to the members to visit all the curiosities and valuable collections of the capital; many of the collections, which are generally closed at this season, were opened expressly for their convenience; and on Saturday a grand party was given in their honour by M. de Tocqueville, the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

Prince Callimachi and several members of the diplomatic corps were present at this soirée. Mr. Cobden, who had dined with M. Passy, Minister of Finance, arrived about half-past ten o'clock. Mr. Brown (the escaped slave from the United States), and Mr. Pennington, who had addressed the Congress at its meeting on Friday, were also amongst the guests.

La Presse publishes the model of a petition having for its object the carrying out of the views of the Peace Congress. It demands the abolition of the conscription, the establishment of a voluntary system, and the reduction of the army to 100,000 men, or one soldier for every 300 souls. The petition is ready for signature at the office of La Presse and in the provinces.

The Moniteur du Soir gives a peremptory contradiction to the rumours in circulation relative to the late resignation by certain members of the Cabinet, saying that such members will only retire before an adverse vote of the Assembly.

The sittings of the Conseils Généraux commenced on Monday all over France. These bodies will have to decide on a plan of organisation for the service of the departmental, communal, and cantonal administration. This is a project which has been presented to the Assembly at Paris, and is to form the subject-matter of debate in each council; and the Minister of the Interior will frame a law from the joint results of the votes of the Conseils Généraux. The whole of the deliberations will be submitted to the Council of State, and afterwards to the National Legislative Assembly, where they will act as documents in support of the organic law which Government intends to present.

M. Odilon Barrot has left Paris for Loos, to take part in the labours of the Council-General of his department. M. Lanjuinais, the Minister of Commerce, has gone to Brussels, to witness some chemical experiments with respect to the crystallisation of sugar.

The President continues at St. Cloud.

The number of workmen receiving relief at the mairie of the sixth arrondissement in Paris amounts to two thousand. A few months ago they amounted to twenty-two thousand.

ITALIAN STATES.

VENICE.—Venice, whose heroic defence recalls the memory of her past glories, has fallen. The capitulation took place on the 22nd ult., in the presence of Gen. Gorzkowski, Baron Hess on the part of Austria, and three commissioners on the part of Venice. The surrender is in accordance with the terms of the proclamation of Radetzki last published—that is, unconditional surrender.

The officers who have fought against Austria will be allowed to leave Venice, as well as all foreign soldiers of whatever rank they may be, and certain civic functionaries and persons, of whom a list was to be furnished by the Austrian General in Chief.

The paper money of Venice is to be reduced to one-half of its nominal value, and all only have free circulation both at Venice and in the coast district. The town and fleet to be taken possession of on the 27th; the officers all to surrender in the fort of the Lido; two regiments to be dissolved; Chioggia, Mazano, &c. to be occupied by Austrian troops.

Garibaldi had written from Venice to his mother, in order to tranquillise her fears. On his arrival at Venice he was obliged to keep his bed for a week.

PARMA.—His Royal Highness the Duke of Parma left Vienna on the 16th with the Duchess and family, for Parma, after having given the invitation to the treaty of peace signed at Milan on the 6th instant by Austria and Piedmont.

ROME.—General Oudinot was preparing to set out for France on the 21st, with 10,000 men

It was understood that General Rostolan, the second in command, would remain at Civita Vecchia as the commander in chief of the French troops left at Rome. The free corps and the embodied papal troops have been placed by order of the Governmental Commission. There was a report that Cardinal della Genga was arrested, and that he would resign his post in the commission. The two other cardinals are to be banished if they also would resign.

A note was presented on the 19th ult., by the French Minister, to Cardinal Antonelli, containing a solemn and pressing admonition to the Pontifical Government against the measures that have been adopted hitherto.

The Giornale di Roma publishes a long regulation for the public works of benevolence intended to procure work to able-bodied men without employment. The measures is declared to be in force from the 1st of August. The inhabitants of Romans, or persons who have been settled five years at Rome, or else foreigners who have married Roman women. Minors under 18, and persons unable to work, are excluded. Unskilled workmen of twenty pound have been received by the order of the Governmental Commission. There was a report that Cardinal della Genga was arrested, and that he would resign his post in the commission. The two other cardinals are to be banished if they also would resign.

A note was presented on the 19th ult., by the French Minister, to Cardinal Antonelli, containing a solemn and pressing admonition to the Pontifical Government against the measures that have been adopted hitherto.

The Giornale di Roma publishes a long regulation for the public works of benevolence intended to procure work to able-bodied men without employment. The measures is declared to be in force from the 1st of August. The inhabitants of Romans, or persons who have been settled five years at Rome, or else foreigners who have married Roman women. Minors under 18, and persons unable to work, are excluded. Unskilled workmen of twenty pound have been received by the order of the Governmental Commission. The system and discipline to be followed in the works of beneficence is to be military as far as possible. The workmen actually inscribed are organised in six companies of 500 workmen each; every company has one director, five assistants, 25 sergeants, and 50 corporals.

AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY.

Notwithstanding the surrender of Görgey, the Hungarian General Guyon, who has under his orders 10,000 men, has refused to submit. Generals Schlik and Seebold have been sent in pursuit of him.

The insurgents under Klapka have all retreated to Comorn, where a truce has been agreed upon till they shall have received a confirmation of the news of Görgey's defection

The latter has addressed the following letter to Klapka:—

General, the die is cast—our hopes are crushed! Our sword has been broken by the hosts of Hapsburg-Lorraine, aided by the armies of Russia. Our struggle and the sacrifices of a great nation we are at an end. We have done our utmost to persevere. General, you will thank my actions at Vilagosh mysterious and even incredible. I will explain my motives to you on the world. I am a Hungarian, I love my country above all things, and I followed the dictates of my heart, which urged me to save and not destroy my poor dear native country, and thus to save it from perdition

General, this is my motive for what I did at Vilagosh. Posterity will judge me.

General, by virtue of the dignity of Dictator, which the nation conferred on me by the (unsolved) Parliament, I command you to lay down your arms, and to conclude a convention of the fortress of Comorn, to end a war, of which the prosecution would for ever crush the remnant of the power of the Hungarian nation.

General, I am aware of your sentiments. I know your patriotism, and I am sure you will obey my order, for I am convinced of my motives.

May God be with you, and may He guide your steps.

Debreczin, 14th August.

At Pesth, on the 21st ult., a rumour prevailed that Kossuth had been arrested on the Wallachian frontier, with fourteen carriages. Another account says that the ex-dictator had been recognized driving through Lippa, accompanied by Bakovics, Horvath, and Duisz. The latest intelligence from Pesth, the 17th inst., announces that a treaty of peace had been concluded, the terms of which would be shortly published; also, that it was the intention of the allied Monarchs to proceed in person to Hungary—the Emperor to Debreca n, or Grosswardein, was not decided. Both rumours require confirmation. It is added that the Emperor of Russia intends to order the whole of his troops within his own dominions, as soon as the Hungarian fortresses shall be given up to Austria.

PRUSSIA.

The celebration of the centenary of the birth of Goethe commenced in Berlin on the 26th ult.

The state of siege of the city and district of Breslau was raised on and from the 7th ult.

M. Waldeck and M. Behrends, the well-known Prussian Liberals, were released from prison on the 26th ult., and their partisans got up a demonstration and serenade in their honour. The last of some disturbances, which rendered it necessary for the troops to be called out; but they dispersed the crowd without using their arms.

RUSSIA

Accounts from Warsaw of the 17th ult. mention the brilliant reception of General Lamoriciere by his Majesty the Czar. The Ambassador of the French Republic was brought to Warsaw in the Czar's state carriage. A detachment of general officers rode to meet him and escorted him to the city. It created some astonishment that the Czar should show more politeness to the Ambassador of a Republic than he had done to the late Emperor of Austria.

A new "Holy Alliance," of which France is to be the chief member, was much discussed in the semi-official circles.

Letters from Berlin, of the 20th ult., in the Kölner Zeitung, announce the death, at Warsaw, of the Grand Prince Michael, from an attack of apoplexy.

UNITED STATES.

Cambria this week brings intelligence from New York to the 14th ult.

The cholera was on the decline at New York. The cases for the week ending the 11th ult. were 609; deaths [illegible]

President Taylor, while on a tour through the northern states, was attacked [illegible]

[illegible] issued a proclamation on the 11th inst., declaring that [illegible] reason to believe that an armed expedition was fitting out in the United States with an intention to invade Cuba or some of the provinces of Mexico; that the best information which the Executive had been able to ascertain pointed to the island of Cuba as the object of this expedition; that it was the duty of the Government to preserve the faith of treaties, and to prevent any aggression by these citizens upon the territories of friendly nations. We therefore warned persons from entering into the project.

This expedition was said to be preparing in New York and other cities of the Union.

At St. Louis a great defalcation was discovered, on the 11th August, at the Bank of Missouri. It amounts to 120,000 dollars, so far as discovered. The money was abstracted from boxes containing foreign gold, and the operation is supposed to have been going on for several years. Nathanic Childs, jun., has pay ng teller, had been arrested on an affidavit of the cashier, charged with the peculation. He had given bail.

The slavery question was being much agitated. In Virginia there was great excitement, and every preparation was being made to stand firm by Calhoun in the struggle, which is looked upon as inevitable. Some trials in the southern states for enticing slaves to run away from their masters, and which resulted in the conviction and punishment of the offenders, had increased the excitement on the subject.

Troops have been ordered to Florida to quell the Indian outbreak. Several additional murders had been committed by the savages.

The public feeling continued to run strongly in sympathy for the cause of Hungarian and Roman independence.

CANADA.

The interest attached to the intelligence from Canada recently has ceased. There have been some meetings in New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Newfoundland, at which resolutions were passed favouring the union of all the British provinces, and a reciprocal free trade with the United States.

The Halifax bank was robbed of a large amount of treasure on the 10th inst. The robber is supposed to have arrived in England by the Europa, which sailed the following morning.

Rumours were prevalent of the resignation of Lord Elgin.

Cholera was rapidly on the decrease.

CALIFORNIA.

We have news a fortnight later, viz. to July 2nd, by this week's arrival. At San Francisco vessels continued to arrive, laden with sanguine gold-seekers and merchandize; but the place was completely glutted with the latter.

A proclamation of General Riley, United States officer, advises the people of California that they need not expect to be tolerated in any effort to establish an independent government; that he has orders from the Administration to have elections held to send delegates to a convention, to draft a state constitution, and that he was determined to carry out the wishes of the Government at Washington. The people seem disposed to acquiesce in this movement. The Convention was to meet on the 1st of September.

There was plenty of gold in "the diggings," but the labour necessary to obtain it intimidated those who were unused to much physical effort.

Clerks at San Francisco are getting from 2000 dols. to 4000 dols. a year and their board. Flour is cheap, but lodgings are scarce, and sufficient abodes to cover one-third of the people. A very small lodging rents at from 100 dols. to 350 dols. per month. The arrivals in June and July were 4000 a week. A French restaurant received 1 dol. per minute, and was always busy. Eggs were 3 dols. a dozen, dinners 2 dols. each. Nothing paid so well as the way of merchandise at lumber and bricks for buildings. A private mint had been established. One hotel at San Francisco rents for 30,000 dols. a year, and large single rooms in the said hotel rent for 18,000 dols. a year each.

The rainy season had commenced, and much and fatal sickness prevailed at "the diggins."

The dispute between Americans and foreigners continued both at San Francisco and "the diggins." The term "foreigners" is applied only to the Spanish and other races who do not speak English; but Englishmen, Scotchmen, and Irishmen are considered as Americans, and may receive certificates of the first step towards citizenship, and are deemed citizens in California.

Several parties of Californians had been destroyed by the Apache Indians; among them Mr. Green Marshall's party, except two, who escaped. The Mexican Government at Chihuahua had contracted with M. Chera lie to give a bounty for every Indian scalp brought to head-quarters. The Chihuahuas, however, seem to be disgusted with the treaty as too barbarous and bloody.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

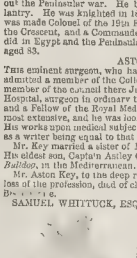
THE ADMIRALTY AT PORTSMOUTH.—The chief members of the Board dined on Monday night with the Port Admiral, the Hon Sir J. S. Capel, at the Admiralty House, and slept at the George Hotel in Portsmouth, where a guard of honour was posted by the Governor of the garrison, in accordance with usual custom. On Tuesday morning the Board embarked in the Queen's State barge, at the town Sally-port, after breakfast, and landed at the Queen's Stairs in the Dockyard at ten o'clock, whereas they went, accompanied by the whole staff of dockyard officers, to the Admiral Superintendent's office, a distance of a few yards. After a tour of the Dockyard, accompanied by the Port Admiral and the staff, first inspecting the works in the new ground, the battery called "Frederick's battery," and the leading stairs or bar for the public, the new laboratory, the Sanatorium (the old laboratory for the reception of sick officers and other servants), the new dock of two era, the building-slips, new docks, &c. The new ships on the stocks next came under the observation of the official body, the steam ships Sidon and Basilisk (which are intended for the Australian station) was reported to the Board expressed some astonishment at the poor appearance the Sidon made in a new ship, but the external economy as well as her external equipment presenting a "beggarly account" of the considerable sum of money that each squandered upon her and the service she has done the navy. The engineer's factory and workshops next were surveyed, together with the Naval Colleges and the store-house.

The Commander of the Forces in Ireland, Lieutenant-General Sir Edward Blakeney, G.C.B., leaves Dublin on this day (Saturday), on a tour of inspection of the troops stationed in Ireland.

ROYAL ARSENAL.—The Master-General and Board of Ordnance have directed that in future the elements of the exercises and drills of field guns, both in the Royal Horse Artillery and field batteries, shall be reduced to uniformity of pattern, and a committee has been appointed, consisting of Captain Cruttenden, Inspector of Drills, Lieutenant-Colonel Bell, commanding Royal Horse Artillery, Lieutenant-Colonel Anderson, commanding the field batteries, and Colonel Gordon, Inspector of the Royal Carriage department, to assemble and determine on the best forms to be adopted. This step has been taken on the recommendation of the select committees. One nine-pounder and one six-pounder gun carriages and limbers are to be prepared and properly fitted, and are to be deposited as pattern to regulate the fittings in future.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

THE HONOURABLE CORNELIUS O'CALLAGHAN.

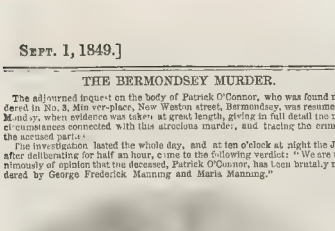


The death of this lamented gentleman, the eldest son and heir apparent of Viscount Lismore, occurred a short time since. He was in his fortieth year, and unmarried. [illegible] at the Grange, [illegible] Tipperary, [illegible] Lismore, [illegible] Lord-Lieutenant of the county of Tipperary, [illegible] Lieutenant-Colonel of the Royal Tipperary Militia, [illegible] Governor of the county and city of Limerick, [illegible] Vice-Admiral of the province of Munster, [illegible] Governor of the Royal Cork Institution, [illegible] Governor of the Queen's Colleges at Cork and Belfast, [illegible] Governor of the Royal Hibernian Military School

THE BERMONDSEY MURDER.

The adjourned inquest on the body of Patrick O'Connor, who was found murdered in No. 3, Minver-place, New Weston street, Bermondsey, was resumed on Monday, when evidence was taken at great length, giving in full detail the main circumstances connected with this atrocious murder, and tracing the crime to the accused parties.

The investigation lasted the whole day, and at ten o'clock at night the Jury, after deliberating for half an hour, came to the following verdict: "We are unanimously of opinion that the deceased, Patrick O'Connor, has been brutally murdered by George Frederick Manning and Maria Manning."



NO. 3, MINIVER-PLACE.

We have engraved the front of the house in Minver-place, near the New Leather Market. For the first day or two after the discovery of the murder, the house was surrounded by crowds of people; but the attraction soon ceased. The back-kitchen, where the victim was buried, and the house, have been well cleaned. The landlord (Mr. Coleman) determined not to satisfy the morbid curiosity of the thousands who wished to look over the house, and it has therefore, very properly, been kept closed. It will not be let again for the present.

APPREHENSION OF MANNING.

Manning was apprehended on Monday evening, at ten o'clock, in bed, at a house near St. Helier's, Jersey. Langley and Lockyer, London officers, accompanied by Chevalier, high-constable of Jersey, made his capture. The prisoner offered no resistance, but at once confessed the murder, and said that he was instigated to do the deed by his wife, who, in fact, fired the fatal shot. He had retired to bed, where he fortunately was secured, and brought to her Majesty's prison immediately afterwards, and delivered over to the charge of Mr Kendrick, the governor thereof.

Soon after Sir Thomas Le Breton attended at the gaol, and every precaution being taken, he was left for the night in immediate charge of the principal turnkey.

During the night he alluded to the murder of O'Connor, endeavouring to exonerate himself of the dreadful crime laid to his charge; also stating distinctly that his wife committed the horrible deed. He then had with a degree of satisfaction that his wife was in custody as she had done it, and had left him in total ignorance of her destination, without money. When breakfast was taken to him he observed a newspaper that was given by one person to another, and without hesitation asked for a perusal of it, which was declined, he also asked for a pipe and some tobacco of a turnkey on duty, and was told it was against the rules of the prison.

From appearances it is evident he has been addicted to drinking to excess lately. He looked emaciated and pale

From the informat on respecting his possession of money, it appears he had not the command of more than the amount obtained by the sale of his stock of furniture.

Sergeant Langley and Constable Lockyer had been out all day on Monday pursuing their search, when, while returning to their quarters about half-past nine in the evening, the landlord of the house in which Manning was staying beckoned them to him, and stated that he had a man in bed whom he strongly suspected was the man they were looking after, so nearly did he answer the description of the person charged with the murder of O'Connor, as printed and circulated by the police authorities.

It would seem that the officers did not immediately act without the presence of one of the local authorities, and the Governor was sent for, and he soon arrived, accompanied by his son. All four then proceeded to the room in which Manning lay, and a sight of his face having been obtained, the governor threw himself up on Manning and secured him, but the latter offered no resistance whatever.

Inspector Haynes, accompanied by a constable, on Wednesday morning, started for Jersey with the necessary warrant for the removal of the prisoner to the metropolis

The Jersey Times of Tuesday supplies the following particulars:—"Manning arrived in this island last Thursday week, 16th instant, and took lodgings at Mr Berry's, the Navy Arms, in Mulcaster-street, where he remained until the following Thursday morning, and on his leaving, desired that his bed should be kept for him, as he would return on Saturday. While there he went out early in the morning, and returned in the evening generally under the influence of liquor, which he drank more freely before he retired for the night. He had once absented himself the whole night, returning to go with his early in the morning to Guernsey, but did not get up in time.

"From his quitting the Navy Arms, until yesterday (Monday), there was no direct trace of him; he took lodgings on Thursday last at Mr. Berthean's, a private house a little off the St. Aubin's-road, on this side the third tower: while there he kept very close, and might have remained longer concealed but for the notice taken of him so frequently sending to the same house for a bottle of brandy. This caused a suspicion, and information was given to Mr. Centener Chevalier, who immediately repaired to the place, accompanied by two officers of the London Detective Police, one of whom was well acquainted with Manning, from his having had to do with him in the affair of the mail robbery on the Great Western Railway, for which Poole and Nightingale were convicted.

"On arriving at the house, it was ascertained that the lodger was in bed, and admirable arrangements were made for getting a sight of his face, and securing him before he could offer any resistance. He was, however, easily captured, and was in a very nervous state. Near him was a bottle of liquor and a razor. He immediately recognised Mr. Edward Langley, of the London police, and stated that he was glad he had come, as he was thinking of going to London to explain all.

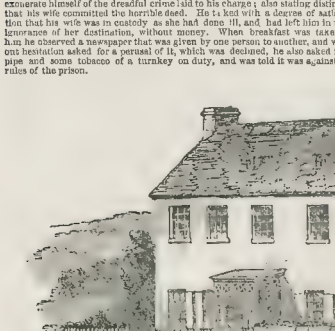
"One of his first questions was, 'Is the wretch taken?' alluding to his wife, and, on being answered in the affirmative, he ob-erved, 'I am glad of it—that will save my life!' In subsequent conversation, he endeavoured to throw the whole blame on the woman, and stated that she had caused the grave to be dug some time before; and, after having laid the cloth for dinner, had invited O'Connor down-stairs to wash his hands, and, while he was going to the kitchen for that purpose, had taken the opportunity of firing at him from behind.

"The prisoner admitted that all the things in the room where he was lodging belonged to him, adding that he had found a man to give him twenty pounds for his furniture in London -all the money he had to start with of which seven sovereigns, which he gave up, was the remainder. On his arrival at the Navy Arms, in Mulcaster-street, his first inquiry was to see the Times newspaper.

"During his stay there he always breakfasted and supped with the other guests, but rarely dined with them. He carried himself rather high, talked of his losses by the French revolution, that he must go to France, and should require an interpreter, as he did not speak the language

"By Saturday's post we received from Jersey the sketch of the house—Prospect Cottage, St. Peter's—in which Manning was captured. The two windows of the ground-floor, on the left side of the house, were those of the room occupied by Manning, and they were observed to be open day and night during his occupation of the lodg ng.

O'CONNOR'S SITUATION IN THE CUSTOMS. It is understood that the vacant place of ganger in the C stoms in London, which was held by the late unfortunate O'Connor, together with another vacancy in the same class of officers, occasioned by superannuation, will be filled up by selection from the list of redundant officers—which, in consequence of the late reductions, is now much increased. As it is also reported that a reduction of nine persons is likely to take place in the class of gangers in the Customs at Liverpool, who will be re-employed in other ports as opportunities occur for replacing them in the service.



PROSPECT COTTAGE, JERSEY, THE HOUSE IN WHICH MANNING WAS CAPTURED.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

PUBLIC MEETINGS.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH AND THE MARYLEBONE BOARD OF GUARDIANS.—On Tuesday a special meeting of the vestry of St. Marylebone took place at the Court-house, for the purpose of receiving a communication which had been received from the Board of Health by the Board of Guardians, with reference to the occurrence of cholera in Marylebone. Mr. Churchwarden Wallace having been called to the chair, the document from the Board of Health was read. It was addressed "To the Select Vestry of St. Marylebone," and peremptorily ordered the appointment of two medical officers in addition to the present staff, to pursue the system of house to house visitation; and that buildings should be provided for the removal of the inhabitants in proximity with places where the cholera existed. It also ordered that the vestry should be assembled to consider the matter, and carry out the said order; and it also ordered that not only a copy of the minute of the vestry, but also the names of the vestrymen present, and those absent, be forwarded to the Board of Health. This document was signed "Ashley, E. Chadwick, and T. S. uthwood Smith." Mr. Michie, in bring ng forward a resolution on the s.bject, denied the existence of cholera in Marylebone, and declared that the conduct of the Board of Health was calculated to frighten the public into the disease. He moved a resolution to the effect:—"That, in the opinion of the vestry, there was no necessity for the appointment of any additional medical gentlemen, inasmuch as the board of guardians, on Friday, the 10th of August, instructed their resident physician to engage any assistance he might require, at any time when he perceived such a necessity."—Mr. Lowe seconded the motion. As a proof that the statements about the cholera in Marylebone were fallacious, there had not been so few patients amongst the poor for sixteen years as at this moment, and there was medical staff enough to meet any emergency. (Hear.) Mr. Joseph proposed an amendment:—"That, in acknowledging the receipt of the communication from the Board of Health, the vestry have to state that the entire medical charge of the sick poor is by law under the control of the guardians; and that this vestry desires to express its warm confidence that the guardians will adopt every means calculated to meet any necessity which cholera or any other epidemic may create; and that, in so doing, the guardians and directors will meet with the ready co-operation and support of this vestry." Dr. Gray seconded the amendment. Mr. H. G. Wilson, whilst he deprecated the interference of the Board of Health, thought that the board of guardians had not sufficiently done their duty in not having appointed district medical men to attend the poor in their own localities during the present prevailing epidemic. Mr. Broughton, the magistrate, at some length, deprecated the attack which had been made on the private character of the members of the Board of Health. He believed that the suggestions of the Board of Health were excellent, and that the vestry would be doing their duty to co-operate. Mr. Nicholas, Mr. Lowe, Mr. M'Evil, Captain Holland, and other gentlemen, addressed the meeting, some of them contending that the Board of Health had themselves admitted they had no power to enforce these orders; but it was contradicted by Mr. Kirby, the magistrate, who said that they had the power by the 2 and 13 Vict., passed during the last session. The amendment was carried by a large majority, and the meeting separated.

NEW-CUT RAGGED SCHOOL, LAMBETH.—The third annual meeting of the friends and supporters of this institution took place on Tuesday evening, at the parochial school-room, Borough-road. The meeting was numerously and respectably attended. Mr. Branche, Baptist minister, the president of the institution, occupied the chair, and read a letter from Lord Ashley, stating that his absence was owing to the illness of Lady Ashley, enclosing a donation of £3 3s. towards the funds of the institution, and expressing his Lordship's gratitude to Mr. Grove for his contributions, and to the committee and managers for the great zeal and industry which they had displayed on behalf of the children. After some introductory observations on the part of the chairman, Mr. Evans, the secretary, read the report, from which it appeared that through the instrumentality of the institution several convicted felons and notorious swearers had been reformed and made useful members of society. The number that attended the daily and Sunday schools reached one hundred and thirty. They were not only taught reading, writing, and arithmetic, but shoemaking and several other branches of useful industry. The report also noticed several instances of lively gratitude on the part of those whose children had received instruction in the school. The accounts respecting the Sunday-school were equally satisfactory. Several boys were, as a reward for their merit, enabled to emigrate to America, where suitable and remunerative employment will be provided for them on their arrival. Mr. Edward Grove, of the New-cut, provided a school-room rent free, and contributed £25 a year towards the expenses. From the statement of accounts, it appeared that the income during the year amounted to £69 14s. 4½d., and the expenditure to £71 2s. 3d., leaving a balance of £1 7s. 11d. due to the treasurer. The report having been read, the meeting was subsequently addressed by the Rev. H. Melvill, one of the parochial clergy; by Mr. Anderson, a deputation from the Ragged School, by Mr. J. Payne, &c., after which a collection was made on behalf of the institution.

DRURY-LANE THEATRE.—On Monday a meeting of proprietors of shares in this theatre was held in the saloon, Bryanston-square, for the purpose of receiving the annual statement of accounts, and on other business. Benjamin Bond Cabbell, Esq., M.P., having been called upon to preside, the secretary read the annual report, from which it appeared that the rent payable by the lessee has been received in due course, as stipulated in the lease, by nightly payments, and the balance due arising from the deficiency in the number of performances since the commencement of the season was secured by a deposit at the bankers for special y directed to that purpose. The committee thought, although there was not balance enough, as would be seen by the financial statement, to declare a dividend, it was nevertheless to be able to keep the property for the purpose of which the trustees have received their payment of £5, agreeably to the resolution passed by the committee in 1841. The expenses for the year in the shape of repairs had been very small, the opening or re-opening of the roof being the principal item in the architect's bill. The theatre itself was in a good state of repair, as good, indeed, as to enable Mr. Anderson to enter into it, on the 26th of December next, for the purpose of bringing the legitimate drama. M. Jullien succeeds Mr. Anderson in June next, for musical and operatic performances. The balance-sheet showed the receipts, including the previous balance, to be £3769, and the expenditure £3719, leaving a balance of £50. The report and financial statement having been received and adopted, the election of officers concluded the business of the meeting.

MERCHANT SEAMEN'S ORPHAN ASYLUM.—On Monday the half-yearly court of the governors of this charity was held at the London Tavern, Captain Nelson in the chair. From the report, which was submitted by Mr. R. Geddes, it appeared that the resources of the institution had suffered in common with others having the like charitable objects in view. The income during 1848 amounted to £5369, and by rigid economy on the part of the committee the expenditure had fallen short of that amount. There was at present the sum of £5181 10s. invested in the funds in the names of the trustees, and the building account was rapidly progressing. Several very handsome donations and legacies had been received during the past year. After the transaction of some routine business, the meeting proceeded to the election of ten boys and six girls, from a list of 36 candidates for admission into the asylum. The poll closed at three o'clock, when the names of the successful candidates were called over. A considerable number of the boys and girls of the asylum were in the room during the proceedings, and attracted much attention by their neat and orderly appearance.

GENERAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—The half-yearly meeting of this company was held on Tuesday, at their offices, 71, Lombard-street; John WILKIN, Esq., in the chair. A report and statement of the accounts for the half-year ending the 30th June last were read and received with much approbation: by these it appeared that the affairs of this company continued in a most prosperous state. The usual dividend, free of income-tax, was declared, and thanks being voted to the chairman and directors, the meeting separated.

CHARING-CROSS HOSPITAL.—CHOLERA WARDS.—On Tuesday, a meeting of governors and committee of management of this hospital was held in the board-room of the institution. The report for the past year stated that there had been 1153 in and 14,347 out-patients. Of the latter class a large number were poor married women who had been attended during their confinement at their own homes. The total number of patients during the year was near 16,000 persons, being an increase over the preceding year of 3000. During the prevalence of the present epidemic two wards have been devoted to the reception of cholera patients.

THE NEW CHAPEL AT BROMPTON.—This beautifully designed structure, in connexion with the Hospital for Consumption at Brompton, being sufficiently in progress for the laying of the foundation-stone, that interesting ceremony was performed by the Rev. Henry Foulis on Thursday, at three o'clock in the afternoon

IMPORTANT TO MONEY ORDER HOLDERS.—On Friday, the act 11th and 12th Victoria, c. 74, came into operation for the regulation of the money order department of the Post-office. By its provisions, all money orders not presented for payment within twelve months after being granted, become null and void; for example, a money order granted on the 31st of August, 1848, if not presented for payment on or before the 31st instant, will be valueless, as will all orders granted antecedent to the first-named period.

DARING ROBBERY ON A RAILWAY.—Information has been received at the Metropolitan Police-office, Scotland-yard, that Mr. John Wilson, of Greenbeach-street, Preston, had been plundered, whilst travelling on the Preston and Lancashire Railway, of a red morocco purse, containing £390 in Bank of England notes, and thirty sovereigns.

THE PRINCE CONSORT'S BIRTHDAY.—The illuminations in honour of this event, which were very general among Prince Albert's tradesmen on Saturday evening last, were again exhibited on Monday night in many localities at the West End, owing to some doubt as to which was the proper evening to make the display.

The Queen has commanded Mr. Bartley, who, it will be remembered, read by desire before her Majesty the illustrative verses of the C.ictacus of "Ashalie," "Amigena," and "Calipus," to appear as Falstaff in the first part of "Henry IV.," at Windsor, next Christmas, when the dramatic representations are to be resumed. Mr. Bartley gives his gratuitous services next week at the Birmingham Festival, and reads the verses of the "Ashalie."

DRAINAGE OF THE METROPOLIS.—Up to Tuesday 74 plans for the drainage of the metropolis had been received at the Metropolitan Court of Sewers. Several of the plans have been much abridged in accordance with the late resolution of the Court, but some of the candidates have intimated to the commissioners that it is impossible to make their statements shorter, and that if they are not to be treated as sanit they are to be returned to the writers entire.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—The inquest upon the body of Gumm, the man who was killed a few days ago on the Great Northern Railway, where it is crossed by the East and West India Docks junction line, was resumed on Monday, before Mr Wakley, jun., and the Jury returned a verdict of "manslaughter" against Newton, the person who persisted in ordering loaded waggons to pass over the bridge, the falling of which caused the accident

DISTRESSING ACCIDENT.—On Saturday evening, about ten o'clock, the cry of fire was raised at the top of the High-street, Oxford, when a large number of persons were observed towards a public-house, known as the Jolly Post-boys, the bar of which appeared to be in flames. It turned out, however, that the landlady, Mrs. Galloway, having occasion to fetch some beer from the cellar, had placed a candle on the stairs, and, in passing by, her clothes caught fire, and she was speedily enveloped in flames. She rushed up-stairs immediately, and was about going into the street, but was stopped and hurried into the bar, when it was found she had sustained considerable injuries. Medical assistance was soon at hand, but after lingering in great agony through the night, the poor woman expired on Sunday morning, about seven o'clock. The husband of the unfortunate woman was away from home at the time, being at Brighton for the benefit of his health.

EXTENSIVE FIRES.—Between six and seven o'clock on Monday morning, a fire, attended with great damage, happened on the premises of Mr. Nind, paper-hanger and decorator, nearly opposite Salisbury-square, Fleet-street. The engines from Farringdon-street were instantly on the spot, and thus the damage was confined to the lower part of the premises Mr. Nind is not insured.—At 12 o'clock also on Monday another fire took place in the shop of Mr. Browning, oil and colourman, St. John-street, Clerkenwell. Here, also, the Farringdon-street engines were in very quick attendance, and fortunately little damage was experienced by fire, but some by temporary removal.

COMPARATIVE MORTALITY IN LONDON AND PARIS.—Whilst we represent, as it is our duty to represent, the negligences and omissions which have occasioned sickness and loss of life; yet it is right to present the evide ce of it e fact, which we believe to be conclusive, that the measures of precaution which have been adopted, and the cleansings which have taken place, and which have been carried to a greater extent than they ever were before, have been attended with proportionate benefits. We state these facts amidst a serious increase of the epidemic. We cannot venture to say what may be the extent of its further visitation; but, as far as it has proceeded, it has been light, as compared with its course in other countries. In St. Petersburg, where little sanitary improvement has been effected, there have been officially reported, during the recent outbreak, nearly 20,000 attacks and 14,000 deaths; but it is believed that there have really been upwards of 20,000 deaths. In Paris, where, as far as we have been able to learn, little warning has been taken of the steady approach of the pestilence, and little preparation made against its invasion, the visitation has been more severe than it was formerly. We have received from the president of the department of the public health of Paris returns, from which it appears that in 1832 the deaths in Paris were 14,803; while, in 1848-49, the deaths have been 18,196, and the epidemic has not yet entirely subsided. In Paris, besides bad drainage, there is over crowding to an extent of which some conception may be formed from the fact that a population of nearly 1,000,000 of souls is crowded into little more than 40,000 houses; whilst the 2,000,000 of people in London are distributed amongst upwards of 280,000 houses; the average number of persons in each house being in Paris 28, and in London 7. On comparing the mortality in Paris during the recent outbreak of cholera, as stated in the official returns, with the mortality in London during the recent outbreak, as given in the Registrar-General's returns, it appears that whereas in Paris, out of a population say of 1,000,000 souls, 14,000 persons have died; in London, out of a population of 10 000 souls, 5 persons have died. But that the epidemic force in London is stronger than would be represented by this general result, is, we think, to be inferred from the fact that the mortality in the parishes of the city, where there has been an unusual degree of negligence, and where, consequently, the conditions have been more than commonly favourable for the localisation of the disease. Under these circumstances the mortality has been about as high, and even somewhat higher, than at Paris. In some of the towns in Wales, the attacks in proportion to the population have been as 1 in 19, and the deaths in proportion to the attacks, as 1 in 2½. If the mortality of Paris had been at the same rate, the deaths would have amounted to 19,561 instead of 18,196.—From Report of the General Board of Health

BIRTHS, DEATHS, &c.—In the week ending Saturday, August 25th, the deaths in London were 2471; of which 1276 were by cholera, 238 by diarrhœa; viz. males, 1172, females, 1285. The births were 1317, viz males, 664, females, 653. The deaths from all causes in each of the last seven weeks were 1070, 1269, 1741, 1934, 1967, 1909, 2229, 2537; the deaths from cholera, 152, 339, 678, 788, 926, 823, 1229, and 1276. Although the number of deaths last week is greater than any number yet recorded, it is gratifying to learn that active measures are now in actual operation, or commencing in every district, to combat the great epidemic which has already carried 7470 lives in London. The mortality stands in favourable contrast to that which has been felt in Paris, where the present visitation has recalled the ravages of the Middle ages. But if the general sanitary state and circumstances are superior to those of the other civilised countries of Europe, it is quite certain that, while the present visitation has excited some talk and terror, the efforts which have hitherto been employed to combat it look feeble and insignificant when contrasted with the vast means and agency which are brought to bear by the nation in other fields, for the protection of life and property.

RETURN OF DEATHS FROM CHOLERA IN THE WEEK ENDING AUGUST 25.—London (population 1,948,369), 1276. (The 3039 police on duty have been distributed over the several districts in the ratio of the population.) West Districts.—Kensington (74,898), 16; Chelsea, (60,343), 23; St. George, Hanover-square (65,567), 11; Westminster (56,802), 36; Marylebone, (138,716), 82; St. James, Westminster (37,457), 4.—Total, 103. North Districts.—Marylebone (138,853), 34; Pancras and Hampstead (140,078), 45; Islington (55,779), 23; Hackney (42,232), 14; Total, 114. Central Districts.—St. Giles (34,678), 25; Strand (42,667), 19; Holborn (44,532), 21; Clerkenwell (36,790), 10; St. Luke's (40,968), 24; East London (39,718), 20; West London (29,186), 25; London, City (58,009), 28.—Total, 193. East Districts.—Shoreditch (83,564), 122; Bethnal-green (74,906), 129; Whitechapel (71,879), 58; St. George-in-the-East (41,416), 10; Stepney (Mile-end, Poplar (31,171), 32.—Total, 286. South Districts.—St. Saviour (32,027), 93; St. Olave (19,869), 25; Bermondsey (35,002), 53; St. George, Southwark (46,718), 27; Newington (54,653), 65; Lambeth (116,072), 89; Camberwell (39,591), 35; Rotherhithe (13,940), 21; Greenwich (81,138), 66; Wandsworth (39,918), 20; Lewisham (23,051), 5.—Total 478.

TRIAL OF MOOLRAJ, DEWAN OF MOOLTAN.

By the arrival of an extraordinary express, received on Thursday, in anticipation of the Overland Mail from India, we learn that the trial of Moolraj, which was in progress at the date of our last, has been brought to a conclusion; the perfidious chieftain having been found guilty on all the three counts of the "indictment" against him, i.e. as the murderer of Messrs. Agnew and Anderson, and as an accessory both before and after the fact. The Court having arrived at this decision, proceeded to pass sentences of death, accompanying the same, however, with an intimation that the prisoner would be recommended to mercy, on the ground that he was the "victim of circumstances." The recommendation will, of course, be attended to; indeed, it is said that the Governor-General has already determined on commuting the sentence of death into one of imprisonment for life in the fortress of Chunar.

The following is a simple narrative of the facts, as they were delivered by the witnesses examined at Lahore:—It was on the 17th of April that Messrs. Vans Agnew and Anderson reached Mooltan. Their force consisted of 60 horse, and 1500 infantry, and six guns, but upon this force, as will be seen in the sequel, no reliance could be placed: when the hour of danger came, they either deserted in bodies to the fort and camp of the Dewan Moolraj, or basely abandoned the Envoys to their fate. The above gentlemen proceeded to seek an interview with Moolraj. The Eastern Chieftain met them with every token of fawning obsequiousness, and acted his part to such perfection as to cause the British Envoys to believe that sorrow for his deposition was the prevailing feeling in his mind. Arrangements were made by which Moolraj was to deliver up possession of the various documents and books necessary for computing the fiscal levies of the province. It was finally agreed that the fort should be delivered up on the next day, the 19th April; but the surrender was to be so much a matter of course, that the British emissaries were to take with them but a small escort. They would find—so it was said—troops prepared to obey their commands as well within as without the walls of Moultan. On entering the fortress, all seemed to promise fairly enough. The garrison was drawn up, and the Envoys informed them that some would be taken into the service of the Lahore Durbar, and others be disbanded. Moolraj said he would give up the keys; arrangements were made for posting sentries, and the Envoys turned to leave the fort.

The evidence then describes how Agnew and Anderson Saheb, on leaving the fort, when they arrived close to the drawbridge, at a sign given by Moolraj, were struck at by a person concealed from view, when Agnew Saheb was wounded with a spear, while Moolraj galloped away. Again the concealed assassin wounded Saheb, who repeatedly struck at the man with a switch. His horse reared, and Saheb fell to the ground; he rallied, but was soon overpowered by others with swords. Anderson Saheb, when Agnew was wounded, galloped after Moolraj; but before he overtook him, at a sign from the Dewan, five sowars struck at Saheb with their talwars, pursued him, and were joined by others from Moolraj's escort. Saheb's horse was, as well as himself, wounded; Agnew Saheb and Anderson Saheb were at this time distant from each other 100 paces.

The unfortunate gentlemen were removed by their followers to their own encampment. Moolraj professed—by the mouth of a messenger—his deep sorrow for what had occurred, but refused to visit the British Envoys in their camp. This was on the evening of the 19th April. During the night of that day, Moolraj made preparations for a vigorous attack next morning; and, on the other hand, the officers of the Lahore army came to Mr. Vans Agnew, and refused for themselves and their men to fight against the forces of Moolraj. On the morning of the 20th April the guns of the fort began to play on the camp of the Envoys, now nearly denuded of defenders; but it was not until sunset of that day that a body of about a hundred men forced their way to the tent, where the two wounded Envoys lay, one of them unable to move.

A witness states, that, through an opening in the kunats, he saw a number of people enter the tent, led by a Mughrabbee Sikh, who abused the Saheb, and asked him if he found it so easy to take the fort? Saheb replied, "I have been sent by the Lahore Government to demand the resignation of Moolraj. Take me before him, and let him kill me, or set me at liberty, as he pleases." This man then wounded Saheb in the throat, and drew his sword across it twice. Having cut off Saheb's head, he enveloped it in a handkerchief, then abscathed his sword, and, taking in his hand one of Saheb's pistols, left the tent. Anderson Saheb was cut and wounded by many men. Next morning, this witness saw the headless body of Agnew Saheb stretched on its back, and much wounded. Anderson Saheb's body was face to earth, and almost cut to pieces.

The Sikh who had cut off the head of the unfortunate Mr. Vans Agnew brought it to Moolraj, who ordered an elephant to be given to him for his pains. Every species of indignity was offered to the remains of the murdered men, absolutely in the presence of Moolraj, and seemingly with his approval.

From other evidence given on the trial, it appears that the Mooltan insurrection was the result of accident—a mere outburst of popular feeling. There were not at the first 2000 troops in all near the place. Moolraj became by circumstances the leader of the rising, of which he was at first the victim. There is no evidence whatever of treachery on the part of the Sikh troops throughout the country till the middle of June, when the Hazareh insurrection broke out, and gave grounds for believing, that, had vigorous measures been adopted at first, the rebellion would have been extinguished in the province where it began. The trial appears to have been conducted with the utmost openness and fairness—no peer of the realm could have met with greater consideration, or had the benefit of abler advocates. Captain Hamilton's defence of the prisoner could not easily be surpassed in eloquence or ability.

THE DEWAN MOOLRAJ.

Our portrait of Moolraj is copied, by permission, from Dr. Dunlop's beautiful Series of Sketches of Moultan, admirably lithographed in tints by Mr. Andrew Maclure. The Dewan is portrayed as he appeared on the morning of his surrender to the British, Jan. 22. He was gorgeously attired in silks and splendid arms; in figure he appeared not to exceed the middle height, and, though powerfully, was elegantly formed. His dark, keen, and piercing eyes seemed to take in whatever was within their range with a rapid but comprehensive glance.

"There is nothing," remarked one informant to Dr. Dunlop, "commanding in his appearance; but he is a shrewd-looking man, of about thirty years of age."

It has been observed that the singularity of the ground on which Moolraj was recommended to mercy "will not escape notice. Every murderer is, in one sense, the victim of circumstances; and if Moolraj was their victim in any other sense, why, he ought not to have been found guilty of murder at all! Chuttur Singh, who was just as much an assassin as the Dewan—for he directed the murder of Col Canara in cold blood—is now enjoying peace and tranquillity in his own village, having undergone no form of trial or amount of punishment whatever. The inconsistency of this is, perhaps, explained by one of the 'revelations' of the recent blue-book, namely, that Sir F. Currie considered the Sirdar to have been but little to blame, and was of opinion that the rebellion was occasioned by the ungenerous distrust and suspicion of his fidelity entertained by Captain Abbott! This latter officer has been infamously ill used. He has been made the scapegoat of Sir F. Currie, and has been denied honours to which he was justly entitled, in order to screen the ex-Resident from merited condemnation."

SIMLA.

By aid of a Correspondent we are enabled to present our readers with the accompanying view of Simla, taken from Chota Simla, in the centre of which, on the top of the hill, embosomed in wood, is the summer residence of the Governor-General of India: a little below, on the left, is the Commander-in-Chief's; in the distance rises the range of the Himalaya Mountains.

By the news just received, we learn that it was reported some time since that the members of the Supreme Council were to proceed to Simla, which place, or some station in its vicinity, was in future to be the seat of the Government of India. The report has been contradicted deinde cilitaily, and as little foundation was there for it, that the consul will, no doubt, prevent its revival for a very considerable time to come. The idea of the removal of the Government to the north-west is a peculiarly pleasing one to certain of the members of the press in India.

At Simla, where the Marquis and Marchioness of Dalhousie, Lord and Lady Gough, and that eccentric genius, Sir Charles Napier, are at present sojourning, balls, parties, picnics, and other merry-makings seem to be the order of the day. The accounts from Meerut this morning state that the Governor-General has taken "Kennedy House," one of the first buildings at the station, for the next year. It is said both the Marquis Dalhousie and Sir C. Napier will visit Peshawur some time in the cold weather.

INDIA.

On the 22nd and 23rd of June a severe gale visited the upper part of the Bay of Bengal, and was felt all over India. Three vessels were disabled or lost; the Cadmus grounded and went to pieces, the Victoria was wrecked; a number of lives were on both occasions lost.

The rumours which were brought by the last mail, of a misunderstanding with Ghoolab Singh, and of an advance into Cashmeer, prove groundless; as also the assertions that the Sikhs were unwilling to join our service—they were entering rapidly.

The Bishop of Calcutta had been severely indisposed.

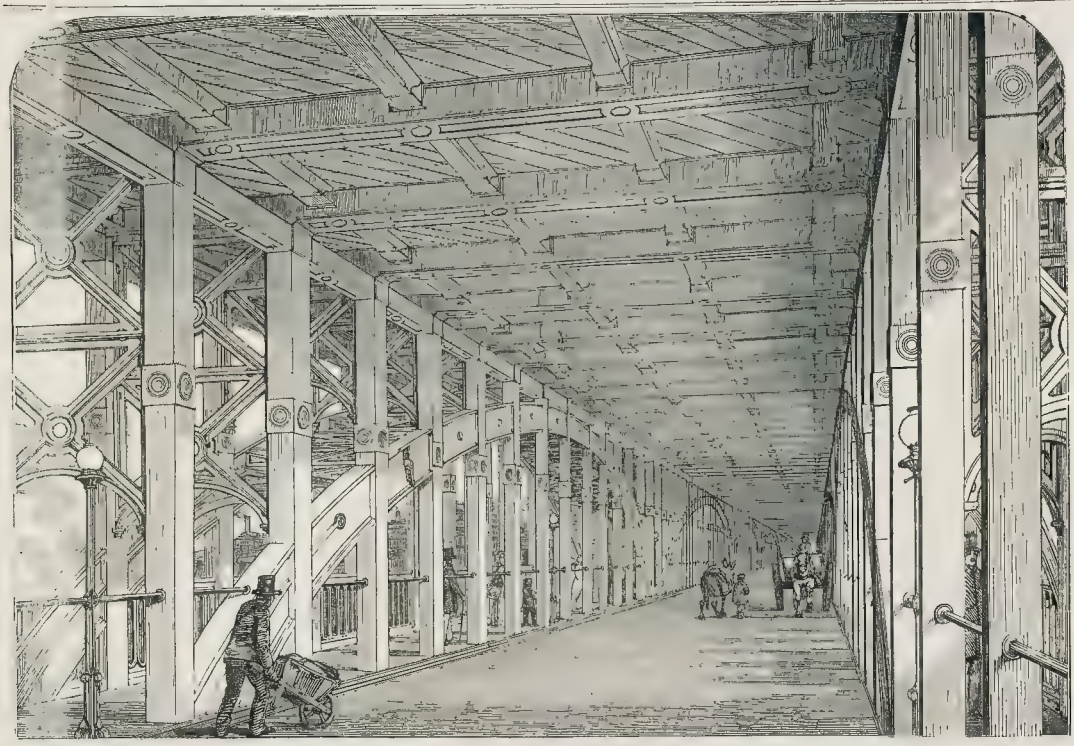
The state of the affairs of the Benares Bank has now been fully disclosed: the assets, it is said, will be sufficient to meet the claims of creditors, but the shareholders will lose everything—their whole capital is gone. The directors were the chief borrowers. One of these, Colonel Pew, of the Bengal army, a man who might at one time have retired from the service on £10,000 a year, has just filed his schedule in the Court of Bankruptcy, his debts amounting to £260,000, incurred entirely by speculation.

The Governor-General and the late and present Commander-in-Chief continue, during the prevalence of the great heat, in Simla.

Sir W. Gomm is still at Calcutta. The accounts given of the nature of his appointments are conflicting. According to one of these, he was directed to proceed to India as Lieutenant-General on the Staff, with the view of taking command in the Punjaub, and getting rid of Lord Gough. According to another account, he landed with the commission of Commander-in-Chief from the Queen in his pocket, and was assured that he would find that of the Court of Directors awaiting him: in place of this, he found Sir C. Napier in his room.

An Indian was hanged for murder by Lynch law, at Chippewa, near Prairie du Chien, on the 24th of July. His crime was assassinating a Frenchman with whom he had quarrelled. He submitted to the punishment with the stoicism of his race.

SIMLA, THE SUMMER RESIDENCE OF THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA.

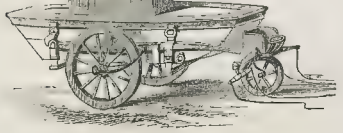


CARRIAGE ROADWAY IN THE HIGH LEVEL BRIDGE, NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

NAVIGATION OF THE RIVERS OF INDIA.

Experience has already proved the practicability of that part of Mr. Bourne's river steam train (Illustrated London News, August 11) which describes "a series of barges articulated to one another like a hinge, so as to be able to bend, if necessary, in passing curves in the river," since that invention has been already successfully employed, both for pleasure barges and for the conveyance of merchandise. So, also, wheels have been affixed to vessels capable of river navigation.

The articulation of barges one with another was invented by the late Brigadier-General Sir Samuel Bentham, subsequently Inspector-General of Naval Works, &c. When he was with his battalion at an estate of Prince Potemkin's, in White Russia, the Prince expressed his wishes that a pleasure-barge of some novel construction should be prepared for the use of the Empress Catherine II.;



TRAVELLING CARRIAGE-BOAT.

and Sir Samuel (then Lieutenant-Colonel) devised in consequence, and had built under his immediate direction, an Imperial barge. It was so shallow as to draw but six inches of water, when loaded, and having its crew and passengers on board: it consisted of six different boats or links, each of them 42 feet long; consequently, the float altogether was in length 252 feet. The head and aft boats were sharp, the intermediate ones straight-sided, affording an interior width of 13 feet 5 inches. This serpentine or vermicular vessel, as it was called, was rowed by 120 men with extraordinarily great velocity. In the year 1787 the Emperor of Germany, Joseph II., the late Lord St. Helens

CARRIAGE SAILING-BOAT FOR INDIAN RIVERS.

&c., were on board of this barge, when it was rowed round so as for the head to be attached to the stern, thus forming a continuous ring; the ends were afterwards disconnected, when being left to the influence of the stream the serpentine resumed a straight line. In actual navigation on the rivers Sejo and Dniepor, vessels of a similar construction, built and used for the conveyance of timber and other stores, accommodated themselves to sinuosities in those rivers, some of them at angles of more than 45°, so that there can be no doubt of the efficiency in this respect, or as to draught of water, of the vessel proposed by Mr. Bourne. The late Jeremy Bantham gave his father a description of this invention of Sir Samuel's, and the latter appeared in the Mechanic's Magazine, No. 1330, February 3rd of this year.

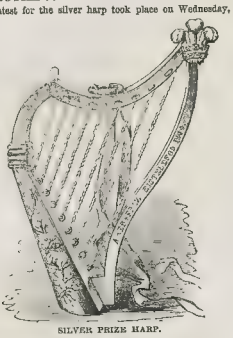
The affixing wheels to navigable vessels as Mr. Bourne proposes, so as to enable them to be drawn over shoals, was carried to a still greater extent by Sir Samuel; for at Nigni Taghil, in the year 1781, he devised and had built for his own use a travelling carriage which should be amphibious. A description of this invention, an indication of various uses to which it might be applicable, and an account of some of the incidents during the first journey made in it, may be seen in the United Service Journal for 1829, part the 2nd, page 570. Afterwards, when as Colonel Sir Samuel had the command of two battalions of Russian troops, one of them stationed at Kiachta, on the frontiers of China, the other along the banks of the Irtish, so that there was a length of 1200 miles under his command, he caused to be built for his use along this line two other carriages on the same amphibious principle: he also travelled in them many thousand miles in the interior of Siberia, and even, when going post, crossed several rivers without stopping on their banks, or sinking in muddy shallows, or being impeded by hard shoals; so that Mr. Bourne's wheels would in like manner do away with the difficulties which, in ordinary navigation, are experienced from such impediments. Even in the Rhone, steam-vessels are not unfrequently driven upon banks, and hours are sometimes lost in warping them off.

The annexed Engraving is from a drawing made by a Russian draughtsman. It represents the first amphibious carriage, in its states of a carriage on land and a sailing-boat, which may easily be adapted as a rowing-boat. Further particulars respecting amphibious carriages, and many of the uses to which they may be applied, appear in the Mechanic's Magazine, No. 1351, June 30, 1849, p. 604.

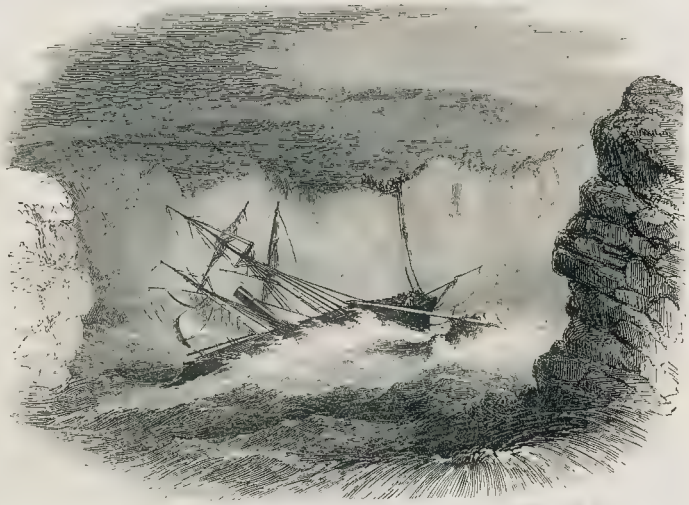
Mr. Bourne has admirably adapted both of these inventions to river navigation in India. His idea of raising the wheels out of water, when not wanted, would, of course, prevent any impediment they might otherwise be to swift passage of the vessels through the water; and as barges were constructed so as to draw, when loaded, but six inches of water, there can be no doubt but that at double that draught they might be made to carry considerable loads; and the application of steam-power to rafts would enable them to ascend rivers at a very moderate rate of expense.

ROYAL ABERFRAW EISTEDDVOD.

The grand contest for the silver harp took place on Wednesday, August 15.



SILVER PRIZE HARP.



WRECK OF "THE RENBEL," SCREW-PROPELLER STEAMER, IN THE BAY OF ST. SHOTTS.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

The competitors were about fourteen in number, all of whom were highly commended; the prize being unanimously awarded to Mr. Ellis Roberts (the Welsh harpist), of London, who was invested with the silver harp by Lady Fielding. This is the second silver harp Mr. Roberts has won, and the fifth Eisteddvod (or Congress of Bards) at which he has been the successful candidate. Aberfraw in itself is a comparatively insignificant place, and many persons no doubt will wonder why a meeting of such importance was held there; but it was the seat of "Llywelyn, the last Prince of Wales," and the associations in connexion of the ancient Druidical Bards in the island of Mona, or Anglesea, fully account for holding a meeting so characteristic of Wales, on a spot, although now dwindled into what it is, a mere handful of houses, of so much Cambrian celebrity.

At the Eisteddvod, prizes were also awarded for poetry, both Welsh and English; also for home manufactures and materials, which productions display the ingenuity and industry of the Welsh mountaineer, and they would not discredit any manufacturer in England.

THE HIGH LEVEL BRIDGE, NEWCASTLE.

THIS magnificent structure is nearly completed, and was partly opened for railway traffic on the 15th ult., one line of permanent rail having been laid down. In our Journal of May 1, 1847, we gave a representation of the Bridge itself, from a painting by Mr. Carmichael; and in our present Number we illustrate the roadway for carriages and foot passengers, which is beneath the railroad, and forms one of the most striking and novel features in the design. This roadway is suspended from the great arches which carry the railroad; and it is impossible to imagine a more interesting and beautiful sight than this road from the huge span of the arches, diminishing in perspective, and the opening at the farthest end of the Bridge showing only like a bright spot in the distance. The pillars which carry the roads add greatly to the picturesque effect; and the multiplicity of pillars, ribs, transverse and vertical braces, produce such a combination of beautiful lines, to borrow an artist's phrase, as is seldom seen on bridges or similar erections.

The Bridge is 112 feet 6 inches high from high-water line to the top of the parapet, and the road represented in our Engraving is said to be 80 above the water. Six arches, each of 125 feet span, form the Bridge, and there are approaches from Gateshead and Newcastle carried on pillars similar to those represented in our Engraving. The piers of the Bridge are of masonry, and the arches, pillars, braces, and transverse girders, of iron; the balustrades of the rail and coach roads are also of iron. The roadway is 20 feet 4 inches wide, 20 feet high; and there are footways on either side between the great ribs of the arches, each 6 feet 3 inches in width.

In conclusion, we must observe that to Mr. George Stephenson the design of the bridge is due, and that he has been most ably seconded by Mr. Harrison, the resident engineer, and his assistant, Mr. Hosking. Mr. Dobson, of Newcastle, is the architect.

LOSS OF THE "KESTREL" STEAM-SHIP.

THIS ill-fated vessel left Halifax on Thursday, July 19, at twelve o'clock P.M., having, besides the crew, twelve passengers, three of whom were for Sydney, Cape Breton. Owing to the thick fog encountered immediately after leaving the harbour, she did not reach the latter place until the afternoon of Saturday, when, having landed her passengers and mail for the Admiral's ship (then in port), and taken in coals, she proceeded on her way to Newfoundland at 5 P.M. On Sunday night the weather was very hazy, the wind blowing from the south-west. This continued all day on Sunday, the fog growing more dense as the vessel neared the Newfound and coast. Captain Meagher was on the deck the greater part of the time, exercising the utmost vigilance and keeping a good look-out on the part of the crew. The course steered was one point more off the shore than he had ever allowed in any of his previous voyages, and which he imagined would take him clear of every danger.

All went on well till half-past ten o'clock on Sunday night, when, without the slightest previous intimation of danger, the captain at the time being on deck and a sharp look-out kept from the forecastle, the ship, going ten miles an hour, struck against the rocks, which subsequently proved to be part of the western head of the much-dreaded bay of St. Shott's. At first the shock was not violent, owing probably to the jibboom and bowsprit taking the cliff in succession as the vessel ranged round. The engine was instantly stopped and backed, and the order, to whom too much praise cannot be given, immediately took all necessary steps for preventing danger from the boilers, by letting off the steam and drawing the fires. No effect being produced by this, and the vessel was under all sail, the captain ordered the foremast to be cut away. The sea at this time was very heavy, and breakers on every side almost prevented the hope of saving the lives of those on board. Captain Meagher ordered a boat to be manned, and into this four passengers jumped, two of them being women, and, with two of the crew, pushed off from the wreck, with a lead-line attached to establish a communication with the vessel, should they be able to effect a landing. This, however, was found impracticable, owing to the tremendous surf running, and, after a time, they cast loose the line and made out to sea, and next morning, at daybreak, ran the boat on shore on the south-west head of the above-mentioned bay, nearly dead with cold and exhaustion during the night—the women having left the boat as they came from their beds. All this time the vessel was beating with terrific violence upon the rocks, and throwing up immense spouts of spray as it broke. At length a way of escape was made clear. The carpenter, Mr. William Lapie, succeeded in throwing a handspike 1 to the cleft of a perpendicular rock, and, by means of a rope attached, climbed up to the cliff safely. A hawser was then got on shore, and the passengers and crew drawn up from the wreck, which immediately afterwards filled and fell over. At daylight the horrors of the scene were more clearly revealed; the sea was making a clear breach over the vessel, and several of the coats of mail (which were fourteen on board), besides a horse and several sheep, were seen lying dead in the raging waters. The Captain all this time was doing everything in his power, and was, with the mate, the last to leave the wreck. He succeeded, through the exertions of the crew, who, by the delay caused by the act, lost everything save the clothes they had on, in saving the mail bags, which were handed up by another party at the same moment as the captain. It is to be hoped that this attention to their duty will not be lost sight of by the authorities, but that some mark of goodwill may be shown without delay to these poor shipwrecked men by the benevolent people of St. John's. Having been very kindly received by the two families of the Finlays living at St. Shott's, several of the passengers crossed overland to Trepassey, whence a boat was immediately despatched for the conveyance of the people and mails to St. John's. The Kestrel was insured to the amount of £10,000 sterling.

OPENING OF THE COAL EXCHANGE.—We are authorised to contradict a statement which has appeared in several of the newspapers, to the effect that the new Coal Exchange will be opened on the 3rd of September. The building will not be completed at that time, and it will not be publicly opened until it is finished.

THE ANCIENT SPIRIT OF HUNGARY.—The following extract from the Berlin Constitutionelle Correspondenz is curious. It is curious in itself, still more curious as appearing in the organ of the Prussian Minister, Von der Heidt. It indicates the feelings with which at least one Prussian Minister contemplates the subversion of Hungarian rights and liberties:—"We read in history of a certain King named Peter, who reigned in Hungary 900 years ago, and who came to a wretched end. He had been placed on the throne of his uncle, St. Stephen, and it is reported of him that in return, he was cruel to his subjects, until they rose against him. Treason is wrong. His crown was far gone to ruin, and he might say it was a diplomatic crime. Being a German, and having not one feeling in common with the gallant people over whom he reigned, he attempted to suppress the nationality of the Magyars, and to Germanise the country. He considered the state in which the Magyars were the conquerors and the Sclavonians and Wallachs the conquered, and he was not pleased with it. He would have it a unitarian state, and belonging to nature's right, he resolved to make the empire of Hungaria "eni dona dati stunt varia"—a German state, with German manners, language, and Government. What he desired to do expressed in his words: "Omnes principes et potestates in regno Hungariæ Theutonibus constituum, et terram ejus hospitibus impleho, et eum sint ut nobiles in potestatem Teutonicorum redigam;" that is to say, 'I will appoint Germans to all the powers and honours of the land; and I will people the country of Hungary with German colonists, and make it a German country throughout.' But the Magyars are not the people to stand quietly and allow their national institutions to be taken from them, on the strength of some paragraph of a spurious constitution, or on the strength of some other document by diplomatic will and behest. If the present generation of Austrian statesmen are not aware of this fact, they can learn from history what the fate of foreign usurpers was 1. Hungary so early as 750 years ago. The said Peter fled to Germany, and died there in exile.

"The leading Hungarian families headed the insurrection against him. The people gathered to a handstaim. They compelled their leaders, Hunyadi and Lazarsky, to swear that with them they 'would not suffer a foreigner to reign over them, or a stranger to wound up hold the customs and laws of their ancestors,' or pursuit in the attempt. They deposed his Majesty Peter, and blinded him. Endre was elected to be King of Hungary der, and induced ignorant, degraded, and wicked women to speculate in the life and death of their own offspring, and those who should be nearest and dearest to them. One simple remedy, without interfering in any degree with the real advantages of these clubs to the poorer classes, would obviate the evil, and render murder unprofitable. The Legislature has but to declare that the [illegible] shall not, in the case of [illegible], be paid at the expense of those insured funerals and the evil will be attained. Let no money pass into the hands of the insurers, and no temptations to more than one club will be discontinued as a matter of course. The crime of poisoning, no longer meeting a pecuniary reward, will have no other motive than the rare incentives of revenge or hate; and the diabolical speculation in Life and death will cease for want of ailment. It is well for society that such wretches as the Mannings should meet punishment at the hands of the law. It will be still better if the law, by any simple enactment, can render such horrible poisonings as these alluded to, unprofitable or impossible.

THE INDIAN MAIL of the 25th of July brings intelligence which will allay the public anxiety caused by the previous arrival. The rumour that Gholab Singh intended revolt is alleged to be groundless; as is that, also, of the hostile manifestations of Dost Mahommed. Mooltraj, whose gallant defence of the fortress of Mooltan invested him with a certain degree of interest in the estimation of military men, has been found guilty of participation in the murder of Messrs. Anderson and Vans Agnew, and sentenced to death. The punishment, however, has been commuted to imprisonment for life in the fort of Chunar. The mail brings no other intelligence of importance or interest.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

FAST DAY.—The Lord Bishop of Salisbury having appointed Friday (yesterday) to be set apart as a day of humiliation and prayer, in consequence of the national visitation with which this country has been afflicted by the prevalence of cholera, a special service was consequently held at the Cathedral, and in the parish churches of Salisbury, on that day.

THE DEAN OF HEREFORD.—We regret to hear of the serious illness of the Very Rev. Dr. Merewether. Dean of Hereford. His friends in that Cathedral city had some reason to feel alarmed respecting him during the past week.

VACANCIES.—Winterbourne-Whitchurch V., Dorset, dio. Sarum, £97, with residence. Rev. J. Tyrwhitt, dec.; patron, Bishop of Salisbury. Chesington R., Surrey, dio. Chichester; £178; Rev. R. F. Fuller, dec.; patron, A. E. Fuller, Esq.

PREFERMENTS.—Rev. George Andrews, M.A., to be one of the chaplains to the Bishop of Peterborough. Rev. T. W. Harman, M.A., late curate of Caston, and now rector of Markham, to be an honorary canon in the Cathedral of Peterborough. Rev. Arthur Morley to the curacy of Hingham, Norfolk, diocese of Norwich. Rev. W. Dodd to Chilthorham V., Northumberland; value, £240 with residence; pat. the Bishop of Durham. Rev. Richard Beckeridge, to the incumbency of St. Andrew's, Newcastle, diocese of Durham. Rev. G. C. Hutchinson, of Christ Church, Oxford, to be rural dean of Camerden, Gloucestershire. Rev. W. F. Fermeau, to Grassterton V., Oxfordshire; £200 with residence; pats., New College, Oxford.

A new and beautiful church at Brighton will be consecrated on Thursday, the 13th October, by the Lord Bishop of Chichester.

THE CHOLERA.

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

THE present alarming epidemic has led to the publication of so many remedies, of such confused and opposite qualities, that I think it of the greatest importance to every person who can read should have the opportunity of using some portion of common sense and judgment in this matter. I have seen recommended acids, sedatives, acids and alkalis, stimulants and astringents, opiates and sweats, liquids and solids, cold and heat—without any reference to conditions or circumstances.

Now, there is a work published under the authority of the Royal College of Physicians, called the "London Pharmacopœia," consisting of a series of formulæ or prescriptions, the compounding of medicines which, from experience and medical knowledge, are deemed the best for the numerous complaints to which human flesh is heir. What can be more simple than stating that the chalk mixture (Mist. Cretæ) is the remedy in the "Pharmacopœia," and generally used in most physicians for diarrhœa; and, as nearly all cases of cholera are preceded by a derangement of the bowels symptomatic of the many sickness or diarrhœa, which are common at this season of the year, it follows, as a matter of course that this remedy should be employed wherever derangement of the bowels exists. The compound chalk mixture can be procured at any druggist's, and should not be in expensive medicine, as it consists of chalk, gum-arabic, cinnamon-water, and a little sugar; to this may be added with advantage a certain quantity of some of the preparations of opium. In the absence of a medical man, this remedy is, perhaps, the most useful to employ, and would certainly, by seeking the diarrhœa, prevent the disposition of this complaint to assume a more malignant form. When, by carelessness, the diarrhœa has been neglected, and symptoms of cholera are presented, the most active means are required. During collapse, the functions of the body are undoubtedly prostrate; consequently, more good must be expected from the application of stimulants, internally and externally, than from the employment of such medicines as require for the promotion of their powers a more active state of the organs of absorption, &c. The application of heat externally is probably the most important agent during collapse; but there is some inconvenience and difficulty in this matter. Perhaps the simplest and most convenient method would be to envelope the patient in a blanket, and seat him on an ordinary cane-bottomed chair; then conduct the steam from a kettle by means of a piece of gutta-percha tube tied to the spout of the kettle, the other end terminating in a flannel bag, or a piece of blanket may be loosely folded round it; this would constitute a steam bath. It is material for which are accessible to everybody. The cramp remains at this stage of the attack only to be guarded against by a medical man. I am quite sure, from experience, that if proper attention had only been paid to the first symptoms as antecedents of cholera, in most of the cases which have terminated fatally, the attack would not have entered or reached the malignant stage. The formula for the compound chalk mixture is this:—Prepared chalk, half an ounce; white sugar, three drachms; gum-arabic, one drachm; cinnamon-water, six ounces. To this might be added with advantage one drachm of the tincture of opium. Two or three table-spoonfuls of the mixture should be taken every three or four hours, and the patient kept perfectly quiet in the horizontal position or in bed.

I am aware that other valuable remedies and suggestions have been put usual; but, as they differ from that authorised by the Pharmacopœia, and are, besides, so mixed up with the quackery and nonsense of hypocondriacs and amateurs in medical science, a good selection is a lottery, and dangerous. As it is important that common sense should be allowed to settle the question by employing those remedies and means which are of established value; and not papers that attention to the multitude of publications on the subject. As an instance of the danger likely to result from the use of such "specifics," the following letter from her Majesty's physician, Sir James Clarke, is positive evidence:—

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES.

Sir,—The subjoined prescription, purporting to be a cure for cholera, has, I find, been widely circulated in the public journals—and among others, I believe, in the Times—as an infallible remedy. I am feel greatly obliged by your permitting me to state that the prescription was never written nor sanctioned by me; on the contrary, I consider it absolutely dangerous in the dose, a table-spoonful (nearly equal to five grains of opium), in which it is recommended.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

Balmoral, Aug. 26. JAMES CLARK.

[illegible] PRESCRIPTION.

The following prescription by Sir James Clarke, Physician to the Queen, has been admin[illegible]
[illegible] grains of camphor, 24 grains of [illegible], 30 drops of [illegible] of [illegible]. A teaspoonful in a glass of brandy-and-water.

A tablespoonful in a glass of brandy-and-water.

The above dose is for an adult. Smaller quantities, according to age, for children.

G. T.

OFFICIAL SUPPLIES OF STATIONERY.—The Customs Board having caused a inquiry to be made into the system of control exercised on the receipt and delivery of articles of stationery required for the use of the Customs department, for giving effect to the Treasury minutes enforcing the necessity of greater economy, it appears that since the commencement of the present year many descriptions of books which had been whole bound in vellum have, under the direction of the inspector of binding, at the Stationery-office, been half bound in cloth, two books being bound in vellum, and that paper of second quality, but sufficient for the purpose, has been used, whereby a diminution of expenditure, under the head of books and binding, will be effected. Certain articles which have been heretofore allowed, but considered not requisite, have been disallowed, and directions issued, that, upon the receipt of demands for stationery, the examiner of such demands is not only to ascertain that the allowance is not exceeded, but that the demand is not made up of articles unnecessary for the conduct of the public business.

COUNTRY NEWS.

KIDDERMINSTER ELECTION.—The writ for the election of a member for this borough arrived in Kidderminster on Tuesday. The nomination is fixed for Monday next, and the polling (should there be any) for the following day. Mr. [illegible] and Mr Cochrane (Ultra.) are the only candidates in the field. It is expected to be a severe contest.

RETIREMENT OF ONE OF THE CANDIDATES FOR WEST SURREY.—A meeting of the liberal electors was held at the Crown Inn, Guildford, on Saturday last, R. L. Long, Esq., in the chair, which was well attended. Mr. [illegible] explained the cause of his retirement, which had reference to the expenses of the election. The manner in which he had, however, come forward elicited enthusiastic approbation. G. T. Nicholson, Esq., of Waverley Abbey, then proposed as a candidate R. W. Edgell, Esq., of Milton-place, Epsom. G. Best, Esq., seconded the motion. Mr. Edgell said it was impossible to give vent to his feelings, the matter had come up on him so suddenly. In consenting to stand the contest, he might state that he was for rival and religious liberty in its most extended form; he was for an extended suffrage, when the vote would be considered not as a privilege, but as a right, and one which not be tempted to buy and sell it. He was a free trader in all respects, yet he meant no mischief to the agricultural interest. Several questions, all of which were satisfactorily answered, were put to Mr Edgell, a committee was appointed to take the necessary measures for securing his return to Parliament for the western division of the county of Surrey. The Speaker's warrant has been issued, and the election is fixed for Monday, September 10th. On Wednesday the Protectionists had a meeting at Epsom, when Mr. Evelyn addressed his supporters. He declared himself, although a decided Conservative, to be an advocate for the admission of Jews into Parliament. Mr. Edgell, the Liberal candidate, has issued an explanatory address to the electors.

POST OFFICE ROBBERY.—A most extensive robbery has been carried on for some time by the Dowlais messenger, named Thomas Thomas. Suspicions were excited last week by the non-arrival of a letter from a tradesman in the town, containing four £5 notes. Inquiry was made, when it was traced to, and out of, the post-office, and no further. This led to decisive steps on the part of the authorities, and the messenger was taken into custody, and search was made: about 800 letters were found in his possession, of different dates, some opened, and others not opened. The prisoner was brought up for hearing on Monday last, and remanded.

WRECK.—The Gitana schooner yacht, belonging to the Earl of Lincoln, grounded on the Sand Head, off Ryde, on Friday evening week, at ebb tide. She was shored up, and thought to be safe. As the tide rose again, it caused a motion in the shores, and these slipping in the sand-bank, she fell over and filled. The Echo steam-tug and two yard lighters went to her assistance on Saturday, and succeeded in weighing her. She was brought into Portsmouth harbour early on Sunday morning, not much the worse for her loss of furniture, &c. is completely spoiled. Lord Lincoln was about to proceed to the Mediterranean in her on a cruise, which will now be postponed for a time.

BLACK ROCKS, LEITH.—Mr. Dall, R.N., superintendent of the Leith harbour and docks, has erected a safety beacon on these rocks. It is situated about 700 feet from the old beacon on the Black Rocks, bearing south by east, and consists of three strong iron rods, or posts, firmly bolted into the rock in a triangular position, and rising perfectly to the height of 30 feet. These rods are surmounted by a light iron frame, or basket, 3 feet high, and 18 feet wide, which is reached by a ladder, constructed of iron bars, attached to one of the pillars. The height of the beacon is 24 feet above low water-mark, and 4 feet above the highest level of spring-tides. It is capable of containing twenty persons, and will afford the most perfect security to life in every state of tide or weather.

THE GREAT BUSTARD.—One of these remarkable and now rare birds was seen by G. G. Waterhouse, Esq., of the British Museum, and a party of friends, in the neighbourhood of Stonehenge, on the 10th ult. It was exceedingly shy, and took wing readily, alighting on the ground again at a short distance. This it did several times, as it has been said it is supposed, much to the disappointment of the party, who were anxious for a closer acquaintance with this rara avis. Its flight, though heavy, appeared to be very powerful, as it made rapid progress against the wind.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—A deplorable accident happened at seven o'clock on Saturday evening off the King's Rooms, at Southsea-beach, Port mouth. Mr. Allen, a gentleman who had recently established a tailor's business in that town for young gentlemen, had, in the afternoon of that day, taken six of his pupils for a sail in a small yacht. The yacht had returned; and, for the purpose of landing on the beach, he had put his boy into a small boat or punt, and was steering it himself, when the punt sheared off and capsized. Mr. Allen and the boys being thrown into the water. This occurred about a hundred yards from the shore: the yacht, having her sails up, could not render assistance. A number of persons on the beach witnessed the catastrophe, and forthwith all the punt they could, particularly Mr Mullingsworth a soldier of the 77th. Boats put off, and the unfortunate persons were all placed up or saved, but most of them in an insensible state. One little boy, Lewis Jones, was drawn on shore; he was, however, rescued by a gallant fellow from the beach, who threw off his coat and plunged into the sea, and brought the boy safe to shore. The man's name is Flemm, a shipwright, belonging to the dockyard delegates from various parts of the world; the further portion being occupied by visitors, including a large number of ladies, whose light summer costumes formed a lively contrast with the sombre mass of delegates, the gravity of whose appearance was somewhat enhanced by the large number of fine beards among them. A gallery, the entire length of the room, was also filled with auditors. Before 12 o'clock on Wednesday the hall was crowded in every part. As the célébrités appeared, they were received with great enthusiasm. M. Victor Hugo (the President of the Congress) pronounced an eloquent address.

THE PEACE CONGRESS AT PARIS.

M. VICTOR HUGO PRESIDENT OF THE CONGRESS.

M. V. MARIE-DOMINIQUE AUGUSTE, ARCHBISHOP OF PARIS, HONORARY PRESIDENT OF THE CONGRESS.

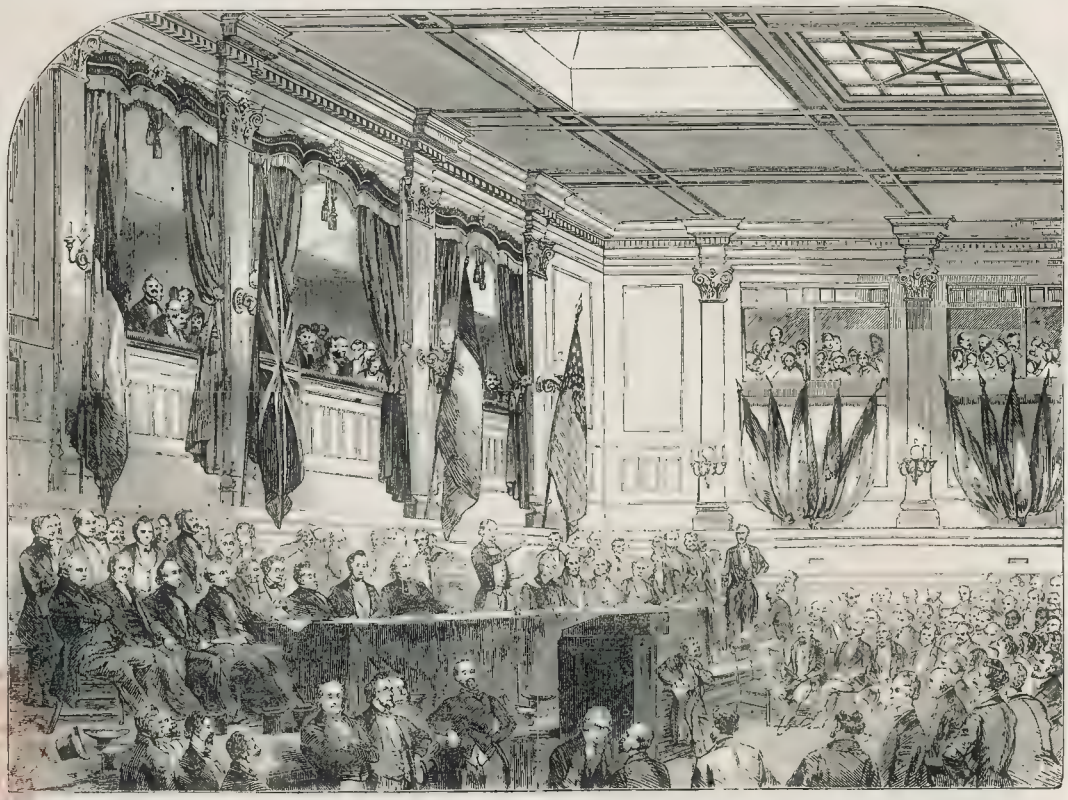
A letter was then read from the Archbishop of Paris, to whom the presidency had been offered, but which he was compelled to decline, from ill health. His communication, expressive of entire sympathy with the objects of the Congress, elicited loud applause. The recent publication of the Archbishop's enlightened appeal in behalf of Venice, quoted by us last week, was warmly remembered. We have noticed the different speakers in our report, but we may allude to M. J. Journet, who obtained leave to speak; but his visionary views were accompanied by tone and action so wild and ferocious, that the amusing amazement of the English part of the audience was quite excusable. The greatest earnestness and harmony pervaded the meeting, and every sentiment in relation to the peace and friendship of England and France was responded to with the utmost cordiality. The Rue Chaussée d'Antin presented many groups of striking character and contrast when the assembly separated: the French populace looked on with great interest, conversing on the objects of the Congress: the dashing militaire of France acquired an additional air from contrast with the members of the Society of Friends; and the picturesque French-woman looked more piquant beside the mild sisterhood.

On Thursday the sitting was besieged with increasing crowds. It was then announced that the Government had ordered all the public buildings to be opened to the members of the Congress, on showing their tickets; and also that on Monday the water-works of Versailles and St. Cloud were to play, for the special gratification of the Congress.

Friday's sitting was more crowded and enthusiastic than the preceding ones and, in conclusion, the friends of peace express the utmost satisfaction and pleasure at the manner in which the French people have responded to them. The Government dispensed with passports and search of luggage. The party from England consisted of 650 persons.

The large Illustration shows the opening of the Congress by Victor Hugo, with portraits of most of the principal characters around him. Accompanying is the portrait of Victor Hugo, the President; and of J. M. V. Marie Dominique Auguste, Archbishop of Paris, the Honorary President.



THE PEACE CONGRESS, IN THE SALLE ST. CECILE, AT PARIS: M. VICTOR HUGO OPENING THE PROCEEDINGS.

THE LIVERPOOL MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

EXTERIOR OF THE NEW PHILHARMONIC CONCERT HALL, AT LIVERPOOL.

(From our own Correspondent.)

LIVERPOOL, Wednesday.

There has been no great musical festival in this town since 1836. In that year there were four meetings in England, Manchester, Norwich, Worcester, and Liverpool, and there seemed to be a strong disposition on the part of the provincial amateurs to increase the number of these gatherings. The death of Malibran, at Manchester, created such a powerful sensation, that the Liverpool meeting was seriously affected, and a financial loss resulted from the decease of the ever-to-be lamented child of genius, who was to have been the Queen of song at the gathering. In 1836, for the sacred harmonic performances, two churches were employed; and for the evening concert the use of the Amphitheatre was resorted to. Old citizens being strongly urged against the employment of sacred edifices for the less cause of charity, a subscription was raised to erect a music hall; but, ultimately, the project was taken up by the local authorities, and the magnificent edifice, St George's Hall, was commenced. When it is to be finished, is uncertain. There it stands opposite the Railway Station, a splendid exterior, but with nothing done for the interior. It is proposed to combine in St George's Hall, the law courts, public meetings, and periodical musical festivals for the last two charities. It wanted but pressing, to prove that a town like Liverpool, containing such a large body of cultivated amateurs, could get it quiet y without some fiddle where musicians most might congregate. And yet how small a building was that, which not a thousand persons were wont to assemble at discourse as eloquent music as might be in St Martin's Church. This small phalanx was under the direction of Mr W. Sudlow, an amateur organist. About the close of the year 1830, the society was consolidated on a larger basis, for the culture of vocal and instrumental music; and on the 10th of January, 1840, the Liverpool Philharmonic Society was duly instituted. Round the street on Horse-street, which our Artist has drawn engraved in this Number. Here is the result of the persevering labours of a few enthusiastic dilettanti perhaps, the finest concert-room now to be found in the world. For a considerable time, the performances were given in the Hall of the Collegiate Institution, but it was wanting in comfort and it sadly fell for musical effect. It was resolved to raise money to build a new Hall, expressly for the Society. It was long before sufficient cash was raised for the purpose; but the exertions of Mr Brancker, and other members of the committee, were eventually successful, by the adoption of the following plan.—The Hall was divided into stalls and private boxes, and galleries, and a price was fixed on each single stall or box holding six persons—the purchasers becoming entitled to it as transferable property, subject to the obligation of paying an annual subscription, imposed by the committee. The galleries are let to annual subscribers, or for the concerts singly. The foundation-stone was laid on the 23d of September, 1840, by J. B. Brancker, Esq., the chairman of the Society

THE NEW PHILHARMONIC CONCERT HALL.

The following is a description of the new Hall:—

Extreme length from east to west	..	177 feet.
Extreme breadth from north to south	..	120 "
Height from the ground line to the top of the cornice ..	..	82 "
To the top of the roof	..	72 "

Style, external and internal, Roman-Italian, plain, but of bold character.

On the ground floor, at the west end of the large room, is the grand entrance-hall, approached from an arcade or piazza by three doors; and at each end of the Hall there is a commodious cloak and hat room, &c.—one for ladies, the other for gentlemen; and attached to each room there is a lavatory and water-closet. At the back of these cloak-rooms, and communicating with the entrance-hall at each end, there are two handsome and broad staircases, which lead to the boxes, galleries, and grand promenade, or refreshment-room.

From the entrance-hall, and staircases on the west, north, and south sides, a wide corridor extends around the podium of the Music Hall, having on each of the north and south sides seven folding doors, over all the west end; thus giving several right ways of ingress and egress to and from the floor of the Hall. Of these corridors, the one on the north has three large doors for giving egress to the company, when dispersing, under a piazza, similar to, but more extensive than, the one on the west side.

The one on the south side opens to a convenient refreshment room, extending nearly the whole length of the body or pit of the Hall. On the east end are two doors that lead to the orchestra, which is placed in a covered recess, and there are two doors that give access from the back street to the stairs which lead to the orchestra, and to four green-rooms for the male and female performers; the lower green-rooms have each attached a dressing-room, &c.; the upper green-rooms have one to a side box, one looking the orchestra.

The great Hall, within the walls of the podium, measures east and west 100 feet; and the breadth, north and south, 64 feet. The height of the area to the ceiling is 65 feet.

The podium walls, on the north and south sides, are 10 feet 6 inches high; those with the wall on the west end, which is 16 feet high, are divided into panelled compartments, filled in with perforated zinc for ventilation. The podium has a sub-system of character, and finishes with a bold, plain cornice en suite. The panels are covered on the inside with hair and canvas, above the air flues which surround the Hall, and which proceed from the fan-wheelchamber.

Over the cornice of the body of the Hall, up to the flat of the ceiling, a panel or pace extends all round, with supporting styles, and the panels are filled in with diaper open-work of papier-maché. This affords an easy escape for the products of combustion of the gas lights that are placed on the top of the panels round the central elevated part of the Hall, and which are found quite ample for the purpose of lighting the whole house.

The external appearance of the building will be best appreciated by the perspective view. It is well proportioned, and beautifully balanced—simple in its features, but bold and effective. Medallion busts of Handel, Mozart, and Beethoven are on the summit of the building

Mr. Cunningham is the architect of the new Hall.

We have seen most of the concert-rooms in the European capitals, and we do not know one more thoroughly adapted for the purpose than the Liverpool Philharmonic Hall. It was a magnificent sight, on the 23d of August, to company rose up for the National Anthem, which loyally inaugurated the edifice. The band possesses of twenty first violins, with Salmon and B arrowe as principals, sixteen second violins, with Watkins and Archer as principals, twelve violas, with Hill as chief, twelve violoncellos, with Lucas, twelve double basses; and twenty of the brass, wood, and percussion instruments. The London players were the most famed in their respective departments. At the time we were using Mdlle. Corbari, the Mesrs A and M. Williams, and Madame Viardot.

The scheme of the first concert comprised chiefly pieces well known at our metropolitan concerts; but Spohr's "Last Judgment," Spohr's Power ful overture, composed expres y for the occasion by Benedict, who conducted it. It is in D, one ing with an andante, and terminating with a spirited quick movement. It is brilliantly scored, Wagnerian in its forms, and showing the hand of a master. The "Freyschütz" overture and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" were also played. Mr. J. Zeugher Hermann, who is the permanent conductor of the Society, directed this concert. We are not impressed, however, with his ability for such an office. He hurries the time in the instru mental works, and in the vocal accompaniments lacks steadiness. With the exception of a thousand and one Andromeda's, disappointed Ethiopian's, & A Macfarren, there was no other novelty. It was sung by Madame Macfarren. There was a new tenor, Signor Nicolo Colas; but there is nothing to record in his favour The Misses A. and M. Williams were presented in Wallace's cantatina, "Love's approach." Virlot, in his exquisite horn solo, obtained a great encore; he played the same cantabile we have noticed at the Wednesday Concerts. Madame Viardot treated a marked sensation in the grandiosos from "Der Freyschütz," and Alboni sang into the auditory h "Casta Diva." Here Formes and Viardot, in the Marcel and Valentine d o, from the "Huguenots," were much applauded. The prayer in the san ket scene from "Masaniello" was demu ded twice, but the conductor took the time a the speed of an express train. Mdlle. Corbari got an encore for Hummel s "Tyrolienne," gave the "Lucrezia" "Brindisi." Bartolini, Polonini, Tagliafico, the above Corbari, Mdlle. Jetty de Treffz, sang in divers concerted pie es; but could scarcely be affirmed that, Alboni, Viardot, and the Misses Williams excepted, any great impression had been made by the singers. At the second concert, on Tuesday night, there was, however, much execution heard, and there were eight encores, namely Formes, in the air from M. art's "Don Juan," "in diesen heiligen Hallen," superbly sung, in which he displayed a compass of two octaves, down to the lower E natural. Madame Macfarren's songs were rapt ronsly received, were encored in the du "Turnami," from "Don Pasquale" Viardot quite electrified the auditory in the "Somnambula" finale, "Ah! non giin ge" —another encore. Madame Macfarren sang "Oberon's passage at arms" (ably accompanied by Benedict), which he sang divinely, but the sub-limited "Augusti pure," for Dalmatti's "Favorita." Lablache, who was tremendously cheered, did not repeat the "Don Magnifico" dream. "Mel rampino" death in the battle; nor play Benedict's "Scenes of my youth" twice on the horn. Mdlle. de Treffz was encored in Kücken's "Trab, trab" Besides these encores, Mario, in the fine tenor "William Tell," in which Adolphe Leaver took the part of Walter. "Tronour nui di," sang with the most impassioned feeling. Grisi was not in her best voice at this concert Ernst p ayed his "Pirata," fantasia, but he was unwell and was not up to the mark. Piatti, by the way, in Monday's concert played the "Sonnambula" variations fantasia charmingly. The Spanish songs of Viardot were quite relished by the audience; and her brilliant pianoforte playing in the accompaniment was not overlooked. She has sung in English, German, Italian, and Spanish at these performances, and could add French and Russian if called upon. Charles Halle was to have played Mendelssohn's pianoforte concerto in G minor; but the pitch of the instrument being too low for the orchestra, he substituted Beethoven's "Fantasia" in the same key. Mozart Wor's The "William Tell" overture, in which the band took it into their heads to run away from the conductor, was played with such overwhelming energy, that the encore was inevitable

One grand attraction of this Festival was the performance, yesterday (Tuesday) morning, of Mendelssohn's "Elijah," conducted by Benedict. It was the first time that this masterpiece of modern sacred music had been given in public with justice in all its majestic proportions. It was in this work we were enabled to appreciate the pure-toned voices and truly poetic feeling of the Lancashi re chorus-singers It was also the first time that we had heard the music of the composer sung in such a beautiful manner. Many portions have never been better executed than yesterday. The trebles have the same voices, so truly musical. But it is not in the quality that nature has been so bountiful as quality of the organ, as regards those choristers, but they possess into ligence, feeling, a d enthusiasm, and are sensitively alive to the beauties of the composer's inspiration. In the power of sound in the grand choruses, and the overpoint; in the reading of the passages marked precision; and in the attainment of a piano, and the co ervance of the lights and shades, Lucas was almost surprising that could be got from the sorry chorus we heard in the "Lord, how long," which was exquisitely embodied. The chorale, "For he the Lord," was sung with intense devotion. The "Baal, we cry to thee," was full of chi aster; and the "Hear and answer," and "Thou'rt descends from Heaven," were replete with graphic power. The emphasis on the word "slay," in the "Take all the prophets," was q ite thrilling. As for the finale of the first part, the fan d chorus in E flat, "Thanks be to God," it was quite overpowering; and, breaking in rough all conventional restraints, the demand for the encore was vociferous. The rush of the violins in the last movement almost took away one's breath. In the second part, we must quote the "Be not afraid." The flutter of the stringed instruments during the passage, "As a reed is shaken by the wind," gave a vivid realisation of the words. The descriptive scena, "Behold, the Lord passed by," was triumphantly executed. On this occasion, there were novelties in the cast for the London amateurs; Formes singing the music of Ezuah and Mdme Viardot and Miss Catherine Hayes dividing the soprano parts. The Misses A and M Williams, Mr. Lockey, Mr. Benson, and Mr. Machin had the remainder Formes sang powerfully in many parts Nothing could be more impressive than in his scena of the remorseful life of the Widow's child What longer and instrument last evinced a conscientious determination to do justice to the composer's i.

TUESDAY.—The third and last evening concert took place last night. This morning Handel's "Messiah" has been given; and to-morrow, Rossini's "Stabat Mater" and Mendelssohn's "Lauda Sion" will terminate the musical performances. A grand day does all bring the festival to a conclusion to-morrow night. In the scheme of the third concert were comprised Beethoven's Pastoral Symphony, and Mendelssohn's "Ruy Blas" overture, and Weber's "Jubel" overture, with instrumental solos by Ernst (violin) and Bottesini (double-bass).

The an ors last night were Mario in "Il mio tesoro," when he sang the "Don Pasquale" serenade, "Com' a gentil;" Lablache, in the Tarantella "La donna," when he g a imitated one of his comic Neapol tan songs; the chorus from Weber's "Preciosa," Mdme. Grisi, and the "Non fi sogno" of Verdi; and Bottesini, in h s "Carneval de Venise" fantasia on the double bass. The Symphony was finely performed by the band. Benedict conducted this concert with great ability. Mdme. Viardot sang the scena from the "Prophète" finely, and Alboni dashed through the "Cinerentola" finale brilliantly. Mdlle. Corbari sang Mozart's "Voi che sapete" charmingly; and the Misses Williams, in the Mendelssohnian part songs, received their share of the applause. The hall was better attended than on any previous occasion FRIDAY.—Handel's oratorio, "The Messiah," was performed this morning. The hall was fuller than the morning of the "Elijah." Madame Viardot was absent from indisposition. The air "He was despised," which she was to have sung, was allotted to Miss Hayes, and Mr. Sawyer, it is stated, has been attacked with cholera. Mr. Benson took his place in the tenor parts, and acquitted himself creditably. Formes was encored in "Why do the nations?" and the chorus, "Let us break their bonds," was also twice encored. Mdlle. Herrman conducted. Miss Catherine Hayes, the Misses A. and M. Williams, and Mr. Machin sang very elaborately the music assigned to them. Grisi, Alboni, Corbari, Mario, Lablache, Bottesini, and Piatti, sing as a concert at Manchester to night, but return here to-morrow for the "Stabat Mater" of Rossini.

THE THEATRES.

SADLER'S WELLS.

This theatre re-opened on Saturday last with new power and promise. The comedy of the "Tempest" was reproduced on an enlarged scale of magnificence and effect, and illustrated with scenery that formed really pictorial embellishments to the play. A new drop-scene, painted by Mr. Finlay, also, is another splendid decoration of the house, which now assumes an appearance of elegance highly attractive. It was crowded in every part.

The entrance of Mr. Phelps in Prospero was most enthusiastically applauded, as was likewise that of Mr. Bennett in Caliban. There has been an accession of strength to the company. A Mr. Nye performed Trinculo, and performed it well. Miss Cuthbert made her first appearance here as Miranda—the lady is a comic actress, having two or three seasons ago made her début at the Haymarket, in the Widow Belmour, a comic character, which suited her better than the Shakespearian and poetic one now confided to her inexperience. Mr Dickinson's Ferdinand was generally liked; as also that of Mr. Marston (who at both theatres is a royal. He was, indeed, well made up. The loudest applauses, however, were accorded to the Ariel of Miss St. George, who did both the spiriting and carolling with singular animation and spirit, accompanied with much intelligence, that her acting may be said to have aspired towards being what justly may be called an interpretation of the part. She was vehemently called for at the conclusion; Mr. Phelps, Mr. Marston, and Mr. Bennett having received the usual ovation before the curtain.

The tragedy of "Antony and Cleopatra" is again deferred, owing to the necessary preparations.

On Thursday "The Belle's Stratagem" was performed, for the purpose of introducing to a London audience a Miss Fitzpatrick, who comes with a considerable reputation from Dublin, in the character of Letitia Hardy. Her success on this evening sufficiently justified the reports in her favour; and we recogn se in her an actress who will probably hereafter demand more than ordinary attention.

NEW STRAND.

On Monday a new and original farce, in one act, called "Katty from Connaught," was produced. Its purpose is to exhibit Mrs. Alfred Phillips in an Irish character, and that purpose is fully answered. Mrs. Phillips is the sleeping-Katty is a Lady Mabel in disguise, who assumes a part to recover a lo t lover—a Sir George Ellis (Mr. Butler), in which she is assisted by Lady Stanfield (Mrs Adams). The piece was received with a hearty burgoon, which is supported by the actress with a naïveté that lends a charm even to the gross. Mrs. Phillips is rising in reputation, and deserves her success.

ADELPHI.

The ADELPHI company at the Haymarket complete their performances this week. On Thur day "Paul Pry" was acted

The MARYLEBONE Theatre will re-open early in September with Mrs. Nowta nd Mr. Davenport. Mr. Wats, the lessee, will, however, remove the company to the CLYMPIC after Christmas Considerable doubts have hitherto hung over Mr. Macready's intentions as to the scene of his farewell appearance; but it now seems to be settled that they will take place at the DRURY LANE THEATRE—his engagement commencing with the 24th October, and continuing for two months. The Keans follow for the next four months. After which Mr. Macready returns for another two months. It has been finally fixed that the Drury Lane season shall close on the 30th of January, 1850, when Mr. Macready retires from the management, it is stated that he will appear in thirty five different characters.

IRELAND.

Lord Stanley is sojourning at Ballykisteen, his seat in Tipperary, and is hospitably entertaining the neighbouring gentry.

Mr. Macaulay arrived in Dublin on Tuesday night from Killarney, in company with Lord Lansdowne and family. Next day he left for Castlefergus. A vast deal of assistance has been given to him in his efforts to procure information, and his account of the Williamite campaign will be the most interesting and popular ever published.

The Lord-Lieutenant has handed over her Majesty's bounty (£300) for Belfast, to the funds of the General Hospital there.

TENANT-RIGHT ORGANIZATION.—It appears, by a printed circular transmitted to the Tipperary Vindicator, that the organization is in progress amongst the tenant-farmers of the south and west to promote the establishment of legal security for the occupiers.

ENCUMBERED ESTATES COMMISSIONERS.—The three commissioners, Baron Richards, Professor Longfield, and Charles James Hargreave, Esq., have now been duly instal ed. Mr. Hargreaves took the oath of office on Monday last, before Chief Baron Pigot. The commissioners will commence their duties early in the ensuing month.

PRINTED LINEN CAMBRIC.—From this new and valuable development of the linen industry of Ireland, the province of Ulster is likely to receive a great impetus; and the new process of doing away with the tedious operation of Lord Clarendon, a most wholesome scope for the exercise of h eir artist c taste. Among the many happy results arising out of her most gracious Maj sty's visit to Ireland, is the introduction of this fabric to our notice. Her Majesty, on that occasion, selected, for her own wear, a few dresses of this elegant material.

Richard B. Sheridan, Esq., M.P., is at present visiting the different workhouses in the west of Ireland.

Dr. Murphy, the R.C. parish priest of Fermoy, has been appointed Roman Catholic Bishop of Cloyne. The reverend gentleman was well known as a zealous clergyman, who took no part in political agitation.

TOURISTS IN IRELAND.—The Cork p pers state that every train from the capital and every steamer bringing the Channel delivery tourists from King and, Scotland, the continent of Europe, and even many from the New World, to only the beauties of the Killarney mountains and lakes, and the outstanding scenery along the Blackwater river and Bantry Bay, never fail of which, to a stranger, declares his expectations to have fallen short of the reality. Pre- with new ... and ... and ... and

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Tumul."—Vencut Ayar is a Brahmin of Tanjore, and is considered the champion player in that part of India. He is but ill versed in the book openings; but we are informed by those who have tested his strength, that, in situations of difficulty, his patience and resources are unexampled, and generally bring him through triumphantly.

"Lex cana." "Mir." "C. T."—The key move of Enigma No. 471 is—1. B to Q Kt 6th (ch).

"Bellary" is cordially thanked for his obliging communications. The last Indian Problem shall not be forgotten, although it is incomparably beneath its predecessor.

"J. H. B.," "Pat."—We repeat the position (Chess Enigma No. 469) by Mr. Grasdemaine, of Paris:—White: K at his sq, Q at her R 3d, Bs at K 8th and Q R 8th, and Kt at Q B 5th. Black: K at his 5th, Q at K sq, and Kt at K Kt 5th. White to play and mate in two moves.

"F. H. D." Bruges.—1. Both the games and problems shall be reported on next week. 2. See the Chess-Player's Chronicle for August

"J. A. F. Z."—In the first position, after Black has been guilty of the error of taking the Pawn, the game is drawn, but opponent long stalemated. In the second situation, White plays correctly in taking his adversary's Pawn en passing, as he discovers check and wins the Black Queen. We have had considerable difficulty in making out their positions, your diagrams and the written description being quite at variance

"G. W. H." 1. The best part of the amusing paper on Chess, which appeared in the last Quarterly, will be found in the August number of the Chess-Player's Chronicle. 2. We do not know.

"E. C." Liverpool.—The solution of Enigma No. 469 is—1. Q to B 3rd (ch), 2. Kt to K 5th (double check and mate)

"Omicron" and "Charurgus"—See the author's solution in the present Number.

"A Constant Reader," Glasgow.—The Key move to Enigma No. 467 is: 1. Q to K B 6th. And No. 472 is solved thus: -1. Kt to K 4th. 2. Kt from K 4th to K B 3d. 3. K to B 4th. 4. Kt to B 5th. 5. B mates.

Solutions by "A. B. C."; "M. P."; "Rev. C. L."; "Philo-Chess," "Bellary," "Colligan," Brighton, "R. V.," "E. C." "S. U." "W. L., Jun.," "Omicron," "Dereton," "Elita," "O. P. Q." "D. D.," Oxford, "D. L. T." "Elan," "Cosmilis," "Zobrab," "W. B.," Droitwich, "M. E. R.," "Otho," "W.," Monaghan, are correct. Those by "W. J. B." "J. N." "Bath Duo," "D. O. C." are wrong.

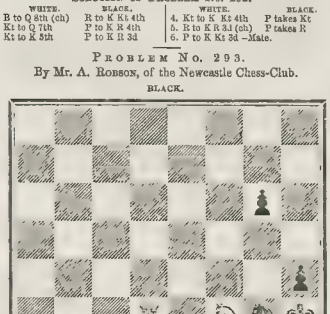
SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 292.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. B to Q Kt 6th (ch)	R to K Kt 4th	4. Kt to K 3d 4th	P takes Kt
2. Kt to Q 7th	P to K R 4th	5. R to K R 3d (ch)	P takes R
3. Kt to K 5th	P to K R 3d	6. P to K Kt 3d —Mate.

PROBLEM NO. 293.

By Mr. A. ROBSON, of the Newcastle Chess-Club.

BLACK.



WHITE.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

MATCH BY CORRESPONDENCE

BETWEEN THE CHESS CLUBS OF LONDON AND AMSTERDAM.

WHITE (Amsterdam).	BLACK (London).
40.	K to K B 2d.

Amsterdam to play.

CHESS IN THE METROPOLIS.

In this and the following game Mr. Staunton gave the odds of the Pawn and Two Moves to Captain Kennedy.

(Remove Black's K B P from the board.)

WHITE. (Capt. K.)	BLACK. (Mr. S.)	WHITE. (Capt. K.)	BLACK. (Mr. S.)
1. P to K 4th		21. Q B takes Q Kt	Q takes B (h)
2. P to Q 4th	P to K 3d	22. P to K B 3d	Q R to Q B sq
3. Q Kt to B 3d	K B to Q Kt 5th	23. Q to K R 5th	Q B to K sq
4. K B to Q 3d	Q Kt to B 3d	24. Q to K B 3d	Q to K sq
5. K Kt to B 3d	P to Q 3d	25. B takes Kt	Q takes B
6. Castles	K Kt to K 2d	26. Q takes Q	R takes Q
7. Q Kt to K 2d	Castles	27. K Kt to Q 2d	Q B to Q Kt 4th
8. P to K 5th	P to Q 4th	28. R to K sq	B takes Kt (i)
9. P to Q B 3d	B to Q R 4th	29. R takes B	Q R takes P
10. P to K Kt 4th	B to Q Kt 3d	30. Q R to Q Kt sq	Q R to Q B 7th
11. P to Q Kt 5th	Q Kt to his sq	31. K to B sq (k)	B to Q Kt 3d
12. Q Kt to K 3d	Q to K sq	32. R to Q Kt 3d	Q R to Q B 6th
13. P to Q B 4th	K Kt to Q B 5th	33. K to Q B 5th	B takes Kt
14. P takes P (in passing)	Q Kt takes P	34. R takes B	Q R takes Q B P
15. K Kt to K B	Q B to Q 2d (b)	35. Q R takes Q Kt P	K R to K B 2d
16. Q to K Kt 4th (c)	Q to K B 2d	36. K R to Q B 2d	K R to Q B 2d
17. K Kt to B 3d (d)	K Kt to K B 4th (e)	37. K to his 2d	K to B 2d
18. Q to K R 4th (f)	Q to K B 2d	38. P to Q R 4th	K to Kt 3d
19. Q B to K 3d	K Kt to K B 5th	39. P to Q R 5th	B takes R
20. Q to K Kt 4th	Q to K 2d	40. R to Q Kt 4th	K to his B 4th
21. P to Q Kt 6th	Q B to Q 2d	41. P to K B 4th	P to K Kt 4th
22. P to K B 3d	Q to K R 5th	42. K to Q B 3d	P takes P
23. P to K R 3d	Q to K B 3d	43. P takes P	R to Q B 5th

And White surrendered

(c) Preventing Black's intended move of K Kt to B 4th.

(d) White has now avoided himself fully of the disadvantages these terrible odds afford, his adversary's efforts to develop his forces are necessarily tardy and laborious.

(e) Threatening to play his Q Kt to K R 6th next move

(f) If P to K R 4th, the ominous move, Black could have taken the Q P with his Kt, &c.

(g) By the move he completely disconcerts the plans of White.

(h) If K Kt to his 3 d, he was out purposed before Black's last move, Black could have replied with Q to Q Kt 3d &c.

(i) With the object of advancing the P to K Kt 4th, and dislodging the K Kt

(k) If he had taken with the Bishop, he would have lost a piece by P to K Kt 4th; and if with the Kt, White would have got an almost irresistible position by moving his K Kt to Kt 5th.

(l) At length Black has so far shaken off the attack, that he is enabled to assume an offensive at onde himself. From this point the must look at home

(m) The forces were a Pawn apiece for Blacks

(n) By taking the Q Kt P, he would have lost a piece, by Black's moving his B to Q R 4th, &c.

BETWEEN THE SAME PLAYERS.

(Remove Black's K B P from the board.)

WHITE. (Capt. K.)	BLACK. (Mr. S.)	WHITE. (Capt. K.)	BLACK. (Mr. S.)
1. P to K 4th		20. P to K B 3d	Q R takes Kt (d)
2. P to 4th	P to K 3d	21. P takes B	Kt to Q 4th
3. B to Q 3d	P to Q B 4th	22. Q to K 5th	B to Q R 5th
4. P to b. 5th	P to K Kt 3rd	23. Q R to Q Kt sq	P to Q Kt 3d
5. P to Q B 3d	P to Q to B 3d	24. P to Q B 4th	Kt to Q Kt 5th
6. K Kt to B 3d	P to Q 3d	25. Q takes Q	P takes Q
7. P to K R 4th	B to K Kt 2d	26. B takes K R P	R to Q sq
8. P to K R 5th	P to K Kt 4th	27. P to Q R 3d	Kt to Q 6th
9. P takes Q P	Q takes P	28. Q R to Kt 7th (ch)	K to B 3d
10. Q B takes P	P takes Q P	29. R takes Q R P	Kt to Q 8 4th
11. B takes B	K takes B	30. P to K Kt 5th (e)	K takes P (ch)
12. P takes P	Kt takes P
13. Q Kt to B 3d	K Kt to B 3d	31. R takes Q R P	R to Q B sq
14. Kt takes Q Kt	Q takes Kt	32. P to K R 6th	K to K B 3d
15. Q to K 2d	B to Q 2d	33. R takes Kt	K to K B 3d
16. Castles on Q side	Q to Q B sq	34. B to Q 3d	R to Q B sq
17. K to Kt sq	Q to Q Kt 3d	35. P to K R 7th	K to Kt 2d
18. K to K sq	K to K Kt sq	36. P "Queens"	R takes Q
19. P to K Kt 4th (e)	Q to Q 4th	37. R takes R	K takes R

(a) Well played, because if Black take Kt with the Kt he must lose his Q; and if with his Rook, it costs him the "exchange."

(b) This is more brunside. The sacrifice is quite uncalled for, and leads to nothing.

(c) Very prettily played to imprison the 2 rank Kt

RAILWAY INTELLIGENCE.

MEETINGS.

SOUTH YORKSHIRE, DONCASTER, AND GOOLE.—August 24: Half-yearly Meeting: Mash ough: Earl Fitzwilliam in the chair.—The line to Doncaster will be opened next month. A deferred a vidend of 6 per cent, was declared on the amalgamation with the Navigation Company, which takes place next year.

LONDON AND BLACKWALL.—August 28: Half yearly Meeting: London: Mr. Daniell in the chair.—The line since April has been worked by locomotives. The expenses are reduced, but from various causes the receipts are diminished. The junction lines are not yet worked. It is calculated that £91,945 will be required beyond the present capital for changing the system of working, &c.; the sum to be raised by debentures. A committee for general assistance to improve the condition of the line was appointed. The surplus of £301 is to be carried to next year's account.

EAST INDIAN.—August 28: Half-yearly Meeting: London: Mr. Astonby, M P, in the chair.—The terms of 5 per cent interest, guaranteed by the East India Company, were recited. A tender for making the line at £9500 has been forwarded to the East India Board. The limitation of profits to ten per cent, by the government, was thought to be a provision against exorbitant calls. Compensation to the engineer, Mr. M'Donald Stephenson, is to be fixed by the directors when the receipts shall have passed 5 per cent.

EAST AND WEST INDIA DOCKS AND BIRMINGHAM JUNCTION.—Aug. 28: Half-yearly Meeting: London: Mr. Scott in the chair.—The works have been advanced, particularly with the Docks and Blackwall The London and North-Western and the East India Docs company have made the necessary advances. The line will be completed with in the original estimates. The whole line will probably be ready in the ensuing year. The arrears are comparatively small SHREWSBURY AND CHESTER.—Aug. 28: Half-yearly Meeting: Chester: Mr Wardell in the chair.—There was a balance sufficient to pay a dividend of 2½ per cent. The working expenditure had been much reduced. The local traffic was increasing. No calls will be required till the end of the current year. The works are in excellent condition.

MANCHESTER, SHEFFIELD, AND LINCOLNSHIRE.—August 29: Half-yearly Meeting, Manchester: the Earl of Yarborough in the chair.—The traffic eastward of Gainsborough is as productive as expected. The entire line, opened from Grimsby to Liverpool, satisfies reasonable expectation, but the completion of the Grimsby Docks is necessary for the full development of the line. The appointment of a public auditor was recommended for consideration. The chairman anticipated a reduction of the working expenses to 50 per cent. There had been a large increase in third-class passengers on the Sheffield extension. Certain shares, on which £19,402 had been paid, were forfeited. The shareholders are to be allowed to re-li the Grimsby Docks on payment of one fare.

SOUTH DEVON.—August 29: Half-yearly Meeting, Plymouth: Mr. Woolcombe in the chair.—The litigation on the preference shares is settled. The reports of Mr. Hutton and the directors minutely detail the position of affairs. The debenture debt is to be capitalised. The working charges are to be revised.

THE LONDON AND SOUTH-WESTERN extension to Farnham will be used for public traffic this day, 1st September. Simultaneously the Mottley branch unites Doncaster and Leeds by the LANCASHIRE AND YORKSHIRE, and the GREAT NORTHERN extension from Retford to Doncaster, will also be opened.

THE FLEETWOOD, PRESTON, AND WEST RIDING Junction will, probably, be completed by November. The MIDDLESBOROUGH AND REDCAR have declared their usual dividend of 6 per cent. Dividends at the rate of 4 per cents. for the first year, and 1 per cent. for the second year, less the dividend on the Lancashire and Yorkshire, have been declared by the MANCHESTER AND SOUTHPORT for the portion of the line opened. The traffic on the CONCHESTER, STOCK VALLEY, and HALSTEAD is reported as satisfactory.

SOUTH WALES.—August 30: Half yearly Meeting: London: C. R. M Talbot, Esq., M.P., in the chair.—The report stated that great attention has been directed to the completion of that portion of the line between Chepstow and Swansea, which will be ready for traffic early in the ensuing year. Owing to the difficulty of borrowing money at present the calls on the shareholders had been more frequent than would otherwise have been the case. The guarantee of the Great Western Company did not come into operation under the agreement until the opening of the line to Fishguard; but, as it was not deemed advisable, under present circumstances, to complete the line beyond Swansea, the directors had endeavoured to obtain an alteration of the agreement, so as to bring it into operation on the completion of the line to the latter place; but the interest of the Great Western Company should they do so was not justified in recommending to their shareholders any alteration of the agreement. The line between Swansea and Chepstow, a distance of seventy-five miles, was expected to be complete for £1,950,000, which, with sums expended on other portions of the line, and subscriptions to other companies, would make the expenditure £2,950,000, of which, after all allowances for arrears, &c., it was supposed £2,200,000 would be subscribed by the proprietors, and the remainder borrowed on debentures. A further sum of £310,000 would be required to complete the line to Grange Court, where it joined the Dean Forest Railway, and effected a junction with the Great Western and Midland Railways. After the opening of the portions of the line alluded to, the directors had no doubt of being able to procure capital for the completion of the line, if such was deemed necessary. Mr. Armstrong, the secretary, had absconded, taking with him property of the company, by which a loss of about £5000 was expected to be incurred. The total receipts of the company had been £41,116,3 2, and the expenditure £1,739,643 6s., leaving a balance in hand of £76,658 14s. On a motion being put for the adoption of the report, Mr. Duncan moved an amendment for the appointment of a committee of investigation, to see what steps could be taken to ensure the Great Western Company carrying out their guarantee. This amendment was put, and the committee appointed. It was then resolved to forfeit 1515 shares, on which £6,610 had been paid; and the meeting concluded with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

BRISTOL AND EXETER.—August 30: Half-yearly Meeting: Bristol: J. W. Bonnor, Esq., in the chair.—The report states that the share of rent and interest paid by the Great Western Company to the company amounts to £35,217 5s. 7d.; and, after deducting all expenses up to the 30th of April, last, when the lease expired, the net revenue was £378,11 13s. 5d., to which had to be added the profit from the last two months, which the company had worked the line themselves, of £26,868; making a total of £54,079 12s. 5d.; and, after deducting the amount of interest on borrowed capital, left a disposable balance of £44,693 19s. 10d. The directors recommend that provision shall be made for a depreciation fund, and that a dividend at the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum on the capital paid up be declared, having a surplus of £1000 to be carried to the next account. The directors regret that they have not been able to arrange for working the Exeter and Crediton line. The directors state that the entire liabilities of the company do not exceed £.10,000, and congratulate the shareholders on the termination of the lease of the line to the Great Western Company, and upon the company being in as healthy and sound condition as any company in the kingdom. The report was adopted, the dividend declared, some scrip shares, which had never been registered, forfeited; and, after the usua votes of thanks, the meeting separated.

CHARING-CROSS BRIDGE COMPANY.—The half-yearly general meeting of this company was held on Tuesday: Coats Child, Esq., in the chair.—The report stated that the tolls and pass rents received during the eight days in the July last amounted to the sum of £3404 2s. 11d., which showed a surplus of £238 11s. 10d. over the receipts of the corresponding period of the previous year. That, after discharging the current expenditure, there would be a sum available for a dividend at the rate of 3 per cent per annum; or 7s. 8d. on each original share, a proportionate sum on each eighth share. The amount available for dividend was £1963 9s. 8d. A long discussion ensued relative to some alleged irregularities of the secretary, but which, on examination, had been found to be frivolous and untrue, and several of the directors spoke as to his integrity and usefulness. Resolutions for the adoption of the report, the payment of the dividend, the re-election of the auditors, and a vote of thanks were carried—the re-election of Mr. Hawes causing a very considerable and warm discussion. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the business of the day.

"LATE-HOUR SYSTEM" A PREDISPOSING CAUSE OF CHOLERA.—Entertaining the opinion now held by every medical man, that protracted labour undergone in a confined atmosphere exercises a most powerful influence on the human frame, and also that ill-health, however occasioned, renders persons, in proportion as they are suffering from it, obnoxious to the present alarming epidemic, several of the shopkeepers of Shoreditch have humanely consented closing their shops at seven o'clock in the evening, so as to give their assistants opportunity for bodily recreation.

SERIOUS RIOT AT WATERLOO BRIDGE.—On Thursday morning, between two and three o'clock, a gang of thirteen fellows, evidently with an intention of robbing the toll-house, caused great alarm and confusion at the Surrey side of Waterloo Bridge. They endeavoured to force past the pay place without payment by one of them; but Snowden, the collector, anticipating their object, closed his door and resisted, when he was met by the whole gang. Snowden called to his companion for assistance, Dunman, who had charge of the carriage toll, but after a few minutes the fellows passed off towards the Strand, seeing that the precautions taken by the collector had rendered their desists. Just as the affray was over, an officer of the L division reached the toll-house, having been round his beat; but better protection is required for the Surrey side toll-collectors. They were all recognised as a gang of "smashers."

AN EXTRAORDINARY CURE.—A few days since a man named Steward, an excavator, working on the great Western line, was admitted into the Royal Free Hospital, Gray's inn-lane, suffering from severe compound fractures of the right arm, a loaded truck, weighing upwards of the ve tons, having passed over and crushed the limb, that, upon a consultation, it was deemed that immediate amputation must be resorted to to save life. Mr. Thomas Wakley, jun., however, took the case in hand, and, having reduced the numerous fractures, was on Saturday enabled to pronounce, in the presence of his patient and several of his medical brethren, that he has effected a complete cure. It is impossible accurately to describe the horrible mutilation of the limb when first brought under treatment, and the wonderful preservation of it is considered a surgical triumph.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The vagaries of drunkenness were strangely exhibited in two instances on Monday, of persons giving themselves into custody as being the "very identical" Manning who is charged with the murder of O'Connor, at Berm ndsey. One was named Menzies, a compositor and pressman, who appeared at Wurr ipstreet police-office the other, Frederick Jackson, a hawker, was brought up at Clerkenwell. They were both ascertained to be free from any imputation of criminality

Mr. M'Christie has fixed Monday, the 17th of next month, as the day on which he will commence his registration of the lists of voters for members to serve in Parliament for the city of London.

Letters from Algeria state that for the last two months the heat has been insupportable in that country. Persons who have been living there since the first moment of the occupation, do not remember to have suffered as they have done this year. The fact accounts, to a certain extent, for the discouragement which has seized on the colonists who have lately arrived. A great number of children have died in the agricultural colonies

Sir Charles Forsyth, Esq., Sheriff Substitute of Caithnesshire, last week was with his servant out in a boat on the Loch of Watten, about eight miles from Wick, when the boat was upset by a sudden squall, and instantly sank. The hat and cap of the parties had been found, and active search was being made for the bodies. Mr. Forsyth had only held the office of sheriff substitute for about a year and a half.

At Brody, in Austrian Galicia, a fire broke out on the 17th ult., laying the greatest part of the town in ashes. Nine hundred houses, including the handsomest and largest, were totally consumed. No lives had been lost, but the flames were not completely extinguished for some days.

At that saturnalia of the Irish metropolis, Donnybrook Fair, last week, there was on one of the show booths an advertisement announcing that inside were to be seen "Morning Waxworks, representing Rush, the murderer; Daniel O'Connell and Tom Steele lying in state; St. Peter and St. Paul, Father Mathew, John Mitchel, Mary Queen of Scots, and the Fair Circassian."

The directors of the Dublin and Kingstown Railway entertained on Saturday evening last two hundred of their operatives in honour of the Queen's visit, and to mark the admirable conduct of the men during the term of her Majesty's sojourn.

Her Majesty left the sum of £300 for distribution amongst the public charities of Cork and Queenstown. Previous to leaving Ireland, the Queen ordered, for the special use of the Prince of Wales, a set of the elementary books in use at the national schools of Ireland.

A woman, named Mary Robinson, aged 24, has been committed for trial at the next Bury assizes for the wilful murder of her child, who was, it is alleged, poisoned by the administration of a quantity of Sir W. Burnett's disinfecting fluid.

On Friday (last week) the Hon. T. E. Paget Graves was drowned at Plymouth by the upsetting of a boat, in which he was with some companions at the time. He was the eldest son and heir of Lord Graves, and was a naval cadet belonging to the Southampton, Admiral Reynolds, flag-ship, but was serving on board the Impregnable, and was about thirteen years of age. The accident was caused by all in the boat standing up together for the purpose of changing sats.

Intelligence from Ferrara, of the 14th ult., states that the corpse of a female, which was said to be that of Mdme. Garibaldi, who had perished from fatigue and privations during her flight, has been examined, and recognised to be really the last of the ingenious chief's wife

By a recent Post-office regulation, any letter having the writer's name and residence engraved on the seal, or written on the outside, and not finding the party to whom the same is addressed, will be returned to the writer immediately through the Post-office, and not through the Dead Letter Office; by which regulation considerable anxiety and loss of time will be prevented.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent having directed that meat and bread should be given to upwards of 500 poor families resident in Tunbridge Wells and its neighbourhood, for their Sunday's dinner, that being Prince Albert's birthday, the distribution was accordingly made, adults receiving one pound of meat each, without bone, and one pound of bread, and children half-a-pound of meat each, and half-a-pound of bread. It was given to all parties, without distinction as to religious sentiments.

An act was passed on the 1st ult. (12 and 13 Vict., cap 96) to provide for the suspension and trial, in her Majesty's colonies, of offences committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty. All persons charged in any colony with offences committed on the sea may be dealt with in the same manner as if the offence had been committed on waters within the jurisdiction of the courts of the colony, and shall suffer the punishment as on conviction of similar offences in England.

According to a recent act (12 and 13 Vict., cap. 82), boroughs having or providing a gaol or house of correction are not to be liable to contribute to a county gaol and house of correction, nor to a county asylum. There is a provision for cases where the settlement of pauper lunatics is unknown, charging the same on boroughs

M. Perinet, ex-Professor of the Hospital Militaire d'Instruction of Paris, has succeeded in preserving water in a sweet state by placing a kilogramme and a half of black oxide of manganese in each cask of water containing 250 litres. He has kept this water for seven years in the same barrels, and exposed them to various temperatures; at the end of that time he found it as limpid, free from smell, and of as good a quality as at the beginning of the experiment

Letters received by the steamer Cambria report that Mr. Bancroft has been instructed by the United States Cabinet to inform Lord Palmerston distinctly and expressly that no such exclusive privilege as that claimed by Mr. Barclay, the British Consul at New York, will be admitted, and no such concession reconsidered. The right of Great Britain to a monopoly of the important highway in question is propounded to be "bold enough;" and it is added that Taylor's administration intends to protect and preserve all the just rights which have been acquired by American citizens in Nicaragua.

The Earl Ducie it is said, intends to spend upwards of £30,000 on his new mansion in Tortworth Park. The contract has been taken by a Lincolnshire builder.

Mr. and Mrs. Heald (Lola Montes) have embarked at Marseilles, on board the Sardo Savoiarda, en route for Rome.

The Queen has given orders for the appointment of Thomas Nicholas Redington, Esq., Under-Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, to be an Ordinary Member of the Civil Division of the Second Class, or Knights Commanders of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath.

The waters of the Bristol Channel have lately presented during the night such profuse effusions of lambent light as to excite unusual attention. The phenomenon, it is well known, is occasioned by the presence of a very minute insect called Medusa Vagera, visible only through means of a microscope.

The late blockade has caused such an accumulation of goods at Hamburgh and Heli, that fifteen steamers are intended to be kept daily employed on that station during the remainder of the season

The mutilated body of Mr. John Rider, late of England, was found near Danville, Kentucky, last month, at the mouth of the river. He had a large sum of money on his person

Lieutenant-Colonel Pascal, of the 11th legion of the National Guard of Paris, has been suspended in his command for two months, for having, in a letter addressed to the Paris papers, attributed the defeat, after the 13th of June, to his well-known devotedness to the Constitution and the Republic

The Swiss authorities have, on the demand of the Baden envoy, consented to an unconditional restitution of the arms and military stores taken into Switzerland by the Gen. an refugees.

A letter from Ems states that Ledru Rollin had passed there on his road to Geneva, where it was said the chief revolutionists of Europe are about to hold a meeting.

General Cavaignac has arrived at the Baths of Bagnes de Luchon (Pyrenees), where he is about to take the waters, and repose himself after the fatigues of the session.

M. Marrast, the last President of the National Assembly, has arrived in the city of Toulouse, where he is to be present at the meeting of the Council-General, of which he is a member. M. Marrast with then proceed to the Baths of the Pyrenees, to conjoin with General Cavaignac and M. Goudchaux, Minister of Finance under the Provisional Government.

The forest of Montrichard, near Blois, the private property of the ex-King, Louis Philippe, has been sold, at his desire, to pay his debts

The French Transports are about to form an agricultural establishment at Martinique. Admiral Bruat has strongly recommended the French Government to give them its support.

Two-thirds of the business portion of the town of Plattsburg, Vermont, United states, have been destroyed by fire, all from the Court-house to the bridge

The cholera has had a very serious effect upon the trade of the North American lakes. Cleveland is full of vessels waiting for men and provisions, and 20 vessels are laid up at Toledo. Up to this time last year, 1,000,000 bushels of wheat had been received at Toledo; this year only 400,000 bush

In Cincinnati, United States, during the prevalence of the cholera, both fowls and dogs have died in immense numbers, as if up on some diseased resembling the cholera; while at Wheeling nearly all the cats have been carried off in a similar manner.

A melancholy tragedy has occurred near Steubenville, Ohio, United States. A Mrs. Rebecca Mitcham has drowned herself and three children in Big Yellow Creek. The cause assigned is cruelty and jealousy on the part of her husband.

A Mrs. Sutton, of Monroe, Georgia, United States, recently destroyed herself and infant by setting her house on fire and perishing in the flames. She had long threatened to do something dreadful, because, she said, "My husband will get drunk and ab se his family."

There were 386 fires in New York during the year ending on the 1st ult.—loss 752,600 dollars.

Wm. Jones, charged with having attempted, at Hereford Cathedral, to break open the box placed in that edifice for the reception of contributions towards the restoration of the cathedral, has been committed for trial

PARIS FASHIONS FOR SEPTEMBER.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR SEPTEMBER.

Fashion seems to be now taking a holiday, like the gay wearers. The autumnal novelties which are in preparation have not yet appeared. Taffetas are greatly in vogue; Chinese crapes, more habillés, also make charming dresses for this season, and rival the muslins lined with light-coloured silks. The bodices are made higher than ever up to the throat, and quite plain. For slight thin persons, the corsages are plaited at the bottom in the form of a fan, but tight on the shoulders. The sleeves also, as may be seen in our Engraving, are very open, falling over a large muslin or tulle sleeve, drawn in at the wrist with an insertion; these large sleeves are trimmed with a pretty puffing, and have an excellent effect. The make of dresses à la Jardinière is also very recherché. In the country, it suits young persons especially: the front of the bodice is low, cut square; is ornamented with five frills one above the other, forming a point; a tucker of plaited muslin is placed inside the corsage; it is trimmed with a ruche round the throat, and the front of the chemisette is closed with studs of precious stones of very small dimensions: thus emeralds, rubies, pearls, topazes, amethysts, should be chosen, according to the colour of the dress, which is made with short sleeves. The sleeves are trimmed with frills of lace like that on the front of the bodice. If an amalgam, but more simple toilette be desired, the frills of the corsage and the sleeves should be made of the same stuff as the dress. These dresses are of elegant simplicity.

The bonnets are worn more open than at any period of the season; they are made of gouit de soie, trimmed with ruches, and on each side are placed tulle rosettes, or bunches of autumnal flowers. Flowers or ruches are worn less inside; the open, balloon shape of the poke leaves the bandeaux and the entire oval of the face uncovered. This fashion is becoming to young, pretty women; but we do not recommend it to others.

Children's costumes are always engaging to mammas, and really now their dresses are charming. For little boys, we see blouses, with square epaulettes, and drawn in at the waist by a belt of Russia leather; a fine cambric plaited shirt, very high, with a simple band round the throat, and cambric puffing sleeves: a felt hat, turned up with a bunch of feathers at the side, completes the dress. Little girls' skirts are made excessively full, only descending to the knees, where they disclose richly-embroidered drawers, trimmed with Valenciennes lace, the bodices, like those of grown persons, are ornamented with frills.

CURIOSITIES.—V.

SILVER BELL, IN THE POSSESSION OF THE EARL OF SHREWSBURY.

This beautiful Hand-bell is probably of Spanish workmanship; and, from the costume of the figure forming the handle, was manufactured at the latter end of the sixteenth or beginning of the seventeenth century. The figure in some points gives the idea of a soldier, especially as he has a morion on his head; but, as a dog is crouched behind the figure, probably a sportsman is intended. The exterior of the bell is formed of acanthus leaves, beautifully wrought, chased, and pierced; and within them is the Bell, of musical sound. This elegant Bel is one of several relics of great interest purchased by the Earl of Shrewsbury of some nuns, who some years since came from the nunnery of Sion, near Lisbon, and who endeavoured, unsuccessfully, to form a sisterhood in England. The nunnery near Lisbon was founded by the sisterhood, who left England at the dissolution of the famed Sion Nunnery, near Brentford; and it is related the keys of the old buildings are still preserved by the sisters.

SILVER BELL, IN THE POSSESSION OF THE EARL OF SHREWSBURY.

THE "BOSPHORUS" SCREW-PROPELLER STEAM-VESSEL.

This fine vessel (built of iron, by Messrs. Mare and Co., Blackwall, with auxiliary engines of 80 horse-power, by Messrs. Maudslay, Sons, and Field) went down the Thames on Wednesday, on her final experimental trial; having on board Captain William Houston Stewart, Captain Sir Frederick Nicolson, Mr. Laming (Managing Director of the General Steam Screw Shipping Company), and a number of shareholders in the Company; Mr. Montgomery Martin, Mr. Honibal (patentee of Porter's anchors), Mr. Joseph Maudslay, Mr. Edw. Luck, Mr. Margetson, Mr. Major, Capt. Halstead (secretary at Lloyd's), Capt. Ford, and a number of influential gentlemen. The Bosphorus left Blackwall shortly after 1 o'clock, and on arriving at Long Reach the time was taken at the measured mile, and the distance found to be accomplished in 5.5 minutes, or 40 seconds less than the lowest rate of speed on her previous trial on the 13th of August; the mean average on the former trial being 9.670 on an average of five runs up and down the measured mile. The engines worked admirably on Wednesday, giving 64 revolutions per minute on the direct action principle, with a double two-feet stroke accomplished by placing the cylinders on an angle or inclined plane, to act in harmony with each other, and give a four-feet stroke in the compass of an engine of two-feet stroke, effecting a great saving of room, an object of great importance in vessels devoted to commercial purposes. The Bosphorus proceeded as far as Sheerness, to test her capabilities in deep water, and the result being satisfactory, she turned round, at 4.10 P.M., to return to Blackwall.

After a cold collation, provided for the occasion, several loyal toasts were drunk with enthusiasm, and the success of the Bosphorus intended to run betwixt Liverpool, Malta, and Constantinople, toasted, with every wish for the prosperity of the company, who had done so much for accelerating the voyages. Mr. Laming entered into the details of the advantages to be derived by the introduction of the screw propeller, and explained the difficulties they had to contend with, which had been in a great measure removed by the perseverance of Mr. F. P. Smith, and they were at last likely to be remunerated for the exertions they had made to give an impetus to the means of sending commercial articles to foreign ports in a comparatively limited period. Mr. Laming concluded by proposing the "Health of Captain William Houston Stewart, and Captain Sir Frederick Nicolson," of her Majesty's Royal Navy, who had honoured them with their company, for which Captain Houston Stewart thanked the company in very appropriate terms.

The following are the principal dimensions of the Bosphorus:—Length, 175 feet; breadth, 25 feet; tons, 231; horse-power, 80; diameter of cylinders, 36; stroke, 24. Draft when on trial: Forward, 6 feet 8 inches; aft, 9 feet 6 inches; mean, 8 feet 1 inch; by the stern, 2 feet 10 inches. Screw, 14 inches out of the water; diameter of screw, 10 feet 6 inches; pitch, 18 feet 6 inches; mean revolutions, 62.2. Length of engine-room, 30 feet; capacity, 20 feet wide by 8 feet fore and aft; 6 feet high; coals, 150 tons. Speed of screw, 11.348; ship in knots, 1.669 or 14.7 per cent.

"THE BOSPHORUS" SCREW-PROPELLER STEAM VESSEL.

THE CARNARVON REGATTA.

CARNARVON REGATTA.

MONDAY.

THIS regatta (under the presidency of the Right Hon. Lord Willoughby d Eresby) commenced on Monday morning with great spirit. The weather, though cloudy, continued fine throughout; and there was a brisk wind from the north-west.

The first prize was the CARNARVON CUP, value forty guineas. A time race: half a minute per ton allowed. The following yachts competed:—

Name.	Port.	Tonnage.	Owner.
Queen of the Ocean ..	Liverpool ..	49	Com. Littledale
Echo	.. ..	36	J. Mills, Esq.
Drift	.. ..	55	— Hope, Esq
Vision	Preston ..	44	T. B. Chaloner, Esq
Tartar	Cowes ..	36	W. H. Davies, Esq.

After a spirited contest—in which the Drift and Vision were the chief opponents—the former came in the winner, the latter having met with a slight accident.

The next race was for the TRADERS' PURSE: first prize, £10; second ditto, £5. Four boats competed—the Vulcan, Pidpot, Industry, and Adventure—all of Carnarvon. The Vulcan, 1, and the Adventure, 2, were the successful competitors.

The SAILING-BOATS' PURSE of Seven Sovereigns was competed for by thirteen open boats, and was won by the Rover, of Beaumaris.

The APPRENTICES' PURSE—first prize £3, second ditto £2—in boats, was won by the Brereton and Snake respectively.

The LLANCIAN ERYRI PURSE—first prize 8 sovereigns, second ditto 5 sovereigns—in boats, was run for by five competitors. The Fanny, of Beaumaris, bore off the first prize, and the Prince of Wales, of Carnarvon, the second.

A scullers' race and duck hunt succeeded, followed by a swimming match.

After the sports, a dinner took place at the Uxbridge Arms Hotel, followed by a concert in the evening; and the proceedings of the day terminated by the various yachts being brilliantly illuminated.

TUESDAY.

The weather this day was very wet, notwithstanding which a large concourse of people assembled.

The first race was for the PRINCE OF WALES'S CUP, value thirty guineas; a time race; half a minute per ton allowed. Five yachts competed—Queen of the Ocean, Vision, Echo, Mermaid, and Tartar; the Drift, the winner of the Carnarvon Cup, being excluded. After a sharp contest of about four hours, the Vision came in the winner.

For the MENAI CUP, value twenty guineas, a time race, the following yachts competed:—

Name.	Port.	Tons.	Owner.
Bart	Carnarvon	19	J. G. Griffith, Esq
Ranger	Liverpool	12	T. W. Tetley, Esq
Jilt	Liverpool	19	— Rushton, Esq.

The Jilt, took the lead, and kept it some time; but the Ranger ultimately got ahead, and won by two minutes.

The CONSOLATION PURSE, for the beaten open boats of the preceding day, was won by the Britannia, J. Francis, Esq., of the Menai Bridge.

Four boats competed for the WATERMAN'S PURSE; and the St. Helen won a first prize of £3, and the Brereton a second ditto of £1.

A duck hunt, and a representation of Neptune with his trident, closed the proceedings.

During both days the Straits were covered with yachts and craft of all descriptions.

In the evening a regatta ball was held.

RAM'S-HORN BRIDGE NEAR TAUNTON, SOMERSET.

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

RAM'S HORN BRIDGE, NEAR TAUNTON, SOMERSET.

What care so simply is that bath not heard the sound
Of TAUNTON'S faithful Dame? not match'd by any ground.

THUS sings Drayton, in his "Polyalbion," of the beautiful Vale of Taunton, one of the fairest features of which is the rural lane that forms a retired and shady walk, beloved by the botanist, from Bishop's Hull to the little stream which is spanned by the antique arch figured in the above cut.

"Ah, zur," said a good-humoured labourer who planted himself on the bridge while we made the above memorandum, between five and six o'clock on a summer morning, "Ah, zur, this wur here avore Monmouth, I warrant ye." To which we cordially agreed, mentally adding, "Aye, and before William the Norman to boot, for it is evidently a bit of Roman masonry;" and this opinion, backed by the general belief of the neighbourhood, was confirmed by the discovery of a bridge corresponding in structure, which had remained buried by the brambles and rank herbage on the Roman paved way leading to Bridgewater.

This latter bridge retains its perfect form, while the RAM'S HORN BRIDGE, so called from its twisted figure, has assumed the appearance of an irregular pointed arch, through pressure from the bank on which its piers are constructed.

It cannot be asserted that there is any visible connexion between this site and the paved way we have mentioned, and which is about half a mile distant from the RAM'S HORN BRIDGE; but the evident similarity in point of construction, observable between the two, renders it unquestionable, that, if not originally standing on the same line of road, they may, at any rate, be looked upon as the work of the same hands, and may fairly be considered to have held their ground from the time when this part of Britain was in possession of the road-making and bridge-building Romans.

ROYAL NORTHERN AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

THE fourth annual exhibition of live stock, implements of husbandry, dairy produce, &c., under the auspices of the Royal Northern Agricultural Society—an association which embraces the counties of Aberdeen, Banff, and Kincardine, together with the eastern division of Forfar—took place at Aberdeen, on Thursday, the 23rd ult.

The show-yard was opened for the reception of competitors' specimens by five o'clock in the morning. Before seven the whole of the stock, &c. was entered. The judges then went round, instituted an examination, and made their award. At nine o'clock the yard was thrown open to the public, on the payment of an admission fee; and from that time till the close of the exhibition it was thronged by an eager crowd, who inspected the animals and utensils with much interest and minuteness. The expectation had prevailed that his Royal Highness Prince Albert, who had lately consented to become the patron of the Society, would be present. That, however, turned out to be erroneous. The influx of visitors was immense.

THE CATTLE SHOW OF THE ROYAL NORTHERN AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY, AT ABERDEEN.

The number of cattle was scarcely so numerous as on some previous occasions. Various causes may be attributed for this, chief among which are the prevalence of disease, giving rise to a dread of infection, and a feeling on the part of breeders that it was totally useless to send forward any but first-class animals—the experience of previous years having served to convince them that such a one and the remotest chance of gaining a prize.

Still, the show of Aberdeenshire cattle, both as regards number and quality, was such as entirely to sustain the fame of the district as a cattle-breeding county; and if, as regards other breeds, the number exhibited were not very great, they at least were the admiration of all competent to pronounce an opinion by their appearance and character.

The show of horses was very great. The same remark applies to the exhibition of sheep and pigs in dairy. The number of pleasure pigs brought forward was very large. The exhibition of dairy produce was small.

The fun incident to such bleed, whether new inventions entirely, or merely improvements on those previously in use, showed a remarkable combination of scientific knowledge, mechanical skill, and practical experience, and formed a striking contrast to the rude instruments employed in the early days of agriculture

Mr. William Crosskill, of Beverley, displayed numerous specimens of implements prepared by him, which attracted much attention.

We on in not to omit mentioning that several specimens of glazed and vitrified stoneware pipes, from the Port Dundas Pottery Company, were on the ground, and were much admired, as was also the case with a variety of specimens of their manufacture, from the warehouse of Messrs. C. D. Young and Co., fire-workers, St. Enoch's square.

The customary dinner took place in the elegant new hall of the Royal Hotel, where covers were laid for nearly 400.

The Right Hon. the Earl of Aberdeen occupied the chair; and Sir James Carnegie, Bart., Sir J. D. H. Elphinstone, Mr. Lumsden of Auchindoor, and Mr. Innes of Raemoir acted as croupiers. The chairman was supported on the right by Viscount Thurso, Captain Holland, Provost of Cruickston, Mr. Grant, the Member, Mr. Paul of Banchory, and Captain Hawkins of Dunnideen; and on the left by the Right Hon. the Earl of Kintore, Mr. Bannerman of Crimonmogate, Admiral the Hon. Captain Gordon, M.P., the Hon. A. Gordon, Ballie Harry, Mr. Smith of Hareerag. A variety of toasts were drunk, and the evening passed off with great spirit.

The Show was held on the Links, at Aberdeen, and is depicted in our view, which includes the Grand Stand, which was, however, closed, from its safety being doubted; the long building with a chimney is the Banner Mill.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The Turf Calendar for the coming week embraces meetings in various parts of the United Kingdom, beginning on Monday, and extending up to Thursday. That our readers may have no difficulty in making their election, always providing that they will be in "the vein," we give the days on which they commence:—Monday: Cheadle (Staff) and Dawley. Tuesday: Warwick, Beccles, and Wimslow. We can strongly recommend a visit to Warwick; the sport will be first-rate, and capital quarters may be found at Leamington. Wednesday: Morpeth, Weymouth, Breconshire, and the Curragh. Thursday: Abingdon, (matched by a few spirited inhabitants from the very jaws of death), Barnet, Roch ster, Lichfield, and the W-stern Meeting (Scotland). The meetings have thrown no light on coming events: Egham, owing more to the fineness of the weather than the intrinsic attraction of the pr ze, went off with a fair amount of success. In our next we shall have to refer to Doncaster. Meanwhile, it may not be amiss to state that the public will be enabled, for the first time, to proceed direct to the scene of action by the Great Northern Railway, and Eastern Counties, to Peterborough, and on through Lincolnshire and Hertford. Those who have experienced the annoyance, fatigue, and confusion of the old round-about journey, will know how to estimate the new route, by which they will save nearly three hours of time and one-third of the expense.

The Aquatic appointments for next week include the Lambeth Oars Match and Wevm uth Regatta on Monday, Mortlake Regatta on Tuesday, and the Cinque Ports on Wednesday.

The Cricketers' register embraces matches in various parts of the country; the following will be the most generally attractive: - Moodsty, t Sheffield, 11 of England against 15 of Sheffield; a match at Hanstead; and one at Cambridge, between that city and Brunswick (with Lillywhite); and one at Rochester, between Hampshire and Middlesex. To-day, the Kennington Oval against the South Lambeth Club. Wednesday (also at the Oval), the Paragon and Phœnix Clubs. Thursday, at Swaffham, 22 of C. and Brandon against the County of Norfolk; and the Surrey and Camden Clubs, at Kennington Oval.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—The modicum of business transacted this afternoon was remarkable only for its influence on the position of Fernhill for the Leamington, and of both the favourites for the St. Leger, the former being an immense "pot," and both the latter losing ground. Beyond these movements the betting was as uninteresting as it was dull:—

LEAMINGTON STAKES.
7 to 4 agst Fernhill	10 to 1 agst Sailor-boy
7 to 1 —— Coalsgwood	10 to 1 —— The Dart
AT EPSOM.
7 to 4 o Flying Dutchman	10 to 1 agst Oil Jan Tucker
10 to 1 agst Dod	33 to 1 —— Herbert
CAMBRIDGESHIRE.
40 to 1 agst Peep-o'-Day Boy	50 to 1 agst Sugarcandy
50 to 1 —— Newton Fly	50 to 1 —— Ben Hall (t)
50 to 1 —— Ellesdale (t)	50 to 1 —— The Car (t)
CAMBRIDGESHIRE.
50 to 1 agst Gleadower (t)	50 to 1 agst Cain (t)
50 to 1 —— Kennington (t)	50 to 1 —— Bluster (t)
DERBY.
33 to 1 agst Bee, to Epirote (t)	30 to 1 agst Mildiver (t)

15 to 1 agst Tadmor (t)	50 to 1 agst Canezou (t)
50 to 1 —— Kennington (t)	50 to 1 —— Bluster (t)
DERBY.
33 to 1 agst Bee, to Epirote (t)	30 to 1 agst Mildiver (t)

50 to 1 agst Sugarcandy	50 to 1 agst Elishron
66 to 1 —— Bobs

THURSDAY.—No attendance.

LATEST BETTING AT EGHAM

LEAMINGTON STAKES.
3 to 1 agst Fernhill	15 to 1 agst Hagley
6 to 1 —— Sotterley	20 to 1 —— Sailor-boy
ST LEGER.
7 to 4 on Flying Dutchman	20 to 1 agst Stanwyck (t)
10 to 1 agst Dhel	20 to 1 —— Oil Jan Tucker

LONDON YACHT CLUB.

The contest for the London Yacht Club Challenge Cup, to be won two years consecutively before it becomes the absolute property of the holder, took place on Monday. It was a fine morning, and a large number being allowed by the barges to the smaller craft; and the distances contested was from the Holly-house, Blackwall-reach, down to a boat off Tilbury-fort, and back.

The following had been entered, but did not all take their places:—

Yachts	Tons	Owners
Moor Park	18	Mr. E Brewes
Diana	12	—— Ed Rose
Rival	10	—— J T. Hulme
Mavernerck	8	—— Morris
Harard	6	—— Acklame and Charles

The start took place under the direction of Mr. T. J. Howes, the commodore, at a quarter to 12, when the Hazard unfortunately carried away her peak halyard-, and could not get her mainsail set until below Blackwall. The Moor Park took the lead at starting, kept it all the way down, and rounded the flag-buoy off Tilbury-fort at 18 min. past 2; the Hazard at 23 min. past. The Moor Park increased her lead considerably in beating up to windward, the wind being at W.N.W., and finally passed to the southward of the winning buoy at 41 min. 15 sec. past 7; the Hazard at 38 min. 30 sec. past, and the Diamond at 57 min. past. The owner of the Moor Park, which showed her great superiority to windward, becomes the holder of the cup for one year.

GRAVESEND REGATTA.

The annual regatta, in honour of his Royal Highness Prince Albert's birthday, came off on Monday. The Town and Terrace Piers, with every other available spot where a view could be commanded of the racing, were crowded with anxious spectators. The contest was for a new boat and various other prizes, by six free watermen scullers, in five heats. The distance extended from Rosherville Gardens to the Preventive Yacht, below Wales's hotel, and to the round and the following entered the contest, viz:—

Wm Ian Neale (Red), Thomas Waller (Pink), Edward Coy (Green), John Jenner (Purple), Edward Hammond (Yellow), William Swestenham (Light Blue)

FINAL HEAT.

E Hammond	(Yellow) 1
W. Neale	(Red) 0

Red, at the fourth stroke, broke his larboard stopper, but still gallantly kept up the contest. After the first half-mile, yellow had it all his own way, and won by five lengths.

DINNER TO THE DIRECTORS OF THE SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY.—On Wednesday evening a sumptuous entertainment was given by the mayor, corporation, and inhabitants of Gravesend, to the directors of the South Eastern Railway, to celebrate the opening of that company's North Kent line to Gravesend. About 190 gentlemen sat down to dinner at the Clifton Hotel.

FEES ON PATENTS.—Extract from a return of the House of Commons from the Lord Chancellor's office of fees on patents, paid over to the Clerk of the Hanaper, for the years mentioned by the Master of the Rolls:—

1838	..	£70 0 6
1839	..	84 1 4
1840	..	62 6 5
1841	..	78 14 4
1842	..	55 6 8
1843	..	3,21 1 0
1844	..	147 14 4
1845	..	47 1 0 4
1846	..	3 16 14 4
1847	..	61 0 0
Total ten years' income (exclusive of church livings)	..	£34,694 0 4

ANTI-CHOLERA DIET.

We quote the following from "The Modern Housewife; or, Ménagère," by A. Soyer, just published:—

I'm following are a series of receipts which I have submitted to some scientific men, which, after a few corrections on their part, have been pronounced good, and which may be taken during the illness by those who have the least tendency to, or the Cholera.

TO BOIL RICE. Well wash half a pound of rice in cold water, which throw away, put to boil half a gall n of water, in which put your rice, boil six minutes; put on a sieve, batter s ghtly a stewpan, put in the rice, cover over, set in the open fifteen minutes, or near a fire; it will then be white and very digestible, still astringent, and every grain detached from each other; if no oven or stewpan handy, boil in water fifteen minutes, throw on a sieve, let drain a short time, serve on a dish, and eat plain, with salt, or as follows:—

When the rice is done either way, add half a teaspoonful of salt, a quarter of an ounce of brown sugar, a little cayenne pepper, one ounce of salt butter, mix lightly with a fork, and serve very hot; in case of slight derangement increase the pepper.

Another.—Put in a teaspoonful of curry powder or paste, and serve.

BARLEY FOR.—Break two ounces of pearl barley in a mill, stir well, add the rice, put in a pie-dish, bake twenty minutes; serve with meat.

RICE A L'INDIENNE.—Cut two ounces of lean bacon in small dice, put in a stewpan, with a little butter and half a middle-sized onion, stir over the fire with a wooden spoon, add your rice ready boiled, season as any of the above, but less salt; add a spoonful of curry, no batter, mix well; serve very hot.

MUTTON A L'INDIENNE.—Put in a stewpan one ounce of butter, and one pound of lean mutton (all meat), cut in dice, set on the fire, stir with a wooden spoon till hardly any gravy remains, add a tablespoonful of curry powder, and the same quantity of flour, stir well together, add a pint of milk, stir well, add the rice, put in a pie-dish, bake twenty minutes; serve with meat.

RICE A L'INDIENNE.—Cut two ounces of lean bacon in small dice, put in a stewpan, with a little butter and half a middle-sized onion, stir over the fire with a wooden spoon, add your rice ready boiled, season as any of the above, but less salt; add a spoonful of curry, no batter, mix well; serve very hot.

MUTTON A L'INDIENNE.—Put in a stewpan one ounce of butter, and one pound of lean mutton (all meat), cut in dice, set on the fire, stir with a wooden spoon till hardly any gravy remains, add a tablespoonful of curry powder, and the same quantity of flour, stir well together, add a pint of milk, stir well, add the rice, put in a pie-dish, bake twenty minutes; serve with meat.

Another.—Put in a teaspoonful of curry powder or paste, and serve.

BARLEY FOR.—Break two ounces of pearl barley in a mill

NEW BOOKS, &c.

THE CHRISTIAN SCHOLAR.—Thoughts on the Study of the Classics, in Letters addressed to a Young Man. By the Author of "The Gentleman." Foolscap 8vo, cloth, 10s 6d; morocco, 14s; or bds. d by Railway 7s 6

THE BAPTISTERY; or, the Way of Entering aptism: In the Manner of "The Cathedral." Third Edition. 8vo, cloth, 12s; morocco & 18s. Also the Second Edition, 8vo, 9s; or bound by Railway 7s 6

Oxford: JOHN HENRY PARKER; and 377, Strand, London.

OF the IMITATION of CHRIST. Four Books. By the Many A. KEMPIS. With new Translations, Introductions, and Notes. Second Edition, revised and corrected. Fcap. 8vo, cloth, 5s; morocco, 8s 6d; or bound by Railway 4s 6d

Oxford: JOHN HENRY PARKER; and 377, Strand, London.

With numerous Engravings of Ancient Tomb-stones,

A MANUAL for the STUDY of SEPULCHRAL MONUMENTS. By the Rev. EDWARD L. CUTTS, B.A. 8vo, illustrated by upwards of 300 Engravings, 18s

Oxford: JOHN HENRY PARKER; and 377, Strand, London; Of whom may also be had,

A BOOK of CRAYON, PENCIL, and PEN-AND-INK SKETCHES. By the Rev. EDWARD L. CUTTS, B.A. With 12 Coloured Engravings. 8vo, 10s

THE CATHEDRAL; or, The Catholic and Apostolic Church in England. Thoughts in Verse on Ecclesiastical Subjects, selected and arranged so as to correspond with the Office of the Church throughout the Christian Year. Fourth edition, 18mo, 3 vols, 6s 6d cloth, morocco, 8s; bound by Hayday 8s. Also in Cap 8vo, 2 vols, cloth, 12s; morocco, 16s; bound by Hayday, 16s

Oxford: JOHN HENRY PARKER; and 377, Strand, London.

Foolscap 8vo, price 3s 6d, in green and gold binding,

SUMMER EXCURSIONS on the BANKS of the LAKES DUMBLE and MILLAR. Containing Small new and pleasant Information interesting to the Country Resident and Occasional Town Recreationist. Illustrated with 140 Engravings, from Original Sketches.

W. S. ORR and Co., Paternoster-row.

Just published, with an elegant Frontispiece, fcap. 8vo. 3s cloth,

RHYMES of ROYALTY; or, the History of England in Verse, from the Norman Conquest to the Reign of Victoria, with a copious Appendix, containing the characters of the Sovereigns, and the leading events of each Reign; and dedicated to Junior persons in the study of History. By S. BLEWETT.

GRANT and GRIFFITH, one door of St. Paul's Churchyard.

MAN: BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED.

Now ready, Royal 4to, price 1s; on tinted paper, 2s 6d,

MAN: from the Cradle to the Grave. Being a Book for Boys and Girls: their Duties and Destinies. In a Series of Seven Original Designs on Wood, by John Gilbert, Marshall, Claxton, and D. H. M'Clean engravers, by Thomas Gilks, with an Introduction by W. Brede. London: W. H. SMITH and SON, 36, Strand. Edinburgh: J. MENZIES. Dublin: J. MCGLASHAN

Just published, price 2s,

INSANITY TESTED by SCIENCE, and shewn to be always accompanied by Organic Disease of the Brain; and, consequently, that the characters of Criminals are not to be supposed.

By C. M. BURNETT, M.D.

London: SAMPL. HOLDSWORTH, 32 Piccadilly.

LE COCQ'S ON AIR AND WATER CURE.

Just pub. lished, Second Edition, post 8vo, cloth, price 7s,

THE WATER CURE in CHRONIC DISEASE: an Exposition of the Causes, Progress, and Termination of various Forms of Illness, and of the Modes of Treatment, Hygienic, Dietetic, and Medicinal, adopted at the Establishment of Graefenberg, in Silesia, and the results of their treatment by Water and other Hygienic Means. By JAMES M. GULLY, M.D., Fellow of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society, London.

JOHN S. CHURCHILL, Princes-street, Soho.

WEDDING PRESENT.

Nineteenth Thousand, cloth, gilt edges, in white silk, 2s 6d,

COUNSELS to a NEWLY MARRIED PAIR, or, Nuptial Sunshine to Husbands and Wives. A Companion to "Home," and a Remembrancer of Love.

By the Rev JOHN MORISON D.D.

London: JOHN SNOW, Paternoster-row.

This day is published, Part I. price 2s 6d, to be completed in Four Parts, each containing about 100 pages, demy 8vo, with numerous Illustrations, and a Map and upwards of Fifty Engravings on Wood, to be published Quarterly, EGYPT: a POPULAR and FAMILIAR DESCRIPTION of the LAND, PEOPLE, and the DUCE With an Introductory Sketch of the Nile. By the Rev. THOMAS BOSE, M.A.

London: JOHN SNOW, Paternoster-row.

Just published, in post 8vo, cloth lettered, 7s 6d,

AMERICAN SCENES and CHRISTIAN SLAVERY. A Year's Tour of Four Thousand Miles in the United States. By CHARLES DICKENS, minister of Missions to Canada, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, &c. "I am impossible to do justice to such an approaching up-hill task: it must be read to be appreciated."—Christian Witness. "Mr. Dickens has given the most intelligent persons more information on the subject than they ever before possessed on it, and for ever."—Christian Witness. "The only page that will be perused with any feeling of the utmost will be the last, to thank God that the Feast is at end."—Christian Witness.

London: JOHN SNOW, Paternoster-row.

In 8vo, with an Engraving of a Roman Casserium from Pompeii, and 2 Plans, cloth, 8s; or post 8s,

AN ACCOUNT of WALTON and WEYBRIDGE, Chesar Camps the Passage of Cesar at Coway-Stakes, and the Graves in the Lammas Park. With the Text of Cesar, Book I. Section 5 of Bonnus, B. Section 35, &c.

"...complete, clear, and neat. Three useful Maps."—Athenæum. "...ingenious and connected with the subject that has been passed during the present century. Carefully, as it does, a correct notion of the law on the subject, it is essential that, into the though large table, should be found an extensive acquaintance among the public at large."—London: JAMES GILBERT, 49 Paternoster-row. Orders received by all Booksellers, Stationers, &c.

Just out, price 6s,

PRACTICE in GERMAN, adapted for Self-Instruction. By FALCK-ADAMS.

By the same Author,

GERMAN in ONE VOLUME. Second Edition, price 6s, with Key, 8s.

WB TIAKER and Co., Ave Maria-lane.

Just published, in 12mo, pp. 150, price 3s 6d, cloth,

THE CONSECUTIVE ETYMOLOGICAL SPELLING BOOK; combining, in addition to their Orthography and Accentuation, the etymology and primary signification of Meanings of more than 30,000 of the most useful English words, and facilitating a key to many more, with a Preliminary Lesson on Etymology, and a Dictionary of Words on the similarly-sounding principle of Heterographic words, on a plan calculated to exercise the Judgment and aid the Memory of the learner. By JAMES A. CHRISTIE, CLERK of the Parish of the Duke of Bedford's Estate, Milton Abbas, Dorset.

London: LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, and LONGMANS, Paternoster-row.

THE PRACTICAL MECHANIC'S JOURNAL.—PART XVIII., for SEPTEMBER 1st, Price 1s, Enlarged, to go free by post, 1s 1d, contains—Improvements in the Day ...rash Gear, and other Cars, Mr. Bird and the New Houses of Parliament, Bakewell's Wet and Drying Tangent, Progress of the Britannia Tubular Bridge, Government Reports and the Orders for the Navy, On the Gas Furnace and Projection of the Paradise of Steams, Mons. Arbel's Sliding-Gear Patent, Packing: sun, and other Subjects, Improved Reciprocating Steam-engine, Patent Laws—Report of Government Commissioners, Holborn and Chelsea Fire-Cocks, Wood's Tile Machine, Walker's Barometer, The cinema of Steam Agriculture, Electro-Magnetic Notes on the Exhibition of Hen. Bell, With prize-...ings, Full Scientific Notices, Lists of all Patents and Registered Designs, and Copious Reviews of new Mechanical Works. Illustrated by a Copper-plate Engraving of "Brown's Self-Registering Thermometer and Anemometer, and numerous Wood-cuts.

Parker, Edge, 59, Buchanan-street, Glasgow. London: HENRY, 58 Cheapside.

Just published, price only 1s 6d, Second Edition,

GURNEY'S System of SHORTHAND Simplified and Improved: by which any person may teach himself the art, first of short hand Writing in a few Hours, without the aid of a Master; and with Rapidity and Precision, with a little practice to follow it speedily, and all reverses may be read with the greatest certainty—a ...ecord of facts not to be equalled by any other System of Shorthand. ...ing is a very simple and efficient system of Shorthand Writing.

London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co. Stationers' Hall-court. ...ld of all Booksellers.

...t post,

THE LECTURE on the HYGEIAN SYSTEM of JAMES MORISON, the HYGEIST, delivered at the Public Hall, Preston, on the 1st of August, 1849, by the Hygeist, containing the most important principles of the Hygeian System, and the only true method of preserving Health, Nevermind, combined with the Hygeian Medicines, and Hygeian Agents for the sale of Morison's Vegetable Universal Medicine throughout the world

IMPORTANT TO BOOK-BUYERS.—Just published,

WM. MILLER'S CATALOGUE, PART 38, containing a good assortment of Works in most departments of Literature, chiefly second-hand, at very Low Prices, for Cash; being a selection from his extensive and varied Stock. Gratis on application. Sent free on receipt of one penny stamp.—3, Upper East Smithfield, Tower-hill, London.

SOYER'S NEW WORK ON COOKERY.

THE MODERN HOUSEWIFE or MÉNAGÈRE: containing Directions for Family Management in all its branches, and Anglo-Indian Diet, is now publishing, price 7s 6d.

Simpkin, Marshall and Co., and all Booksellers.

SEA WEEDS.—Instructions to Find, Preserve, and Class them, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 2d, monthly.

London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN.

WAXEN FLOWERS.—Instructions how to Model them, by a PRACTICAL BOTANIST, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 2d, monthly.—London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN.

LEAVES of PLANTS.—How to take Impressions of them, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 2d, monthly.

London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN.

WASHING WITHOUT BOILING the CLOTHES.—Mr. Twentyman's ingenious Method of Washing Without Hard Labour, in the FAMILY FRIEND, No. 7, price 2d.

London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN.

MRS. WARREN'S SUPERB DESIGNS in FANCY WORK, in FAMILY FRIEND, price 2d, monthly.

London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN.

THE FIRST NINE NUMBERS of the FAMILY FRIEND may be had, price 1s 6d, in limp cloth, or 2s 6d, in cloth boards.

London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN; and all Booksellers.

PRIZE ENIGMA!—The Editor of the FAMILY FRIEND offers a prize of FIVE POUNDS to the person who may first correctly solve a Poetical Enigma contained in the Family Friend, for September, price 2d.

London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN; and all Booksellers.

ITALIAN OPERAS, 2s, each, full music Size, "LA Regina," "Lucia," "La Figlia," "Don Giovanni," "Sonnambula," "Lucia," "Le Prigioniere," "Norma," and 30 others in catalogue sent to THE PIANISTA, 2s each; post free, 30 stamps.

THE PIANISTA, 192, Piccadilly, London.

NEW SONG.—"YES! I HAVE DARED TO LOVE HER!" by the Author of "Will you love me then as now?" "I dreamt I dwelt in marble halls," "The Rose," &c., price 1s (sent postage free).—This Song will be the greatest favourite of the set. The melody and words are of the most pleasing and effective character, and will be considered a great addition to their most attractive.—London: DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

SIXTEENTH EDITION of HAMILTON'S MODERN INSTRUCTIONS for the PIANOFORTE; Illustrated by LEARNY. Containing all the requisite precepts and examples on the Pianoforte, from the First Rudiments to the Acquirement of the Art. Also, favourite Airs 44 exercises, 12 chants, 4 sacred song, and 3 anthems, price only 4s. 8 Dictionary of 3500 musical terms, 30th edition, price 1s. 6d. Hamilton's Thorough-bass, 1s. 6d. Hamilton's Art of Modern Grammar, 3s. 6d. And a new edition of CLARKE'S CATE HUSH of the Nursery Rhymes of Ages of Life: illustrated by Absolon, H. Cooke and Co., 6, New Burlington-street, Publishers to the Queen.

ROBERT COCKS & CO.'S PIANOFORTES, 6½ Octaves, with Trichord Treble, Check Action, Fine Tone, and Elegant Appearance, 30 Guineas; or with Compensation Action, and Trichord Treble throughout, 35 Guineas. Lists and Drawings sent free on application. 6, New Burlington-street, Publishers to the Queen.

A LADY, who resides in a healthy suburb of Dublin, and has a Cow in full milk, wishes to meet with a Lady who would find her 6 Guineas per week, and Board, Lodging, &c. Address, Mrs. Cowan, 2, Ely-place, Dublin.

A SOLICITOR in an ASSIZE TOWN in Ireland, wishes to take an ARTICLED PUPIL, who would be received into the house, and be treated in every domestic comfort. A remunerating Premium required as ...dress, A. Z., at Messrs. Waterlow and Sons, Law Stationers, Birchin-lane, London.

ROYAL HOTEL, LOWESTOFT.—GEORGE ...W ROUSE respectfully informs the Nobility, Gentry, and Visitors to Lowestoft and its vicinity, that the above HOTEL is NOW OPEN, and he trusts that every department is well be found to merit the support of the public in the kingdom. Hot, Cold, and shower Baths of Fresh and Salt Water, Look-up Coach-house, Flys, and Post-horses.

GUY'S.—THE MEDICAL SESSION COMMENCES on MONDAY, October 1st. The Introductory Address will be delivered at Two o'clock precisely on that morning by DR. ADDISON. Gentlemen intending to enter themselves are requested to apply to the undersigned on or before that day. Every information will be given as to Fees, Scholarships, Prizes, Hospital Practice, &c. Gentlemen entering at this School have the privileges of a student.

The Physicians, Surgeons, Assistants, and Resident Obstetric Clerks are resident, according to merit, from those students who have a desire to accept them.

W. CARSON, Apothecary to Guy's Hospital, is authorised to enter the names of students, and to give further particulars if required.

NEW ZEALAND COMPANY'S SHIP.—The fine Coppered, Copper-fastened, A1, 400 tons, Burthen, ...ed in the London Docks, will on departure for the Company's Settlements, from the Port of London, on MONDAY, the 1st of November, take a limited number of Cabin Passengers.

Apply at the N. w Zealand House, or to Mr. JOSEPH STAYNER, Broker, 19, Fenchurch-street.

By order of the Court,

THOMAS CUDLIP, HARRINGTON

New Zealand House, 9, Bread-street Buildings,

London, 18th August, 1849.

NEW ZEALAND COMPANY.—LAND.—The Company possesses about Seven Thousand Acres of Land in the Settlements of Wellington, Nelson, New Plymouth, and Wanganui.

Land selected for Purchase, in Town Allotments of a Quarter Acre, Small Sale, in Suburban, of Ten Acres, and Rural of Twenty-five Acres each, will be conveyed to purchasers, to the quantity of Parcels and Land by each Applicant.

The Terms and further particulars may be obtained at the New Zealand House, London, or the Gough Office, 27, South Hanover-street, Edinburgh.

By order of the Court of Directors,

THOMAS CUDLIP, HARRINGTON.

New Zealand House, 9, Bread-street, Buildings,

London, 18th August, 1849.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the usual DIVIDEND of five per cent. (less income tax) will be payable on the shares of the Society will be PAYABLE at this office on and after MONDAY, the 3rd of September next.

By ORDER of the Board,

ARNOLD WHITE.—In addition to assurances on healthy lives, this Society grants assurances on the lives of persons in any state of ill health, deviating from the healthy standard, on the payment of a premium proportioned to the increased risk.

Further information can be obtained (free of expense) by addressing a letter to

G. H. FINCHAM, Resident Secretary.

No. 7, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

THE LIVERPOOL and LONDON FIRE and LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

Offices—Water-street, Liverpool, 3, Chancerie-row, Manchester-house, and 26, Nicholas-street, Waterloo-place, London.

This Institution, which is entirely proprietary, has the Security of the Subscribed Capital of £500,000, Surplus Funds, £10,000 Income, £120,000 per annum, and the liability of the proprietors to this amount is unlimited. In agency of this business is specially to this end, that persons who prefer security to speculation, and the moderate profits will bear comparison with those actually declared by other Companies.

Fire assurances on the usual terms of established offices.

By order of the Board of Directors,

RENJ. REDMAN, Secretary to the Company.

Fire Office, 3, Chancerie-lane, London.

TO LADIES.—On the drive, the ride, the promenade, or at Gardens excursion, Ladies should ever be provided with the GOLDEN HAIR WASH, which will in a few days infallibly restore to the coy tresses, clustering ringlets, the sound of luxuriant and redundant curls, allaying all irritability of heat, and must surely effect the pleasing sensation attendant on restored elasticity and a healthful state of the skin. The numerous varieties of extensive empirics, including allegations, and deceptions, by before the application, are given place to delicate sensations and transparency of the skin and complexion. In cases of members or scraps of locusts the virtues have long and extensively been acknowledged. As a Beware of spurious Imitations, and see that the signature of the Inventor, Mr. ...entley, adheres to the wrapper, which is signed in the usual manner. ...ld by all Perfumers, Hairdressers, and Chemists, at 3s 6d and 5s 6d per bottle; and by the Inventor, 26, Hatton-garden, London; at 10s 6d per bottle.

INDIA, AUSTRALIA, CAPE of GOOD HOPE, &c.—The Cabin Passengers SHIPPING BRANCH of W. SHARP and Co. 85 and 86, Gracechurch-street, as Insurance Office for Officers, Cadets, Civilians, and Cabin Passengers proceeding to India, Australia, the Cape, &c.

...ong their passages, give certain valuable information, such as to the peculiar dangers and arrival of ships, their forward, first cabin, through their agents, small stores for their use ...ers to assist in ...they give grants on Australia, at sixty days' sight, of £100 for one, £150 paid here. They advise pay for their ...ers, and their parties ...arranging their Outfit ...s Agent and Co. benefit by the percentage which is now commonly paid to persons "who introduce passengers," &c.—The Fire grants fitting-out Branch is at 4, Bishopsgate-street (opposite London Tavern), where a comfortable Fit-out for sale or female (including bedding) may be procured for Four Guineas.—A Branch of each of the above at St. George's-crescent, Liverpool.

VINS DE LA REYNA SHERRY, PALE, dry, and perfect, of exquisite flavour, and pure lasty delicate, 36s per dozen, cash. Carriage paid. No stamps for passages or bottles.—PEARSE and HAN-ON, 9, Bush-lane, Cannon-street, London, Agents. D. N. E. and Co.'s Cognac.

PALE FRENCH COGNAC BRANDY, of the finest flavour, one fine quality, 42 years in stock, at one of dozen bottles (equal to two gallons) at £2 ... Wine Merchants, No. 152, Regent-street, St. James's. Established 36 years.

DANCING TAUGHT in the most fashionable style by MR. and MRS. GEORGE BARNETT at WILLIS'S ROOMS, 11, Bowers-street, Cockspur-square. Private lessons at all hours. In consequence of the re-open ation of the Rooms, the Opening of the Evening Academy will be postponed until Friday, September 7th, at Eight o'clock.

ORNAMENTS for the DRAWING-ROOM, LIBRARY, and DINING-ROOM.—MR. HENNANT, 149, Strand, near Somerset House, has just received a new and magnificent assortment of groups, figures, Vases, Candlesticks, Inkstands, beautiful inlaid Tables, Paper-weights, Card-cases, Italian Alabaster Work, &c.

IMPROVED SPECTACLES with CRYSTALS, unanimously suited to every sight, in solid gold frames, from £1 10s; Silver, 15s; Steel, 10s 6d; Pebbles, 21s. Mr. Rousell, Optician, 63, Charing-cross, four doors from Regent-street.

PIANOFORTES.—TOLKIEN'S splendid toned Piccolos, with 6½ octaves, O. G. full, Metallic Plate, only 25 guineas. Parties requiring a first-rate instrument for a little money will do well to purchase at TOLKIEN'S old established house, 27, 28, and 29, King William-street, London-bridge. Drawings of the instrument sent free. Country orders carefully packed and forwarded.

JONES'S £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES, at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House, are warranted not to vary more than half a minute per week. The great reduction of price at once sets aside all Watch-puffery, either of the fusee manufacturers, or any other house. On receipt of a Post-office Order, payable to JOHN JONES, for £4 4s., one will be sent Free by Return Road Answer of Watchwork, sent Free for a Twopenny Stamp.

SILVER PLATED DISH COVERS and CORNER DISHES.—SARL and SONS, 18, Cornhill, solicit an inspection of these elegant appendages to the table, which, from the superiority of their make, are in every respect quality, cheaper than any other house in the trade. Catalogues forwarded to any part of the United Kingdom.

SARL'S ARGENTINE SILVER PLATE.—SARL and SONS, 18, Cornhill, opposite the Royal Exchange, have finished a large and splendid Stock of SPOONS and FORKS, as in every varied pattern. The late manufacturers having failed, and having rendered a constant supply impossible, S. and Sons take this opportunity of informing the public that they can now supply any system can now be promptly executed. All the articles making part in will be of the same manufactured by the late firm and Sons in their A genuine Plate. Pamphlets of prices sent post-paid.

A HANDSOME PRESENT.

A GOLD WATCH and Fine GOLD CHAIN, fitted complete, for £8 the new suitable for either Lady or Gentleman, with a Warranty for Two Years. The Watch is a Horizontal Movement, jewelled in four holes, with Chronometer balance, and Patent Lever Detached Escapement, in which is one of the best quality.—SARL and SONS, Watch Manufacturers, 18, Cornhill, opposite the New Royal Exchange. At these elegant premises, Watches of every description, Plate—often with period safety, upon the receipt of an order for the amount.

HAWLEY'S GOLD and SILVER WATCHES.			GOLD £ s. d.	SILVER £ s. d.
Gentlemen's Gold Watches	...	...	8 15 0	3 10 0
" Ditto Watches	...	...	9 9 0	4 0 0
" Gold Lever ditto	...	...	12 12 0	5 5 0
" Silver 6 ins ditto	...	...	9 15 0	3 0 0
Ladies' Gold Watches	...	...	8 8 0	3 3 0
" Silver Watches	...	...	5 5 0	2 2 0
Youths' Silver Watches	...	...	3 0 0	1 10 0

All the above Watches have every modern improvement, and are proper, Jewelled and carefully Regulated, with Cases and Dials elegantly Engraved and Finished, and are warranted to perform well. HAWLEY and Co., 284, High Holborn, sons of the late Thomas Hawley, of 76, Strand, and Watch and Watch Case Makers to the Trade.

WATCHES and their MANAGEMENT.—J. COX SAVORY and CO. have published a PAMPHLET, describing the construction of the various Watches in their extensive and unique Stock, and containing Rules for their Management. It is intended to give the information which should be contained in a letter to the purchaser of an article, the complex nature of which all but accuracy and durability. It also contains rules for the proper management of a watch by the wearer. It may be had ...gratis, at 47, Cornhill, London, and down doors from Gracechurch-street.

SILVER PLATE, New and second-hand.—T. COX SAVORY and CO.'s Pamphlet of Prices, with outlines, may be had gratis, at 47, Cornhill, London, and down doors from Gracechurch-street. They are the prices, weights, and patterns of new and second-hand silver spoons and forks, new and second hand Tea and Coffee services, Waiters, Candlesticks, Cruets, Liqueur frames, all in white metal Sconces and Fenders, Watches, Clocks, Cut ...ery, Ladies' Dressing Cases, and Work Boxes, &c. &c. The ...ers terms of which all but accuracy and durability. It also contains rules for the proper management of a watch by the wearer. It may be had ...gratis, at 47, Cornhill, London, and down doors from Gracechurch-street.

SILVER-PLATED DISH-COVERS and CORNER DISHES.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, 14, Cornhill, London, opposite the Royal Exchange, invite an inspection of their stock of Dish-covers, and Corner Dishes, which, from the superiority of their make, all parties can rely, cheaper than any other house in the trade. Drawings, with prices annexed, forwarded to any part of the kingdom, postage free.

SILVER TEA SERVICES, of New Patterns.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Working Silversmiths, 14, Cornhill, London, opposite the Royal Exchange, have on sale a large and elegant pattern of TEA and COFFEE SERVICES of novel and elegant design, and of the highest finish. The following have been generally admired:—

The Tea Pattern, tastefully engraved:	The Louis Quinze Pattern, richly chased:
Strong Silver Tea-pots £12 15 0	Strong Silver Tea pot £13 10 0
Ditto Sugar Basins 7 4 0	Ditto Sugar Basin 8 5 0
Ditto Cream Ewer, gilt 5 5 0	Ditto Cream Ewer, gilt 5 5 0
Ditto Coffee-pot 7 17 0	Ditto Coffee-pot 7 17 0
£45 0 0	£47 10 0

A large stock is offered for sale also in the Show-rooms, including every variety of patterns in Silver Plate.

THE BRIGHTON SCHOOL DIRECTOR:

Rev. ROBERT WINTER,

GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT:

Mr. G. W. LEY.

RESIDENT MASTER:

Mr. ALFRED WINTER.

THE GREEK AND ROMAN LANGUAGES AND ANTIQUITIES:

Lecturer—Rev. JOSEPH PARKER SMITH, B.A.

MATHEMATICS, NATURAL PHILOSOPHY, AND CHEMISTRY:

Rev. WILLIAM ASHLEY, B.A. Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge.

CLASSICAL MASTER:

Mr. WILLIAM LONG.

FRENCH MASTER:

M. LOUIS BREA, M.A. Licencié ès Lettres of the University of France.

GERMAN MASTER:

NATHAN VANDENHOFF, Esq.

DRAWING and MODELLING MASTER:

Mr. JAMES ...

ENGLISH LITERATURE and COMPOSITION:

Mr. EDWARD BALDWIN.

MUSIC:

Mr. FREDERICK GILCHRIST.

WITH RESIDENT ASSISTANT MASTERS.

TERMS.

Rev. ... MAIN, B.A.

Rev. JOSEPH GOUGH ... (late Scholar) B.A.

Mr. EDWARD BALDWIN.

Mr. EDWARD BALDWIN.

The course of instruction comprises Rudimentary, Reading, Writing, and Arithmetic, Book-keeping, Land and Land-surveying, Latin and Greek Classics, and Composition.—From Dr. Latham, and Hulme—Italian, Spanish, A Public Lecture on Physical Geography.—Model and Figure Drawing, Perspective—Mental and Moral Science—Chemistry, Natural History, Logic—Rhetoric—Music.

TERMS.

Lower School ... £50 per annum.

Upper Ditto ... £60 ,,

Pupils received into the Lower School from Five to Ten years of age, and, under favourable circumstances, remain in the Upper School they will be received from Ten years. Those who have been ...y a Public School, will be transferred to the Upper, without ...

The terms are ... quarterly in advance. The New Buildings, Grand Organ, Gymnasium, Swimming Bath, Workshops, Museum, Laboratory, Observatory, Telescope, Library, Reading Room, Chemical Apparatus, Models, Globes, and Compasses, are pre-eminently adapted for the Education of Youth.

The Lowness Establishment is under the immediate superintendence of the Rev. ROBERT WINTER.

VACATIONS.

Midsummer, 7 weeks. Christmas, 3 weeks.

A Prospectus and Papers, together with a List of Referees, will be forwarded to the Director.

Oct. 8, 1849 to ... 1849

THE BRIGHTON SCHOOL.—The ensuing (Half) Session will commence on Monday, October 1st.

All arrangements for the Admission of Pupils should be concluded one week before the commencement of each session.

Grove House, ROBERT WINTER, Jun., Director.

August 20th, 1849.

AIR-GUNS and AIR-CANES for shooting rabbits, rooks, sea-fowl, &c. ... Messrs. ... respectfully inform Sportsmen and Gentlemen ... Practice, &c., per post, 8s

TRELOAR'S COCOA-NUT-FIBRE MATTRASSES are clean, durable, and elastic, and very moderate in price. Warehouse, 42, Ludgate-hill, 1 doors from the Old Bailey.

FEATHER BEDS and MATTRASSES, marriage-free to all parts of the kingdom.—Prize Medal ... tanning full particulars ... the weight, sizes, and quantities, forwarded post-free, on application to ALEXANDER ROSS and CHARLES MARSH, Bedding Manufacturers, 23, Bishopsgate-without, Late ...

CHUBB'S LOCKS and FIRE-PROOF SAFES, with CHUBB'S PATENT LOCKS are a perfect security from ... Fire.—Lists of Prices may be had at CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

ELASTIC BOOTS of the Best Make. Ladies', 14s; Gentlemen's, 18s per pair. AMERICAN OVERSHOES of the best make, Ladies', 5s 6d; Gentlemen's, 6s 6d per pair.—MARSHALL, 327, 328, Oxford-street.

MESSRS. NICOLL'S Wholesale and Country Department ... Messrs. NICOLL are the sole Patentees of the design and material

SHIRTS.—HENRY WITHERS, No. 9, POULTRY, without registering his Shirts, or giving them absurd names, has determined to make the best Shirt ever worn for 14s, and full value for the price charged. Those at 21s, 3d, and 27s. 6d. the most extensively ready-made Shirts in London.

SHIRTS.—The ZETETIQUE SHIRTS, Registered May 8, 1849, Nos. 6 & 7 Vic., c. 65.—These are the best fitting Shirts ever invented. Caution.—Every shirt is stamped. Price—8s for 40s; or Three for 21s.—S. B. The Zetetique Collar Shirts are six for 30s, 36s, and 38s. Also, all the newest patterns in Coloured and Fancy Shirts, fabricated for Gentlemen's wear, and sold at most ... Manufactory, 47, Cheapside, ...

FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS Guaranteed ... and ... Also, the New Patent Self-Adjusting Collars, ... Cravats, Scarfs, Dressing Gowns, Hosiery, and Gloves. ... Manufactory, No. 4, Cornhill, ... Regent-street, and Manchester.

RICHARD FORD, No. 185, Strand, London.

TO SPORTSMEN.—BERDOE'S WATERPROOF SHOOTING JACKETS, duly say amount of make, to every ... Price ... Patent Waterproof Cloth, ... for the ... Jackets, Trousers, Capes, Leggings, Hats, Caps, Gaiters, Boots, Shoes, Knapsacks, Shot-belts, Game-bags, Cartridge-cases, Tents, &c., all ... Manufactory, 96, Newgate-street, ... Patentee and Manufacturer of the Improved Waterproof Garments ever invented. Price 40s and 50s. 96, New Bond-street, and 88, Cornhill, ...

NEWTON'S GLOBES.—Patronised by her Majesty and Prince Albert.—The only, large, quarto, and public ... Newton's Globes, ... Messrs. ... Globes, ... Globes, ... Globes, PORTRAIT OF WOOLLETT, THE ENGRAVER, LATELY ADDED TO THE COLLECTION IN THE NATIONAL GALLERY.

THE NATIONAL GALLERY.

PORTRAIT OF WOOLLETT, THE ENGRAVER.

THIS interesting and appropriate contribution to the national collection of paintings in Trafalgar-square has lately been made by Mr. Farrer, of Wardour-street, the well-known picture-dealer, who has presented to the Gallery this characteristic Portrait of the most celebrated Engraver of the English school. The picture is stated to be from the hand of Mr. G. Stewart, an American artist; it was formerly in the possession of Mr. Newington Hughes, a banker, at Maidstone, in Kent (of which town, by the way, Woollett was a native). Here he was born in 1735; he learned his art of John Tinney, an obscure engraver, in London; but he soon adopted a style of his own, acquired early a great reputation as a landscape engraver, and was appointed engraver to George III. No artist ever used together more effectually the etching needle and the graver; in foliage, water, and in rocks Woollett was strikingly successful, and is still unrivalled; but, in figures, especially in flesh, he was less so. In the latter part of his life, Woollett took to historical engraving; and also in this department he has produced some of the finest plates of which the English school can boast. The "Death of General Wolfe," and the "Battle of the Hague," both after West, are considered his best historical pieces. In the portrait just presented to the National Gallery (and which we have Engraved), Woollett is represented in his working dress, wearing a cap similar to that known in the portraits of the poets Prior and Thomson. He is seated, graver in hand, at a table, near which is seen the end of West's "Death of Wolfe," above mentioned. The engraver evinces strong anxiety; he is evidently devising some means to outmaster some difficulty he has encountered in the work before him; yet his perseverance and patience will overcome the difficulty, if we may form a true estimate of his possession of these qualities from the anecdote related by West, of Woollett consenting, without a murmur, to make a trifling alteration in one of his plates, though it cost him three or four months' labour.

Of Woollett's landscapes, his masterpieces are those which he engraved after Wilson: they are nine in number, and include the celebrated picture of the "Death of the Children of Niobe," a portion of which is engraved among the Specimens in the "History of Wood Engraving," in Vol. 4 of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS (See page 400).

Woollett lies buried in the churchyard of Old Saint Pancras, where a head and foot stone mark his grave. In 1846, these memorials were restored at the expense of the Graphic Society—a well-graced tribute from an association of first-class artists to the memory of one "who ranks at the head of the English School of Engraving." The restored stone will be found engraved in No. 226 of our Journal.

We have referred to the addition of the Portrait of Woollett to the National Collection as appropriate; feeling that such a memorial is due to one who, by his skill, must have very considerably raised a love of art among the people, by extending their acquaintance with masterpieces of painting, through the means of large and effective engravings, such as till within these few years were, to use a homely phrase, the "furniture prints" of well-appointed houses. The man who has done this deserves a place in a "National Gallery:" besides, Woollett was of admirable character and amiable disposition, and rose by his own industry to receive the highest patronage; qualities which, conjoined with his artistic celebrity, render this picture of extreme interest to the crowds who flock to the Gallery in Trafalgar-square.

The Portrait has been placed in the Hogarth Room, the first to the right of the staircase, next to Lawrence's Portrait of Mr. Angerstein, over the doorway, and Jackson's Portrait of Sir John Soane, to the left.

Nollekens, by the way, says: "Woollett, the engraver, was a little man, and, when I first saw him, lived in Green-street, Leicester Fields, in the house now No. 11."

EFFECTS OF CHOLERA ON TRADE.—Since the awful visitation of the Asiatic cholera had appeared in England and Ireland this year, the caution in respect to the use of certain descriptions of food by the public generally has seriously injured large classes of people, who, heretofore, derived considerable profit by the sale of fish and vegetables. For years past the export of salmon to England was a trade of vast importance, the demand in that country being so large, the market so certain, and the price so remunerative, that salmon at the table of the middle class of people was a luxury, even in the localities where caught in most abundance. However, at present, and for some months past, the demand for this fish in the London market has become so depressed that it is not exported to any amount; and, even where taken from its element, fear prevents its general use as food. But the value of salmon has not alone been deteriorated, for the use of all other fish has considerably declined, and particularly those of the lobster tribe. The market gardeners and vegetable vendors have also been serious sufferers by the visitation, for avoidance of the use of vegetables having become all but general, the consequence to these industrious classes must be ruinous.—Cork Constitution.

LOOP LINE OF RAILWAY FROM BARNES TO SMALLBERY GREEN.

THIS new railway was opened to the public a few days since. It diverges from the Richmond line at Barnes station, and is carried across the river Thames, in front of Barnes-terrace, by means of a light and elegant iron bridge, designed by Mr. Locke, and constructed by Messrs Fox, Henderson, and Co. It consists of three arches, each of 100 feet span. In design it is similar to the railway bridge at Richmond (already engraved in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS); but the arches being twenty feet wider, add much to the lightness and beauty of the structure. From thence the line proceeds through the property of the Duke of Devonshire; and the first station, Chiswick, is placed at the southernmost corner of his Grace's park. This station, besides accommodating the residents, is within a very short distance of the Horticultural Society's Gardens, and will, no doubt, be one of the principal means of approach on fête and other days. The railway then passes on to Kew-bridge, where it crosses the turnpike road. In a cutting at this spot it encountered the main pipe of the water-works; but, by means of much engineering skill, the works at this place were completed, and the main carried over the bridge, without more than twelve hours' interruption to the flow of water.

At this spot, close to the foot of Kew Bridge, is the Kew Station, within three minutes' walk of the Royal Botanic Gardens and grounds. From this point the line passes principally through market-gardens, to Boston-lane, where the Brentford station is conveniently situated. It is then carried over the Grand Junction Canal, and crossing the property of the Duke of Northumberland at Sion Park, arrives again at the Great Western road. The line is now only open to this spot. There is a temporary station here for the accommodation of Isleworth and the adjoining district. The works on the remainder of the line from this place to the junction with the Windsor line, near the Drilling Ground at Hounslow, are nearly completed. The opening throughout will take place in a few weeks, when trains will run through to Windsor.

It is expected that the traffic upon this line will be very great, when fully developed; as, in addition to the densely populated district through which it runs, it offers great convenience to the market gardeners of a cheap and speedy transit for their produce to Covent-garden and other metropolitan markets.

LOOP-LINE OF RAILWAY FROM BARNES TO SMALLBERY GREEN.—THE BRIDGE ACROSS THE THAMES, AT BARNES.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1849.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 389.—VOL. XV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1849. [SIXPENCE.

THE LAND QUESTION

IN FRANCE AND IRELAND.

THE social revolution that has commenced in Ireland will not lack zealous preachers. The Potato Famine has opened men's eyes to the real sources of the misery and degradation of the Irish. The trade of political agitation has received its death-blow—for the present generation at least; and men with courage enough to look social evils in the face, and wisdom enough to see what are the proper remedies to be applied, will not be found wanting in the good work of Irish regeneration. Mr. Gavan Duffy, who so marvellously escaped the fate of Mr. Smith O'Brien, is one of the men who will, we think, cause the well-wishers of Ireland to rejoice that he has been left unscathed by the hot ploughshare of the law; and that, sobered by experience, he has been permitted to devote his talents to the good of his countrymen in a safer and wiser field than that of rebellion against constituted authority. In the first number of his revised journal, the Nation, he draws a vivid picture of the social condition of the people—a picture as true as it is vivid—and every word of which we can corroborate from our own experience. We could parallel what he saw at Galway and Westport with what we saw at Cashel and Killarney; and we could, if need were, depict many scenes to the full as fearful and striking as those which he has sketched. "No words printed in a newspaper or elsewhere will," he says, "give any man who has not seen it a conception of the fallen condition of the west and the south. The famine and the landlords have actually created a new race in Ireland. I have seen on the streets of Galway crowds of creatures more debased than the Yahoos of Swift—creatures having only a distant and hideous resemblance to human beings. Grey-headed old men, whose idiot faces had hardened into a settled leer of mendicancy, simeous and semi-human; and women filthier and more frightful than the harpies, who, at the jingle of a coin on the pavement, swarmed in myriads from unseen places, struggling, screaming, shrieking for their prey, like some monstrous and unclean animals. In Westport, the sight of the priest on the street gathered an entire pauper population, thick as a village market, swarming round him for relief. Beggar children, beggar adults, beggars in white hairs, girls with faces grey and shrivelled, the grave stamped upon them in a decree which could not be recalled; women with the more touching and tragical aspect of lingering shame and self-respect not yet effaced; and among these terrible realities, imposture shaking in pretended fits to add the last touch of horrible grotesqueness to the picture! I have seen these accursed sights, and they are burnt into my memory for ever!" We think it is well for Ireland that these things have made such an impression upon a man who has so much influence as Mr. Duffy, and that, abandoning merely political and controversial topics, he has determined to devote his energies for the future to the consideration of the land question. That is, indeed, at the bottom of the misery of Ireland. The more it is probed, the better for the country, and the more it will become apparent that an inordinate subdivision of the soil, rendering good and profitable farming impossible, preventing pasturage, and filling the land with a potato-eating population, barely removed above pauperism at the best of times, has caused all the evils under the operation of which Ireland has become what we now behold her—the most unhappy and most degraded among the nations of Christendom.

Similar causes are at work in France. Though not identical in the mode of operation, they are painfully alike in their results; a minute subdivision of the soil leads, in France as in Ireland, to the starvation of those who cultivate it, and keeps France continually in the jaws of political revolution. A few facts with reference to the misery of the peasantry of France will show how agriculture has been ruined in that country, and how little we ought to be astonished at the repeated convulsions which occur.

Before the great Revolution of the last century, the evil of large estates was thought to be so intolerable that a violent remedy was adopted; laws of entail and primogeniture were swept away; feudalism was extinguished; proprietors of land were reduced to the common level of the citizen; and, lest landed estates should again accumulate in large masses, a law was passed, not merely permitting (which was all that should have been done), but forcing the partition of landed property, share and share alike, among all the children of a deceased proprietor. It is now acknowledged that this radical remedy has proved infinitely worse in its operation than the disease it was intended to extirpate. Men who understand the whole bearings of the land question have placed before the French people, and before Europe, the state of the rural population under this law of compulsory gavelkind. The picture is not of a kind to make any one in love with it. The Documens Statistiques, published under the authority of the French Government in 1835, stated that at that time the soil of France was divided into 123,360,338 parcelles, or lots, each of them of the extent of something less than an English acre; and that these properties were in the hands of 10,834,794 proprietors. As many of these proprietors possessed lands in different communes, it was not easy to arrive at an exact estimate of the real number of individuals having land. The number, however, was supposed by a writer in the Quarterly, deriving his information from the statistical records of France, to be about 5,400,000, which doubtless approximated to the truth. The average annual revenue of no less than 2,600,000 of these estates was under 40 shillings; of 873,997 under 80 shillings; of 737,136 under £8; of 369,603 under £12; and there are only 6681 families of landed proprietors deriving an income of more than £400 per annum from their estates. Messieurs Mounier and Rubichon, who drew up these documents for the French Government, represented the larger class of these proprietors "as a state within a state, depending on no one, having no one to depend on it; standing alone in its unassisted misery; in an ill-humour with all that are happier or higher; looking on a large proprietor as a usurper; and thinking that no one not working with his spade has any right to the land." They stated further, that it was "an enemy to the plough which diminished hand-work, and to cattle which required an extent of pasturage that diminished the small parcelles." In short, under this system of small farming anything like a proper cultivation of the ground has become impossible; corn cultivation has given way to that of potatoes, and pasturage has gradually diminished. Since 1835 there has been no improvement, but the reverse; the increase of population has led to a correspondent increase in the number of small, struggling, disconnecting increase in the number of small, struggling, disconnecting tenants, and impoverished landowners—men without capital, and solely relying upon spade husbandry for the means of subsistence. These people, landed proprietors although they be, have been compelled to renounce both bread and meat, as the staple articles of their diet, and betake themselves, like the unhappy Irish, to the potato. The Count de Villeneuve, President of the Agricultural Society of Toulouse, has shown how the compulsory division of estates prevents the increase of cattle. "It is necessary," says he, "to have a certain extent of land to keep a flock. A proprietor possesses it, and keeps a flock; but he dies, and his children (he perhaps leaves several) will each insist on their legal share of the land. The result is, that none can keep a flock. Thus, for instance, in the district of Cambon, where, thirty years ago, there were eight flocks, there is now but one. In the commune of Castres, within six years, five flocks have disappeared, from the same causes." The departmental Inspector for the Côtes du Nord gave testimony to the same effect:—"Flocks, as the word is understood to mean numerous flocks, do not exist in this department. On the seaside you will see in a farm five or six sheep, feeding with the cows, and picking up their refuse. In the interior twenty or thirty wretched sheep starve along the sides of the road, under the care of a child, a shepherd only in name." The inspector of the Isère was equally emphatic:—"This department is not a sheep country. Not that it is unfavourable to sheep, but the extreme division of property does not allow of flocks." The butchers of Paris and Lyons presented a petition to the Chamber of Deputies in 1840, stating forth the gradual and alarming diminution in the supply of oxen and sheep. The Chamber referred the petition to a committee, which made a minute report on the whole matter, stating, as the result, that the price of meat had risen to a degree which rendered beef inaccessible to the working classes, to their great loss of health and strength; and that the causes were the "division of properties, and the new species of culture which it had introduced, which diminished visibly from year to year the means of breeding and feeding cattle." The public-table of fresh meat in the markets of Paris was legalised in consequence. Many corroborations of these statements might be adduced, but their truth is admitted by all who have devoted any attention to the subject. We recommend them to the earnest notice of Mr. Duffy and the social reformers in Ireland.

INTRAMURAL INTERMENT.—A SCENE IN THE STRAND.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

Wherever there is no Poor-law, and no great manufactures to feed the surplus people, a subdivision of the soil will take place, either by the aid of the law, as in France; or in spite of it, by means of sub-letting and the middlemen system, as in Ireland. We see plainly what the result of this minute subdivision has been in both countries. Though in one it has been a subdivision of proprietorship, and in the other of occupancy, the result is the same, and may be expressed in one word—MISERY. In both countries a social revolution is needed which shall exalt agriculture as an art, and cause an increase instead of a diminution of national wealth, and the elevation instead of the degradation of the people. We think that Ireland is at length on the right track, and that the stringent operation of the Poor-law will ultimately turn the small, potato feeding, half-naked farmers, into the meat-eating, well-clad labourers of men of capital, skill, and energy. The case of France is not quite so hopeful. She has Communism to struggle against, in default of a Poor-law.

ERRATUM.—In our leading article, last week, on the subject of the Peace Congress, an error of the press occurred in the 20th line of the third column on the first page. The words "throw doctrine upon a devotion" should have been "throw discredit upon a doctrine."

INTRAMURAL INTERMENTS.

THE people of this country are proverbially slow to move in all matters except those of the pocket. Touch us there, and we are sensitive enough and prompt for action; but in matters affecting our health, our convenience, or our old habits, however pernicious they may be, it is a life-long effort to get us from the wrong path into the right one. We frequently acknowledge an evil when it is pointed out to us, we even go so far as to condemn and grumble at it; but, nevertheless, we continue to endure it, as if it were the most comfortable thing in the world. Sometimes, too, while desiring its removal, we obstinately oppose the only possible means by which it can be effected, and inveigh against the too daring innovators who would relieve us from it. The case of intramural interments is one of the strongest instances of this peculiarity in the national character. Year after year we have gone on committing an acknowledged error, to the manifest danger of health and the outstanding evil becoming more colossal in growth, but taking no sufficient means to prevent the nuisance. The cholera, however, has come to give us a salutary as well as a sanitary lesson. Nothing less was sufficient to rouse public attention to the state of the graveyards of the metropolis, and to the necessity for greater than was ever before known; and there seems every reason to believe that a conviction is spreading itself through all classes of society, that its severity has been greatly increased by our own neglect of the many glorious precautions which we might have taken had we been wise, especially by our inattention to drainage, and by our obstinate adherence to the barbarous custom of burying our multitudinous dead among the living. It is to be hoped that, when the subsidence of the plague of cholera, we shall not relapse into our old indifference; and that the guides and leaders of the people will not cease from advocating the necessity of extramural interments—not simply for the sake of the living, but for the sake of public decency and the amenity of a great city, until all future interments within the limits shall be decreed illegal.

The scenes which our Artist has depicted will scarcely be believed possible by the inhabitants of any other city in Europe. We stand alone in this practice. If we buried our dead in our houses or cellars, we should be accounted a barbarous nation; yet it is only a degree less barbarous to bury them in the middle of our streets. London, the metropolis of the civilised world—the greatest, the richest, and the most intellectual city of modern times—stands pre-eminent for its inattention to the health and feelings of the living, and to the respect due to the remains of the dead. The churchyard of St. Clement Danes stands in the middle of the Strand, one of the greatest, busiest, and most populous thoroughfares in the world, and the scene depicted, the full horrors of which, however vivid they affect the nose and the lungs, cannot be pictorially rendered, is of almost daily occurrence. But, and as is this grave-yard, it is a model of salubrity and decency compared with many of the Golgothas that are but the nuisance of the offended eyes and nostrils of the population of this metropolis. The columns of our daily contemporaries teem with the complaints of the unfortunate householders; and in reproducing a few of them into our pages we hope to be instrumental in shaming, and in finally preventing, the nuisance. "The bulk of my house," says a correspondent of the Times, under date of Aug. 31, "overlooks that strip of abomination, the Portugal-street burial-ground. I have seen scenes that made my blood curdle—such horrors through dead bodies, and throwing up of human bones, and smashing up of coffins, as no Christian man should witness, or even cannibals be guilty of. All this has been going on for many, many years. The stench is at times awful. In conclusion, I beg to say that I was very glad to notice the interference of the medical gentlemen of the King's College Hospital, which is on the east side of this ground; and I have heard the gentlemen say, when they have come to visit the sick in the neighbourhood, the bad state of the Portugal-street burial-ground very much retards the cure of the sick in the said hospital."

The Police Inspector, writing from the Fleet-street Police-station to the Commissioners of the City Police Force, gives evidence still more emphatic upon the state of another grave-yard—that of St. Anne's, Blackfriars. He says that, on the 30th of August, "Upon the retirement of some persons who had just witnessed the interment of a friend, the gravedigger dragged from behind a tombstone part of a mutilated body (from the hips downward) to the grave, which had a few minutes previously received its tenant, and thrust it in with great violence, without a covering; he then descended into the grave, which was about twelve feet deep, and dismembered the limbs with a spade, and placed them beside the coffin, over which he sprinkled a small quantity of earth. This grave has been left open for upwards of three weeks for the reception of bodies, having only a slight covering of earth and boards. There are workshops in the immediate vicinity of this burial-ground, in which upwards of 100 persons are employed, who suffer from the effluvium arising from this abominable receptacle for decaying mortality."

Another sufferer says:—"Within twelve feet of my sitting-room lies St. Saviour's Churchyard, in which forty people have been buried within the last thirty-one days. At the time I write, four graves are open. It is my daily lot to see the earth yawn for the dead to witness it covered, and the same each newly-occupied grave filled to fresh. By a physical depression, the potent effects of the consequent malaria. My neighbours, moreover, die daily around me of cholera, evidencing the virulence of this local mischief. As if this were not enough, my eyes—albeit somewhat used to anatomical studies—upon the remnant of each new grave, are regaled with a display of femoræ, ribs, and collar-bones, interspersed with an occasional cranium."

The evil is not a new one, and time has added to its enormity. We are indebted to a correspondent of the Times for an extract from a sermon preached, in 1689, by Bishop Latimer, which proves that even at that comparatively early period, when the population of London could scarcely be said to exist, by a physical depression, the potent influence of intramural interments was found to be dangerous to health. "The citizens of Nain," observed the Bishop, "hadd their burying place without the citie, which no doubt is a laudable thinge; and I doe marvel that London, being so great a citie, hath not some such place without; for no doubt it is an unwholesome thinge to bury with in the citie, especialie at such a time, when there be great sickenesses and manie die together. I wish with all that manie a man taketh great sickenesses and manie die together. I wish with all that manie a man taketh great sickenesses and manie die together. I wish with all that manie a man taketh duces Klanka to demand good conditions. According to the Vienna Presse 14,000 men of the garrison had embarked in boats, and proceeded to Gran, where they laid down their arms; the remaining 6000 (the garrison was 20,000 strong) had resolved to hold out, and sell their lives dearly. The small fortress of Deva, in Transylvania, was blown up on the approach of the Russians, and every man perished. Whether this was the voluntary act of the heroic garrison, or the result of an accident, remains a mystery. General Haynau had returned to Pesth. Some of the journals speak of a coolness existing between the Russians and Austrians.

General Haynau has ordered the Jews of the Banat to deliver to the Austrian army, within four months, 100,000 haversacks, 10 000 cloaks, 10,000 pairs of shoes, and 5000 pairs of boots. For every day's delay, the Jews are to pay 1000 florins fine. At Arad, the Austrian General Schlick has also exacted considerable contributions from the Jews; but the Lloyd's says that in the latter town the Jews were getting themselves baptized Christians!

UNITED STATES.

Accounts from New York to the 22nd ult. were received on Monday by the America steamer.

General Taylor has quite recovered from his illness, and has proceeded on his journey, which has been marked in every instance with manifestations of applause and welcome.

The cholera in New York continues to decrease, and has ceased to inspire any special alarm. In Philadelphia it has entirely disappeared, but in Boston it seems to be on the increase.

General Avezzana has arrived at New York.

Notwithstanding the President's proclamation against the secret expedition to Cuba, the force is still being actively carried out.

There is still much excitement existing in regard to the European Continental question. The feeling on behalf of Hungary is certainly very strong, and it is very likely that the foreign policy of the Government will be most closely watched when the legislature resumes operations.

The Methodist Episcopal Camp Meetings, which are conducted on an immense scale, are affording much room for conversation in the religious world. Two very large assemblages commenced on the 17th, one near Frederick City, Maryland, and another near Clarksburgh, in the same state. Several thousands were present on both occasions, and the excitement was described to be most intense.

CENTRAL AMERICA.

Intelligence from the city of Grenada, late Nicaragua, to the 9th of July, states that an adventurer named Somosa, at the head of 4000 men, had assaulted the city of Nicaragua, destroyed it by fire, and sacrificed the lives of its inhabitants. Somosa did not obtain much wealth by this assault; a small amount only of gold, silver, and jewellery fell into his hands; but the total amount of property destroyed exceeded 2,000,000 dols. Other accounts represent the occurrence as less deplorable. It was reported that Somosa intended to march upon the British settlement of Grey Town (Mosquitia), but had been prevented by the want of boats to convey his forces down a portion of the river. The latest accounts mention that Somosa, having been defeated and captured by the Government troops, had been sentenced to death. General Munoz, the commander-in-chief of the Government troops, was preparing to go down to Grey Town with an armed force. The King of Mosquito was at Blue-fields. On the 9th of June the Nicaragua Government issued a proclamation calling all citizens, from sixteen to fifty years of age to arms: first, to quell the anarchical movements of Somosa; second, to maintain the territorial rights of Nicaragua over San Juan and its dependencies, or, in the language of the proclamation, "the usurpation of England in the name of the Mosquito King." The New York Herald says "The above intelligence is from one source. We learn from another source that England refuses to continue her subsidy to the Mosquito King; and that the English Consul, Mr. Christy, left San Juan, or what is now called Grey Town, on the 25th of June, in a British brig of war."

From Carthagena, under date Aug. 1, we learn that starvation, filth, and disease were rapidly thinning the inhabitants. In 29 days 900 persons out of a population of 10,000 had died by cholera. The disease was sensibly abating, however, at the above date. It was said the ravages of the disease had been accelerated by starvation, the people of the interior being fearful of going into the town with provisions. Supplies were only, therefore, received by foreign vessels arriving at Carthagena.

From Panama we are informed that the Isthmus will be free to the transit of all nations on and after the 1st of January next.

Numbers of persons continued to arrive at Chagres en route to California; but many adventurers had returned without visiting the gold regions, the difficulties encountered on the passage being so great, that many who had been bold enough to reach San Francisco had left in disgust, poorer than when they started. There was no doubt of the abundance of gold, but the hardships and dangers of the climate with which the diggers had to contend rendered the precious ore of little comparative value to them, the merchants being the only persons reaping any real benefit.

CALIFORNIA.

We have accounts from San Francisco up to the 2nd of July, at which time everything was quiet in Upper California; the water in the mountain streams had subsided, but the difficulties which had previously existed in the way of extraction of gold were in a great measure disappearing. It was estimated that the mines would this year produce 25,000,000 dollars, provided that ordinary health and quiet continued.

Ships were arriving at San Francisco very rapidly during the month of June, loaded with merchandise and passengers. It was reported that there were more than 80 sail in port on the 1st of July, and they were coming in at the rate of six or eight per day. Many kinds of goods were as cheap in San Francisco as in New York, and much distress would, no doubt, occur to adventurers, who must realize in a glutted overstocked market. The want of warehouses adds greatly to the embarrassment of the times, as the goods must, for the most part, be kept on shipboard. Gold was beginning to come in freely from the mines as the season was advanced, and the general tendency of the population was for the gold region.

The following cities were partly built or laid out in California:—Fremont, on the west bank of the Sacramento, opposite the mouth of Feather River; Vernon, situated on the east bank of Feather River; Boston, laid out on north bank of Rio American; Sacramento city, laid out on the site of and embraces the celebrated Sutter's Fort; Sutter city, laid out on east bank of the river Sacramento; Webster, laid out nine miles from Sacramento city; Suesien, on west bank of Sacramento; Teolumne, laid out at the head of the Sacramento; Stanislaus, at the head of the river of same name. Stockton; this thriving city is on a slough which contains the back waters formed by a junction of the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers. Benicia; this city, the intended rival of San Francisco for the commerce of the Pacific, is situated on the Straits of Karquenez; a naval yard and military storehouses are to be built there. Nassa, on Nassa Creek, 40 miles from San Francisco; St. Lewis, laid out at the embarcadero on the Sonora Creek; San Rafael, laid out at the old mission of that name, on the north side of San Francisco Bay; and San Silisito, in San Francisco Bay, which has a good anchorage. Total, 18.

WEST INDIES.

The usual monthly mail arrived at Southampton, by the Dee, on Tuesday.

From Jamaica, under date August 7, we learn, on the all-engrossing subject of the general election, that eleven parishes had returned their members, and, with very few exceptions, they were all advocates for retrenchment. Some had pledged themselves to support a more sweeping measure than the one lately rejected by the Council. In the parish of St. Thomas in the-East two anti-retrenchment members have been elected, but their return is attributed to the display of physical force on the part of their partisans, by which the voters of the opposing (retrenchment) candidates were kept from the poll. St. Mary has elected as her representatives two gentlemen of the Jewish faith.

Many parts of the island were unhealthy, and a large number of deaths had taken place. In Kingston, dysentery had made its appearance. Two or three cases had also occurred among the troops at Up-Park Camp.

The weather throughout the island was rather unsettled. Some parishes had been visited by partial rains.

The American steam-ship Empire City had visited Kingston, and arrangements were being made to establish a regular semi-monthly communication between that place and New York.

The weather in the West India Islands generally had been exceedingly hot, and there was great want of rain. There was much fever at St. Jago de Cuba, and the yellow fever was prevalent at the Havana.

At Hayti President Soulouque had ordered the execution of his superior officers to be shot; amongst others, General Similton. These sanguinary measures excited the indignation of the British and American Consuls; and having protested against so wanton a sacrifice of human life, they succeeded in saving 17 unfortunate persons from destruction.

A MISTAKE.—A strange scene took place in the Rue Saint Florentine, Paris, a few days ago. Mr. Hormann, the sub-director of the police of New York, and who is now in Paris searching for two celebrated forgers, who have been concerned in a very great extent the estates of several banks in the United States, when passing through the street, took out a lithographic portrait, and exclaimed, "It is he!" Immediately, with the aid of a police agent who accompanied him, he laid hold of a foreigner who was going by, and said, "You are one of the forgers of New York, and I arrest you." The person arrested was astonished, and replied, "I am no forger. My name is John Warton. I am from London, and I am a member of the Peace Congress. I never was in America in my life, and am now with my family at an hotel in the Rue Neuve St. Augustin." Mr. Hormann made no reply, but produced a portrait of the forger of whom he in pursuit, and which was a perfect resemblance of that of Warton. A large crowd having assembled, Mr. Hormann got into a coach with Mr. Warton, and proceeded with him to his hotel, where the latter was fully able to prove that he was the person whom he had represented himself to be.—Paris Paper.

CHOLERA.—The Lancet of this week contains a paper by Mr. Alfred Smee on the theory of this formidable epidemic upon the supposition that the diffusibility of the noxious gases emanating from sewers, cesspools, &c. is now below the average. Mr. Smee states that these mephitic exhalations are evidently more apparent than usual, and this preternatural offensiveness he ascribes to their not being so rapidly diffused through the entire atmosphere. From his experiments, he does not believe that electricity has any direct action upon human beings to produce the disease, though he infers that the neutral state is unfavourable to the dissipation of the poisonous gases. From Mr. Smee's theory we may infer that pure air, proper ventilation, and an avoidance of all putrid exhalations, are the best preventives to this formidable malady.

RAILWAY INTELLIGENCE.

MEETINGS

EASTERN COUNTIES.—Aug. 31: Half-yearly Meeting: London: Mr. E. L. Betts in the chair.—The report stated that the new directors would principally attend to the winding up of the capital account, ascertain the value of the land and rolling stock—regulate the working expenses—and, after a new arrangement of the accounts, divide only clear profits when the deterioration of permanent way, &c. has been provided for. Arrangements have been made with the Norfolk shareholders, so as to afford them the same dividend as that of the Eastern Counties, which is this half-year 2s. per £20 share. The accounts appended a special report. Much discussion prevailed at the meeting, principally on account of the question of amalgamation with the Norfolk. A poll was taken as to the adoption of the report, which was declared on Monday to be in favour of the directors.

NORFOLK.—Aug. 31: Half-yearly Meeting: London. Mr. A. Duff in the chair.—The supplemental agreement with the Eastern Counties was referred to, consequent on the amalgamation rejected by the House of Lords, from the opposition of the Newmarket and East Anglian. The dividend is 2s. per share, equal to 10s. per £100 share. The official expenditure has been reduced.

OXFORD, WORCESTER, AND WOLVERHAMPTON.—Aug. 31: Special Meeting: London: Mr. Rufford in the chair.—The report of the committee of investigation was received. It disclosed certain share transactions in which the directors were implicated. The preliminary expenses were stated to have been excessive. The refusal of the Great Western to take their guarantee of 4 per cent. beyond the original capital was commented upon, and an appendix upon the share allotments was attached. The arrears amount to £115,000. The books of the company were reported to have been kept. The directors intend to reply to the charges of this report, which was only received, but not adopted. The chairman explained several of its assertions, especially those referring to the share allotments, land purchases, and the manner of keeping the accounts. The works throughout are suspended, but could be immediately resumed. The directors' report and state of accounts were adopted.

LANCASHIRE AND YORKSHIRE.—September 5: Half-yearly Meeting: Manchester: Hon. Henry Hotham in the chair.—The report stated that there was a balance of £1,189,138 yet to expend. The total outlay had exceeded ten millions. The working cost is higher than was expected. Two defalcations by clerks have taken place. A sum of 5 per cent will provide for the repair of way and rolling stock. A dividend at the rate of 4 per cent. is declared on the various shares. The property (said the chairman) shared the general depression. It was transferred to legislation of 1845, and the repeated extensions of the enterprise, had been prejudicial. The accounts have been fairly prepared. There are arrears of £300,000 on calls. The report was adopted, and the directors were authorised to raise £500,000 by mortgage, and to consent to the payment in full in advance of calls of any of the Manchester, Bolton, and Bury; Manchester and Leeds; and Liverpool and Bury shares; and afterwards the consolidation of the same into the general stock.

WEST LONDON.—Sept. 6th: Half-yearly Meeting: London: H. H. Grounds, Esq., in the chair.—The report stated that, in conformity with the wishes of the proprietors, the directors had endeavoured to prevail upon the London and North-Western Company to fulfil their agreement, and had entered into with this company, and at once to bring the line into full operation for the conveyance both of passengers and traffic. A meeting had taken place on the 15th of last month between the directors of the two companies, when, after considerable discussion, the London and North-Western Company resolved not to work the line for passenger traffic, but they stated that they would afford every facility for the further increase of the goods traffic. The report was adopted, and a resolution passed calling a special meeting for considering the terms of the lease with the London and North-Western Company.

YORK AND NORTH MIDLAND.—Sept. 6: Half-yearly Meeting: York: W. Cowling, Esq., in the chair.—The directors presented a report, which stated that it would have been a source of gratification to have met the proprietors with a continued assurance of the prosperity of the concern, and they could have recommended a continuance of the large dividends hitherto paid. The receipts during the last half-year from passenger traffic have considerably diminished, owing in a great measure to the competition to which they have been subjected, "with pain and disgust" that the directors have to add to the usual accounts a suspense account, arising from sums which ought formerly to have been carried to the credit of revenue amounting to £59,451 9s. 3d., to which it is settled a considerable addition must yet be made. The revenue account for the half-year shows the receipts to have been £182,033 7s. 1d., and the expenditure (including interest on borrowed capital, guaranteed rents, &c.) £156,178 7s. 7d., leaving a balance to the credit of the company of £17,874 19s. 6d. The report was adopted. It having been stated no dividend could be declared, a special general meeting was held to receive the second report of the committee of investigation, which was adopted.

The Doncaster line of the GREAT NORTHERN, in connexion with the metropolis by the East Lincolnshire lines, was opened on Monday, as a gift to the patrons of the turf. By the opening of the Methley branch, there is also a direct communication to Leeds and York from London

All first-class fares between York and Newcastle, on the YORK, NEWCASTLE and BERWICK (except express), have been reduced one-fifth, and the express fares are lowered one-tenth.

The NEWMARKET is to be worked independently of the EASTERN COUNTIES.—The EAST and WEST YORKSHIRE and the YORK, NEWCASTLE, and Berwick, to reduce the working charges. The dispute with the contractors respecting the re-building of the Knaresborough Viaduct is not settled.—The Nidd Valley Railway has been opened for traffic, and a station at Knaresborough is appointed.—The works of the LOWESTOFT HARBOUR are going on slowly. It is to be completed for £30,000, and the shareholders have a guaranteed rent of 4 per cent. on their subscribed capital.—The line of the SHEFFIELD, ROTHERHAM, and GOOLE will be ready to be delivered, at Midsummer, to the Lancashire and Yorkshire in December. The cost will not exceed the amount guaranteed.—The NORTH-WESTERN, from Skipton to Lancaster, will be opened in next spring. The traffic on the section opened is steadily increasing. The offer of £2 per £10 capital by forfeited shares is met by a creation of 10,000 preference shares of £15 each.—The SHREWSBURY and BIRMINGHAM will be opened to Wolverhampton in October. The development of the traffic depends on the opening of the Stour Valley. The contracts against deterioration, &c., and for working the line have been impeached as partial, and a committee of inquiry has been appointed.—The local districts are anxious for the construction of the SHREWSBURY and HEREFORD. The cost of the works (as a single line) would be £9823 per mile. If properly supported by the landowners and others, the line will be commenced.—The HARTFORD and CARLISLE seek a renewal of the negotiations with the YORK, NEWCASTLE, and BERWICK, for a lease of their line reflected in the House of Commons at the close of the session.—The shareholders of the HARTLEPOOL DOCK, &c., receive 8 per cent. from the York, Newcastle, and Berwick, on a lease of thirty-one years. The money lent to the Hartlepool Junction Company is to be repaid by shares at a guaranteed interest of 5 per cent.—The half-yearly meetings of the SCOTTISH CENTRAL are for the future to be held in April and October.—The SCOTTISH MIDLAND await the opening of the Abercorn for an increase in their "through traffic." The goods traffic is improving.—The proposition by the DUNDEE and PERTH, relative to the repayment of the money still due on the third shares of the DUNDEE and ARBROATH, has been settled.—By the middle of May the line of the CALEDONIAN and DUNBARTON Junction, from Bowling to Loch Lomond, will be ready for use. The dispute as to the construction of the Helensburgh harbour is to be legally tried. The return money on the shares of the dissolved EAST LOTHIAN CENTRAL is expected to be 28s. 6d. per share.—The NORTHERN COUNTIES UNION will make no further return at present. All the accountable claims have been settled. Considerable arrears are expected.—The DUNDEE, PERTH and ABERDEEN declare a dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. The working expenses have been reduced. The agreement with the Caledonian is to be enforced.—The WEST CORNWALL line is to be extended to Penzance.—The revenue on the HAYLE line has decreased, but the working expenses are less.—Dividends of 10s. on the old shares, and 3s. 4d. on the new, were declared by the DUBLIN and DROGHEDA. The working expenses have been much reduced.—Arrangements have been made with Mr. Dargan, the contractor, for completing the line of the DONDALK and ENNISKILLEN. The main line to Comber and Newtownards of the BELFAST and COUNTY DOWN has been expedited, and the directors have obtained a loan of £10,000. The LONDONDERRY and COLERAINE are negotiating for the continuance of the works of the line.—The WATERFORD and LIMERICK apply their balance of revenue to payment of pressing debts. The goods traffic has increased, whilst the passenger receipts are diminished. The receipts of the DUBLIN and BELFAST on the portion opened are satisfactory. The NAVAN branch has been officially inspected.

THE "MANCHESTER" AND "SHEFFIELD" STEAMERS.—An interesting excursion took place on Thursday last, by the two new steam-ship, the Manchester and the Sheffield, built (to run across the Humber) for the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway. An Engraving of the latter vessel appeared in No. 380 of our Journal.) The two vessels left Blackwall at half-past twelve o'clock, and proceeded down the river, with the intention of a trial trip round the Nore Light, and back to Blackwall. The Sheffield, soon after leaving Blackwall, experienced some delay, through getting among a number of moving vessels, and another loss of time near the Half-way House. But, all new being right, the two vessels kept on their voyage: the Sheffield with a slight interruption caused to the sister ship's progress) heading about a mile. The Manchester, by the time she reached the Nore, had extended the distance between them to about four miles, and rounded the Light at half-past three, and then found the Sheffield had abandoned her intention of making the Nore, and was on her way back to Blackwall, which place she reached soon after six o'clock, and the Manchester shortly after—both vessels giving the finest satisfaction.

CAUTION TO SPORTSMEN.—The commissioners of stamps and taxes have issued a notice, "That any person who intends to use a dog, gun, net, or other engine for taking and killing game, or woodcock, snipe, quail, landrail, or coney, or assist in the taking or killing of the same, must annually pay the duty chargeable by the acts 48th George III., cap. 55, and 52nd George IV., cap. 93, and the 10 per cent. in addition. Penalties.—Pursuing game without first obtaining a certificate, £50, and a liability of surcharge in double the amount of duty. Any person in pursuit of game refusing, on being duly required to produce his certificate, or permit the same to be read or a copy to be taken, or refusing to give his or her name and place of residence, £20. All game certificates must be obtained in the parish in which the parties requiring them reside, as those obtained elsewhere will not protect them from penalties. Charge for certificates.—Every gamekeeper, being an assessed servant, £1 7s. 6d.; ditto, not being an assessed servant, £4 0s. 10d.; every person not a gamekeeper, £4 0s. 10d."

THE BERMONDSEY MURDER.

Manning was brought to town on Friday night week from Jersey, and lodged in the police-station, Stone's-end, Southwark. On the following morning (Saturday) he was taken before Mr. Sacker, at the Southwark Police-office, and sufficient evidence having been adduced to warrant his detention on the charge of murdering O'Connor, he was remanded to Thursday last, and was confined in the interim in Horsemonger-lane gaol.

EXAMINATION OF THE PRISONERS AT THE SOUTHWARK POLICE COURT.

Thursday having been appointed for the re-examination of the two prisoners—Manning and his wife—charged with this atrocious deed, before Mr Sacker, at the Southwark Police Court, the doors and avenues leading to the justice-room were besieged from an early hour by parties anxious to obtain admittance. At ten o'clock, when the magistrate took his seat on the bench, there was not a vacant place in any part of the court. The bench was most inconveniently crowded; among the persons of distinction present were Prince Richard Metternich (who was accompanied by Baron Koller), Sir James Eustace, Quintin Dick, Esq., M.P.; the Rev. Mr. Horton, Rector of St George's, Southwark; the Rev Mr. Gibson, Rector of St. Mary Magdalen, Bermondsey; the Rev. T. Binney, of the Weigh House Chapel; Colonel Armytage, Colonel Brandling, Alfred Montgomery, Esq., &c. There were also two or three ladies seated near the magistrate.

By direction of the magistrate, in order to prevent the occurrence of anything like a scene in court, the prisoners were introduced to each other before leaving Horsemonger-lane Gaol. They had not met since they absconded from Minniver-place, and it was thought more than possible that some exhibition of feeling on the part of one or both of them would take place when brought together for the first time. Nothing of the kind, however, occurred. Manning having been brought into the hall of the Governor's house, his wife was introduced to him by Mr. Keane. As she entered, Manning raised his right hand somewhat theatrically, and frowned upon her—a movement which she appeared scarcely to notice. As neither of them spoke, Mr. Keane asked Mrs. Manning whether she had anything to say to her husband. She replied, in a firm voice, "No." A similar question was then addressed to Manning, who also replied in the negative. The prisoners were then directed to enter the police-van, which was in attendance to convey them to the police-court

At twelve o'clock the two prisoners were placed in the dock, Mr. Solomon and Mr. Binns, their respective solicitors, being accommodated with seats between their clients. The presence of the latter—the object of such intense interest—caused was so intense at this period, that females were carried out in a fainting state, and it was some time before order could be restored. At length,

Mr. Humphreys, Q.C., who, with Mr. Howard, from the Treasury, appeared for the prosecution, rose, and in a few words stated the nature of the charge against the prisoners.

The several witnesses were then called and examined by the learned counsel. Their testimony did not vary in the least degree from that given before the Coroner, with which our readers are already familiar. There were no new facts brought forward by the prosecution, and the solicitors for the defence completely failed in shaking the strong chain of circumstantial evidence connecting the prisoners with the crime.

The witnesses called during the day were the police constables, Barnes and Barron; the surgeons, Mr. Lockwood and Mr. Olding; Mr. Keating, Mr. Walsh, and Mr. Flynn, friends of the deceased man; Miss Armes, his landlady, and her sister, Miss Emily Armes; Mr. Massey, the medical student; and Mr. Coleman, the landlord of the house, No. 3, Minver-place.

During the examination of all these witnesses, the prisoners maintained their self-possession; and when the most telling facts against them were deposed to, no betrayal of agitation could be observed by the closest observer. The female prisoner spoke to her solicitor occasionally, but from first to last Manning made no remark to any person. He appears to have fallen away very much since Saturday last, and we thought we noticed an expression of despair in his countenance. His wife, however, continues to display the greatest confidence in her manner, and we observed her to smile more than once during the investigation on Thursday.

At half-past four o'clock Mr. Bodkin stated that this closed one class of the evidence he had to adduce on behalf of the prosecution; and, as the hour at which the court usually rose was fast approaching, he thought it would be well now to adjourn, and resume the inquiry at any hour on the next day the Court might think fit to name.

Mr. Sacker assented to this proposition, and it was arranged that the prisoners should be further remanded until Friday, at 11 o'clock

Mr. Bodkin said he had been informed that it was contemplated on behalf of the prisoners to make an application for the postponement of their trial over the ensuing Session of the Central Criminal Court. He wished to know if such an application was intended, and if both the prisoners concurred in it.

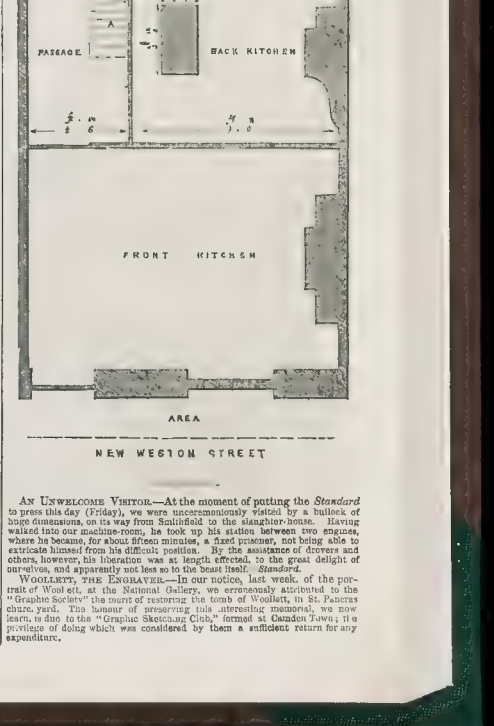
Mr. Binns said the application would be made on behalf of his client.

Mr. Solomon replied that he had not contemplated taking such course, but he should not hesitate to join in the application made by the male prisoner. His client, however, he might add, courted the fullest investigation.

Mr. Bodkin, in reply to Mr. Solomon, said he would, on Friday, state whether on behalf of the Crown he could consent to the postponement of the trial as intended to be prayed.

The prisoners were then removed from the dock, and shortly afterwards conveyed in the prison van to Horsemonger-lane Goal.

We have been favoured by a correspondent with the accompanying Ground Plan of the Basement Story of the house, No. 3, Minver-place, copied from the Plan prepared by direction of the solicitor for the prosecution, and produced in the court on Thursday.



AN UNWELCOME VISITOR.—At the moment of putting the Standard to press this day (Friday), we were unceremoniously visited by a bullock of huge dimensions, on its way from Smithfield to the slaughter-house. Having walked into our machine-room, he took up his station between two engines, where he became, for about fifteen minutes, a fixed prisoner, not being able to extricate himself from his difficult position. By the assistance of drovers and others, however, his liberation was at length effected, to the great delight of ourselves, and apparently not less so to the beast itself. Standard.

WOOLLETT, THE ENGRAVER.—In our notice, last week, of the portrait of Woollett, at the National Gallery, we erroneously attributed to the "Graphic Society" the merit of restoring the tomb of Woollett, in St. Pancras church yard. The honour of preserving this interesting memorial, we now learn, is due to the "Graphic Sketching Club," formed at Camden Town; the promoters of doing which was considered by them a sufficient return for any expenditure.

DONEGANA'S HOTEL, MONTREAL, DESTROYED BY FIRE ON AUGUST 16.

RIOT AT MONTREAL.

Our advices this week from Canada show that the spirit of disorder is not yet laid in Montreal. On the 15th ult. the Canadian Government arrested several persons implicated in the recent riots and burning of the Parliament-house. No opposition was then given to the arrest. In the evening, however, a mob attacked the house of Mr. Lafontaine, the Attorney-General; but the military, who had been hid in the house, fired some thirty shots, killing a man named Mason. Barricades were then erected, which the soldiers demolished, and the people immediately dispersed. Mason's funeral was attended by large numbers; the coffin was dressed in red.

On the morning of the 20th, when the coroner's inquest on Mason's death was sitting at the Cyprus Hotel, and Mr. Lafontaine was on the point of giving his testimony, the alarm of fire was raised, and it was found that the hotel was in flames. The greatest confusion ensued; the soldiers on guard ran about with fixed bayonets, and Mr. Lafontaine was eventually escorted to the Government House in the centre of a square of troops. The fire is alleged to have been the work of an incendiary. Matters are described as being in a very critical state, and the Ministry, it is alleged, have quarrelled with the military, and intend to resign.

Donegana's hotel, in Montreal, the finest in Canada, was entirely consumed by fire on the night of the 16th. In the endeavour to extinguish the flames, one of the city firemen was killed. The inmates effected their escape, with the loss of some property. The value of the hotel, and other property destroyed, is estimated at £30,000, on which there was an assurance of £14,000, £2000 of which is in the Ætna. The fire is supposed, by some, to have originated accidentally, and by others it is alleged to have been the work of an incendiary.

Donegana's Hotel was one of the finest establishments of its kind in North America; conducted on the system of the great hotels of New York and Boston, and rivalling the famous Astor House in extent of accommodation and liberality of the arrangements. The front part of the house was built some years ago by Mr. Bingham (one of the Baring family), who married a French Canadian lady, and lived here some time. It was then enlarged and prepared for the accommodation of the Governors of the colony, and Lords Sydenham and Seaton both occupied it. It was afterwards purchased by Donegana, and converted into a hotel, having suites of apartments furnished with great luxury and every comfort. Drawing-rooms, card-rooms, a reading-room, concert-room, and magnificent ball-room were added; and it at last became the large and imposing building which our Engraving represents.

ROMAN REMAINS AT CIRENCESTER.

In the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS for Aug. 25, attention was called to the fact that discoveries of Roman remains of the most interesting description had been made at Cirencester during the excavation of a drain which had been opened through one of the principal streets of the town; and that, owing to the praiseworthy public spirit of Earl Bathurst, zealously seconded by the Town Commissioners and the inhabitants in general, great efforts had been made to preserve entire the beautiful tesselated pavement which had thus unexpectedly been brought to light.

Accordingly, notice having been conveyed to the Committee of the Archæological Institute, Mr. Lane (the Secretary) has been actively engaged during the past week in superintending the raising of this pavement, which could not, of course, remain in situ, and which is now (from the accumulated débris of ages) sunk to a depth of about four feet below the present surface of the soil: it occupies an area of fifteen feet square, and the design represents beasts of the chace, with a variety of boldly executed masks of Medusa, the Gorgons, &c.; and the accompanying sketch represents the method which has been successfully employed in removing it; and also affords a tolerably correct idea of the position which the site of this Roman villa occupies. As the work proceeds, other discoveries are daily made, and a trip to this neighbourhood—which, by the bye, enjoys an entire immunity from the prevailing epidemic—would well repay the trouble of any archæologists.

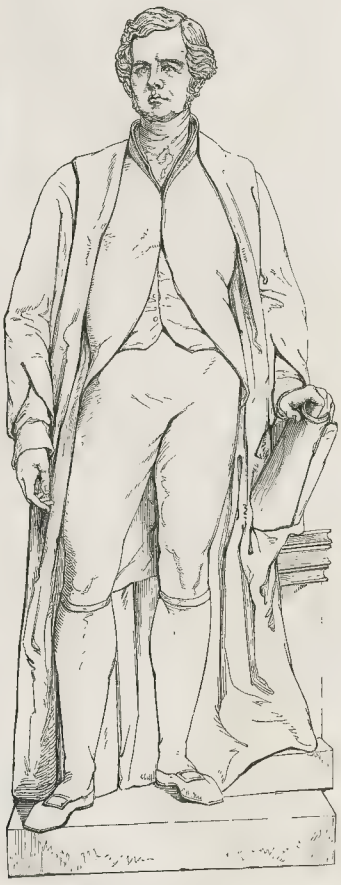
DISCOVERY OF A ROMAN TESSELATED PAVEMENT, IN CIRENCESTER.

Indications exist of two other pavements, and there can be no doubt that this spot was the site of a Roman edifice of no small pretensions; the hypocaust and furnace for heating the apartments being still perfect, and the latter even containing some of the fuel of the fire which doubtless contributed to the warmth and comfort of our Roman conquerors perhaps more than 1500 years ago!!

Several years since, a pavement similar to the above, but of a more elaborate pattern, was discovered in Oakley Park (adjoining Cirencester), and rescued from destruction by the noble proprietor; some beautifully carved capitals, of a composite order, and which, to judge from their diameter, must have surmounted columns not less than fifty feet in height, were also found, and now ornament the grounds of the Abbey; and these, with the perfect remains of an amphitheatre, and the distinct traces of the old ramparts which enclosed the camp, afford sufficient proof that this, the ancient "Corinium," was a favourite and important Roman station.

MARBLE STATUE OF SIR WILLIAM FOLLETT.

This fine colossal statue of the late Sir William Follett has just been placed in the north transept of Westminster Abbey, between the monument to Lord Mansfield and the statue of John Kemble. The situation has been most judiciously chosen, the light falling upon the statue to great advantage, and giving full effect to the dignity of the figure.



MARBLE STATUE OF SIR WILLIAM FOLLETT, IN WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

The inscription for the pedestal has not yet been decided upon by the committee.

Our readers will recollect this statue to have been in the last exhibition of the Royal Academy: it is of beautiful marble, from the chisel of Mr. Behnes, who has accomplished a most striking likeness of the lamented advocate. The drapery is, likewise, gracefully modelled, and the details are a good specimen of the sculptor's skill.

An interesting ceremony took place lately at the village of Auistreham, near Caen. The Royal Humane Society of London having voted the silver medallion to the young French gentleman, Eugène Garel, for his intrepid conduct in rescuing from the horrors of shipwreck the crew of the Thistle, an English brig, wrecked on the coast of Villet, in April last, the British Vice-Consul of Caen gave notice that he would proceed to Auistreham, to present the medal in the name of the Royal Humane Society. On arriving at the village, it presented all the appearance of a fête-day. Flags were flying—the drum was beating to call together the National Guard. All the men belonging to the service of Customs were collected from the neighbouring stations, and being under arms, and in full uniform, presented a somewhat imposing effect in the little village which was the scene of the ceremony. Several of the local authorities attended, and it was easy to observe how great was the gratification of all those who witnessed the presentation of a reward for courage and humanity by a public society of a neighbouring country. As soon as the ceremony was completed, a volley of firearms was heard—the drums beat—bouquets were lavishly distributed among those who took part in the scene—and the whole passed off with so much friendliness and good-humour, that this little event is likely to remain impressed on the memory of the inhabitants for a length of time. May it be so; and may it serve to convince the prejudiced that Old England is as ready to acknowledge and reward foreign merit and foreign courage, as she is thankful to receive on behalf of her sons foreign assistance in the hour of danger to rescue them from a watery grave. This is the second medal which has been so generously voted by the Royal Humane Society within the last four years in the department of Calvados.

Appeals under the New Bankruptcy Act.—A right of appeal of considerable importance is given by the new bankruptcy act, which will come into force on the 11th day of next month. Hitherto, there has been no appeal from a commissioner in the allowance, refusal, or suspension of a certificate; but by the new law an appeal is given to the Vice-Chancellor sitting in bankruptcy. The time for an appeal on the part of a bankrupt will be within 21 days from the decision of the commissioner, "and upon any appeal duly entered and prosecuted relating to the certificate, or to the judgment of the court as to any offence charged against the bankrupt, the Vice-Chancellor shall have power to rescind or vary the order thereon as he may think fit, and upon an order for the allowance of any certificate by the Vice-Chancellor, and whether with conditions or not, such certificate may be allowed by the court below or by the Vice-Chancellor." The commissioners are authorised to make new rules and orders, subject to the approval of the Lord Chancellor, and, probably, directions will be given for the proper exercise of this important right of appeal.

CHRIST CHURCH, BATTERSEA.

N the populous suburban parish of Battersea, the want of accommodation for public worship is now partly supplied by the completion of a handsome Church (of which we gave an external view on February 10th, 1845), with a tower and spire, in the Middle Pointed, or English Decorated style of architecture, near Falcon-lane, Battersea-fields.

This beautiful Church was recently consecrated by the Lord Bishop of Winchester, attended by a large number of the clergy of the surrounding parishes, and also by the Right Hon. and Right Reverend Lord Auckland, Bishop of Sodor and Man, to whose exertions (when Vicar of the parish) the parishioners are mainly indebted for the erection of the Church.

The edifice was crowded by the inhabitants of the parish and the adjoining neighbourhood, who, as well as the Bishops and clergy, were unanimous in their praise of the elegant structure.

The plan of this Church (of which we now give an internal view) is cruciform, with nave, aisles, and long chancel, with a children's chapel on the north side of the chancel, opening thereto and to the north transept by pointed archways, which are to be filled with oak open-carved screens. There are small galleries only in the transepts.

The principal entrance is by a deeply-moulded doorway, surmounted by a crocketed gablet in the tower, which is attached to the west end of the nave on the north side. The organ loft is in the tower, with arched openings into the nave and north aisle. At the east and west ends are large five-light windows, with rich traceried heads, and which, by reason of there being no west gallery, and the organ being on the side in the tower, are seen without interruption from all parts of the interior. The east window is filled with painted glass, by Mr. Ballantine, of George-street, Edinburgh, to whom great credit is due for a most perfect specimen of geometrical pattern glass painting, and which he has further improved by the introduction of prisms of coloured glass at the intersections of the pattern to throw the prismatic rays

The reading-desk, pulpit, seats in the chancel, and communion railing are of oak, highly enriched with carving by Mr. Oliest, of Norwich. The wall at the east end of the chancel is decorated by diaper work, columns, and arches—forming spaces for the Decalogue, Lord's Prayer, and Belief. The centre of the pavement of the chancel, as also the risers of the steps, are inlaid with encaustic tiles. The font, which was the gift of a parishioner, is on the left, on entering the Church by the principal entrance. It is of Caen stone, well carved, and appropriately decorated: it stands on a large base forming two steps, and it is a handsome and commanding object.

The Church will accommodate 950 persons, half being in free seats; and the entire cost is little more than £6000.

Metropolitan Church Union.—An association, under this title, has been recently formed in London, with a view to the extension and general renovation of the Church. As it is proposed to extend the sphere of its operations to secular as well as to spiritual matters, it has been deemed advisable to admit laymen to membership. The management of the affairs of the society, and the conduct of the measures to be adopted in prosecution of its objects, have been vested in a permanent committee, consisting of the president, vice-presidents, the treasurers, the clerical and lay secretaries, twelve clergymen, and twelve laymen (the latter being communicants). The following are among the more prominent matters appointed for immediate consideration:—1. Security for the legitimate exercise of the Royal supremacy in the appointment of bishops; 2. The establishment of a representative assembly of the Church, by revival of Convocation; 3. The better observance of church discipline; 4. Increase of the three orders of the ministry, adequate to the spiritual wants of the people; 5. The adoption of measures of church extension, with provision for the due exercise of official patronage, lay and clerical. In pursuit of these objects, due reverence for the episcopal office is to be kept steadily in view. There are many minor matters to which the association, when fully organised, may possibly direct its attention with advantage; however, the revival of Convocation, in all its pristine power and integrity, appears to be the main and immediate object of the union, as the clergy and very many of the laity have arrived at the conclusion that a distinct representative assembly of the Church is imperatively necessary. In furtherance of that object, addresses having been put in course of signature throughout the several dioceses in England and Wales, were returned to the union, by whose officers they were presented to the Queen, to his Grace the Primate, and to the Archbishop of York. Copies of the society's rules and regulations were also submitted to the two archbishops, to the bishops, and other Church dignitaries; and although the society abstained from soliciting the expression of any opinion thereon, the Primate and several of the bishops declared their cordial approval of the design. This society must not be confounded with the "London Union on Church Matters," which, though devoted to similar objects, is so distinct as to admit of either body pursuing its own independent course of action without the semblance of rivalry or antagonism.

There was shot on the Muirten farm, Perthshire, lately, a hare, apparently a cross with a rabbit; the body partaking most of the first animal, and the head of the latter. The flesh was also of a composite character. It has been hitherto, supposed by naturalists that these races do not intermingle. The specimen is a stuffed, and may be seen at Mr. Ancell's.

INTERIOR OF THE NEW CHURCH AT SOUTH BATTERSEA.

THE MORLEY TESTIMONIAL.

EXPOSITION OF ARTS AND MANUFACTURES, AT BIRMINGHAM.

The great Exhibition of the Manufactures of Birmingham and the Midland Counties was opened on Monday, in a vast building in the grounds of Bingley House, Broad-street. The Exposition has been prepared to add to the attractions of the British Association, to be held next week at Birmingham; but it was opened on Monday last, for the gratification of the visitors to the Musical Festival. As we shall more fully illustrate the event next week, we now quote the following summary of its principal features from the Midland Counties Herald:—

"First, then, in metal work, because of primary importance to Birmingham, the chief contributors are Messrs. Messenger and Sons, R. W. Winfield, Salt and Lloyd, William Potts, Gray, Martin, and Gray, John Hardman and Co. These firms send specimens of their manufactures in bronze, brass, and iron. Stuart, Smith, and Co., of Sheffield, and W. Marsh, of Dudley, send excellent specimens of their bright polished stove grates; as do Johnson, Cammell, and Co., and Hoole and Co., also of Sheffield; and Yates and Co., Rotherham. In other articles in the metal trade, Messrs. Stock and Son, and T. Dowler, of Birmingham; and the Patent Shaft and Axle Company, Wednesbury, exhibit specimens of their respective manufactures; and in tin goods, Thomas Griffiths, Birmingham, and Schoolbred and Co., Wolverhampton. The Battery and Metal Company contribute an interesting series of examples illustrative of the ductility of copper in the manufacture of kitchen utensils. In papier maschie, Messrs. Jennens and Bettridge, M'Callum and Hodson, Thomas Farmer, Footherape, Showell and Co., C. F. Harris, R. Turley, Charles Pitt, and others, of Birmingham, and F. Walton, of Wolverhampton, are the chief contributors, and the display is magnificent. In glass, F. and C. Osler contribute some splendid specimens of chandeliers and candelabra, and other branches of the same material will find representatives in the articles exhibited by W. and T. Richardson, of Stourbridge, Bacchus and Son, Lloyd and Summerfield, and Rice Harris, of Birmingham, and the Patent Decorative Glass Company, London; whilst in stained glass Messrs. Wm. Chance and Sons, of West Bromwich, and John Hardman and Co., of Birmingham, make a most interesting display. In buttons there are some highly novel and beautiful specimens from William Elliot, Hardman and Iliffe, and Smith and Kemp, of Birmingham; whilst the medal department of the art of die-sinking is fully exhibited by Allen and Moore, Hardman and Iliffe, and Edwards and Bait. In porcelain, Messrs. W. T. Copeland and Co., Minton and Co., Wedgewood and Co., and R. Ridgeway and Co., of the Staffordshire potteries, all exhibit the highest and best specimens of the products of their respective houses; whilst Worcester is fairly represented by the contributions of Messrs. Chamberlain and Co., and H. Grainger. In textile fabrics, there will be found a few choice specimens of Spitalfields silk, from Mr. Isaac Boyd, of Spital-square, London; Utrecht, and other stamped velvets, from Bennett's, of Manchester; and the cotton print trade in garments will be partially illustrated by the Strines Company, of Derbyshire and Manchester, M'Naughton and Potter, and Dalglish, Falconer, and Co., also of Manchester; and the furniture cottons by Swainson and Dennys, of London. In miscellaneous contributions there are articles of great merit from the Patent Machine Carving Company (Jordan's), London; ornamental sawing, by Prosser and Hadley; carpets and rugs, from various Kidderminster houses; specimens of that material for making everything—gutta percha. Nor must it be forgotten that Mr. Collett contributes some magnificent specimens of silver plate, and Messrs. Elkington also fill a large glass case with electro-plated goods.

WINE-COOLER.

We have this week engraved the Morley Testimonial, one of the principal pieces of plate exhibited by Messrs. Elkington; and a Wine-Cooler, of classic design, from the same house.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, September 9. Fourteenth Sunday after Trinity. Moon's Last Quarter, 6h 55m P.M.
MONDAY, 10—Sun rises 5h 27m., sets 6h 25m.
TUESDAY, 11—Alexander Selkirk sailed from Arcasale, in Ireland, 1703.
WEDNESDAY, 12—Sun rises 5h 31m., sets 6h 20m.
THURSDAY, 13—Sun rises 5h. 33m., sets 6h. 16m.
FRIDAY, 14. Holy Cross.
SATURDAY, 15—The Russians set fire to Moscow, 1812.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING SEPTEMBER 15.

Sunday		Monday		Tuesday		Wednesday		Thursday		Friday		Saturday
M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
6 10	6 35	7 0	7 25	8 0	8 26	8 50	9 15	9 35	10 15	11 0	11 40	Noon	Noon
												12 0	12 40

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Northesk" is thanked; but the Sketch did not reach us in time to be available.
"A. Y. Z."—We have not received the question.
"C. S." Blackheath, sale, perhaps, favour us with an original Sketch.
"Q. E. D." Berwick.—Our informant last week was in error. The lion statant, part of the family crest on Northumberland House, has the tail extended towards the Strand.
"S. S."—On further investigation, we find that Theodolite, in Practical Science, is derived from θεάομαι, I view, and ὅδλος, stratagem; in Todd's "Johnson," from θεάομαι, I see, and δολιχός, long: both derivations are far-fetched, and probably both wrong. It is more likely that the instrument takes its name from some maker, particularly as it is as often spelt Theodolet. This supposition derives additional weight from the Vernier, another surveying instrument, being named after its inventor, Peter Vernier.
"W. B. S." Mincing-lane.—See Defoe's "Account of the Great Plague in London, in 1664-5," when, on September, more than 12,000 persons perished in one week; in one night 4000 died. We have not the daily average, but Defoe gives the entire number at 100,000. Sir W. Petty states the population of London to have been, in 1682, about 670,000.
"Lough Erne Races and Regatta."—The report did not reach us in time.
"E. D. M." will find a good recipe for Pot Pourri in the "Family Manual and Servant's Guide," p. 107: it is too long for quotation here.
"Sagittarius" Declined.
"C. S.," Birmingham.—The Greenwich Railway terminus adjoins Tooley-street, Southwark. The Greenwich terminus is about half a mile from the Hospital.
"Archæophilus" is thanked for the Sketch, though we have not room for it.
"J. S."—Declined.
"E. N. Q." will find directions for constructing a "Raree Show" in the "Boy's Treasury of Sports," published at 86, Fleet-street. See, also, No. 13 of the Magazine of Science.
"J. A.," America.—The presentation would not be informal on account of the profession.
"A Subscriber," Dingwall, N.B.—The address is Argyll-street, Regent-street.
"J. R. J.," Liverpool, is thanked; but we have not room for the View.
"W. P.," Wolverhampton.—Braley's "London and Middlesex" gives the Guildhall Monument inscriptions, this work being remarkable for attention to such matters
"Hugo," Ashburton.—A work on the manufacture of soap has lately been published by Hughes, Fleet-street.
"L. M."—Apply respecting Mansfield's Gas Apparatus to 108, Fleet-street.
"W. V. H." may hear of the books in question at Hughley's, Fleet-street.
"R. G."—We do not remember.
"Longhren."—We cannot give you the charcoal process.
"Tullamore."—The eldest daughter of the reigning Sovereign is the Princess Royal, Prince George of Cambridge will, as a matter of right, succeed to the dukedom and the other peerage honours at the death of his father.
"A Y. Z.," Newcastle-on-Tyne—An application to "The Officers in Waiting, Heralds' Office, Doctors' Commons," will obtain a copy of the arms in question.
"A Reader."—An M.P. has no fixed precedence. The knight of a shire ranks before the representative of a city or borough. The Speaker of the House of Commons takes place immediately after barons. All knights, however created, rank co-equally, according to seniority of creation. A new presentation is required to be admitted at the Queen's levees. "Your Majesty" is the correct form of expression.
"C. G. C." Dublin.—There is no exclusion of Irishmen from the regiment in question. Banns are the more ancient bearings in heraldry.
"V. Z." Camberwell.—The expenses of entrance at an Inn of Court is about £25. The fees on a call to the Bar amount to nearly £100. The annual cost of the Terms is about £18.
"Inquirer" Which family of Morgan does our Correspondent require the arms of?
"A Subscriber."—Address a letter on the subject of the change of name to G. Harrison, Esq., Windsor Herald, Heralds' Office, Doctors' Commons.
"G. L."—A crest cannot be granted unless the party seeking it is already entitled to coat armour. Apply at the Heralds' Office.
"Scipio," Islington. The soundness of the works named has been much questioned.
"G. B. B."—To obtain admission to the reading-room of the British Museum, apply to Sir Henry Ellis, at the Museum, with written recommendation of, at least, three householders The Eltrick Shepherd, James Hogg, the Scottish poet, was born in the parish from which he derived his patronymic, in 1769; he was a cow-herd when a boy. He died in 1835.
"Querist," Norfolk.—The prophetic passage to which you refer is:—

Soon shall thy arm, unconquer'd steam, afar
Drag the slow barge, or drive the rapid car;
Or, on wheel-winging wings expanded bear
The flying chariot through the fields of air,

&c., from Darwin's "Botanic Garden," first published in 1789, but written, it is said known, at least twenty years before the date of its publication. (See "London Anecdotes, Inventors and Discoverers")
"C. D.," Birmingham.—Bede is one syllable. See his epitaph:—

Here in the flesh rests Bede the priest; O give,

&c.; the name is also Beda.
"F. A. S. E." Wet Cocca.—Received.
"M. A."—Plaster figures are made to resemble ivory by high varnishing.
"M. S." Montreal.—Sketches of the stirring events and occurrences around you will be preferable to years of scenery.
"P. T. J.," Holborn-hill.—Hamel's "French Grammar." (Whitaker and Co.)
"Cato."—We prefer the shorthand system you name.
"Improvement," Dover.—We have not seen the advertisement.
"A Constant Subscriber," Charing-cross.—The most convenient disinfectant is chloride of lime, to be had of any druggist.
"E. L. A.," Dublin.—The appointment is scarcely of sufficient importance for announcement.
"Stupidity" is not concealed.
"Mans."—There is a work published on the woollen manufacture, in addition to Bischoff's "History of Wool."
"Westman," Birmingham.—The phrases are of synonymous import.
"Justaman."—The arms of Parnell, viz.: Party, a talbot sejant ar. in chief three roundels, gu." are given in the "Armoury."
"A. B. C." A clergyman has a perfect right to use his family crest.
"An Irish Martin"—Mr. Wykeham Martin has also surviving by his first wife, Lady Jemima, daughter of Earl Cornwallis. Falmouth is a country residence at Tregothnan, Truro.
"A Lecoman Subscriber."—The sons of the married daughters of Sir John Black, by his wife, the daughter and heiress of Peter White, Esq., become entitled, by the deaths inwards of their uncles, to quarter the arms of Black and White. In the case submitted, the quarterings should be marshalled thus: 1. Smith; 2. Coates: 3. Jones; 4. Black. 5 White; 6. Simon.
"Numisor."—On a chev. engr. between three escalops of six points arg.
"J. L."—The arms on the seal sent us are those of Roberts, as granted A.D. 1614.
"Lex et Lovely"—To Earl Richardine's next brother.
"A Young Herald."—Unless you have a shield-of-arms of your own, you cannot bear your wife's at all.
"Connaught."—The whole question is reduced to this:—Is the marriage legal ab initio? That point can only be ascertained by reference to a legal authority.
"Marjarida." The arms of Maconochie, of Meadowbank, are "Ar. three oyster banks couped, fructed, and environed, holding a branch of arrows ppr., and in base a Royal crown gold, all within a bordure sprunny of eight or and sa."

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1849.

INTELLIGENCE was received in town on Tuesday that the mob of Montreal had again been guilty of acts of cowardly violence and resistance to the law, as detailed in another column; and when the last accounts left, the exasperation of parties was so great as to lead to the belief that the disturbances are very far from being at an end. Whatever, in the meantime, may have occurred in Canada, one circumstance has occurred in England which will not be without weight when it is known on the other side of the Atlantic. The English journals that first contained the announcement of these riots, contained an extract from the London Gazette, notifying that the Governor-General of Canada had been raised to the British Peerage. The Canadian Tories clamoured for his Lordship's recall, and Lord Elgin, unwilling to perpetuate any personal animosities, offered his resignation. Instead of accepting it, the British Ministry courteously and firmly insisted upon his retaining his high office, and have now raised him to the Peerage, to testify how warmly it is willing to support him in the dignified, manly, and strictly constitutional conduct which he has pursued in the trying circumstances in which he has been placed. It is possible, if not probable, that these events in Canada are but the beginning of the end, and that the end is the severance of the connexion now binding the colony to the parent state. If this be the end, Great Britain, while doing strict justice, can but say, "Let it come." We lost the United States for denying them the rights of free citizens. If we are to lose the Canadas, for according the rights of free citizenship to all classes and races in the colony, we shall at least have nothing with which to reproach ourselves. It is one thing to lose a valuable colony by our obstinacy in wrong. It is quite another thing to lose it by our perseverance in the right. In supporting the local Government of Canada, the British Government acts upon the principles of the strictest justice. It has granted a Constitution to Canada, at the request of Canada; and it supports the majority of the Canadians in the clear legal rights thereby established. If we should ultimately lose the colony in this attempt, we shall not, at least, have the pangs of an ill-conscience to add to the severity of the deprivation. This country can afford to abide the issue with patience and equanimity, whatever it may be.

All the men who make or who resist revolutions in Europe know that, in case of failure, there is one spot in the Old World where they may repose in security, and await happier times for the country of their love. England is the only home of the exile—the only safe refuge of the distressed. Since the memorable days of February, 1848, our shores have received a succession of illustrious travellers—flying from political and social proscription, from imprisonment, or from death. Louis Philippe, M. Guizot, and Prince Metternich were the first to claim our hospitality. After them came MM. Louis Blanc, Caussidière, and other leaders of the Revolution that made France kingless. The gallant Kossuth, having seen his last hopes for the independence of Hungary destroyed, is on his way to claim the proverbial hospitality, which is certain, in such a case as his, to be accorded with enthusiasm. A still more interesting, because more illustrious, body of exiles has been lately added to the list. They fly from Rome and the tender mercies of the foolish but cruel Cardinals who govern the Papal States. We desire to call the attention of our readers to the operations of a committee of English gentlemen, who have taken upon themselves the generous task of raising a fund for their relief. The Roman refugees have no common claims upon our sympathies. In the words of the eloquent address issued by the committee, and which is understood to be the production of one whose writings are celebrated wherever the English tongue is spoken—

> They are the good citizens who, when Rome was abandoned by her Monarch and Executive, answered to the general voice, and arose to give her law, tranquillity, and order; who built upon the ruins of a monstrous system, which had fallen of its own putrescence and inherent corruption and truth; who established and maintained a Government, administered under the pressure of great difficulties, with a veneration for the sacred rights of life, liberty, and property, new in Rome—administered with an honesty, forbearance, and singleness of purpose, that won the respect of dispassionate observers, of all principles and parties. They are the soldiers who defended that Government against the united arms of bigotry and despotism, and upheld it successfully. They are the brave besieged who held Rome with a courage and devotion worthy of her ancient glories, but with the magnanimity and clemency of Christian men. They are the dignified capitulators, who, when all means of further defence exhausted, opened their gates to forces sixty thousand strong, assembled round them by an act of such stupendous baseness, that it will remain an inefaceable stain upon the honour and the name of the French Government, through all the coming ages.

We believe the touching appeal made on behalf of these distinguished exiles will not be made in vain. It is probable, if the infatuated triumvirate of Cardinals which now governs Rome in the name of the Pope, continues to rule it for a few months longer, that no long time will elapse before an opportunity will arise when they may once more be of service to Italy, upon the soil that gave them birth. In the meantime, whether it be long or short, we rejoice to believe that the exiles will not be suffered to remain forlorn and penniless; and that a sympathy, not only fruitful in words, but in deeds, will relieve them on their high appreciation of the goodness of their cause, and the honesty, humanity, and forbearance with which they conducted it. The names of the committee have been extensively advertised, and are good security to the public that the cause is in proper hands.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

PREFERMENTS.—Rev. T. O. Rocke, to Clungunford Rectory, Salop, diocese of Hereford; £630, with residence; patron, Rev. J. Rocke. Rev. W. Williamson, to Datchworth Rectory, Herts, diocese of Rochester; £382, with residence; patron, Charles Hall, Cambridge. Rev. C. P. Duckworth, to Sherborne Rectory, Hants, diocese of Winchester, £491; patron, W. L. W. Chute. Rev. J. Quirk, to Martinsthorpe Rectory, Rutland; diocese of Peterborough; patron, Duke of Devonshire. Rev. R. H. Hill, to Britford Vicarage, Wilts; diocese of Sarum; £281; patron, Dean and Chapter of Sarum. Rev. G. Edwards, to Minera P.C., Wrexham; diocese of St. Asaph; £.00; patron, Vicar of Wrexham. Rev. W. Edwards, to Llanfair Vicarage, Denbigh, diocese of St. Asaph; £350; patron, Bishop of St. Asaph. Rev. R. W. Eyton, to Northop Vicarage, Flint; diocese of St. Asaph; £500, with residence. Rev. W. S. Serres, to Septon Rectory, Dorset, diocese of Chichester; £127; patron, Earl of Ilchester. Rev. J. Swainson, to Epperstone Rectory, Notts, diocese of Lincoln; £309 with residence; patron, Holme's trustees. Rev. J. Tidmarsh, to Toxside Perpetual Curacy, York, diocese of York; £150; patron, Vicar of Gisburne. Rev. J. R. Henderson, to Dufton Rectory, Westmoreland, diocese of Carlisle; £178, with residence, patron, R. Tufton, Esq., of Appleby Castle.

VACANT PREBENDS.—Hereford Rectory, Herefordshire, diocese of Peterborough; £210; Rev. J. M'Cormick, deceased; patron, Rev. E. T. Reynar. Wootton Vicarage, Lincoln, diocese of Lincoln; £203; Rev. J. Giffard, deceased; patron, Rev. J. Giffard.

THE BISHOP OF LONDON AND JESUS COLLEGE, OXFORD.—For some time past there has been a serious misunderstanding between the Bishop of London on the one hand, and the authorities of Jesus College, Oxford, on the other, relative to one of the fellowships of that establishment. It appears that the fellowship has been held for many years past by the most distinguished men of the college, the last Fellow being the Rev. Thomas Morgan Davies, M.A., who by the college appointment also held the Lord Chancellor's rectory of Llanfinland, in the diocese of Llandaff. Circumstances directed the Bishop of London's attention to the subject, and his lordship discovered that, in his will, the founder of the fellowship directed that the person holding the appointment should be bound to prepare himself for holy orders, and that in due time he should proceed as a missionary to one of the colonies or dependencies of the British Crown, the proceeds of the fellowship being devoted to his partial maintenance while there. The Bishop of London forthwith called upon Mr. Davies, who was already in holy orders, to enter upon missionary duties, but the reverend gentleman studyly refused to do so, and in this determination was backed by the college authorities. The Bishop then called upon the Master of Jesus College to elect another Fellow who would comply with the directions of the founder, but this request was unheeded, and the matter has consequently been for some months past in dispute, both parties having taken the opinion of the highest legal authorities. The Master and Fellows of Jesus College have at length given way. The Rev. T. M. Davies has resigned the fellowship, and in his place Mr. John Jenkins, a commoner of the college, and a native of Glamorganshire has been elected. Mr. Jenkins is not yet in holy orders, but as soon as he is admitted to the office of deacon, he will proceed, under the direction of the Bishop of London and of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, to one of the British colonies to pursue his missionary operations. The subject has excited much attention in the University, and the issue of the contest has been looked for with considerable interest.

VACANCY.—PREACHERSHIP OF GRAY'S INN.—This valuable appointment has become vacant by the death of the Rev Dr. Shepherd, who held the office nearly forty years. It is in the gift of the benchers Dr. Shepherd was a so rector of St. Bartholomew, Royal Exchange, in the City of London. This benefice (a sinecure) is worth £667 per annum, and is in the gift of the Lord Chancellor.

RICH DIGGINGS.—We understand that the relatives of a young man, named Sweetser, who went from Cambridge to California, have received a letter from him, stating that he secured 15,000 dols. worth of the "dust" in six weeks (after his arrival.—Boston Trans.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE QUEEN AT BALMORAL.

BALLATER, Monday

Her Majesty was again a worshipper yesterday in the parish church of Crathie. As on the former occasion, there was a vast increase in the attendance over the ordinary number of the congregation. We were assured that the "kirk was never so full, he, nae even at the sacrament;" while, doth to say, a part on of these present gave a considerable number of reasons for that the errand which took them there was to see the Queen, rather than to join the worship or hear the sermon. The Rev Mr Anderson, the min ster of the parish, again officiated. He was not quite exempt from the embarrassment under which he laboured on the previous week. In the words of a person who seemed to be a devoted admirer of his, "He did come on rather better, but still not so clare and fair furth the gets as his usual is do." Both her Majesty and the Prince listened with the utmost attention. The demeanour of the great majority of the congregation was marked by propriety and respect. The scene furnished a fine illustration of that cardinal doctrine of our faith the equality of all God's creatures.

Friday.

Her Majesty and Prince Albert, accompanied by the Marchioness of Douro, crossed over, yesterday, to the shooting-lodge on Loch Muick, where it is proposed to carry for a short time. The party left Balmoral a little before mid-day, and traversed the distance thence to the loch, which is computed at seven miles, mounted on Highland ponies. Her Majesty and the Prince slept at "the Hut," and returned to Balmoral late on Friday evening, after his Royal Highness' shooting.

Lord John Russell has returned from a visit to Mar Lodge.

On Wednesday, a Court was held at Balmoral, at which a form of prayer was ordered to be used in all churches and chapels, beseeching Almighty God to remove the plague of cholera from among us.

THE QUEEN DOWAGER.—Her Majesty the Queen Dowager and suite have arrived at Bentley Priory, from Bushy Park, for the autumn.

PLAS NEWYDD, ANGLESEY.—Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, accompanied by the Hereditary Grand Duke and Duchess of Mecklenburgh-Strelitz, the Princess Mary, and a numerous suite, arrived here on Wednesday week. The Baron Knesebeck had preceded their Roya. Highnesses, in order to secure the requisite accommodations. It is scarcely necessary to say his duties were considerably lightened, owing to the kindness of the neighbouring nobility and gentry; every delicacy which the season affords being forwarded to Plas Newydd in profusion. The illustrious strangers passed the week in this delightful mansion, and left on Monday, in order to visit the romantic scenery contiguous to Carnarvon.

THE Duke and Duchess of Richmond have been entertaining a select circle at Gordon Castle during the last fortnight. The visitors have mostly left, after having had capital sport in Gemfiddich. The Earl of Desborough remains at the castle. We understand his Lordship's marriage with Lady Caroline Gordon Lennox, eldest daughter of the Duke and Duchess, will not be solemnised until the return of the family to London from Scotland, early in November.

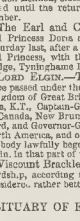
THE Earl and Countess of Shrewsbury, accompanied by the Prince and Princess Doria and their youthful family, returned to Alton Towers on Saturday last, after a month's séjour in Scotland, during which period the Prince and Princess, with their noble relatives, paid visits at Dunrobin Castle, Mar Lodge, Tyninghame Park, Eglington Castle, Cubraun Castle, &c.

LORD ELGIN.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters-patent to be passed under the Great Seal, granting the dignity of a Baron of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland unto James Earl of Elgin and Kincardine, K.T., Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief of her Majesty's provinces of Canada, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia, and of the island of Prince Edward, and Governor-General of all her Majesty's provinces on the continent of North America, and of the island of Prince Edward, and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten, by the name, style, and title of Baron Elgin, of Elgin, in that part of the said United Kingdom called Scotland.—Gazette

Viscount Brackley has rallied, after his dangerous indisposition. His Lordship, according to letters received on Wednesday from Worsley Hall, was considerably rather better

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

MAJOR-GENERAL THOMAS HUNTER BLAIR, C.B.



THIS gallant officer died at Leamington on the 31st ult., and made the number to be lamented of the brave departed heroes of the Peninsula and Waterloo. Few carned, with more distinguished service, military reputation. He entered the army in 1802, and in 1808 he proceeded to the Peninsula, and participated in the battles of Roleia and Vimiera, the action at Lugo, and the retreat and victory of Corunna. Subsequently, he assisted at the capture of Oporto, and was severely wounded at Talavera. The latter unlucky circumstance proved of great injury to Major Hunter Blair, for while in hospital he was made prisoner by the French, and detained in France until the peace of 1814. The next year's brilliant campaign of Waterloo gave the gallant officer another opportunity of distinction, but he was again severely wounded on that memorable field. The last sphere of action on which Col. Hunter Blair was engaged was India, where he remained several years, and served with great credit during the Burmese war, commanding a brigade in Ava, and distinguishing himself at the taking of Melloon. He was a companion of the Order of the Bath, and received clasps for Roleia, Vimiera, Corunna, and Talavera. His commission of Lieutenant-Colonel bears date the day of Waterloo; that of Major-General he attained in 1846.

He was the fifth son of the late Sir Alexander Hunter Blair, Bart., of Blairquhan, and brother of the present Sir David, and of James Blair, Esq., M.P., of Dunskey, whose estates he inherited. He married, in 1820, Eliza, daughter of J. Norris, Esq.

HENRY METCALFE, ESQ., OF HAWSTEAD HOUSE, SUFFOLK.

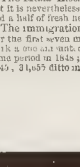
THE death of Mr. Metcalfe took place at Hastings, on the 2d inst., in his fifty-ninth year. He was only son of the late Christopher Barton Metcalfe, Esq., and grandson of Christopher Metcalfe, Esq., a literary friend of the poet Drydea. The property at Hawsted came into the family principally through the marriage of that gentleman with Miss Ellen, only child of Christopher Barton, Esq. Mr. Metcalfe, whose decease we record, obtained an accession of fortune as heir to his grand-uncle, Philip Metcalfe, Esq., of Hill-street, Berkeley-square, F.R.S., F.S.A., and M.P., who was one of the executors and personal friends of Sir Joshua Reynolds. By Frances Jane, his wife (who died in 1830), daughter of Martin Whish, Esq., Commissioner of Excise, Mr. Metcalfe leaves three sons.

SIR GRAVES CHAMNEY HAUGHTON, KT., K.H., F.R.S.

THE death of this gentleman, who was a member of the National Institute of France, occurred at Cloud, near Paris, on the 28th ult. Born in 1788, the second son of Dr. Haughton of Dublin, and brother of the late Archdeacon Archer, Esq., of Mount John, county Wicklow, he entered at an early age the military service of the Hon. East India Company, but retired, from ill-health. Subsequently, having studied the Oriental languages in the College of Fort William, Calcutta, where he obtained many honours, Mr. Haughton was appointed, in 1817, a Professor at Haileybury, and held that appointment till the year 1827. In 1832 he offered himself a candidate for the Boden Professorship of Sanscrit at Oxford, but withdrew in favour of Mr. Wilson. In 1833 he received the honour of knighthood.

Sir Graves took for many years an active interest in the Royal Asiatic Society, and was connected with several of the learned continental associations. He contributed to the "Journal" of the former society two papers on the Sanscrit alphabet, and a translation of the "Institutes of Manu," in the original Sanscrit; his "Bengali Grammar," and his "Bengali, Sanscrit, and English Dictionary." He was also author of "Prodromus; or, an Inquiry into the First Principles of Reasoning," &c. He claimed descent from the old Lancashire family of Hoghton, of Hoghton Tower.

THE HON. LADY NEAVE.



THIS lady died, deeply lamented, on the 29th ult., at Dargham Park. She was born on the 28th October, 1805, the only daughter of James Everard, ninth Lord Arundell of Wardour, by Mary, his second wife, daughter of Robert Barnett Jones, Esq., of Adge, in Sussex. Attorney-General of Barbadoes; and married, 7th August, 1828, Richard Digby Neave, Esq., who succeeded to the family Baronetcy at the death of his father, the late Sir Thomas Neave, in 1848. Her Ladyship leaves six sons and four daughters.

LADIES' SMALL PARCELS.—There has just been printed by the House of Commons the petition from Newcastle-on-Tyne, being one of several petitions to the House from the inhabitants of various towns of the manufacturing districts, in which they complain of the high rates of charge by railway companies on goods traffic, and especially with reference to "small parcels," that they endeavour to obtain a monopoly of traffic, and a right to charge as they please on such parcels. The whole subject is expected to be brought before Parliament next session.

The Manx Liberal says it is scarcely within the verge of probability, but it is nevertheless an indisputable fact, that on Tuesday last twelve hundred and a half of fresh herrings were bought in Douglas for 1s

The immigration into the United States continues on the increase. For the first seven months of the present year the arrivals at the port of New York alone amounted to 144,223 immigrants, against 110,404 immigrants for the same period in 1848; 103,118 ditto in 1847; 89,230 ditto in 1846; 45,500 ditto in 1845; 31,065 ditto in 1844.

POSTSCRIPT.

THE BERMONDSEY MURDER.

On Thursday night Mr. Inspector Yates proceeded to Her Majesty's-gaol, Horsemonger-lane Gaol, accompanied by Mr. Bassett and Mr. Hammond, the clerks of Messrs. Kelluck and Co., stockbrokers, for the purpose of testing whether or not they had ever seen Manning. Two-thirds of the prisoners were placed in the yard at the same time. Manning being one among them; when both Bassett and Hammond distinctly and positively identified Manning as being the individual who sold to them the railway shares belonging to Patrick O'Connor, and which, by Manning's direction, they sold, supposing that they were transacting business with O'Connor himself.

FURTHER EXAMINATION OF MANNING AND HIS WIFE.

The interest attached to the proceedings in this case increases as it progresses. Before nine o'clock on yesterday (Friday) morning the Southwark Police Court was surrounded by a large crowd of spectators, a strong body of police being again posted in front of the built ing, in order to preserve a clear pathway for passengers. Among the persons present was Sir James Duke, the Lord Mayor.

At a quarter past eleven o'clock, Manning and his wife were placed in the dock, their solicitors being accommodated with seats by their side. Mr. Bodkin again conducted the case on the part of the Crown, assisted by Mr. Hayward, and in the Treasury solicitor.

Manning was allowed a seat, as he had been under medical treatment; but Mrs. Manning stood, having her veil drawn up.

Mr. Bodkin stated that his trial would not come on at the next sessions of the Criminal Court, but would allow it a long remand for that purpose by the permission of the solicitors to the prisoners.

Several persons then entered, bearing the ugly-looking articles of a bushel of lime to Manning on the 28th of July last, and also of the shovel and the ripping chisel, or small crow-bar, supposed to have been used in the perpetration of the murder.

W. Day, porter at the London-bridge station, repeated his former testimony as to assisting in taking the boxes from a cab, to which was the prisoner, on the 13th of August.

W. Dyne, the check-taker in the cloak-room, repeated his evidence as to having given numbered tickets to the female prisoner, for two boxes which she deposited there.

Inspector Haynes: I took possession of two boxes having a card upon each addressed "Mrs. Smith, passenger to Paris; to be left till called for." I examined them, and they chiefly contained female's apparel, among which was the dress I now produce. There are several marks of blood on the skirt of the dress. The body had been recently washed, but not the skirt. There are no marks on the body. There is a smear of blood on it, as if the fingers had been wiped on it. (The female looked at it with a bright smile on her countenance.) He produced a pair of gaiters and two small toilette covers, marked with blood. I also found some papers and letters in the box; and a document purporting to be the last will of Manning in favour of his wife. On the 31st of August I was at Southampton, when the luggage packed arrived. I went on board. I saw the prisoner in custody of Sergeant Langley. I travelled by train to London with the prisoner. I held no conversation with him to induce him to say anything of a particular kind; he voluntarily asked me if I had seen his wife. I told him I had not. I then cautioned him, and said, "This is a serious affair, Manning. I am an officer: don't say anything to me that would prejudice yourself." He said, "I am perfectly aware of all that. I was very foolish not to leave. I ought to have stopped, and explained." He then asked me if I thought he should see his wife to-morrow. I told him I did not know, but thought not. He said, "If I could see her in the presence of the magistrate and clergyman, she will confess all. I was her first adviser O'Connor."

Mr. Solomons objected to this evidence, and the magistrate said he agreed with him; but Mr. Bodkin contended that it was proper evidence, and Mr. Secker gave way upon the point.

Mr. Solomons said a man could not make a statement against his wife.

Mr. Secker: That will have no weight against her, and therefore she must hear it.

Inspector Haynes continued: He said that his wife had invited O'Connor to dinner. It was she that shot him. She had laid the cloth for dinner, and shot him as he was walking behind him down stairs. He said, he had been afraid of his own life from her violent conduct, and that once she had run after him with a drawn knife. She would think no more of human life than a cat. He said O'Connor had induced them to take the house in Minver-place, promising to dig with them, and they had laid out £30 in furnishing the house; that he (Manning) was out of town at the time, and when he returned, his wife told him O'Connor had only a spade and pickaxe, and meant to break his agreement; that he would not come again, and she had threatened to be revenged on him in consequence. When he described the way in which O'Connor had been shot, she told him that it appeared in papers that there were a great many other wounds on the head. He did not reply, but afterwards appeared to be low-spirited.

Sergeant Langley: I belong to the detectives of the A. division. I was first directed as to the murder on the 17th of last month. I have been employed in inquiries respecting it up to the 27th. I arrived in Jersey on the 24th, together with Lee-yer. I went to Prospect House, in Jersey, on the 27th. In the house I found Manning. He was in bed. I and my party secured him. He was asked by Mr. Smith, said, "What are you all about here? Are you going to murder me?" I knew him before I made myself known to him, when he said, "Oh, sergeant, I'm glad you're come. I was coming to London to explain it all. You know I've been taken?" Supposing he meant his wife, I said, "Yes, I believe she is. I do not know, but the newspapers state so." "I suppose," he said, "they have found a good deal of evidence upon her—£1300 or £1400?" I said, "I do not know." He said, "you must consider yourself in custody, on the shocking affair that took place in your house in London." He said, "Oh, I can explain it all when I get there." I took charge of his handcuff him, when he said, "I hope you will not do more than is but we did so, and took him to the gaol. In going there he said, "I am perfectly innocent—she committed the murder herself." He said that she had invited O'Connor to dine, and he came with the cloth was laid. He asked him to walk down-stairs to wash his hands, and, when at the bottom of the stairs, she put one hand on his shoulder, and shot him at the back of the head with the other. Chevalier then said he had heard him say that she had cut his body, and Manning replied, "She had a grave dug for him." He gave that answer after a pause of a few seconds. No other question was put to him by anybody. We then found him in quiet. I prevented any other questions being put to him. In the gaol he asked me how long he should be kept there, as he was anxious to get to London to explain it all. I said he had better be cautious, as what he said I should be bound to repeat. He replied he was innocent, and it was of no consequence, as he would explain it in a few hours. I brought him to London in the Ispatch steam boat, accompanied to London by Haynes. While on board the boat, he asked me, if she should confess, whether he should be free? or had he much excuse me giving any answer, as I was an officer? He again said, "She must confess when she sees me, especially if a clergyman is present." I made no answer.

Archibald Sheffills, clerk in the issue department of the Bank of England, produced a Bank note for £100. It was numbered 15,043. It was cashed by Frederick Manning, 7, New Weston-street, Bermondsey. He received in exchange 80 sovereigns and a ticket for fifty Joseph Reece Adams, also a clerk in the Bank, proved giving the person presenting it five £10 notes. The numbers were 67,372—67,376 inclusive.

Mr. Richard Carter, Mr. Mosley's cashier, identified the handwriting on the back of the £100 note as that of the prisoner.

Mr. Francis Stevens, stockbroker, proved having purchased for deceased, and delivered, ten shares, on August 6, of the Sambre and Meuse Railway; also, on May 1, ten shares, in the Amiens and Boulogne. These were all the shares on the day they were bought. He afterwards saw the scrip in the possession of Mr. Mosley, of Edinburgh. The female prisoner came to his office early in August, saying she had some money to invest, and introduced herself by saying she was recommended to come by Patrick O'Connor. He asked what she wished to invest in, and she replied, stock that she could sell abroad. She said that was to be a fashion, but if she sold when it was low, she could advise her sell perhaps it would be ten per cent. She left.

Mr. Binns applied to have some articles of clothing out of prisoner's carpet-bag. The magistrate directed that should be done.

The case was then adjourned till this day (Saturday) week at three o'clock.

INTRAMURAL INTERMENTS.

The authorities of the Board of Health, on Thursday, issued a peremptory order, under the Nuisance Removal Act, to the churchwardens and overseers of the parish of St. Clement Danes, Strand, to close the graveyard belonging to the parish in Portugal-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, against any further interments, and to cause, at all events during the present prevailing epidemic, and to make other provision for interments. [illegible] ings for the closing of the graveyard of St. Ann's, Blackfriars, that of St. Andrew's, Holborn; and of Christchurch, Westminster, on the reports of their inspector, Dr. Gavin Milroy: and for the closing of the Cross-bones Burial-ground, St. Saviour's, Southwark, on the report of Mr. Grainger.

PARISH OF ST BOTOLPH.—On Thursday morning, at a vestry meeting held in the parish church of St. Botolph, Bishopsgate, to take into consideration whether some arrangement cannot be made to prevent interments in the churchyard of the parish, and on any other business connected with the burial of the dead, it was unanimously agreed—"That, in the opinion of this vestry, the public health is alarmingly endangered by the continued practice of burying the dead in the parochial burial-ground and in the vaults under the church, and that all interments in the churchyard and in the vaults under the church be henceforth discontinued; and that a committee be appointed to carry out the foregoing resolution, with full power to take any measures for their enforcement." A committee was accordingly appointed.

PARISH OF ST. BRIDE.—On Thursday evening, at a numerously attended meeting of the parishioners of this district, held in the vestry-room of St. Bride's, in St. Bride's-church-yard, an agreement between the churchwardens and the directors of the City of London and Tower Hamlets Cemetery Company for constituting their cemetery the burial-place of that parish, was confirmed. The Rev. C. Marriott, M.A., rector, was in the chair. The proposed agreement was then laid before the meeting, which was at once agreed to. The question of the intention of the City Board of Health to erect a cholera hospital in the site of the old Fleet was then discussed, and a memorial, which was ordered to be printed in the morning papers, was drawn up, praying that the Board of Health would abandon the idea of building any hospital on the proposed site.

SUDDEN DEATH OF MISS HOBHOUSE.—We regret to state that this young lady died on Thursday, at Erlestoke Park, the seat of her John Hobhouse, after a very short illness. Sir John had just returned from a tour in the Channel Islands with his family, when Miss Hobhouse was suddenly seized with illness, which unfortunately terminated fatally.

General Cubrera is at present on a visit with the Duke of Rutland, at his Grace's shooting-box, Longshaw lodge, Derbyshir

We have much pleasure in stating that the King of Prussia has presented the Rev William Cureton, of the British Museum, with the gold medal of literary and scientific merit, as a mark of the high appreciation in which the King holds Mr. Cureton for his recent edition of "Ignatius." The medal was accompanied by a letter from the King to the Chevalier Bunsen, desiring him to convey to Mr. Cureton the expression of his Majesty's approbation.

PHILANTHROPIC SOCIETY FOR THE REFORMATION OF JUVENILE OFFENDERS.—At a meeting of the governors of this charity, held on Thursday, it was announced that the late Joseph Denison, Esq., M.P. for West Surrey, had left the institution £500, free of duty, in aid of the newly-established farm school at Redhill; and that the Earl of Carlisle had accepted the office of vice-president to the institution.

We regret to learn the continued delicate state of the health of Sir Charles Rowan prevents his resuming his arduous police duties.

ARRIVAL OF LOLA MONTES (MRS. HEALD) AND HER HUSBAND IN LONDON.—Mr. and Mrs. Heald, who have been on a continental tour, arrived in London at eleven o'clock on Thursday night, and immediately drove to their residence, in Halfmoon-street, Piccadilly. It is expected that Mrs. Heald will make her appearance at Marlborough-street Police-court on Monday next, to meet the charge of bigamy preferred against her by Mrs. Heald, the aunt of Lieut. Heald

The office of surgeon to Guy's Hospital, vacant by the death of Mr. Astley Key, has been filled up by the appointment of Mr. John Hilton.

COURT-MARTIAL.—At the court-martial on Commander Pitman, on Wednesday, Mr. Newman Brakes, assistant-surgeon; Temple Chevalier, midshipman; and other witnesses, were examined for the prosecution by Lieutenant Graham. Mr. Elliott was next called on as prosecutor to sustain the charges brought by him against Commander Pitman, and examined Charles Norbrunn, sail-maker, on the charge of false expenditure of the mantop-sail, &c. Alfred Holy, boatswain; Richard Taylor Storey, gunner; and John Bright, private Royal Marines, have since been examined. The Court sat at half-past n ne yesterday, and the prisoner (Commander Pitman) cross-examined John Bright, after which Mr. Elliott stated that if the Court would take the evidence produced by Lieut. Graham, on the charges of cruelty, as his evidence also, he would call no further witnesses. The Court agreed to do this, and the prosecution was closed. The prisoner then applied for time till Tuesday, to prepare his defence. This was granted, and the Court adjourned.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

There is no domestic news of any interest in the intelligence from Paris yesterday. The President of the Republic has received an official notification to the effect that Russia intends to withdraw all her troops from Hungary.

The Municipal Council of Havre has, by nine to seven, passed a resolution that it disapproved of the speech addressed by the Mayor to the President of the Republic, intimating, in effect, that he ought to respect the constitution.

The inauguration of the railroad from Paris to Tonnerre will take place on Sunday next. It is thought that the President of the Republic will, notwithstanding the length of the journey, be able to return to Paris on the same day.

AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY.

Nothing is yet determined upon with regard to the Hungarian officers who surrendered to Marshal Paskiewitch. The young Emperor Joseph is to be crowned during the present year, and is to be married to a Princess of the House of Saxony.

SAXE WEIMAR. The Duchess D'Orleans and her children arrived at Eisenach on the 1st instant. She was received with great respect by the population.

ITALY. Venice has been declared in a state of siege, by order of the civil and military Governor, Gorzkowski, who deems severe measures indispensably necessary to guarantee public tranquillity, after passing from a state of long excitement and commotion.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

COURT-MARTIAL

An important court-martial (which was commenced on Tuesday week, and has not yet been brought to a close) is at present proceeding on board her Majesty's ship Impregnable, 104, Captain Sir Thomas Maitland, now lying in Hamoaze, for the purpose of trying Commander Joan Charles Pitman, late of her Majesty's ship Childers, on the following charges—

"General cruelty from or about the 4th of September, 1846, until the 20th of May, 1849; and for false statements in the log of her Majesty's ship Childers, on or about the 9th day of October, 1848.

"False expenditure of stores, viz. a hammock-cloth, represented to have been washed away on or about the 14th of October, 1846; and a mainstpsail, represented to have been lost on or about the 9th of October, 1848

"False statements in the log-book of her Majesty's ship Childers, from Sept., 1846, to May 20, 1849."

The court consisted of Sir John Louis, Bart., Admiral of the Red, and second officer in command of her Majesty's ships and vessels at Plymouth, President; Captain Wm. James Hope Johnstone, C.B., flag-captain, Impregnable, 74, deputy ship of the Ordinary; Captain John Macdougall, of her Majesty's ship La Hogue, 56, steam guard-ship; Captain Sir Thomas Maitland, C.B., of her Majesty's ship Impregnable, 104; and Captain George Greville Wellesley, of her Majesty's ship Dædalus.

William Eastlake, Esq., was the officiating judge-advocate.

The first of the above charges was preferred by Lieutenant Graham, and the others by Mr Elliott, the late master of the Childers.

The particular nature of the alleged cruelty will be gathered from the following extract from the evidence adduced:—

Mr. Andrew Richard Elliott, late master of her Majesty's ship Childers, examined: I was serving on board her Majesty's ship Childers during her passage from Mauritius to China in the year 1846. I remember a marine serving in that ship, of the name of Haig, being flogged. To the best of my recollection his offence was for stealing candles, to burn in the lower deck when the ship was battened down, which also was the greater part of the passage, in consequence of bad weather. To the best of my recollection he received four dozen lashes for that offence, and afterwards was kept for several days a prisoner on deck abaft, on the stern gratings. The weather at that time was very cold and boisterous, insomuch as it was impossible to remain on deck without being wet through.

What became of that man?—He became insane before he was released from punishment, and was invalided for being of insane mind. I have not seen the certificate.

Do you mean that he became insane before he was released from the gratings?—Yes.

Do you recollect a marine of the name of White serving in her Majesty's ship Childers? I do.

Do you recollect what became of that man?—He jumped overboard and was drowned.

Did you hear Commander Pitman say that he would flog him?—I did; I heard Commander Pitman say that he would flog him—that he would give him four dozen to-morrow morning.

By Captain Maitland: Did he say that he would flog him, or what?—I heard Commander Pitman say that he would give him four dozen the next morning.

Mr. Graham: Do you know the offence that he had committed? To the best of my recollection, his offence was for appearing at quarters dirty and with his clothes not mended

Do you consider that he jumped overboard to avoid being flogged?

Captain Maitland: That can only be a matter of opinion.

Mr. Graham: I do not wish to press the question, but I shall call other witnesses on this point.

Captain Johnstone said it was no evidence, unless there had been a previous conversation.

Mr. Graham: I have no wish to press that question on the witness, because I shall prove it by other witnesses.

Commander Pitman: I shall object to that question. Any person might give the same opinion who was not there.

By Mr. Graham: I kept the log-book at that time.

Will you refer to the log, and state the entry of that event?—"Henry White, Royal Marine, 42d company, Friday, Sept. 11, 1846, being found dirty, was ordered forward to wash himself, from which place he was seen to jump overboard, and was drowned. Rounded to; let go the life buoy; shortened all sail; lowered jolly boat; carried away main-topmast."

What time elapsed from the time of the commander saying he would give him four dozen and his committing the act of jumping overboard?—Merely the time of walking from the quarter-deck to the head, which, being a small vessel, would probably be three or four minutes.

Do you recollect any inquiry being made as to the circumstance of the man jumping overboard?—I do not recollect any inquiry being made, but I remember the fact of his jumping overboard, in consequence of his being told that he should be flogged, was not even named in the log-book.

Capt. Macdougall: It is impossible to state that.

The President: You could not have put it in the log-book that he was told he was going to be flogged.

Witness: It is put in the log-book that in consequence of Henry White having gone forward dirty not in consequence of his being told that he would be flogged—that he jumped overboard.

Captain Macdougall: No one could know the cause of the man jumping overboard, unless you heard it. You cannot swear that he jumped overboard in consequence of the threatened flogging? The Witness: I can swear that it was put in the log that he was sent forward in consequence of his being dirty.

The President: But you cannot swear that he jumped overboard in consequence of being threatened to be flogged, whatever your suspicions may be; that is only a matter of opinion?—Witness: This is the only thing I wish to make evidence here; that the thing was hushed up. That it was merely put down that he was dirty.

* * * * *

Mr. Graham: Did you ever, during the passage from the Mauritius to Hobart Town, see the boys scrubbed in the head of her Majesty's ship Childers?—I have never witnessed their scrubbing, but I have seen them come down naked.

Captain Macdougall: Do you mean scrubbed naked?—I have known them to be scrubbed, but I could never look at it myself.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE TO OFFICERS IN INDIA.—The following general order has been issued by the Commander-in-Chief: "Head quarters, Simlah, 1st of July, 1849.—1. Many applications for leave of absence, having been made to the Commander-in Chief, which applications are founded upon former general orders, those general orders are hereby cancelled. The Commander-in-Chief does not wish to refuse a fair portion of leave of absence, when it can be granted without detriment to the service; but the conquest of a large country is not concluded by the battle which wins it. The army must remain alert in its contonments to support the civil authorities till the country be settled. This is the present position of the Queen's and the Company's armies in India, and the Commander-in-Chief will not grant leave of absence to officers except on special occasions, supported by cogent reasons. Officers must remain at their posts with their unencumbered officers and private soldiers. Nor can the leave an officer to spare; but, on the contrary, they have all of them too few, and the duties of these few must not be increased by leave of absence lightly conceded —therefore, 2. Commanders of divisions, brigades, and regiments are requested not to apply for leave of absence for any one under their command without forwarding publicly or confidentially the special reasons which induce them to recommend such application for leave. 3. Any officer in command allowing an applicant for leave to quit his post in anticipation of such application being granted, does so at his own, no small responsibility. The sickness of an officer, the confidential officer, or private soldier, or any one else, ought to be shown to be, is, of course, an exception to this order, the object of which is to support discipline, not to produce or increase individual affliction."

HASTINGS.

HASTINGS, one of the Cinque Ports, and next in importance to Dover, is, perhaps, the most delightful ly located of all our watering-places. It lies upon the coast of Sussex, 57 miles south-east from the metropolis, and 19 miles by the Hastings and St, Leonard's branch" of the London and Brighton Railway.

The town is romantically situated in a narrow valley sloping to the sea on the south, but inclosed on every other side by lofty hills and cliffs. Mr. Parry, in his "Panorama of the Coast of Sussex," thus describes the position of the town:—

"The old part of Hastin s, but little altered in its predominant features since it has become a place of resort, although individually the majority of the houses have been rebuilt, consists of two long streets, called High and All Saints-street. Between the backs of the houses a small, uncolored brook of clear water, which is an advantage to its vicinity, flows towards the sea. Beyond the opening which brings the town down to the sea, the line of coast immediately rises into lofty cliffs, and that between Castle-hill and the entrance into the valley at Pe.ham New Buildings and the Parade lie closely sheltered, the body of the town is comp etely in a hollow. The height of the two hills is not very dissimilar. The Castle-hill takes a sweep inward at the end of the Parade, leaving the valley up which the old streets ascend. The sea-line lies under the hill in a singularly commanded style; the houses seem almost built into the rock; in fact, in some instances it has been cut away to receive them."

"The Castle" here referred to is the ruins of an ancient fortress, supposed to have been erected prior to the Norman Conquest, they are situated upon a lofty cliff, westward of the town. The town-hall was built in 1823, and is supported on arches, with a market-place beneath it. There are well-appointed hotels, a theatre, marine parade, baths, subscription libraries, &c. The inhabitants are principally employed in the coasting trade and fisheries; but a considerable number are occupied in boat-building and in the making of lines. There are two churches, both of which are shown in our View: they are dedicated to All Saints and St. Clement, and are very ancient structures.

A mile and a half due west of Hastings is the handsomely-built town of St. Leonard's; the principal range of buildings from Marina extending above the coast, and fronted by an esplanade—one of the finest in Europe. There is luxurious accommodation for visitors, the principal seats being upon a very splendid scale.

Hastings is one of the most interesting historic sites in England: it is named after the Danish pirate, Hastingues, who landed here in 893, but it is probable that the town had an earlier origin, as in the reign of Athelstan, A.D. 924, it was a place of sufficient importance to have a mint.

In the bay of Pevensey, four miles east-east of Hastings, William the Conqueror landed with his army from Normandy, prior to the decisive conflict nine miles north-eastward, on a beaun then called Epiton, or Hetheland, but which henceforth assumed the name of Battle from the abbey that is, however, known in history as the Battle of Hastings. Upon the battle-field, William founded a splendid abbey, of which there exist some fine remains. Pevensey, too, was the scene of a battle, in 1387, not built by the Romans, constructed of Roman materials: the fortress, in its original state, must have been of vast strength. Beachy Head is a noble point of Pevensey Bay, 575 feet high; and on the borders of Pevensey level, a few miles north of the castle ruins, is the Castle of Hersimoncaux, one of the oldest castellated mansions in England. Between Beachey Head and Pevensey is the retired bathing-place, Eastbourne, proved to have been a Roman station by the several coins found in it.

These are but a few of the many interesting sites to be visited within an easy distance of Hastings.

Hastings is much frequented for its warm and sheltered situation in late autumn and winter; and the railway communication has already greatly increased the number of visitors. The mean temperature of the three winter months at Hastings is 43°, while the mean temperature of Nice and the adjoining south-ern countries is generally only 40° 25'. The soil is a dry sand rock, and the aspect south. The air at St. Leonard's is somewhat more bracing.

DEER-STALKING.

THIS masculine species of hunting, or of stalking after, Deer, was, until lately, but little noticed, except by occasional episodal sketches of the literary inquirer or the enthusiastic wanderer. The publication of Mr. Scrope's "Art of Deer-Stalking," some ten years since, however, made the sport more popular, for Mr. Scrope has described its enterprising features with the pen of a master

The haunts of the red deer-stag are principally confined to the Highlands of Scotland, and, consequently, embrace many of the most interesting scenery imaginable. In early times, the red deer and the roe principally abounded. Since, increased population, and the attention paid to local agriculture, has hastened the work of the ground. There, however, still remain in the Highland forests, which, being the property of persons of rank and wealth, are yet preserved for the accommodation of wild game, but principally of red deer. The Forest of Mar, which is one of the largest tracts set apart for deer, is extending, according to Mr. Scrope, from the north-east point joining Aberdeenshire, to the south-west point joining Gaig Forest, about 40 miles in length. That portion of the Forest which is set apart for Stalking Deer is bounded westward by Craigh Urrard and the river Bruar; northward by the Tarff; and eastward by a most thickly stocked grouse country.

Near unto the Athollard Forests, principally formed of the vast tracts of Derrie Chat and Derrie More, where the bens or mountainous ridges rise in Alpine grandeur. These several wild districts the Earls of Sutherland occupied exclusively as their own hunting grounds, the extended cover a tract fifty miles in length, and from ten to thirty in breadth. Besides these, are the celebrated deer-haunts in Ross-shire, the property of Lord Lovat; the deer forest of the Duke of Gordon; and the forests of Corriekmh, in the district of Glenorchy, in Argyleshire, the sporting owner of the latter being the Marquis of Breadalbane.

The Forest of Mar, though less extensive than some others, averages fifteen miles in length, and nine in breadth; and here the deer, instead of being destroyed to make room for sheep, have been preserved by the spirited owner, the Earl of Fife. In this forest his Royal Highness Prince Albert has frequently stalked deer; and we read in the Edinburgh Advertiser, that one of her Majesty's distinguished visitors at Balmoral, Lord Jocelyn, accompanied by Horatio Ross, Esq., went out deer-stalking in Mar Forest, and, after a successful walk, his Lordship shot a fine stag dead at 120 yards, and wounded an ther, which, however, got away.

The practice of Deer-Stalking requires innumerable stratagems to enable the stalkers to get within reach of the wary animals; while equally diversified are the precautions of the deer to circumvent the designs of their spiritual enemy. A circuit of some miles must occasionally be traversed, to enable the hunters to approach the deer undiscerned; and, after having arrived at the given point, it is sometimes necessary that the stalking party should crouch down. In the accompanying illustration they have just risen Rifles of the best kind are used in the sport; and the dogs are the Scotch deer-hound, a couple of which are shown in the Engraving just springing to catch the deer the instant that it falls by the shot of the distant stalkers. When the sport is [illegible] ously conducted, the herd will often remain so [illegible] before they make off: in one instance, [illegible] person only. Two are usually taken [illegible] the deer drops lifeless, as our Artist has depicted.

"That Deer-Stalking is a chace," says Mr. Scrope, "which throws all other field-sports in the background, and, indeed, makes them appear wholly insignificant, no one, who has been initiated in it, will attempt to deny. The beautiful motions of the deer, his picturesque and noble appearance his sagacity, and the skilful generalship which can alone ensure success in the pursuit of him, keep the mind in a state of pleasurable excitement." Yet, with all this excitement the fall of the noble animal recals the lament:—

WATERING-PLACES OF ENGLAND.—HASTINGS.

Magnificent creature! to reach thee I strive
Through forest and glen, over mountain and plain;
Yet, now thou art fallen, thy fate I deplore,
And lament that the reign of thy greatness is o'er.—THE HON. T. LIDDELL.

DEER-STALKING.—THE FALLING DEER.

"The armourers, accomplishing the knights,
With busy hammers closing rivets up,
Give dreadful note of preparation."—Shakspere's King Henry V, Chorus to acts 2 and 4.

"CHIVALRY OF THE TIME OF HENRY V."—PAINTED BY D. MACLISE, R.A.

This magnificent design was originally painted in fresco, and exhibited in Westminster: it was Mr. Maclise's second work in the new art, his first having been painted for the Queen's Pavilion in Buckingham Palace Gardens. The "Chivalry" fresco was purchased by Charles Birch, Esq., of Harbourne Hall, near Birmingham. Mr. Maclise has since considerably extended and improved the design, and has painted it in oil, for the dining-room of Somerleyton, Norfolk, the seat of Mr. Peto, M.P. It will be placed in an ornamental frame, in the lower portion of which (in the Engraving left blank) will be inscribed the quotation given above, from Shakspeare's "King Henry V.," whence the general idea of the picture has been derived. It was exhibited last year at the Royal Academy, and is described in the Catalogue as "A Knight being armed by his esquires for the combat, bearing the two-handed sword of the period."

The following lines, give, it may be supposed, if not the chivalrous, the domestic interest of the scene:—

THE DEPARTING WARRIOR.

There was a time—oh never may its like
Return to curse us—when insatiate War
Made desolate the fields, the homes, the hearts
Of merry England—merry but in name:
When knightly prowess in the battle-field
Was the sole test of virtuous manlihood,
When loving eyes beam'd kindest love in eyes
That glow'd in warfare with the fiercest flame:
When swords and spears were pious implements,

And heavy blows the only arguments
That Kings and nations deign'd to comprehend.
At such a time, a Lady saw her Lord,
With heavy heart, departing for the wars.
She might have loved, ere she was crowned a diadem,
The knightly courtesy of tournaments,
The bascon and the show of chivalry,
And gems of hosts preparing for the strife;
But admiration of such deeds as these Forsook her in her woman's weakness;
And War's loud summons to her loving Lord
Fill'd her with sorrow What were wars to her,
Or quarrels of Great Henry with the French,
That they should tear her husband from her side,
And leave, perchance, her young babes fatherless?
He stood beside her "while the armourer With busy hammer closing rivets up Accomplish'd him for battle;" and the voice
Of martial trumpets fill'd the shaken air
With full sonorous tides of blatant sound.
He strove to comfort her; but all in vain.
He did not feel the comfort that he spake,
And his soft words no kind conviction brought
To the sad heart that only yearn'd for home—
Its charm, its joy, its duty, and its peace;
And in the loyalty it gave to him
Forgot the minor loyalty it owed
To King and country. Vainly he essay'd
To prove that peace would speedily return,
And bear him on its wings his duty done,
Rich honour gain'd—to her connubial side.
Whence War nor Fate should ever tear him more.

Love is not confident—it dwells with fear;
And ever to the bone that he instill'd
Her fears gave harbour to the one distrust,
That Death might prove a traitor to her love.
And cruel glory rob her of her joy;
At last unhappy thought took breath in song,
And gave this answer to her Lord's farewell:—

All nature takes the part
Of the sorrow in my heart—
Takes the voice of my lamenting, all the night and all the day:
I hear a sweet bird singing,
On a branch of willow swinging,
And express, for my sevrrowe, the sad song seems to say:
"Oh, worthless are the laurels
That are gain'd in kingly quarrels,
And the phantom glory gather'd in the death-fields of the fray."

The passing west-wind grieves
As it rustles 'mid the leaves
I cannot shut my fancy to its low, incessant moan;
Against my casement beating,
Still the rain-drops keep repeating
And evermore, for evermore, the one despording tone:
"Oh, day of desolation,
When nation wars with nation!
When homes and hearts are broken, and realms are overthrown!"

The trumpet's boasting voice,
Bidding warriors rejoice,
Speaks of murder, fame of glory, and of death, not victory.
The joy-bells londly pealing,
But wake the sane sad feeling;
And evermore, for evermore, seem tolling mournfully:
"O nations rede and parley,
O meancholy glory,
O weary, weary warfare, that steals my love from me!"

MUSIC.

BIRMINGHAM MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

(From our own Correspondent.)

BIRMINGHAM, Thursday.

This triennial meeting ranks the highest in the Musical Festival of this country, and its fame is European The first gathering took place in 1778, at St Philip's Church. Since the completion of the Town Hall (a copy of one of the ancient Greek temples), the performances are held in the new edifice; and a more admirably adapted locality for the purpose is not to be found in the kingdom. Upwards of 2500 persons can be comfortably seated in the Hall. The nomination of Mr. Costa as the conductor has led to some important changes in the construction and disposition of players and singers in the orchestra. The total amount of vocal and instrumental strength is 664, of which 318 compose the chorus, 128 the band, and twenty-one comprehend the principals. The arrangement of this vast phalanx of executants, in order that there should be the fair balance and distribution of sound, has developed Costa's thorough knowledge of the true principles of acoustics, and of the placing of the executants in such a manner as to ensure their free action and perfect accommodation. The removal of the long organ-loft of the organ has been a marked amelioration: the key-board is now just behind the great drums of Chipp, and the player, looking in a mirror, can follow the conductor's beat with the baton. The director's box stands forth from the orchestra facade, and he has in it not only all his vocal and instrumental forces before him, but also the principals as well, the latter occupying the front row on chairs. Behind the principals are the players. In the centre are Lindley and Lucas (violoncelli), and Howell (principal double, bass). Behind these are the violas—full in the centre of the orchestra. To the left of the conductor, who sits fronting his troops, with his back to the body of the hall, is a row of first violins, with Sainton and Blagrove as principals. To the right are the second violins, with Watkins as principal. Behind the first and second violins and violas are thus in the front rank, flanked by violoncelli and contra-bassi. Behind the violas are concentrated all the wood—oboes, flutes, clarionets, and bassoons, flanked by the brass—trumpets and trombones on the right-side; violoncellos and basses also occupy the highest row of seats behind the brass. The chorus-singers are distributed in rows of seats rising to the roof. The voices composed 81 trebles, 67 contralti, 62 tenors, and 78 basses—318 in all. This chorus was selected entirely from the local choral societies, and from London. The band consists of 24 first violins, 24 second violins, 16 violoncelli, 15 double basses, 4 flutes, 4 oboes, 4 clarionets, 4 bassoons, 4 trumpets, 4 horns, 3 trombones, ophicleide, serpent, drums, &c., making an effective of 124 performers, amongst whom are Messrs Willy, Dando, Hargitt, Percy, Griffin, Casolani, Severn, Ribas, De Folly, Barret, Nicholson, Lazarus, Williams, Boose, Baumann, Godfrey, the Harpers, Irwin, Handley, Fiatt, Jarrett, Cioffi, Prospere, Healey, Smithies, Pratten, Mattei, Hausmann, Distin, Hesse, Lindley, Svejnoni, Guffcle, Mellon, Patey, Thomas, Thirlwall, Case, Trust, Lyon, &c. A finer orchestra was never congregated. Amongst other alterations may be noticed, that the gallery in which the president and vice-presidents are seated has been lowered.

On Tuesday morning, at half-past eleven, Costa entered, and was received with prolonged bursts of cheering from every part of the hall. This moment must have been to him most gratifying. He had been once before, some twenty years previously, at a Birmingham Festival. At that period he was an unknown tenor singer, and his début was a failure. Now he returned, not as a singer, but as the most remarkable conductor who has ever presided over any orchestra. The performances of Mendelssohn's "Elijah" and "Athalia" on Tuesday and Wednesday mornings, will not easily be forgotten. The "Elijah" will not, perhaps, ever be heard in London so advantageously, for to collect together such a band and chorus exacts the means of such a triennial gathering as this. Mixed with the gratification of hearing such a matchless execution of "Elijah," feelings of deep sadness pervaded. Beneath the orchestra, veiled with a sable scarf, was a marble bust of Mendelssohn on a pedestal. What a mournful sentiment was experienced when it was felt that the inspired composer of "Elijah" was no more; that only three years before he had stood upon the platform where we were then animating the musical masses; and apart from Costa's wonderful reading of the score, that elicited such marked sympathy, a general feeling pervaded the immense multitude that the mighty master was not there to be applauded or to listen with profound silence to his sublime inspirations. But, in the second part, the resolution could not be maintained, and Lord Guernsey, the President, had to call for the repetition of the "Hallelujah" chorus. Tears filled many eyes," sung by Miss A Williams, Miss Stevens, and Miss M. Williams; the chorus, "He, watching over Israel;" the air, "Then shall the righteous," sung by Mario; and the quartet, "O, come every one that thirsteth," sung by Miss A Williams, Messrs Reeves and Machin. Pischek sang the music of Elijah impressively, but his English accent should be improved. Madame Castellan gave the air, "Hear ye, Israel;" and sang in the scene of the miracle of the raising of the widow's child, artistically. Miss M. Williams distinguished herself in the air, "Oh, rest in the Lord;" and Mr. Reeves sang the recitatives with much firmness and precision. In the "Athalia," there were the encores—the first, "Gentle airs that love the vales," sung by Miss A Williams, Miss Stevens (a young débutante of promise), and Miss M. Williams; the War March of Priests; and the picturesque chorus, "Depart, depart." After the "Athalia," Costa made a selection, the most effectively executed pieces in which were Handel's choruses from "Susannah," "Righteous Heaven;" Mendelssohn's chorale, "The Sleepers awake;" and Handel's march ng chorus, "Joy to God," from "Joshua." The solo singing was not equal to the choruses, as yet, in fact, the only great piece of sacred singing has been that of Mario, in "Elijah." He pronounces the English exceedingly, and sang the tenor air with a devotional misery that caused a thrilling effect on

There have been two performances on the organ. Mr. Simms, of St. Philip's Church, in this town, played an oddly mixed fantasia, opening with the song in E flat from the second part of Mendelssohn's "Son without Words," followed with the tenor solo "Cujus Animum," from Rossini's "Stabat Mater" in F, and ending with a fugue in C. Dr. Wesley's playing yesterday was of another stamp. It was a wonderfully elaborated development of the purely liturgical style of the magnificent organ. Perhaps the fantasie might be objected to on the ground of it being overwrought, but the organ was masterly. The oboe flute, bell flute, and contra trumpet stops were especially effective. As a solo player, Dr. Wesley is unrivalled. He was immensely cheered both by band and audience. Mr. E Chipp presided at the organ for the "Elijah," and Mr. Stimpson for "Athalah."

The first miscellaneous concert was given on Tuesday It opened with the most exquisite rendering of Beethoven's "Pastoral" symphony we have ever heard. The parts were enhanced with unerring precision, and the delicate obscu-[illegible] the chorus came somewhat [illegible]nce. From Donizetti's "Don Pasquale," in complete style, and it narrowly escaped an encore. Mario was received with [illegible]ations, and was [illegible] to sing Mercadante's "Sella adorata." [illegible] smiling was [illegible]ally greeted; and in Rode's variations on the [illegible] delighted the audience with brilliant feats; she was enthusiastically encored. She also sang twice with Calzo all the duo from "Linda," "Da quel dì." Sims Reeves was encored in an air, based on a serenade by Weber, in "Euryanthe," Mdme. Castellan was encored in "Ah! non giunge," from the "Sonnambula;" and Mdlle Jenny de Treffz, in Meyerbeer's "Trab, trab." One of the great treats of the concert was Weber's "Oberon" overture, brilliantly played by the band, and unanimously encored Costa's clever canon, "Ecco quel fiero istante," was nicely sung by Mdme Castellan, Mdlle. de Meric, Signori Mario and F. Labiache. The Misses Williams gave Wallace's duo, "Love's approach," charmingly. Sainton's violin fantasia, founded on the "Lucrezia Borgia" themes exhibited immense skill in conquering the greatest intricacies, and it was much applauded. Thalberg's pianoforte fantasia on the "Sonnambula" themes succeeded in the usual upstart spirit, and but for the fairness of the hour would have been encored The audiences here, certainly, cannot be accused of coldness: there were no less than seven encores last night: and it was midnight before the scheme terminated with Rossini's charus, "La conta," beautifully scored by Costa.

THURSDAY NIGHT.

The second concert at the Town Hall, yesterday evening, was brilliantly attended. It lasted from eight until half-past twelve, and there were no less than six encores out of a scheme of twenty-four pieces. Mendelssohn's symphony in A minor, Beethoven's "Leonora" overture, and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March," from the "Midsummer Night's Dream," albeit executed with unprecedented delicacy and precision, were listened to with comparative coldness. The "Leonora" overture, with the brilliancy of the violins at the close, was quite astounding, and yet the hands were few in honour of the executants; and their reception was almost apathetic. Mendelssohn's symphony suffered in consequence of the departure of Bottesini for the Havannah, at which place the great contra bassist is to be musical director of the Italian Opera-house Thalberg was more applauded. There was also an organ solo by Mr. Edmund Chipp, the organist of St Olave's Church, Southwark. Mr. E. Chipp is a son of the veteran player of the monster drums. The subject selected for performance was a fantasia on Haydn's air, "God preserve the Emperor." The solo was too long for the company's taste. The general notion entertained of this colossal instrument is, that there must be a perpetual crash, that it must thunder forth and shake the roof of the edifice. The finest points of the young performer's playing were scarcely appreciated, and yet the theme was delicately executed, as was the adagio in the minor; but it was in the concluding variation, when, with surprising skill, the pedal passages were heard in towering tones, that he was greeted with a general burst of applause, the instrumentalists being, however, loudest in the demonstration. Mr E. Chipp is evidently an enthusiast; and his throwing off his coat before he began his tremendous task, proved that he was thoroughly in earnest, and that etiquette did not deter him from his purpose "to do or die." The encores were to Mdlle. Alboni, in "Il Segreto," the "Invocation" to Meyerbeer's "Prophète," and Mdlle. Castellan in "Don Pasquale" duo; Madame Castellan, Mdlle. de Meric, and Mr. Pearson, in a clever canon, chiefly scored, "Vanne a colei," from Costa's opera of "Malek Adel;" the Misses Williams, in Holmes's duet, "The Swiss Maidens;" and Madame Sontag, in the pedlar's song from "Linda," in the selection of Handel's variations, which she sang most brilliantly. There was also an interesting novelty in this programme, which was also twice sung. It is a concerted piece in the form of a cantata, entitled "Invocation to Harmony," the composition of the Lord Mayor of Birmingham. As our readers are well aware, there are not more accomplished amateurs existing than her Majesty and the Prince Consort. This cantata had only been performed at the Palace, when it was sung by Mdme. Castellan, Mdlle. de Meric, by Mario; and for the bass, by Lablache. Mdlle. Meric, Miss Stevens, Miss M. Williams, and Mr. Machin joined in the chorus. In addition to the above pieces, Mario sang the "Re del ciel" scena of "Jean of Leyden," the finale of the second act in Meyerbeer's "Prophète," and the "Ange si pure," from Donizetti's "Favorita:" Pischek gave the "Standard-bearer" of Lindpaintner; and Miss C. Hayes the grand scena from Weber's "Der Freyschütz." Such an attendance as marked the performance of Handel's "Messiah" this morning has never been exceeded. Hundreds were unable to obtain admission; and all the passages were filled with extra chairs, to accommodate the visitors. The excitement seemed to spread itself to the exterior. The streets were thronged with people, and every house in the line of road to the Town Hall had occupants at the windows, and even on the roofs.

The amount of benefit to be derived from the meeting for the General Hospital will be beyond the average sum considerably. Next week I will give the general receipts for the week. The third and last concert takes place this evening; but, owing to delay in publication, I shall reserve the details until the ensuing week, as also of to-morrow morning's performance of "Israel in Egypt," and a selection. The dress ball in the evening, at the Town Hall, will terminate the grand meeting.

The execution of the "Messiah" has been as triumphant as that of the "Elijah." Here, as well as at Liverpool, the attraction of Handel's masterpiece has proved to be greater than ever. The choruses are the sublime contributions more thoroughly developed than on this occasion. Costa gave a new reading to this grand musical epic in many important places. The overture and pastoral symphony were exquisitely played. The orchestra was beyond all praise. Miss M. Williams and Mdme Sontag in the air, "He shall feed his flock," and in the second part, "Come unto Him," were invited by the President, Lord Guernsey, to repeat their beautiful duet. The Hallelujah was encored by the choristers, "We all like sheep," and "Their sound is gone out." Pischek and Lablache divided the bass soli The former sang with energy and feeling, but is not cognizant of the sacred school: the latter is perfectly cognizant of the sacred school, but has neither energy nor feeling. Madame Castellan, Miss C. Hayes, and Miss A. Williams shared the soprani soli. The last-mentioned singer is certainly the most conversant with the text, and the most conscientious in its execution. Mr. Reeves had the tenor portion, and Miss M. Williams the contralto pieces The vocalization of the latter was perfection. Reeves declaimed with force, and in many passages was everything that could be desired. It is a pity that he cannot divest himself of his operatic style in the production of his voice, and then adverse criticism would be disarmed. Owing to the indisposition of Mr. T. Harper, jun., the trumpet obligato in the last air sung by Pischek, was unfortunately by the second trumpet Harper, but the lip refused its office, unfortunately, and the effect was disastrous.

THE THEATRES.

SADLER'S WELLS.

The "Love Chase" was performed on Thursday, for the first time at this theatre, for the purpose of testing Miss Fitzpatrick's talents in blank verse comedy. The part of Constance formed the occasion Miss Fitzpatrick est-ce indeed, after Mrs. Nisbett. But there is a neatness and precision in the style of the new actress, calculated to carry her through successfully; and though we may not declare a positive triumph, we are entitled to say a report that her assumption is altogether one of remarkable power and promise.

NEW STRAND.

A new comedietta, in one act, by Mr. J. Maddison Morton, was produced on Thursday, under the title of "Where there's a Will there's a Way." It is a translation of the best piece of more than ordinary merit with singular stage tact. The scene is Portugal; and the plot turns on the position of Don Manuel (Mr. L. Murray), the husband of the Regent, Donna Francesca (Mrs. Stirling), whose jealous administration of the political functions will not permit his interference. To serve a friend, Don Lopez Avila (Mr. W. Farren), therefore, Don Manuel is compelled to resort to more than one stratagem—to pretend, in short, to know nothing of him, to oppose his suit, to impute to him motives of love to the regent herself, and finally to place her in a situation of the extremest delicacy—by all which means, however, he succeeds, to the utter discomfiture of his rival, and the happiness of Don Lopez and the Donna Blanche de Favora, the object of his suit. The performance was, throughout, highly effective, and the tone of the composition had a courtly refinement seldom found in pieces of this class of pieces. Mrs. Stirling supported the part of the regent with dignity, and Mr. Leonard Murray was no less characteristic and vigorous. The little drama proved, in fact, a triumphant hit, and we were gratified by witnessing its production to a tolerably full house.

The term of the Adelphi company at the Haymarket is still further prolonged.

ANGLO-SAXON JUBILEE.—The present year being the Thousandth Anniversary of the Birth of Alfred the Great, it has been proposed to celebrate this important event in our early history by some public rejoicing, in which all ranks of people may participate. The end of the Long Vacation, the middle of October, has been suggested as the most appropriate season; especially as it is believed that the birth day of Alfred was between the 26th and 29th of October, 849; and the latter day is well known to have been the date of his death, in the year 901. Wantage, Berkshire, the birth-place of Alfred, has been named for the place of the Festival: it lies on the Great Western Railway, in the neighbourhood of the famous White Horse, Alfred's Well, the Barrows, and the Downs, and thus offers many interesting attractions. The celebration is to embrace the Rev. the Vicar of Wantage; the Rev. Dr. Giles, Bampton, Oxon; Martin Farquhar Tupper, Esq., of Albury, Guildford; the Rev. J. Brereton, Alfred Club, St. James's; the Thomas Hughes, Esq., Donnington Priory, Newbury, friends of rearing at Wantage a memorial to record the commemoration; and that a donation may be given to the Royal Literary Fund in the name of the Scholar King. The Jubilee will be a festival of a peculiarly English character, calculated to call forth kindly feelings, and to fan the fixed point of the consummation of ten centuries, happily to combine the past, the present, and the future." A committee of management has already been formed for the purpose, including began were destroyed, and those adjoining on either side extensively damaged. One of the parties who was assisting to put the fire out fell from a high wall, and was so seriously injured as to be obliged to be taken to the hospital. The origin of the disaster is unknown. The sufferers were uninsured.

MELANCHOLY DEATH OF AN ART ST.—On Tuesday an inquest was held before Mr. Langham, at the Pough public-house, Carey-street, Lincoln's-Inn-fields, on view of the body of Mr. George Lydier, aged 62 years, an artist, and the author of the "Picture Alphabet," as used by the Royal family. It appeared from the evidence of Mr. D. G. Laing, of No. 2, Vi lers-street, Strand, an i others, that the deceased had travelled a good deal, and was well known to the literati in London and abroad. He formerly had the principal management of the late Duke of Gloucester. From his childhood he had exhibited much eccentricity of manner, and he always abhorred the idea of any person entering his apartments, and it was only on Thursday last that he was seen or even classed. Some time since he met with a pecuniary misfortune, and ever since he had been indolent, and was very slothful in his appearance. For the last two years he had occupi l, unknown to his family, who reside in Edinburgh, a small back room, at N . 2, Cl ment's-lane, of which he had four shillings per week. He was in very indigent circumstances, and about twelve months ago an appeal was made to the profession at Lincoln's-Inn on his behalf, known in his prosperity, by which means an annuity of £20 per annum was raised for his support for the remainder of his life, which he got from Mr. Laing in six almanacs weekly. He was last seen alive on Thursday night; he then appeared in his usual health. On Monday evening last a most dreadful stench was experienced in the house by the lodgers, who found it to proceed from the deceased's room. The door was subsequently broken open, and the effluvium that escaped from the room was so great, that the police-constable on the beat, Lovet, the surgeon, were compelled to return down-stairs, and were afterwards attacked with violent sickness. Mr. Lovet obtained a quantity of chloride of lime, and returned to the room. After using the lime very freely, they were enabled to enter the room, and found the deceased lying by the side of the bed, as if he had fallen from it by accident. The body was much shockingly decomposed, and the deceased appeared to have been dead some days. The room, which had never been cleansed since he had lived there, presented a most filthy sight. Mr. Walker, surgeon, attributed death to apoplexy, and the jury returned a verdict to that effect.

FIRE AND ROBBERY AT WALWORTH.—On Monday night, between nine and ten o'clock, a fire broke out upon the premises belonging to Mr. Woods, a wholesale furnishing ironmonger, at No. 6, Mount-place, Walworth-road, within a short distance of Camberwell-gate. Great fears were entertained for the safety of a woman who had been confined a few hours previously. Some of the inhabitants entered the place, but it was with great difficulty that they could prevent the poor creature from rushing into the street with her infant. What makes the case more distressing is, that the woman lost her husband by cholera a few days since. The fire was not extinguished until the lower portion of the premises was completely destroyed, and the upper part much damaged by fire and water. The origin of the fire is unknown. Whilst the fire was burning two persons were detected by Sergeant Sullen in the act of removing some of the property from the premises. He succeeded in capturing one of them. Fortunately, the sufferer was insured.

SANITARY CONDITION OF LAMBETH.—The following is a copy of a memorial from the inhabitants of Lambeth to the Central Board of Health, which bears the signatures of his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, five surgeons of the neighbourhood, and other inhabitants, against the frightfully increasing nuisances therein set forth: "That the mortality from cholera in the said parish is larger than any other parish round London, and is still increasing, as is shown by the returns made to your honourable board. That your memorialists consider, and have every reason to believe, that this excess of mortality is caused by the offensive effluvia arising from the yards and premises hereinafter mentioned, and have every reason to believe, from all or some of these respective parties having become makers of a new description of manure, for which purpose they collect the said large quantities of animal matter. That immediately opposite the yard of J. T. Hunt, in Prince's-street, three persons died in one week of cholera, and one man lies dangerously ill; that the inmates of the houses state that it frequently so fearful that they are obliged to close the windows, are frequently made to vomit, and that the passers-by in the street are compelled to hold their handkerchiefs to their faces to prevent vomiting; that any one passing up Vere-street may see tons and tons of the poisonous matter alluded to. That your petitioners earnestly pray that immediate measures may be adopted by your honourable board to put down this intolerable nuisance, which has produced an unusual mortality in this densely populated district."

BIRTHS AND DEATHS FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, SEPT. 1, 1849

Births registered in the week :—
Males	.. ..	632
Females	.. ..	595
Total	.. ..	1227
Deaths registered in the week :—
Males	.. ..	1321
Females	.. ..	1475
Total	.. ..	2796

Of this large number of deaths, 1663 were by cholera, and 234 by diarrhœa. The mortality exceeds that of any previous week. The greatest number ever registered before in any week since 1840 was 2654 deaths, in the week ending Dec. 4, 1847, when the last epidemic of influenza prevailed. In the cholera epidemic of 1832, parish clerks, in the old bills of mortality, returned 1021 burials for the week ending August 25; which, allowing for deaths in their returns, and for the increase of population, are equivalent to 2450 deaths at the present time. The burials after that week in 1832, declined.

The mortality is nearly three times the average of the season, and is seen by felt all over the metropolis; but the inhabitants of the north and west districts, and people in the distance, can yet scarcely form a notion of the suffering on the south side of the Thames, and, since the middle of August, in the east districts. "The 12th, 13th, and 14th of August," says one of the registrars of Bethnal-green, "will long be remembered in this neighbourhood, the outbreak of this fatal disease being without any adequate preparation; surgeons were wanted in many places at once; the hurried passing and repassing of messengers, and the wailing of relatives, filled the streets with confusion and woe, and impressed on all a deep sense of an awful calamity."

Cholera has already destroyed in this epidemic 9129 lives in London, and of this number 4731 occurred on the south side of the Thames.

RETURN OF DEATHS FROM CHOLERA IN THE WEEK ENDING SEPTEMBER 1.

London (population 1,948,369), 1654.
West Districts.—Kensington (74,896), 34; Chelsea (40,343), 29; St. George, Hanover-square (6,657), 10; Westminster (56 802 . . .), St. Martin-in-the-Fields (25,132), 10; St. James, Westminster (37,457), 11. Total, 169.
North Districts.—Marylebone (138,369), 44; Pancras and Hampstead (140,078), 56; Islington (65,779), 15; Hackney (42,328), 11. Total, 128
Central Districts.—St. Giles (54,378), 30; Strand (43,667), 15; Holborn (14,333), 9; Clerkenwell (56,799), 18; St. Luke (49,9.5), 29; East London (39,718), 22; West London (59,186), 45; London, City (56,033), 25. Total, 194.
East Districts.—Shoreditch (63,864), 139; Bethnal-green (74,208), 128; Whitechapel (71,879), 74; St. George-in-the-East (41,416), 15; Stepney (99,831), 64; Poplar (31,471), 37. Total, 447
South Districts.—St. Saviour (33,027), 55; St. Olave (19,869), 41; Bermondsey (35,002), 70; St. George, Southwark (45,716), 77; Newington (54,653), 93; Lambeth (116,072), 181; Camberwell (39,981), 95; Rotherhithe (13,940), 20; Greenwich (81,129), 89; Wandsworth (39,018), 31; Lewisham (23,051), 8. Total, 730.

METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS FOR AUGUST, 1849.—Till the 19th the air was in very little motion; from the 19th to the 16th it moved rather quickly, and from the 17th it was frequently in a calm state. At the beginning of the month the sky was frequently cloudy, but on three days there were from clouds. During the latter part of the month it was nearly always overcast, accompanied with a very hazy atmosphere; at times the haze and mist were so dense as to cause a great gloom. Within the last seven or eight days of the month London was not visible from Greenwich Park; it was hidden by the dense fog—as most which hung over the city. After the first few days of the month the temperature ranged high, and towards the end the air was close and oppressive; scarcely any rain fell; the atmosphere was dry. The reading of the barometer, at the height of 159 feet, ranged from 29·46 in., on the 13th, to 30·23 in., on the 23rd; the temperature of the air varied from 42·4 to 82·5, thus exhibiting a difference of reading within the space of 40·1 in the shade at the beginning of the month the difference of temperature on the same day exceeded 30°. The average difference of day and night from the 22nd, was 17°. From the 14th to the 22nd, it appears that the reading of the barometer exceeded the average by 0·100 in., and that the water mixed with the air contributed a column of moisture of less than its average height by 0·030 in. and, therefore, the pressure of the air in excess on average value by the sum of these two quantities, viz. by 0·003 in., the temperature of the air exceeded the average by 5°.1. The average value from 70 years is 60° 8; the years in which the averages for August have been as high as in this year are 1776, 1800, 1826, 1807, 1818, 1843, 1825, and 1846. Notwithstanding the high temperature of the air, the rate of evaporation and dew points were below their average value, and, consequently, there has been less than the average weight of water mixed with the air; the additional weight of water required to saturate each cubic foot of air above the average quantity is 1 grain; the deficiency in the actual quantity of the air was 0·727 only, its average value being 6·110 more. No August in this series of years has been so dry; the sky has been more clouded than in . . . has fallen on three days only, and the amount collected is less than 1 an inch; so small a quantity of rain has not fallen in August since the year 1819. The number of days on which rain fell in August, 1848, was 25, and the amount collected was 4¼ inches. The amount of electricity in the atmosphere was small throughout the month.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Tamul."—There can be but one opinion as to the surpassing excellence of the far-famed Indian Problem. Subjoined is another beautiful position (which has been slightly altered), by the same master. The latter is constructed in accordance with the principle of the Indian game which admits of the Pawns moving but one step at a time:—White: K at Q 8th, R at K R 5th, B at Q Kt 2d, Kt at Q B 6th, P's at K 3d and Q Kt 4th. Black: K at Q B 5th, Kt at Q B 4th; P's at Q 2d and 3d, Q B 3d, and Q Kt 2d. White to move and mate in six moves.

"R. R.," Albany.—You should you the St. George's Chess-club, in Cavendish-square. The subscription is only three guineas per annum, and you may there enjoy daily practice with some of the finest players in the world.

"Omicron," Dover.—If we are not mistaken, No. 1 of the three problems submitted is unavailable, if Black takes the Bishop with his King. No. 3 appears to us solvable in three moves instead of six, by first playing the White Kt to Q 4th; and the only one adapted for publication is the last, which is free from flaw, and certainly ingenious.

"Nemesis"—Thanks. A similar solution has reached us from several quarters. With regard to your own very modestly proffered Enigma, the only fault we can discover is its extreme easiness.

"Tyro."—Under the circumstances stated, A. is fully entitled to demand a second Queen, and might, were it possible for him to advance all his Pawns to their 8th squares, have nine Queens on the board at once.

R. V."—Pretty, but a palpable plagiarism from the Indian Problem.

"Tehaw, W."—We shall be glad of a few more examples equally ingenious and well composed.

"J. W. L. M."—Mate cannot possibly be effected in the way you propose. Look at the position again. The "catch" shall be examined.

C. C. C.," Aberdeen.—1. Your solution is right. 2. Enigma No. 468 is correctly stated. Try it once more. 3. King's collection of Chess Problems is published at the office of the Chess-Player's Chronicle.

A Veteran."—With the best play on both sides, it has always appeared to us that the defending player comes off second best in the opening. 1. P to K 4th—1. P to Q 4th. If you refer again to the variation at page 378 of the "Handbook," you will find that, although Black can win the gambit Pawn at the point specified, he must lose in return his Q Kt Pawn. Is it not so?

"Brighton." Your proposed way of continuing the attack is inferior to that actually adopted by M. St. Amant; and if you again play the game over, you will perceive that White's Kt is not at the 3d sq

J. W. H."—A. must retract his last move, and place his King out of check.

"Cogitans." Quite right.

"H. T. L.," Alnwick.—The move in question would undoubtedly have given White a very fine attack

"Thomas."—It is lawful to demand another Queen even when your first is on the board.

A. J. H."—They shall be duly examined.

"Presne." Utah.—*The "*Staunton Chess-men." —We have lately been favoured with a sight of the newly-designed Chess-men you speak of, and shall be greatly mistaken if, in a very short time, these beautiful pieces do not entirely supersede the ungainly, inexpressive ones we have been hitherto contented with. In the simplicity and elegance of their form, combining apparent lightness with real solidity, in the range of their proportions one with another, so that in the most intricate positions every piece stands out distinctively, neither hidden nor overshadowed by its fellows, the "Staunton Chess-men" are incomparably superior to any others we have ever seen.

Solutions by "Omicron," "Dereson," "S. U.," "P. P.," "L. S. D.," "F R S." "Miles," "Old Commodore," "J. B. D.," Edinburgh; "Bellary," "A Veteran," "Nemesis," "Cyrus," "Wand," "A. S.," "W. J. G.," "Ilica," "E. E. X.," "H. P.," "Bath Duo," "M. E. R.," "W. L., Jun.," "S. A.," are correct.

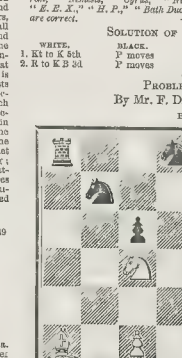
SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 293.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Kt to K 5th	P moves	3. Kt to Q 3d	P takes R
2. R to K B 3d	P moves	4. Kt mates

PROBLEM NO. 294.

By MR. F. DEACON, of Bruges.

BLACK.



WHITE.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

CHESS MATCH BY CORRESPONDENCE

BETWEEN THE LONDON AND AMSTERDAM CHESS CLUBS.

WHITE (Amsterdam). BLACK (London).

41. K to K B 3d

London to play.

The following very lively and entertaining game has just been played between M. LE BARON DE REMIOULLE and MR. F. DEACON, a young amateur, of Bruges.

(Philidor's defence to the K Kt game.)

WHITE (Mr. D.)	BLACK (M. de R.)	WHITE (Mr. D.)	BLACK (M. de R.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	19. K R to K sq	B to K 6th
2. K Kt to B 3d	P to Q 3d	20. Kt to Q 6th (ch)	K to Q B 2d
3. P to Q 4th	Q B to K Kt 5th	21. P to Q Kt 3d	Q to Q B 4th
4. P takes K P	B takes K Kt	22. Kt to Q B 4th	Q R to K B sq
5. Q takes B	P takes Q	23. Kt takes B	P takes Kt
6. B to Q B 4th	Q to K B 3d	24. Q to K Kt 3d (ch)	K to Q Kt 2d
7. Q to her Kt 3d	P to Q Kt 3d	25. R K takes P	Kt to Q 4th
8. Q Kt to B 3d	B to Q B 4th	26. B takes Kt	Q takes B (c)
9. Castles	K Kt to K 2d	27. K R to Q 3d	Q takes Q R P
10. Q B to K 3d (a)	Q Kt to Q 2d	28. K R to Q R 3d	Q to Q 4th
11. Q Kt to his 5th	B to Q 3d	29. Q to K sq (f)	Q to K B 2d
12. P to K B 4th	Q Kt to Q B 4th	30. K R to K B 3d	Q to K sq
13. B takes K B P (ch) (b)	K to Q sq (c)	31. K R to K 3d	Q to K R 4th
14. Q takes Q Kt	B takes B (ch)	32. K R to K 8th	Q R to K B 4th
15. K to K sq	P takes K B P	33. R to K 7th (ch)	K to Q B sq
16. Q R to Q sq (ch)	K to Q B sq	34. Q R to Q 7th	Q R to Q R 4th
17. P to K 5th (d)	Q takes K P	35. P to K Kt 4th	Q to K Kt 3d
18. Q to K B 3d	P to Q B 3d	36. K R to K 5th	And Black resigned.

(a) Kt to K sq is a stronger move at this point, from the immediate attack which it admits by the subsequent advance of the P to K B 4th.

(b) Capt. Evans.

(c) Supposed.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK
13.	Q takes B	Jh. P takes P (dis ch)	K moves
14. Q takes Q (ch)	K takes Q	16. P takes B

And White has an . . . position and . . . advantage

(d) This ad . . . s . . . play

(e) Black takes Q R P (ch) is very tempting

(f) Correctly played

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 478.—By HERR ROSSMAN.

White: K at Q 6th, R at K Kt 8th, Kts at K R 3d and 6th.

Black: K at his K 4th.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

No. 479.—By the Same.

White: K at Q Kt sq, R at K 8th, Kt at Q 4th, P at Q 2d.

Black: K at Q R 6th.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

No. 480.—By MR. A. ROBSON.

White: K at his 4th, Bs at K B 3d and K 3d, Kt at Q sq, P at K Kt 2d.

Black: K at his R 5th, P at K Kt 3d.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

No. 481.—By W. C., of Manchester.

White: K at K R sq, R at Q 7th, B at Q B 6th, Kts at Q Kt 3d and Q R 2d, Ps at K 3d and Q B 2d.

Black: K at Q B 5th, R at Q B sq, B at Q B sq, Kts at K sq and Q Kt 4th, P at K B 6th.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC

Great caution should be used, in the purchase of American lands in London, to deal only with respectable and well-known agencies. A Savannah editor notices an advertisement in one of the London papers, offering lands for sale in Irwin county, and states that an English family who had purchased a tract in the state of Georgia which was advertised in this manner were defrauded of their money, as no such land existed.

The two wheels having been laid down from the Chief Electric Telegraphic Office, Lothbury, to the Post office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, the employés commenced, on Friday week, for the first time, sending off expresses from that establishment. The advantages to the Post-office of this facility of communication will be important, as the Postmaster-General will be made acquainted with the arrivals and departures of all the foreign and colonial mail packets immediately, and also for the transmission of orders to the various parts of the country connected with that department.

The Bishop of Oxford met with an accident a few days since, while visiting Baron Alderson at his seat near Lowestoft. His Lordship was riding in company with some friends, when his horse fell, and rolled over the Right rev. Prelate. Fortunately his Lordship sustained no serious injury, and was able to dine out on the same day.

On Saturday, information was received by the police that the George and Vulture Hotel, Cornhill, had been entered by thieves and plundered of £430 worth of foreign gold and silver coin; the residence of Count Latour, 79, Great Titchfield-street, of a quantity of gold plate and jewels, value £350; the Hon. Mrs. Holmes, Westow-lodge, Tulse-hill, of silver-plate, valued at £200; and E. Morris, Esq., Argyle-lodge, Clapham, of silver plate, valued at £50, and 40 sovereigns.

The town of Amiens has lately inaugurated—in presence of deputations from the learned societies of the capital, and with that array which customarily attends such ceremonials in France—a bronze statue, in one of its squares, to the memory of Jerome Du Cane.

The Magyar patriots who left England by the Peninsular and Oriental Company's packet have arrived at Constantinople, but have not been permitted to disembark, in consequence of the interference of the Russian and Austrian Ambassadors.

The whole of the celebrated Arabian breeding stock at St. Cloud and Versailles is to be brought to the hammer in the course of the months of October. Among the animals to be sold is the famous white stallion Schahdaki, said to be the finest animal of his race ever brought to Europe. It is to be hoped that some portion of the celebrated stock will find its way to England.

Wood, who was so cleverly detected by Mr. Field, one of the inspectors of the Metropolitan police, during his recent visit to Ireland in search of Manning, is the convict belonging to the Warrior convict-ship who escaped from Woolwich Dockyard in the daytime about five weeks ago. Wood, who is known by a number of names, was a most daring burglar, and a boot-maker by trade.

On Tuesday morning a noble Caffrarian lioness in Mr. Wombwell's menagerie, which is now in the town of Hampton, produced a litter of three cubs. The sire is a majestic animal of the black-maned Barbary breed, and has been in England only two years; he is the largest of his tribe which has been exhibited for many years, and is nearly four feet high. The cubs are healthy, active, and exceedingly fine ones.

Considerable dissatisfaction prevails in various parts of the county of Lincoln amongst the labouring population, at the low rate of wages which they have been compelled to accept from their employers, owing in some measure to the great influx of Irish agricultural labourers.

A reward of £100 is offered for the apprehension of Daniel Devonport, who fired two pistol shots out of a revolver at James Reed, a constable of Warwickshire, last week, when escorting him to prison. The constable lies in a dangerous state from the two wounds inflicted upon him.

It is stated that, with a view to another grand military display on the works at Portsmouth, the noble and gallant Lieutenant-Governor of that fortress has ordered a reserve of ammunition of ten rounds per gun to be made until a given period.

At Manchester, two men, viz. Mellor, alias Robinson, and Macaulay, have been committed for trial, charged with forgeries upon the Manchester and Liverpool District Bank to the amount of £1000.

Master Gunner Robert Purcell, of Scarborough Castle, has been discharged from the Ordnance Department, after serving upwards of 54 years, and has been awarded a pension of 3s. 7½d. per day. So high a pension to a person in his rank has rarely, if ever, been awarded.

The Nottingham Mercury says that a bachelor, living at Mansfield, lately issued his own order to announce that he was in want of a wife, 30 years old, of amiable temper, and clean and industrious habits. He was so overwhelmed with applicants, that he found himself unable to make a choice, and was obliged to leave the town to escape his impending fate.

General Cavaignac is at present, though not in an alarming state, suffering from a consumptive affection, hereditary in the family, and which carried off his brother Godefroy. The General is still the central point of a small body of Republicans of the sulle, grouped around him as the only man that they can depend on, should some almost impossible chance can him back to power.

A religious council of the heads of the clergy of the provinces of France to discuss religious matters, some of which have a political bearing, is to be held in Paris shortly. Several Archbishops and Bishops will be present. It is said that one of the chief topics of discussion will be the liberty of instruction.

Letters from Smyrna announce the arrival thereat of the Tartarus British steam sloop of war, commanded by Sir Geoffrey Webster, Bart., having in tow two piratical boats, taken between that port and Constantinople. The Sharpshooter, steamer, Lieut. Bailey, has visited Prevesa, and obtained satisfaction from the Ottoman authorities thereat for an act of piracy committed by a Turkish boat on an Ionian mail craft.

The disturbances who struck work in Shields some time ago, in consequence of an attempt on the part of their employers to reduce their wages, persist in refusing to submit to the proposed reduction, and the most of them have been set on board at their former rate of wages.

The steam-ship Europa, Captain Lott, departed from the Mersey at noon on Saturday last, for Halifax and Boston, with the usual mails for North America. She also carried out 140 passengers; amongst them was the Hon. Mr. Barnard, the ex-Minister of the United States to the Court of St. James's.

Several months before the Revolution of February, M. Chaillou, a horse-dealer, entered into a contract with the Prefect of Police to keep eight horses continually saddled and bridled, for the use of the police, at the Tuileries. Immediately after the Revolution, however, M. Caussidière, who had become Prefect of Police, notified to M. Chaillou that he might consider this contract at an end. M. Chaillou accordingly brought an action against the Prefect of Police, and a few days ago the Civil Tribunal ordered that functionary to pay 1544f. 50c. for arrears due, and 6000f. damages.

The Admiralty have ordered the new system of individual payment of Dockyard wages by cheque to be introduced in operation on the 1st of October next. In the meantime, clerks are ordered to Woolwich Dockyard from the other establishments, to make themselves acquainted with the system.

Among the looking-glasses at the late Exhibition of National Industry, in the Champs Elysées, Paris, was one 14 feet by 12, the price of which was marked at 12,000f. A similar mirror was shipped a few days since at Havre for New Orleans.

The herring-fishing accounts, in almost every station, are highly favourable, and some of them state that the fishing is such as has seldom been witnessed.

A meeting of the ironmasters in the neighbourhood of Stourbridge and Dudley was held at Stourbridge on Friday week, in order to the subject of wages; when it was considered that the present state of the iron trade by no means justified any advance, and the determination was unanimous to blow out every fire-place in the district sooner than yield to the demands of the colliers.

At the last fortnightly meeting of the Liverpool Board of Guardians, the proceedings related chiefly to the sanitary measures adopted by the board at the present juncture. Mr. Harford said the board were spending about £10,000 a year in order to relieve the sufferers from distress.

The British Museum closed on Monday afternoon for the purpose of cleaning, &c., and will be re-opened to the public on Monday, the 10th inst. From that period till the 8th of May next the Museum will close at four instead of seven p.m.

James Meara, coffin-maker for the Nenagh union workhouse, on Thursday week sent in a bill to the Nenagh board of guardians for 1130 coffins, furnished by him from the 25th of last March to the 25th of July—just four months!

It is ascertained that in Liverpool about 40 per cent. of the deaths from cholera occurred in houses in which more than one person had died of the disease.

Mr. Ellis Roberts, who won the prize harp at the Eisteddfod, has received his appointment as harpist to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. The intimation was communicated to a similar effect at Balmoral, from Colonel Anson to the Hon. G. Rice Trevor, M.P., viz.:—"Mr. Anson presents his compliments to Lieut.-Col. Trevor, and has much pleasure in informing him that her Majesty the Queen has graciously appointed Mr. Ellis Roberts harpist to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales."

The following are among the few places around the metropolis which are free from cholera:—Eltham, Dulwich, and Beckenham

Prince Albert is taking occasional instructions in Gaelic from the Rev. Mr. Anderson, of Crathie, with a view to acquiring a knowledge of a language connected with the literature of the country, and which forms the dialect of a class among his Royal Highness's most intimate friends, and among whom a considerable portion of his leisure at this season of the year is likely to be regularly spent. Mr. Anderson is a good Gaelic scholar, although a Lowlander.

More than £90,000 has recently passed through the office of Messrs Sale and Worthington, for the purchase of freeholds in Yorkshire and Cheshire for the Freehold Building and Land Association.

An arrival took place a few days since of some bales of hops from one of the Belgian ports, and a further arrival of ten bales of the article was just taken place by a vessel from Ghent, the produce of Belgium.

On Monday week a trout was caught in Windermere Lake which measured no less than 30 inches in length, was 15½ in girth, and weighed upwards of eight pounds and a half.

"THE QUEEN'S HUT," LOCH MUICK.

THE QUEEN AT BALMORAL.

HER Majesty's sojourn in the Highlands has been varied by a visit to Loch Muick, where the Queen has a favourite lodge, or "Hut," as it is called, from its small dimensions. It is situated about equidistant from Balmoral and Ballater, close at the base of "dark Lochnagar." The water of Muick is an impetuous stream, which chafes and foams along through its whole progress to the Dee. The glen contains a larger number of inhabitants than one would expect to find in it.

Some three miles from the Dee, the character of the glen changes. It becomes wilder and more desolate. After passing a wooded ravine, one travels on about the distance specified, and the most anxious search will discover but three houses besides the lodge her Majesty is to occupy. The loch occupies the hollow betwixt hills that rise sheer up from it, having a sort of table-land on the top; while, towering far above them, Lochnagar raises its rugged cones. The scene is one of surpassing beauty, and more especially in the evening, when the last rays of the setting sunlight produce an impression which can never be forgotten. The lodge is about half a mile down the glen from the loch, and is situated amid a small clump of firs on the corner of one of the hills that border it, commanding at once a view of the glen and a portion of Lochnagar. It is said to stand on the farm of Inach Bobbert, one of those great sheep-walks on which there is marvellously little cultivation.

The scenery around this hunting-lodge is very singular. It is one of the lions of the central Highlands; but still the lodge itself cannot be altogether termed lonely. It is rather a social neighbourly place; for the farm-house at the Spital of Glenmuick is within less than half a mile, with only the clear still stream between them; and the houses of Inach Bobbert are not much more than a mile distant towards the north. The lodge itself is at the bottom of a huge cup, with Mount Keen, in Kincardineshire, for one edge, and Lochnagar on the opposite side. The entrance to Loch Muick is a very short distance from the lodge, and seems to be an opening in the side of some tremendous building, of which the still waters of the loch form the floor; and the roofless walls are bare and perpendicular, some hundreds of feet high. Down their sides, occasionally, many little cataracts find their way; and one stream is large and permanent. A wilder refuge than within the entrance of Loch Muick an outlaw could not meet in a winter night. The newest habitations to the south are round Lochlee, in Forfarshire; and the intervening chasms are deep, dark, and terrible. Still there is much natural sweetness round the lodge, and it stands a complete protest against the carelessness of mankind. The grass around it grows luxuriantly. The young wood thrives splendidly.

We quote these interesting descriptive details from the Glasgow Daily Mail.

A Correspondent has favoured us with three Sketches of the Lodge, and an adjoining point of antiquarian interest, which we have engraved. They are accompanied by the following notes on the locality:

"Amongst the wildest scenery in Scotland, at the foot of Lochnagar, and surrounded by mountains which are only covered with purple heath and broken fragments of their rocks, is situated the 'Queen's Hut,' as the country people call it. It is embosomed in a goppice of fir and pine trees, and is only a short distance from the wild Loch Muick, a long, narrow lake, which seems, at a distance, to be almost overhung by its precipitous banks. From this lake a stream of the same name emerges, and winds across the moor, until it dives down a fine mountain ravine, and joins the Dee at Ballater. The Queen's residence consists of two small cottages, consisting only of the ground-floor, except, perhaps, the servants' rooms. And here her Majesty and her Royal Consort sometimes sojourn from their house at Balmoral, and enjoy in perfection the fine air, and scenery, and quiet. Of course, the accommodation is not sufficient for a long sojourn. The moors abound in game, and the loch with trout.

"The whole of the range of mountains on the west side of the Muick river belongs to an estate recently purchased by Prince Albert from an old family in the neighbourhood, many of whose mountain fastnesses still exist in ruins. Amongst these are the remains of the 'Castle of Knock,' which has never been very extensive; but, as the outer walls are tolerably entire, it gives a very good idea of the strongholds of Highland Lairds in olden time. Nearly opposite to Knock Castle is the site of another of their towers, 'Brackley,' which has now disappeared except in traditionary legends."

According to the Glasgow Daily Mail, "the projected stay of the Royal party at the shooting-lodge was much curtailed. They remained but one night, departing on the evening of the day subsequent to that on which they arrived. It is said that their expectation of unmolested seclusion was disappointed—that they were unable to stir abroad without encountering multitudes of gazers—and that for this reason they left abruptly."

KNOCK CASTLE, NEAR BALLATER.

"THE QUEEN'S HUT."

PHILLIPS'S FIRE ANNIHILATOR.

THIS invention is stated to possess the power of almost instantaneously extinguishing fire. It is constructed of various sizes. A portable machine, for domestic use, is composed of a set of light iron cases thus arranged:—A and B, the two outer cases, forming a close water-chamber; C and D, two inner cases, perforated in such a manner as to allow the free passage of vapour; E, the inner lid; F, the outer lid, or cover; G, a water-pipe, forming the handle; H, the charge; I, the igniter; K, the igniting pin.

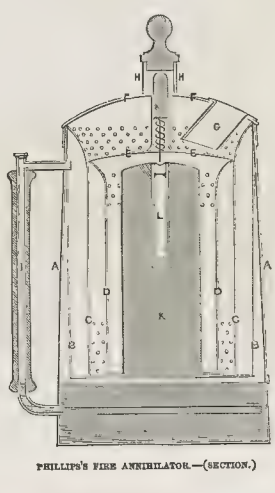
The work of charging the Annihilator is performed in a minute. The two lids, F and E, being taken off, the charge (which is already provided with the igniter bottle) is introduced, and the two lids are replaced, the outer one being secured by a thumbscrew. The igniter pin is placed in the neck, and covered with the wooden stopper, and this may be sealed down at pleasure. Water is then poured into the handle, and confined by a small screw-plug.

The charge, H, is a compound of charcoal, nitre, and gypsum, moulded into the form of a brick. The igniter (I) is a glass tube enclosing two bottles—one containing a few drops of sulphuric acid, placed over another containing a mixture of chlorate of potassa and sugar.

The mode of using the Annihilator is to carry the machine to the place on fire, take out the wooden stopper, with the knob of the stopper strike down the plug or pin in the neck of the machine, and hold the machine by the handle in the best position for the vapour which will come out of the hole on the top to reach the flame, which is almost momentarily extinguished.

The action of the machine is as follows:—The pin being forced down, breaks the igniter bottle, when the sulphuric acid falling on the mixture of chlorate of potassa and sugar, ignition takes place; the flame spreads over the upper surface of the charge, which instantaneously ignites, and evolves heated gases; these, in their passage through the perforated cylinders, impinge against the water chamber, expand the contained air, and produce steam, by which the water is forced through the tubular passage. The steam of the water mixing in the annularchamber with the hot gases, they escape together from the discharge tube in a dense expansive cloud, and are continuously delivered until the charge and water are expended.

Mr. Phillips states the portable machine to be applicable to the protection of dwelling-houses, detached buildings, and ships; but it is requisite that public stores, warehouses, manufactories, and large piles of building, be protected by stationary engines of immense power, the construction of which varies materially from that of the portable machine, although based on the same principle of action: namely, that of extinguishing fire by gases and vapour resulting from combustion.



PHILLIPS'S FIRE ANNIHILATOR.—(SECTION.)

M. EMILE DE GIRARDIN.

THIS able and accomplished public writer, who took so prominent a part in the proceedings of the Peace Congress at Paris recently, and who has acquired so distinguished a reputation amongst his countrymen both in the Legislative Chambers and as a journalist, has just given proof of how justified were the sentiments of gratification with which the Peace party hailed his accession to their ranks. The earnestness with which M. Girardin advocates any great question which he takes up is alone equalled by the ability, learning, and research which he brings in aid of the development of his views.

A dreadful homage to the power of his pen was paid by General Cavaignac, when, in the sanguinary insurrection of June last year, he thought it necessary to mark his displeasure at an article in M. Girardin's paper, complaining of Paris being under the régne du sabre, as well as his fear of the exciting effects of that article, by issuing during the hottest of the combat the following decree:—

"FRENCH REPUBLIC.

"LIBERTY EQUALITY—FRATERNITY.

"The Chief of the Executive Power, in virtue of the decree of the National Assembly, which places the city of Paris in a state of siege, resolves:—'The Prefect of the Police, and every agent of the public force, on the view of this present decree, will cause to be arrested the citizen Emile de Girardin, and to suppress the journal the Presse.'—The Prefect of Police will immediately order the seizure of all public newspapers which, by their hostile publication, prolong the struggle which is embruing the capital in blood, and compromising the safety of the Republic.' "CAVAIGNAC.

"Paris, June 25, 1848."

M. EMILE DE GIRARDIN.

M. Girardin was, in consequence, arrested the same evening, and sent to the Conciergerie. He was released, however, after a short but rigorous confinement, and allowed to resume his pen.

There is no public writer in France who approaches M. Girardin in a correct knowledge of English politics, and a just appreciation of the advantages of the balanced system of government in this country. He has always taken pains to master fully every leading topic of social or political interest which has engaged our public men; and at the time when Free-trade was scarcely known by name in France and not at all understood, he produced some very able articles upon the question.

On Saturday last, his paper, La Presse, advocating the doctrines of the Peace party, and urging the necessity of a reduction of the French army, contained, under the head of "The net product of twenty years of war," the following remarkable article: "Levies of June 24, 1791, 150,000; September, 1792, 100,000; February 24, 1793, 300,000; April 16, 1793, 20,000. Requisition of August 16, 1793, 1,050,000. Conscriptions of Vend. 3, an VII., 100,000; Germin. 28, an VII., 150,000; Messidor 24, an VII., 110,000; Floréal 28, an X., 120 000; Floréal 5, an XI., 120,000; Floréal 5, an XII., 60,000; Nivose 8, an XIII., 60,000; Nivose 27, an XIII., 60,000; Vend. 2, an XIV., 80,000; December 15, 1806, 80,000; April 7, 1807, 80,000; January 21, 1808, 80,000; September 15, 1808, 80,000; September 12, 1808, 80,000; January 1, 1809, 80,000; April 25, 1809, 40,000; October 5, 1809, 36,000; December 13, 1809, 120,000; Same day, 40,000; Sept. 1, 1812, 120.000; Jan 11, 1813, 350,000; April 3, 1813, 180,000; Aug. 24, 1813, 30,000; Oct. 9, 1813, 280,000; Nov. 15, 1813, 300,000.—Total, 4,506,000 men. Napoleon, for his part, obtained by the conscription, 2,476,000 men. Those who set out were never freed from service. M. Dara, in his report to the Legislative body on the conscription, avows it. (Moniteur, 20 Floréal, an X.) Spain was the tomb of most of our soldiers; what remained perished almost entirely in the snows of Russia. The army of 1813 was composed of recruits from 18 to 20 years of age. Illness, fatigue, and misery decimated them. Of the 1,250,000 men raised in 1813, there remained in 1814, to defend the soil of France, but 100,000 men above the guard. In 1792 France had, as now, 85 departments. The conquests of the Republic gave her, in two years, the Rhine and the Alps for frontiers. From 1794 to 1800, the number of our departments was increased by 19, and made 105. Napoleon, in 1815, joined to France, Holland, maritime Germany, and half of Italy, and created 27 new departments, France then having 132. In 1814 France was reduced to her old limits of 1790, and from her were taken Marienburg, Philippeville, and Landau. Such, then, was the net produce of twenty years' gigantic wars, heroic efforts, immeasurable sacrifices, and bloodshed on every battle-field of Europe. A single battle lost, that of Waterloo, sufficed to take from France the fruit of twenty immortal victories, and to render her smaller in 1845 than in 1790. But that is not all! To 4,506,000 of men (how many nations have not 4,500,000 souls!) cut down by balls and bullets, must be added 7,000,000 francs of indemnity of war, paid by France to the Allied Powers, and which was payable in equal portions, in five years, by means of bons to bearer on the Royal Treasury, plus 400,000,000 francs for the support of the foreign garrison, plus a multitude of various indemnities, the whole amounting to nearly two milliards."

THE AMENDED COUNTY COURTS ACT.—On Saturday two provisions in the new County Courts Act (12th and 13th Vict., cap. 101) came into operation, repealing the authority given to the judges to commit to county gaols or houses of correction, and substituting the usual debtors prison, where in future debtors are to be sent. By the third section it is provided that where a debtors prison is situated at an inconvenient distance, or is in a crowded state, the Secretary of State may authorise commitments to a house of correction, " and make orders altering the regulations of such house of correction or gaol so far as respects the treatment of persons to be committed under this act, in order that such persons may be treated as nearly as may be in like manner as if they had been committed to a gaol in which such debtors as aforesaid may be confined, notwithstanding the regulations in force in such house of correction or gaol to which such persons may be committed, and every such order may from time to time be revoked or varied by such Secretary of State as occasion may require."

AN EVENTFUL LIFE.—On the 21st of July, at St. Stephen's, New Brunswick, died, at the age of 111 years, Mrs. Elizabeth Dodd. Deceased was born on board a British ship-of-the-line, in the Bay of Biscay, cradled on the broad Atlantic. Her father having been killed while fighting for George I., she was cast an orphan on the shores of New York; thence carried to St. Augustine. After her marriage she settled on the banks of the Alabama. On the outbreak of the war between France, Spain, and England, she, with other British settlers, were made prisoners and taken to New Orleans. After two years she was transferred to the Spaniards and taken to the Castle at Vera Cruz, where she remained until its capture by the British in 1761. She was then relieved and taken to New York. During the first American war she followed her husband through the principal campaigns, and was at the hard-fought battles at Monmouth, White Plains, Yorktown, &c. At the close of the war, in 1784, she went with the Loyalists to the province where she died.

HIDDEN DANGERS AT SEA.—The sudden appearance, some eighteen years ago, of a small island, and very soon after its nearly as sudden disappearance, off Sciacca, on the south-west coast of Sicily, a region noted in past ages for its submarine volcanoes, created much surprise at the time. Accounts from Malta, by the Overland Mail, report that the Terrible, steam-frigate, sent to take soundings on this shoal, had returned after finding the water much shallower than it is marked on the charts; and another shoal of much greater extent had been discovered, not marked at all, which leads to a strong presumption that some volcanic action is in progress. For the more minutely examining the new shoal, the Rosamond steam-sloop, of less draught of water, was despatched from Malta on the 22nd ult., and had not up to the 24th yet returned. Sir William Parker, the Commander-in-Chief in the Mediterranean, had also despatched from Malta several of the launches of the ships in port, accompanied by the Oberon and Spitfire steam-sloops, to seek for (by means of dragging) a hidden rock, which, though said to have been seen by several Greek and Maltese seamen during the past forty years, is still classed among the doubtful dangers, and upon which, it is supposed, the Earl of Auckland steamer struck in March last, situated from 87 to 95 miles due east of Malta.

NAUTICAL IMPROVEMENTS.—Mr. Dempster, of Kinghorn, N.B., who has originated an improved mode of building and rigging a sailing-vessel, and a new code of signals and trawling apparatus, has lately printed a description of these novelties. A striking instance of the good he has effected is in the improvement that has lately taken place in the Frith of Forth, and on the coast of Fife, in trawl fishing: at the latter place, within two years, sixty boats' crews adopted trawl nets, where such a mode of fishing was before unknown, since which, turbot, halibut, soles, plaice, &c., have been taken in large quantities, much to the advantage of the fish-markets, and to the increase of the trade. Yet, as is too often the case with individuals who devote their time and money to improvements by which the public are benefited, Mr Dempster has expended considerable sums without receiving any remuneration beyond empty thanks for his exertions.

THE "BOSPHORUS."—The screw steam-ship Bosphorus, J. V. Hall Commander (of which we gave an Engraving in our last Number, from a drawing by the Captain), left her moorings off the East India Docks, on Monday last, with a full cargo, for Liverpool, which port she will leave, on the 16th, with passengers and cargo, for Malta and Constantinople.

PAINTINGS IN THE AJUNTA CAVES.
(MUSEUM OF THE EAST INDIA HOUSE.)

NO. 1.—GENERAL VIEW OF THE AJUNTA CAVES.

THERE have lately been added to the Museum of the East India Company some interesting copies of paintings found upon the interior walls and roofs of a series of temples, excavated out of the solid rock, situated near the Ajunta Pass, where the road from Central Hindostan ascends the mural heights supporting the table land of the Dekhin. The town of Ajunta is about 200 miles north-east from Bombay; and in a ravine amongst the hills, some four or five miles distant, occur the caves. According to Mr. Fergusson, in his "Memoir on the Rock-cut Temples of India," published in the "Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society," the entrance to the ravine is nearly half a mile in width, but the ravine becomes narrower as the traveller winds up it, until it terminates in a cascade of seven falls, or leaps: the lowest is about 100 feet high, the others about 100 feet higher. Immediately below the fall the ravine makes a sharp turn to the right, and it is in the perpendicular cliff forming the outer side of the bend, and facing the fall, that the caves are situated; the whole series extending about 500 yards from north to south-east. There are in this space twenty-seven caves, which are accessible by a sort of ledge or terrace of the cliff; but this has given way at the southern extremity, and left the face of the cliff perpendicular, to the height of about three hundred feet. The general appearance of the ravine and of some of the excavations is given in our Engraving No. 1, reduced from the original plate, forming part of Mr.

NO. 2.—INDIAN WARRIORS SETTING OUT ON AN EXPEDITION.

Fergusson's interesting illustrations of these and other Rock Temples delineated by him in India.

The Ajunta Caves are richly decorated with sculptured porticoes and columns; but their peculiar feature is the embellishment of their roofs and walls with paintings, which it is not yet determined to call frescoes. They have suffered much from time and neglect; and to counteract, in some measure, the further depredations of both, the Court of Directors have instructed their local Governments to take measures for their careful delineation. An officer of the Madras Establishment, Captain Gill, has been for some time, and is still, employed in making copies of them, and has sent home those now at the India House: of three of which we present our readers with engravings. In No. 2 we have on the left a number of warriors apparently setting out on an expedition. The chief, indicated by the umbrella, is taking leave of his princess, whilst a group of women on the right are also bidding them farewell. The men are characterised by the intertwining of the hair with the cloth of the turban, a costume now chiefly met with amongst the Burmas. It is doubtful if it is to be found on the continent of India. There is nothing to denote the religion of the persons represented, but in another painting a group very similar are offering their adoration to a Chaitya or Buddhist monument, which is conclusive as to their professing the Buddhist faith.

In No. 3 we have various groups, who belong to the interior of the palace. The chief in one place is seated, in another standing, and in both attitudes is evidently communicating orders or instructions. This is probably a representation of Sakyasinha or Buddha, who admitted females to become his disciples, and was allowed free access to the female apartments. The privilege here is not confined to him, for in two places are men bringing presents carried upon a pole, with slings, as they are at the present day. In the right-hand corner we have what seems to be a garden: in the left a group of elephants very accurately represented—one appears to have triple tusks; a seated female in front appears to hold a book.

NO. 3.—INTERIOR OF AN INDIAN PALACE.

No. 4 represents a very different series of figures from either of the two preceding, and evidently belongs to the Saiva branch of Brahminism. The much-defaced head in the centre, with a rich crown, ornamented amongst other things with crosses, is a not uncommon representation of Siva; and in the right compartment we have the same divinity attended by some of his hideous train of goblins. In one place, on the left, of two smaller figures the male is playing a flute. The figures appear to be partly in the clouds, partly in edifices and in gardens—perhaps the city of the God of Wealth upon the celestial mountain Kailas is intended.

The indications of Buddhism are, however, the prevailing subjects of the paintings, although some of them are Saiva. Fragments of inscriptions are found on two of them, which, although too imperfect to be capable of translation, yet are valuable as guides to the age of the paintings. The characters in which they are written went out of use about the third century of our era, and the paintings in which they occur must, consequently, be of prior date. They were painted, probably, about the beginning of the Christian era.

NO. 4.—SAIVA FIGURES.

COUNTRY NEWS.

KIDDERMINSTER ELECTION.—On Tuesday the nomination of candidates to fill the vacancy in the representation of this borough caused by the death of the late Mr. Godson took place at ten o'clock, at which hour several thousand persons were crowded together in front of the Town Hall. Mr. Hogarth, Mayor, proposed John Best, Esq. (Conservative), as a fit representative for the borough in Parliament. Mr. Chell worth seconded the nomination. The proposition was received with mingled groans and hisses. Mr. J. Holmes, in proposing Mr Gisborne, described the honourable candidate as a gentleman of progressive principles He was in favour of the principles in virtue of which they had obtained the elective franchise, and his past conduct in Parliament was a surety for the future. Mr. H. Brenton, carpet-manufacturer, seconded the nomination of Mr. Gisborne. The candidates proceeded at some length to declare their political sentiments; after which the show of hands being taken, it was declared by the Mayor to be in favour of Mr. Gisborne. A poll was thereupon demanded on behalf of Mr Best's friends. The polling was commenced on Wednesday morning, at eight o'clock. At four o'clock Mr. Best's committee announced the final close of the poll as follows:—

Best	..	..	..	..	..	..	217
Gisborne	..	..	..	..	..	..	200
Majority for Best	..	..	..	..	..	..	17

FIRE IN MANCHESTER.—At two o'clock on Wednesday morning a fire was discovered on the premises of Mr Andrew Wilson, packing-case-maker. The entire building was gutted, and an enormous quantity of timber consumed. The total damage, as nearly as can be ascertained, will be about £4000. Mr. Wilson is insured, but by no means to the amount of the loss which he has sustained. The flames spread to an adjoining shed, occupied by Messrs. Roberts, Fothergil, and Co., but they were speedily extinguished by an engine which is kept on the premises. The police succeeded in removing Mr. Wilson's books and private papers, and preserving them. The fire was extinguished about five.

CHARGE OF DEFRAUDING THE BRIGHTON AND SOUTH COAST RAILWAY COMPANY.—On Wednesday Henry Leeks, Charles Cheesman, and Stephen Springate were charged at the Brighton police-court with defrauding the Brighton and South Coast Railway Company. It appeared from the statement of Mr H Faithfull, solicitor, who conducted the prosecution, and the evidence of Mr. Frederick Slight, the accountant to the company, that the fraud was effected in the following manner:—Each train has at the London terminus, where he had the custody of the tickets and it was also part of his duty to deliver tickets to passengers. The tickets are numbered consecutively from one to a thousand and so on, and suspicion was first discovered amongst those collected from passengers which bore a number beyond the total quantity issued for the day, that would cause suspicion and inquiry. On Sunday Mr. Weatherhead, the station-master at the London terminus, having received instructions excited, examined the stock of tickets, and discovered that from thirty to forty bearing forward numbers were missing. He mentioned this fact on Monday morning to Mr. Slight, who then examined the tickets himself, and the tickets bearing the forward numbers which were missed the day before were in their places, but on looking at those tickets minutely he perceived that they had been dated, which was only done when they were issued to passengers, but that the date had been erased: not entirely, however, to escape detection. Leeks, on being asked to account for this, at once confessed that he had issued the forward numbers which had been collected by Cheesman, the chief collector at the Brighton terminus, who transmitted through Springate, who was one of the guards, back again to him (Leeks), and he then placed them in their order and re-issued them in the ordinary course of traffic There being no other evidence against Cheesman and Springate than the confession of Leeks, Mr. Hounsman objected that it could not be received against them. The bench concurred, and they were discharged, but Leeks was remanded until Friday for the further investigation of the case.

FRIGHTFUL TRAGEDY.—On Monday morning, about half-past eleven, at East-street, Ipswich, a man named Grayson murdered three of his male children, of the respective ages of four years, three years, and eight months, by cutting their throats with a razor, and afterwards cut his own throat with the same instrument. An inquest upon the bodies was held in the afternoon, at the Dove Inn, when it appeared, by the testimony adduced, that the father was a painter by trade, about forty years old, and had been married nearly ten years—the fruit of his marriage being seven children. He was always kind to his wife, fond of his children, and of particularly temperate habits. During the last five or six weeks, however, his mind has failed him, and he frequently exhibited a strong tendency to despondency, arising from the cares of his large family, whom he seemed to apprehend he then did not be able properly to bring up. Latterly, he suffered from pain in the head, and, producing lowness of spirits; and he sometimes was heard to say, "I shall never live to get through my troubles." On Sunday evening he retired to bed, and appeared to sleep as usual, but after the family had gone to rest listened to his wife that he felt very languid and faint. Shortly after eleven o'clock Mrs. Grayson went shopping into the town, leaving her husband and children in the house; but she had not been absent more than a quarter of an hour when she heard the awful tidings of what had occurred. As soon as she returned, the shocking specise a presented itself of the four bodies lying on the ground in the front room, with their throats cut, all dead but the youngest, who was breathing heavily. It appears that no sooner had his wife left the house than the unfortunate man said to the three deceased children, who were at the time in the back room, "Come to me here and I'll give you a penny each." They replied "I'll give you a penny each." This observation was heard by his daughter Emma, aged eight, who was washing up plates in the adjoining kitchen, and she in consequence left the kitchen and stood at the back door, where she saw her father take the children in his arms and carry him into the front room, the other two children following. She then returned to the washhouse, but in a few minutes went into the front room, when she beheld her father and three brothers lying dead on the carpet. An alarm was given, and surgical assistance instantly procured, but, of course, it was ineffectual. After a lengthened examination of several witnesses, the jury returned a verdict, that Grayson had cut the throats of Arthur, Walter, Frederick, and himself, while in a state of temporary derangement.

DEATH FROM ADMINISTERING A POISONOUS NOSTRUM FOR CHOLERA.—Some weeks ago the Liverpool dock committee made known and recommended to the public through the newspapers a nostrum said to be a certain remedy of cholera, which was said to be a compound made up according to a prescription obtained from Sir James Clark, physician to her Majesty. Immediately upon the prescription being made known, a great demand was made upon all the apothecaries in the town to have the mixture compounded, and thousands of copies of the recipe were printed and disseminated throughout the country at large by well-disposed persons. It having come to the knowledge of Sir James Clark, that a prescription, attributed to him, for the cure of cholera, had been so authoritatively and extensively circulated, Sir James wrote etc to Liverpool, repudiating the recipe, and stated that the mixture, administered in the quantities directed, was dangerous to life. It was found that a teaspoonful of it contained thirty drops of laudanum, and an ordinary-sized tablespoonful (the quantity directed to be taken for a dose) one hundred and twenty drops of laudanum, or 84 grains of solid opium—a medical gentleman applied to considered the mixture to be not only dangerous, but poisonous. At the coroner's office, on Monday, an inquest was held on the body of a child, 19 months old, who had died in consequence of a tea-spoonful of the mixture having been administered to it, when the facts above given relative to the recipe alleged to be Sir James Clarke's transpired. A verdict of chance medley was return ed, but the Le parties who administered it exonerated from criminality in the matter. The coroner severely censured the conduct of the person who had promulgated so diabolical and gross a fraud in the name of a man of such deserved note and eminence as Sir James Clark, thus giving a sanction to the nostrum having been administered to it, when the facts above given relative to the recipe alleged to be Sir James Clarke's transpired. A verdict of chance medley was return ed, but the Le parties who administered it exonerated from criminality in the matter. The coroner severely censured the conduct of the person who had promulgated so diabolical and gross a fraud in the name of a man of such deserved note and eminence as Sir James Clark, thus giving a sanction to the nostrum having been administered to it, when the facts above given relative to the recipe alleged to be Sir James Clarke's transpired. The only antidote to the evil now was to make the nature of the recipe as extensively known as possible, through the medium not only of the loca , but of the metropolitan press, which he trusted would be the case

IRELAND.

LAND IMPROVEMENT ACT.—PRINCE ALBERT.—R. C. Hickson, Esq., Fermoyle, county Kerry, having forwarded to his Excellency the Lord-Lieutenant, during the week of the Dublin Exhibition, some most brilliant specimens of oats, flax, mangold wurtzel, and potatoes, grown on land over which the sea rolled about eighteen months ago, and which he had embanked and reclaimed under the provisions of the Land Improvement Act, has received the acknowledgment the following very courteous note from the Lord-Lieutenant's private secretary:—

Viceregal Lodge, August 14, 1849.

SIR,—I am directed by the Lord-Lieutenant to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, together with the accompanying sample of agricultural produce, which latter was duly sent for and to the inspection of Prince Albert. His Excellency has much pleasure in assuring you that as Royal Highness Prince Albert expressed his admiration at the success of your experiment on the occasion of his recent visit to Fermoyle, the splendid proof of the operation of the Land Improvement Act I have the honour to be, sir, your obedient servant,

R. C. HICKSON, Esq., Fermoyle, Castlegregory. ORBIT CONNELLAN.

The large and newly-erected Wesleyan Meeting-house in Donegall-str et, Be fast, was burnt down on Sunday night, after the congregation had ret red. The Bude light, used for illuminating the edifice from the centre, set fire to the ceiling, and upon the alarm being given the roof of the construction was over in three or four hours. The building was insured for £4000.

FLAX CULTURE.—In the report of the commissioners for the return of the population, they found that the portion of the lands in Ireland fit for the purposes of agriculture, exclusive of all other descriptions, amounted to 13,464,300 acres. Instead of one-eighth, which it had been shown was perfectly consistent with good farming, let them suppose that only one-sixteenth were appropriated to flax, they should have 841,518 acres; six tenths, or about one-third of a ton, was considered a fair average produce by the acre: that would give no less than 252,455 tons: and, at £45 per ton, the value would be £11,360,475. Then, with regard to the employment which the cultivation of the plant gave, and which was a most important consideration, it had been already shown that, independently of spinning, an acre of the flax gave employment for a year to nineteen persons in manufacturing it into pocket-handkerchiefs; and, if spinners were added, there would be an addition of forty-four women, making altogether sixty-three persons. But some people might think that an exaggerated statement: therefore, let it be supposed that one acre of flax would be equal to the employment and support of one family for a year, and in the result would be, suppose one one-seventh of the lands fit for flax, there would be 241 8 families so employed; and, taking each family at the usual average of five, the number of individuals sustained would be 4,207,590—equal to about one-half of the whole population of Ireland.

Extract from the Speech of Mr. Sharman Crawford, M.P., in the Fifth Annual Report of the Society for the Promotion of the Growth of Flax in Ireland.

THE QUEEN'S COLLEGES IN CORK.—The Rev. William O'Connor, parish priest of Coreles, Kinsale, has been appointed Roman Catholic Dean of Residences for Queen's College, Cork.

THE CLEARANCE SYSTEM IN THE WEST.—The Galway Mercury has accounts of the further progress of evictions and the breaking of houses on various estates in that county, some of them under the control of the Court of Chancery.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Of the four meetings to which the turf fixtures for the coming week are confined, Doncaster alone has any real attraction. Its programme promises an average quantum of sport, but, as regards the value and character of the engagee ents, offers a sorry contrast to Doncaster in its palmy days; there is much "talk" for the future—will it come to anything? The meeting commences on Tuesday with an indifferent list, the Champagne Stakes, for which the field will be small, being the "feature." The St. Leger, with about ten or a dozen starters at the bridle, makes Wednesday the "great day." Thursday will derive some interest from the Great Yorkshire Handicap; and Friday, the last day, will have the Cup and Park Hill, both certainties on paper, and several other prizes. As we mentioned in our last, the Great Northern Railway will enable visit rs to get to the town from the metropolis, in fact, from all parts of the country, without road travelling. Sherborne races take place on Monday, and Bromley and Brecon on Wednesday.

The following Cricket matches come off in the course of the week: Monday, at Holkham, the M. C. C. and ground against Holkham Club. At Birmingham, eleven of All England against twenty-two of Birmingham and District. At the Kennington Oval, the gentlemen and players of the Surrey ground against Banstead. Tuesday—at the Honourable Artillery Ground, the Surrey Club against the Honourable Artillery Company. Thursday at Gravesend, eleven of All England against eighteen gentlemen of Kent. Brighton—Gentlemen of England.

The aquatic fixtures will be, Holt Regatta (Worcestershire), on Monday; Shadwell and Ratcliffe, on Tuesday; and Hampton on Wednesday.

TATTERSALL'S.

THURSDAY.—Although within a few days of Doncaster Races, the room was thinly attended, and business almost at a stand-still. We can only give the market prices:—

ST. LEGER.

2 to 1 on Flying Dutchman	25 to 1 agst Chatterer (t)	25 to 1 agst Herbert (t)
15 to 1 agst Sunnyside	25 to 1 — Ivri	35 to 1 — Volcano
20 to 1 — Lea Garrow	25 to 1 — Thrisgarth (t)	100 to 1 — Cloudsdale

YORKSHIRE HANDICAP.

9 to 2 agst Thrimarth	1	1 agst Mrs Taft
8 to 1 — Letitia	10 to 1 — Fernhill

DONCASTER CUP.

2 to 1 on Gemini

CESAREWITCH

22 to 1 agst Glenalvon	25 to 1 agst Bostal	40 to 1 agst Rathmines
25 to 1 — St Rosalis	25 to 1 — Iron Rail	60 to 1 — Hitchron
	50 to 1 agst Fernhill
	33 to 1 agst Compass

WARWICK RACES TUESDAY.

TRIAL STAKES of 5 sovs each, and 25 added.

Mr. Rolt's Cossachia, 5 yrs, 7st 11lb	..	.. (Flatman)	1
Mr. Williams's Jessie, 4 yrs, 7st 5lb	..	.. (Dockeray)	2

FOAL STAKES of 10 sovs each, and 25 added.

Mr. E. Jones's Docility, 8st 4lb	..	.. (Wh tehouse)	1
Mr. William's's Syrup, 8st 11lb	..	.. (Flatman)	2

LEAMINGTON STAKES of 25 sovs each, 15 ft, and 5 only if declared, with 100 added; the second to receive £100, and the third, £50.

Mr. Merry's Miss Ann, 3 yrs, 8st 2lb	..	.. (Hiett)	1
Lord Brudenell's Grief, 4 yrs, 8st	..	.. (Pavis)	2

CASTLE PARK STAKES of 10 sovs each, with 50 added.

Mr. Fowler's Jack Briggs, 8st 11lb (including 4lb extra) (Whitehouse)			1
Mr. Copeland's Lass of Cinderley, 8st 5lb	..	.. (Marlow)	2

HANDICAP STAKES of 10 sovs each, with 100 guineas. Heats.

Lord Exeter's Glenalvo , 3 yrs, 8st 2lb	..	.. (Flatman)	1
Mr. Walker's Captain Parry, 3 yrs, 8st 2lb	..	.. (Wakefield)	2

WEDNESDAY.

AVON STAKES of 15 sovs each, 10 ft.

Mr. Fowler's Monk, 2 yrs, 6st 6lb	..	.. (Wells)	1
Mr. Lawson's Rienzi, 3 yrs, 8st 11lb	..	.. (Marlow)	2

WARWICK GOLD CUP of £200, with £100 added.

Lord Exeter's Gazeteer, 4 yrs, 8st 7lb	..	.. (J. Mann)	1
Mr. Merry's Chanticleer, 6 yrs, 9st 12lb (including 7lbs extra)		(Marson)	2

GRAND WARWICKSHIRE STAKES of 10 sovs each, and 50 added.

Mr. Payne's Glanca, 8st 2lb	..	.. (Flatman)	1
Sir C. Rushout's Thlosalt, 8st 7lb	..	.. (Darling)	2

COUNT STAKES of 20 sovs each, with 100 added.

Mr. Fowler's Rhadiry, 4 yrs, 9st 2lb	..	.. (Wells)	1
Mr. Merry's Miss Ann, 3st 2lb, including 10lb extra	..	.. (Hiet)	2

TOWN PLATE of £50, added to a Sweepstake of 10 sovs each.

Mr. Osbaldeston's Joe, 5 yrs	..	.. (Cowper)	1
Mr. Daley's Dever, 4 yrs, 10st 5lb	..	.. (Mr. Bevill)	2

The SELLING STAKES was won in three heats by Cossachia (Flatman), beating Lucy Ashton, Chat, Syrup, and Roma.

MORTLAKE AND BARNES AMATEUR REGATTA.

The Mortlake and Barnes regatta, amongst gentlemen amateurs, for various pieces of plate, took place on Saturday, and afforded considerable sport.

FAIR OARED RACE for Silver Cup.

Messrs. T. Bone and S Bone	..	(Light Blue) 1
Messrs. C. Harpour and G Ravenshaw, Richmond	..	(Crimson) 2

The race extended from a bit below Lord Lonsdale's to Barker's rails.

SENIOR SCULLERS' RACE for a Silver Cup.

This extended from a boat below Lord Lonsdale's to the first creek at Mortlake.

FINAL HEAT.

Mr. S. Walford, Fulham	..	(Pink) 1
Mr. W. F. Watson, Isleworth	..	(Light Blue) 2

JUNIOR SCULLERS' RACE (for those who have never won a public prize).

FINAL HEAT

Mr A. Hutton	..	(Crimson and Blue Cross) 1
Mr Ogsden	..	(Dark Blue) 0

A scratch followed, and wound up the sport.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS FOR THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

All the markets continue comparatively deserted, business, both speculative and real, being confined to the narrowest limits. Consols during the week have only fluctuated between 90¼ and 90⅝, and the former quotation, closing rather firmly at the higher quotation. Exchequer Bills have again declined, money being in greater demand out of the house. India Bonds are also receding from the same cause. The general feeling is one of despondency, notwithstanding the exceeding favourable accounts of the harvest, both as regards abundance and quality, proves the existence of a belief that money will become shortly more valuable, from the resumption of Bank cash abroad, besides the probability of foreign loans when tranquility shall have been for a short time restored. The English funds at the close of the week were firm, quoting for Bank Stock, 1 9⅛ Reduced, 92¾; Consols, 90⅝; New Three-and-a-Quarter-per-Cents, Annuity, 98¼; Long Annuities, to expire January, 1860, 8 15-16; Ditto, 30 years, October 10, 1859, 8 11-16; India Stock, 259½; India Bonds, £1000, 75 p; Consols for Account, 92¾; Exchequer Bills, £1000, June, 39 p; £500, June, 35 p; Small, June, 39.

The principal operations in the Foreign market have been in Mexican and Peruvian, with some few in Spanish. There have not, however, been any wide fluctuations except in Buenos Ayres Stock, which marked a decline of three per cent. on Tuesday, quoting 48 ex. The prices at closing are, for Dutch Bonds, 1825, Three per Cents, 72, Equador Bonds, 3½; Mexican, five per Cents, 19½; Account, 19½; Ditto, Deferred, 3½; Peruvian Bonds, Deferred, 17½; Spanish Five per Cents., 1840, 17¼. Ditto, Account, 18; Ditto, Three per Cent., 34¾; Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents., 54¼; Ditto Four per Cents., 89¾.

Railway stocks have been greatly depressed during the week, particularly the established and dividend-paying lines. London and North-Western, Great Western, York and North Midland, Midlands, &c. an declined considerably on Tuesday, although a slight reaction has since taken place. Fear of decreasing dividends, and the necessity of resorting to preference stocks, in order to meet debentures falling due (thus rendering the original stocks nearly worthless), are the assigned causes of this downward movement. At the close of business there was rather more firmness, the last prices being—For Aberdeen, 17⅛; Buckinghamshire, 11½; Caledonian, 10½; Ditto, New, £10 Debentures, 10½; Eastern Counties, Old Stock, Preference, 11½; Eastern Counties, 8; Eastern Union Class A, Scrip (6 per Cent.), 1⅞ East Lancashire, 28½; Edinburgh and Glasgow, 38; Great Northern, 74½; Ditto, A, Scrip, 2½; Ditto, B, Scrip (Class taken), 5½; Great North of England, 2½; Great Western, 67 ex. d.; Ditto, ½ Shares, 13½ ex. d.; Ditto, New, £17, 8½ ex. d., Hull and Selby, 92½ ex. d.; Ditto, ½ Shares, 47 ex. d.; Lancaster and Yorkshire, 17⅝; Leeds and Bradford, 98½; Leeds and Thirsk, 15; London and Blackwall, 3½; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 74½; London and North-Western, 119 ex. d.; Ditto, New Quarters, 13½ ex. d.; Ditto, £10 M. and B., 3½; London and South-Western, 33 ex. d.; Midland, 57½; Ditto, Consolidated Preference, £50 shares, 13½; North Staffordshire, 10½; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 13½; Reading, Guildford, and Reigate, 18½; Scottish Central, 20; Shrewsbury and Birmingham, 4½; South-Eastern, 21; Ditto, No. 2, 16½; Ditto, Scrip, No. 4, 6½; Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth, 3⅜; York, Newcastle, and Berwick, 18½; Ditto, Newcastle Extension, 11½; Ditto, G. N. E., Preference, 3½; York and North Midland, 24½; Ditto, Preference, 6½; Boulogne and Amiens, 6⅞; East Indian, 4½; Northern of France, 2½ dis; Orleans and Bordeaux, 33⅞; Paris and Rouen, 21⅜; Paris and Strasbourg, 9⅛; Rouen and Havre, 10½.

SATURDAY MORNING.—Consols remained nearly stationary during yesterday, the current quotation being 90¾ ⅞ for money and time. The Foreign Market was but little attended, and Shares were heavy, with a very small amount of business done.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday.)—A cimmon fin ewl has brought in an immense fleet of grain ships from the Baltic this week The total imports of grain have amounted to nearly TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND QUARTERS, of which the quarters of wheat, 36,3 0 of barley, and 31,630 of oats. The supply of English wheat received coastwise has not exceeded 2770 quarters, but by land carriage rather a large quantity has reached us. To-day the show of samples was tolerably good. Owing to the prevailing fine weather, and the large influx from abroad, the demand for all kinds of wheat of home produce ruled exceedingly heavy, at 6d to 1s lower quotations from last week. Foreign met with a very dull inquiry, at 2s per quarter under, without effecting a clearance. The quantity of foreign wheat on offer was large. The, together with the prospect of extensive receipts during the ensuing week, produced great heaviness in the supply. Where sales took place, the currencies gave way is to 2s per quarter. The demand for barley ruled heavy in the extreme, at 1s per quarter less money. The supply of foreign was very extensive; that of English small. Malt, the quantity of which was trifling, moved off heavily at almost nominal figures In oats the public weighing was fair, at 6d to 1s per quarter less money. All other articles, including flour, were lower to purchase.

ARRIVALS.—English: wheat, 2770; barley, 160; malt, 1530; oats, 730 flour, 2690, Irish, barley, ——; oats, 150. Foreign: wheat, 21 800; barley, 25,310; oats 31,220 quarters, English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 38s to 42s; ditto, white, 40s to 46s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 39s to 42s; ditto, white, 40s to 46s; rye, 28s to 32s; grinding barley, 23s to 26s; distilling ditto, 28s to 29s; malting ditto, 32s to 35s; Norfolk and Lincoln malt, 56s to 58s; brown ditto, 52s to 54s; Kingston and Ware, 58s to 60s; Chevalier, 60s to 62s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 18s to 20s, potato ditto, 21s to 23s; Youghal and Cork, black, 18s to 19s; Limerick, 19s to 20s; Sligo, ditto, 18s to 19s; Londonderry, ditto, 20s to 21s; English, 23 6d to 25s; ditto, foreign, 25 6d to 26 6s per 1020); rapeseed cakes, £4 5s to £4 10s per ton; canary, 62s to 70s per quarter; English coarse mustard, 7s to 8s per bushel; white, 4s to 4s; cake, 4s to 5s. Foreign, rod, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; barley, —s to —s; oats, —s to —s; beans, —s to —s; peas, —s to —s, per quarter. Flour, American, 21s to 24s per barrel; Baltic, 4s to —s per barrel.

The Seed Markets.—Our market is exceedingly heavy, and prices almost generally have a downward tendency. The supply of new seeds is arriving.

Linseed, English, sowing, 56s to 58s. Baltic, crushing, 38s to 42s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 34s to 36s; hempseed, 32s to 34s per quarter; rapeseed, 36s to 38s per cwt.; brown mustard-seed, 8s to 11s; white ditto, 6s to 10s 6d; tares, 5s 0d to 6s 6d per bushe.; English rapeseed, —s to —s per last of ten quarters; Dutch, —l. to —l.; English, £9 5s to £10; ditto, foreign, £6 0s to £6 5s per 1000); rapeseed cakes, £4 5s to £4 10s per ton; canary, 62s to 70s per quarter; English coarse mustard, 7s to 8s per bushel; white, —s to —s; cake, 4s to 5s. Foreign, rod, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; barley, —s to —s; oats, —s to —s; beans, —s to —s; peas, —s to —s, per quarter. Flour, American, 21s to 24s per barrel; Baltic, 4s to —s per barrel.

The Seed Markets.—Our market is exceedingly heavy, and prices almost generally have a downward tendency. The supply of new seeds is arriving.

Linseed, English, sowing, 56s to 58s. Baltic, crushing, 38s to 42s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 34s to 36s; hempseed, 32s to 34s per quarter; rapeseed, 36s to 38s per cwt.; brown mustard-seed, 8s to 11s; white ditto, 6s to 10s 6d; tares, 5s 0d to 6s 6d per bushe.; English rapeseed, —s to —s per last of ten quarters; Dutch, —l. to —l.; English, £9 5s to £10; ditto, foreign, £6 0s to £6 5s per 1000); rapeseed cakes, £4 5s to £4 10s per ton; canary, 62s to 70s per quarter; English coarse mustard, 7s to 8s per bushel; white, —s to —s; cake, 4s to 5s. Foreign, rod, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; barley, —s to —s; oats, —s to —s; beans, —s to —s; peas, —s to —s, per quarter. Flour, American, 21s to 24s per barrel; Baltic, 4s to —s per barrel.

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 44s 8d; barley, 26s 1d; oats, 19s 3d; rye, 29s 6d; beans, 30s 7d; peas, 28s 6d.

The Six Weeks' Average.—Wheat, 46s 8d; barley, 26s 1d; oats, 19s 3d; rye, 29s 6d; beans 30s 7d; peas, 28s 6d.

Duties on Foreign Corn.—Wheat, 1s 0d; barley, 1s 0d; oats, 1s 0d; rye, 1s 0d, beans, 1s 0d; peas, 1s 0d.

Sugar.—The qualities of both black and green teas move off slowly, on barely former terms. Common sound sugars are steady, at 5d per cwt.

Sugar.—Most kinds of raw sugar have met a very inactive demand this week, and in most instances prices have further declined 6d per cwt. Refined goods have moved off slowly, brown lumps, 4d, and fine grocery, 6s to 6s per cwt.

Coffee.—No change to notice. The market is very flat, at a fall of 1s per cwt.

Rice.—The dealers have work in stock, this article has become rather heavy, at a decline in the value of Bengal parcels of 5s per cwt., Carolina remains nearly the same.

Provisions.—The best qualities of Dutch butter are in some cases improved request, at fully last week's quotations. In other kinds very little is doing. Good and fine hams are selling at 70s to 80s; and inferior, 44s to 60s per cwt. The market for Irish butter is very dull, and the inferior sorts are lower in price. Carlow and Limerick, firsts, landed, 64s to 66s, Cork and Clonmel, 64s to 66s, Cork, 64s to 66s, Limerick 58s to 63s, Sligo 58s to 60s; and Waterford, 60s to 64s per cwt. Fine English butter supports late rates, but other kinds are cheaper. Fine weekly Dorset, 88s to 92s, middling, 80s to 84s. Fine Dorset, 86s to 92s per cwt., fresh, 84s to 112s per dozen lbs. The best Irish bacon is up 2s, at full prices, viz. from 54s to 58s per cwt. American bacon is dull, at 48s to 50s. All other kinds of provisions are a low mg.

Tallow.—The market is very dull, at a fart or decline of 3d to 6d per cwt. P T C on the spot is 39s to 39s 6d per cwt; town tallow 37s per cwt, net cash

Oils.—Linseed oil has advanced 10s per ton, otherwise the market is firm

Coals (Friday.)—Seymour Tees, 15s 6d, Braddyll's Hetton, 15s, Hetton, 15s 3d; New Tanfield, 15s 6d; Carr's Hartley, 16s, 16s 3d; all Londons, 16s 6d per ton

Hops (Friday.)—The prevailing fine weather has produced a very great improvement in the general appearance of the hop bine, which has thrown out rather large quantities of bur during the past week. In some instances the crop will be ready for picking, and a fair growth is now anticipated. The demand for all kinds of hops is exceedingly heavy, at a decline of 5s to 10s per cwt. Early kinds, 110s to 168s. All other kinds of provisions are a low mg.

*Potatoes

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor Mr. W. BATTY. First Night of the Season.—Powerful Attraction.—Return of Lord Byron's magnificent Spectacle of MAZEPPA.—Now and brilliant Scenes of the Ascent. On MONDAY, SEPT. 10, the Performances will commence, at Seven o'clock, with that highly-popular Hi ppo Dramatic Spectacle of MAZEPPA; or, the Wild Horse of Tartary, reproduced with all possible care and attention a proper fur to the Scenic and Dramatic Effects that have ... unprecedented success! To be ... of the Arena, supported by the ... stud of the establishment. To conclude with a favourite ... Box-office open from 11 till 4. Stage-manager, Mr. W. West

MONS. JULLIEN'S BENEFIT.—ROYAL SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.—On MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 10th, Mons. JULLIEN'S BENEFIT will take place, on which occasion a Grand Vocal and Instrumental Concert will be performed by the Band of the Royal Italian Opera, a series of compositions of the most excellent order, and in which Mons. Jullien will appear, by Koenig Cornet, Richardson, Sidbrick, and Collins. The Vocal Department will be sustained by Mr and Miss Macdona, Miss Messent, Wells, Mr. G. Tedder, and Herr Hermanns. Conductor, M. Jullien, being his last appearance on the Surrey stage.

In addition to the splendid Promenade Concert, all the attractions of the Gardens will be open as usual, concluding with the existing Novelties, viz., the increasing in popularity, wildness and ferocity of the Nubian Lions, and the unequalled performance of the Sagacious Seal and Sea Serpent at Nine. No Extra Charge. Admission One Shilling.

THE MI-SISSIPPI AND MISSOURI RIVERS, exhibited, by command, to her Majesty the Queen, H.H. Prince Albert, and Royal Family, at Windsor Castle, New-Views, embracing the Western Banks from Mississippi River to Watseka, &c., to New Orleans, being the most complete picture ever executed by man. Exhibiting the Egyptian Hall, at will, every morning at half-past two, evening at half-past seven. Admission, lower seats, 1s.; gallery, 6d.

THE ROYAL CHINESE JUNK IS NOW OPEN in the EAST INDIA DOCKS, adjoining the Steam-Boat Pier and Railway Terminus, Blackwall, surrounded by an ample ... and tastefully arranged Gardens, &c.—Numerous additions have been made to this interesting and novel Exhibition, including a Splendid Model of one of the most famous Pagodas in China. Models taken from the Chinese Standard in the Great Exhibition. Finding, in Grand Court Saloons. Grand Saloon of Curiosities. Mandarin Seeing, and Artist Sketching, Day and Evening. Chinese Crew. Chinese Songs, &c. Conveyance constantly by Railway, Omnibus, or ... Admission, as heretofore, 1s.—Catalogues to be had only on board ship.

Open Daily, from Eleven to Five; and every Evening, EXCEPT SATURDAY, from Seven till Half-past Ten.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION. —Mr. Pepper's Series of DISSOLVING VIEWS illustrating ROME, with a description embracing the most interesting points connected with the ancient. Daily at Half-past Four, and in the Evening at Quarter to Ten o'Clock.—LECTURES on CHEMISTRY, by Mr. J. H. ... Daily at Half-past Two, and in the Evening at Nine o'Clock.—LECTURES, with EXPERIMENTS, by Dr BACHHOFFNER, on the HYDRO-ELECTRIC MACHINE, Daily at Two o'Clock. —The CHEMICAL PHENOMENA of the GAS-LIGHT-HYDROGEN MICROSCOPE.—DIVER and DIVING-BELL.—Admission, 1s.; Schools, Half-price.

BEARD'S DAGUERREOTYPE PORTRAITS, ... NEW GALLERY ... As KING, WILLIAM-STREET, ... Specimens may be seen at 85 KING WILLIAM STREET, ... Portraits are pronounced a marked improvement."—Athenæum, June 23.

"Specimens may be seen at 85 King William-street, City."—Times, June 23.

PIANOFORTES.—TOLKIEN'S splendid Cottage Pianoforte, with 6½ octaves, G G A to E, Model 1, only 22 guineas. Parties requiring a first-rate instrument for a little money will do well to purchase TOLKIEN'S out established house, 37, 38, and 39, King William-street, London-bridge. Second-hand Instruments sent post free. Old instruments taken in exchange.

DANCING TAUGHT in the most fashionable Circles by MR and MRS. COCHRANE, at WILLIS'S ROOMS, (Entrance first, Golden-square Private Lessons at all hours. In consequence of the Re-decorative of the Rooms, Opening of the Evening Academy will be postponed until ..., next, consequent the 14th the Rooms to be let for Balls, &c.

MADEIRA.—YATES'S FAMILY HOTEL. Visitors to Madeira are informed that, on their arrival, they will find good accommodation at the above Hotel, where Mr Yates, an Englishman, will give groups of White Slaves. Postchaises may require six to Horses, Boarding houses, Lodgings, &c. &c.

ROYAL HOTEL, DOWNS TOR.—GEORGE ... HOARE respectfully informs the ... country, and Visitors to this delightful ... the HOTEL is now OPEN, and has undergone a very ... it will be found to ... Shower Baths of Fresh and Salt Water, Lo... and Post-horses.

CRICKET.—SUSSEX AGAINST ALL ENGLAND.—During the play of this Grand Match, commencing TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 11th, the LONDON, BRIGHTON, and SOUTH COAST RAILWAY COMPANY will run Trains from London to Brighton, at 9 A.M., 12 Noon, 3, 4, 5, and 7 P.M.; and from Brighton to London, at 7, 8, 9 11 A.M.; 12, 3, 6, 8 P.M. Carriages, 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Class. Fare, 4s. 3s. 6d. 2s. between the Bright-st Station and the Cricket Ground, at Hove, near Hove-street. J. J. SLIGHTON, Secretary.

London Terminus, 4th Sept., 1849.

NEW ZEALAND COMPANY'S SHIP. The First-class Passenger Ship, BRIDESMAID, 682 Tons, now lying in the London Docks, will be followed by a Ship of nearly a Thousand Tons from the Port of London, on MONDAY, the 1st of OCTOBER next, and will carry an experienced surgeon.

... MURRAY STANILL, Broker, 10, Finsbury-circus. By Order of the Court, ... CLENNAN, Secretary.

New Zealand House, 9, Broad-street Buildings, 30th August, 1849.

NEW ZEALAND COMPANY.—LAND.—The Company possess under Crown Titles extensive Tracts of Land in the settlements of Wellington, Nelson, New Plymouth, and Wanganui.

These are offered for Purchase, in Town Allotments of a Quarter Acre (Suburban, of Ten Acres), and Rural Parcels of Sixty-five Acres each, and for Exchange, in proportion to the quantity of Land held by each Applicant.

The Terms and further particulars may be obtained at the New Zealand House, London, or the Otago Office, 22 South Hanover-street, Edinburgh.

By order of the Court of Directors, ... CLENNAN, Secretary.

New Zealand House, 9, Broad-street, Buildings, London, 1st August, 1849.

FRAUDULENT IMITATION.—S. MORDAN and CO exacting all Customers to the Genuine Lords and Cumberland Lead Pencils for Pencil cases that, in consequence of the numerous Works being imitated for the purpose of deceiving the public, Messrs Mordan usually given that S. Mordan and Co are desirous to apply to the Court of Chancery to protect them against all parties who either "Make or Sell" such spurious goods.

23, City-road, Finsbury, London.

PAPER-HANGINGS and PANELLED ... by Royal Letters Patent.—E. T. ARCHER, ... the Inspection and patronage of Invalids of ... Princess Royal, ... Duchess of Kent, Duchess of Inverness, Lord Brougham, ... Elegant and exact imitations of the most costly Woods, ... Marble, &c. Machinery Paper-Hangings of every class and every purpose in use. The Public are cautioned against spurious Panelled Paper-Hangings by the best makers. Hand veneers Marble Paper for Halls, and Granite Paper and the Paper of the best quality, lately ... PAPER-STAINER, 29, ... GOSPORD-STREET.

ONE FLORIN.

A FINE HEAD of HAIR can scarcely be obtained by using, as ... is supposed, any ... MILTON'S HAIR LUBRICANT, an elegant ... and sensible preparation, neither ... nor greasy, but combining ... the soft fatty matter with which Nature has lubricated the Hair, and which, ... supplied, gives it a fine ... and becomes most moist. MILTON'S HAIR LUBRICANT supplies this deficiency in a natural manner, and will restore it where ... has run, and abundant. In a newly-designed and elegant ... stand, One Florin.

Sold by all perfumers and medicine vendors in town and country. Wholesale Depôt, 266, Regent-street, and 24, Cornhill, London; 2, Exchange-street; Edwards, St. Paul's-churchyard; Sutton and Co., Bow-churchyard; Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; and Harvey and Co., Ludgate-street.

INDIA, AUSTRALIA, CAPE of GOOD HOPE, &c.—The Cabin Passengers' OUTFITTING BRANCH of S. W. SAVAGE and Co is at 85 and 87, Cornhill, as heretofore, where Outfits for Officers, Cadets, Civilians, and Cabin Passengers generally, are furnished at the lowest shipping rates. Silver and Co negotiate passages, give or obtain Colonial information, also as to the probable departure and arrival of ships; they forward, free of charge, through their agents, small parcels for their customers to Australia; they give drafts on Australia, at sixty days' sight, of £100 for every £100 paid here. They neither pay nor receive any commission, so that ... their Outfit of silver and Co. bundle by the ... to persons ... or colonial ... Sailing on Board at the Docks, or at Gravesend (weather permitting), where a comfortable Pilot-boat ... (smoking bidding) may be procured for Four Persons.—A Branch of each of the above at St. George's-crescent, Liverpool.

NEW BOOKS, &c.

Just published,

SOYER'S MODERN HOUSEWIFE, or ECONOMY! Containing 1,850 Receipts, including above 100 Receipts, and Anti-Cholera Diet as go recommended by the BOARD of HEALTH, price 7s 6d.—SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co.; OLIVER, 7a Hall; and all Booksellers.

NEW NOVEL BY MRS TROLLOPE. Immediat by, in 3 vols., post 8vo., THE OLD WORLD AND THE NEW. By MRS. TROLLOPE, Author of "Father Eustace," "The Lottery of Marriage," & Hessy Colburn, Publisher, 13, Great Marlborough-street

MDME. SONTAG'S ENGLISH SONG. "THEY HAVE WELCOMED ME AGAIN" With a highly finished Port alt. Price 5s.—The re-appearance of that enchanting artiste, Mdme. Sontag, on the scene of her former triumph, has produced an expressive ballad The air is extremely captivating, flowing, and graceful, and combines ease, fancy, and elegance. This Song possesses a deep interest, and deserves success.—

... CRAMER and Co.

NEW SONG.—"YES! I HAVE DARED TO LOVE THEE!" by the Author of "Will you love me then as now?" "Dearest, then I'll love you more." "The Secret," &c., price 2s (net). Dedicated ... This Song will be the greatest favourite of the set. The melody and words are of the most pleasing and pathetic character. We recommend it to vocalists as a gem deserving their best attention.—London: D'ALMAINE and HODSON, 66, Oxford-street.

NEW CHEAP MUSIC.—New Music of the best class and character, bound in volumes. Thirty Shillings a Ream for EIGHT, to clear off stock. Best pieces of Czerny, Thalberg, Herz, Kalkbrenner, and all other celebrities. Music at half price and quarter price. Orders for exportation, and lists from country Booksellers, made up on terms which count and defy competition. Every sort of cheap music kept, without prejudice or favour.—WALKER and Co., 16, Soho-square. New Catalogues Gratis for Two Stamps. 17, Soho-square.—WALKER'S

Just out, price 6s.

PRACTICE in GERMAN. Adapted for ... Self-Instruction. By FALCK-LEBAHN. By the same Author, GERMAN in ONE VOLUME. 2nd Edition. Price 8s; with Key, 10s 6d.

WHITTAKER and Co., Ave Maria-lane.

NEW EDITION, 11,000.

Now ready, Price One Shilling; or Post-free, 1s. 6d.,

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON SPELLING-BOOK

This work is rendered peculiarly attractive by the EASY ARRANGEMENT of the Lessons, which embodies all difficulties experienced by beginners, and by the PLEASING ORIGINAL READING LESSONS, which combine the learner to acquire the knowledge of words; while the whole is ILLUSTRATED by UPWARDS of ONE HUNDRED and FIFTY BEAUTIFUL WOOD-CUTS of objects and scenes described, forming by far the most alluring introduction to learning ever published. (144 Pages.)

A Few Copies are Coloured price 1s extra.

Published at the Office of THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand, London. A Liberal Allowance to the Trade and to Schools. Supplied for Cash only. Remittances to be made to the Office. Orders and Applications as above.

In 12mo. cloth, price 8s 6d, or postage free, 9s, the Second Edition of the FLY SHEETS and their VINDICATION; or, the Statements and Arguments of the Writers in the "Fly Sheets" Examined and Refuted, with answers to Observations in "The Watchman," "Papers on Wesleyan Matters," "Remarks on the Fly Sheets," and other recent publications. By SOME OF THEM. To which is added, a Reply to the Charge of the Rev. Isaiah Walton, and Observations on the Conference Rule for 1835. "Measures, not men." Which is added a full Report of the Statements of the Rev Messrs Everett, Dunn, and Griffith, at Exeter Hall, on August 31

A.l Wesleyans should immediately procure the whole of this book, to enable a correct judgment to be formed of the truths advanced against the Letter Fly Sheets, and the hypocrisy of the Conference; and the vital importance to the cause of Methodism throughout the world, that every member of the body should co-operate in this kingdom to ensure a speedy removal of the misgoverning evils at present existing in the Conference.

London: Published by JAMES ..., 9, Paternoster-row.

BLACK AND WHITE PORCELAIN BROOCHES. ... Brooches, from New ... Cameos, &c. ... BLACK AND WHITE PORCELAIN BROOCHES.—The most unique and expert ornaments for dress ever produced ... patronised by the Nobility ... post free for 7s 6d, direct from Mrs. MARY BROUGHAM, Burslem, Staffordshire.

ORNAMENTS for the DRAWING-ROOM, and MANTEL DINING-ROOM, by the Author of "Fly Sheets," now Nearly Ready, has just received a new and ... ornament of Corinth, Parthenon, Athenæum, Lykeaum, Beautiful Inlaid Tables, Paper-weights, &c., in Italian Alabaster, Marble, Bronze, &c.

JONES'S £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES, at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House, are warranted not to vary more than half a minute per week in any climate, to perform three months' sea sickness, either of the owner's or the vessel's construction, or any other cause. On receipt of a Post-office Order, payable to JOHN JONES, for £4 4s ..., Free by Parcel Post, Bond Jones's Stamp on the Movement, and Signature of Watchwork, sent ...

THE NEW FISH CARVING KNIVES and FORKS. A. B. SAVORY and SONS respectfully ... their Customers that these Knives, of three sizes, are ... ready for exhibition. In all new pattern the prices are from ... the parts in silver.

ELECTRO and SHEFFIELD PLATE.—The Catalogue of Prices, with Drawings of Silver-plated Dish Covers, Wrought or Cast Fronts, and other requisites for the Dining-Table, is published, and may be had gratis, or will be sent, postage free to any part of Great Britain, Ireland, or the Colonies.—T. COX SAVORY and Co., 47, Cornhill, London, 7 doors from Gracechurch-st.

SILVER PLATE.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS ... to call the attention of consumers to ... plated goods ... Having the best workmen employed in the manufacture of Spoons and Forks, and Silver Tea and Coffee ... of the finest quality of plate and workmanship, they feel confident that the ... and price of the various articles required in family use, may be had at their ... 47, Cornhill, 7 doors from, to any part of Great Britain, Ireland, or the Colonies. A. B. SAVORY and SONS, 14, Cornhill, London, opposite the ...

WATCHES and CLOCKS.—A Pamphlet ... explaining the various constructions, and the advantages of each, with a List of Prices, may be forwarded, Gratis by post, or delivered for a post-paid letter.—T. COX SAVORY and Co., Goldsmiths and Watchmakers, &c., 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street), London.

GOLD and SILVER WATCHES, WARRANTED FOR TWO YEARS. Jones' Gold Watches, jewelled in four holes ... £9 9 0
" Superior do., good dial and dust ... 7 7 0
" Extra do., ... 11 7 0
Gentlemen's Gold Watches ... 5 5 0
" Improved Silver Levers ... 4 4 0
Silver Watches, jewelled in four holes ... 2 12 6
At W. HUGHES'S, 147 and 89, High-street, Boro', Established, 1793.

N.B. ... Watches, &c., 18 guineas, cost 35 guineas.

HAWLEY'S GOLD and SILVER WATCHES.

	£ s. d.
Gentlemen's Gold Watches ...	5 5 0
" Do. ...	3 3 0
" Gold Lever ditto ...	5 15 0
" Silver ditto ditto ...	2 15 0
Ladies' Gold Watches ...	3 3 0
" Do. Lever ...	5 15 0
Young Ladies' Silver Watches ...	2 2 0

All the above Watches have every modern improvement, are properly jewelled and warranted, with Gold and Silver Dials engraved and chased, and warranted to keep correct time. HAWLEY and Co., 284, High-street, sons of the late Thomas Hawley, of 73, Strand, and the only genuine Watchmakers of that name in London.

TO LADIES.—On the drive, the ride, the promenade, or in ... exercise, Ladies should ever be provided with ROWLAND'S KALYDOR, which gently ... preserves, and restores to the complexion, dissolving the cloud of languor and ... Having all irritability and heat, and immediately affording the most delightful sensations attendant on restored elasticity and a healthful ... The numerous varieties of cutaneous eruptions ... spots, and discolorations, by before the sprightly ... Kalydor ... those and tragic ... In cases of sunburn or stings of ... it is ... extremely ... Sold by all ... Rowland's Kalydor" on the wrapper. Price 4s 6d and 8s 6d per bottle. Sold by A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20, Hatton-garden, London; and by chemists and perfumers.

BRIGHTON.—A Widow Lady, residing in this town, wishes to RECEIVE one or two LITTLE CHILDREN, who may be deprived of a mother's care, or for whom the benefit of sea air may be considered desirable. Address to S. S., care of Mr. H. S. KING, bookseller, North-st-eet, Brighton

A YOUNG LADY, aged 27, wishes for an Engagement as GOVERNESS to a LADY, or as GOVERNESS in a Private Family She is fully competent to instruct in Music, French, Drawing, and Arithmetic. Any salary required ... the object of the adver ... to obtain a comfortable home, ... will be treated as one of the family. Most re... can be given.—Address, M. S. C., F. BENNETT and Co., Ironmongers, 14, Lower street, Islington.

AIR-GUNS and AIR-CANES for shooting rabbits, rooks, sea-fowl, &c. with ball, small shot as with shot, fish with harpoons and arrows, and for practising and sporting purposes complete. Price 6d, per post, 8d. REILLY, Gun-maker, New Oxford-street

IRISH POPLIN and TABINET in every description, for Ladies' Dress ... & Gentlemen's Vests, at ELLIOT'S, 14, Poultry, and 83, Royal Exchange. Sole Makers, 29, St. Martin's-lane (corner of New-street).—Established 50 years

SHIRTS.—The ZETETIQUE SHIRTS, Registered May 2, 1849, Act 5 & 7 Vic., c. 65.—These are the only fitting Shirts ... the Public ... Directions for self-measurement, ... Patterns and Prices ... N.B. The Non Registered Shirts are 8s for 20s. The Zetetique Shirts are kept ready-made in Colonial Shirts.—Instructions for self measurement, with list of prices, sent post-free. JAMES BLACKBURN, 47, Cheapside, London.

FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS.—Gentlemen are ... attended ... which is now given by a very ... mode ... of its imperfections, yet with a confident hope that it contains "much new and curious matter, on a plan good in itself." The latter is the dictionary form, the most direct means of conveying information on the ... and to seek it with haste and impat ence.

In the choice of the materials for the "Handbook," much judgment has been exercised, especially in the authority not confounding Stow and Strype with their continuators; though he is the first writer on the subject who has not fallen into the error of making St. Jas as if ... were two. Cough's "Additions" as the text of Camden. Of course, the best books about London have been consulted. A rarer source of primary information is the public press of the country, more especially the dramatic poetry, of which Mr. Cunningham has availed himself with taste and skill; the interest of which has in illustrating localities no longer in existence, and allusions but imperfectly understood. The manuscript authorities include public and private collections, parish rate-books and registers—the latter very important in enabling the author of the "Handbook" to fix the precise years when certain streets were erected, and illustrate the text with the names of eminent persons by whom they were inhabited.

The Introduction contains some thirty pages of the great features of London, such as the Boundaries, Situation, and Extent; the period of Foundation, a survey of history and title; How to enter London; Hotels, Inns, and Lodgings; Palaces, Exhibitions, and Places of Amusement; the notabilia of Painting, Sculpture, and Architecture, which artists and connoisseurs should see; what the Archæologist and Antiquary should see; hints about Hotel and Tavern Dinners, Beer, and Wine; Public Institutions; Police and Crime; Mortality, and Houses; Supply of Water, Sewerage, Pavement, Police, and Lighting; Bankers, Public Conveyances, Cab Fares, Watermen, &c.; all symptomatically given, and mostly illustrated by anecdote. This section of the work is preferable, as a guide-book, to either of the over-crammed pictures of London. It is followed by a Calendar of London Occurrences; from the first inwalling of London in 306, to the burning of the Olympic Theatre, in 1849.

We are anxious to give our readers a notion of the variety of the information contained in the "Handbook." Here is a specimen of one class: after giving the date (1822) of the foundation of the Royal Academy of Music, 4, Tenterden-street, Hanover-square, we find:—"This is an academy with in-door and out-door students, the in-door paying fifty guineas a year and ten guineas entrance-fee, and the out-door thirty guineas a year and five guineas entrance-fee. Some previous knowledge is required, and the students in st provide themselves with the instruments they propose or to acquire. There is a large Madrid Piano in the Library. Four scholarships, called 'King's Scholarships,' have been ... founded by the Academy, two of which, one male and one female, are ... annually at Midsummer. We have here the most satisfactory outline of the management of a public institution. Of another kind, in the same page, are the particulars of the quarterly meetings of the Adelphi buildings, by the brothers Adam, in July 1768, when "the Court and City were in front spectators, and the citizens were glad in any little way in their power to show their hostility to the Court. The brothers Adam were patronised by the King, and having in view Adelphi-building ... enfranchised, it was thought, too far upon the Thames, and thus interfered with the rights of the Lord Mayor as conservator of the river, the citizens applied to Parliament for protection. The feeling was in favour of the Court and of the new improvements, and the citizens lost their cause. (Walpole's 'Memoirs of Geo. III.,' iv. 173.) Durham Yard (the water-yard of old Durham House) was, when bought by the Messrs. Adam, occupied by a heap of small, low-lying houses, coal-sheds, and lay-stalls, washed by the muddy deposits of the Thames."

After the description of the improvements we come to "Eminent Inhabitants."—David Garrick dwelt in the centre House, No. 3, of the Terrace, from 1772 till his death in 1779. The ceiling of the front drawing-room was painted by antonio Zucchi, A.R.A., an artist introduced by the Messrs. Adam to decorate their buildings. A chimney-piece of white marble, in the front room, is said to have graced No. 2301, Garrick died in the back room of the first floor, and his widow in the same house, in 1822." Again, "Mr. Thomas Hill, the 'Field' of Hook's song, and the original ... of Paul Pry, lived for many years and died in the second floor of No. 2, James-street, Adelphi."

We hope shortly to return to this work, with the view of supporting our praise of its execution by a few more anecdote illustrations.

POST-OFFICE AFLOAT.—A floating receiving-house has been established at Liverpool. For "late letters" for the United States. On Saturday last letters were posted at is la a 10 50 A.M., giving the public thereby an advantage of nearly two hours, as the latter time at the chief office closed finally at 9 A.M. So appreciated is this new arrangement, that to take advantage of it letters from Manchester are sent down by special messengers.

LITERATURE.

A HANDBOOK FOR LONDON, PAST AND PRESENT. By PETER CUNNINGHAM. 2 vols. MURRAY.

It has long been justly complained that we have no history of London which conveys any exact idea of the metropolis of our time—its accretion or growth from the Augusta of the Roman classic to "the great Metropolis" of William IV. True it is that we have popular accounts and pictures of London almost innumerable; but they are in general ill-defined, and arbitrary in their plan and contents, as scarcely to rise to the average merit of a guide-book, save in their list of cab fares. That the execution of such a history as the subject demands would be a vast labour, must be admitted. The store of materials for "the Past" is rich indeed, but requires judgment in use, in proportion to their abundance. "The Present" can only be depended on by actual visit and inquiry; and, unless the result be instantly availed of, there is a chance of its becoming incorrect; for change is the characteristic of art as well as of nature, and within the circle of thirty miles circumference every day produces some change in the aspect and existence of the objects which it is the duty of the topographer to describe. Sysphus at his mountain, the type of such a toil; and this accounts for the failures, whilst the alluring mass of materials in some measure explains the number of attempts. We must not exercise the work before us with any of these crudities; for it is unquestionably, by many degrees, the most exact book of its class yet produced; combining, as it does, the higher order of history with the popular requirements of every-day use and application, the severest test to which any labour of the kind can be subjected.

Horace Walpole tells us that he once began "Anecdotes of the Streets of London," in which he intended to have pointed out the streets and houses where any remarkable incidents had happened: the annalist of Strawberry wrote about ten or twelve pages, and abandoned the design; he found the collecting of materials an irksome toil. Mr. Cunningham, who may have framed his work as Walpole did, from a French plan, has labored seven years at the "Handbook," which he now gives to the world with a modest sense of its imperfections, yet with a confident hope that it contains "much new and curious matter, on a plan good in itself." The latter is the dictionary form, the most direct means of conveying information on the ... and to seek it with haste and impat ence.

In the choice of the materials for the "Handbook," much judgment has been exercised, especially in the authority not confounding Stow and Strype with their continuators; though he is the first writer on the subject who has not fallen into the error of making St. Jas as if ... were two. Cough's "Additions" as the text of Camden. Of course, the best books about London have been consulted. A rarer source of primary information is the public press of the country, more especially the dramatic poetry, of which Mr. Cunningham has availed himself with taste and skill; the interest of which has in illustrating localities no longer in existence, and allusions but imperfectly understood. The manuscript authorities include public and private collections, parish rate-books and registers—the latter very important in enabling the author of the "Handbook" to fix the precise years when certain streets were erected, and illustrate the text with the names of eminent persons by whom they were inhabited.

The Introduction contains some thirty pages of the great features of London, such as the Boundaries, Situation, and Extent; the period of Foundation, a survey of history and title; How to enter London; Hotels, Inns, and Lodgings; Palaces, Exhibitions, and Places of Amusement; the notabilia of Painting, Sculpture, and Architecture, which artists and connoisseurs should see; what the Archæologist and Antiquary should see; hints about Hotel and Tavern Dinners, Beer, and Wine; Public Institutions; Police and Crime; Mortality, and Houses; Supply of Water, Sewerage, Pavement, Police, and Lighting; Bankers, Public Conveyances, Cab Fares, Watermen, &c.; all symptomatically given, and mostly illustrated by anecdote. This section of the work is preferable, as a guide-book, to either of the over-crammed pictures of London. It is followed by a Calendar of London Occurrences; from the first inwalling of London in 306, to the burning of the Olympic Theatre, in 1849.

We are anxious to give our readers a notion of the variety of the information contained in the "Handbook." Here is a specimen of one class: after giving the date (1822) of the foundation of the Royal Academy of Music, 4, Tenterden-street, Hanover-square, we find:—"This is an academy with in-door and out-door students, the in-door paying fifty guineas a year and ten guineas entrance-fee, and the out-door thirty guineas a year and five guineas entrance-fee. Some previous knowledge is required, and the students in st provide themselves with the instruments they propose or to acquire. There is a large Madrid Piano in the Library. Four scholarships, called 'King's Scholarships,' have been ... founded by the Academy, two of which, one male and one female, are ... annually at Midsummer. We have here the most satisfactory outline of the management of a public institution. Of another kind, in the same page, are the particulars of the quarterly meetings of the Adelphi buildings, by the brothers Adam, in July 1768, when "the Court and City were in front spectators, and the citizens were glad in any little way in their power to show their hostility to the Court. The brothers Adam were patronised by the King, and having in view Adelphi-building ... enfranchised, it was thought, too far upon the Thames, and thus interfered with the rights of the Lord Mayor as conservator of the river, the citizens applied to Parliament for protection. The feeling was in favour of the Court and of the new improvements, and the citizens lost their cause. (Walpole's 'Memoirs of Geo. III.,' iv. 173.) Durham Yard (the water-yard of old Durham House) was, when bought by the Messrs. Adam, occupied by a heap of small, low-lying houses, coal-sheds, and lay-stalls, washed by the muddy deposits of the Thames."

After the description of the improvements we come to "Eminent Inhabitants."—David Garrick dwelt in the centre House, No. 3, of the Terrace, from 1772 till his death in 1779. The ceiling of the front drawing-room was painted by antonio Zucchi, A.R.A., an artist introduced by the Messrs. Adam to decorate their buildings. A chimney-piece of white marble, in the front room, is said to have graced No. 2301, Garrick died in the back room of the first floor, and his widow in the same house, in 1822." Again, "Mr. Thomas Hill, the 'Field' of Hook's song, and the original ... of Paul Pry, lived for many years and died in the second floor of No. 2, James-street, Adelphi."

We hope shortly to return to this work, with the view of supporting our praise of its execution by a few more anecdote illustrations.

POST-OFFICE AFLOAT.—A floating receiving-house has been established at Liverpool. For "late letters" for the United States. On Saturday last letters were posted at is la a 10 50 A.M., giving the public thereby an advantage of nearly two hours, as the latter time at the chief office closed finally at 9 A.M. So appreciated is this new arrangement, that to take advantage of it letters from Manchester are sent down by special messengers.

BARNET GREAT CATTLE AND HORSE FAIR.

On Monday, this very extensive and important cattle fair commenced. The supply of beasts in the different fair fields exceeded those of last year by nearly 3000. There were beasts of almost every breed in the United Kingdom, collected together from all the various counties to a much larger extent than at any other fair in England. Being well attended by a large class of respectable graziers, farmers, and cowkeepers, &c., business in the middle of the day was exceedingly brisk, the Lincoln, Leicester, and other large sorts being the first selected, three and four year olds selling at the following prices: - Lincoln and Leicesters, £10 to £14 per head; Sussex, £9 to £15 per head; Devons, £8 to £10 per head; Herefords and Staffords, £7 to £9 per head; two year old beasts did not rise so much by £2 per head; Scots, of which there were some very extensive drops on Barnet Common, the aged beasts making from £7 to £9 per head; two and three year olds, 5 to £7 per head. The race-course was completely covered with Welsh and Irish beasts of mixed character. The best Welsh bullocks made from £8 to £9 per head; small and inferior, £4 to £5 per head. Irish beasts were offered at low prices, but few were sold, although offered full 20 per cent. below the prices of last year. Milch cows ruled steadily as to price and demand. Best York or Durham-bred heasts with calves by their sides, made from £15 to £20 per head; in calf, per

BRITISH COLLEGE OF HEALTH, NEW ... LONDON. Just Published,
THE LETTER of the REV. ALFRED HEWLETT, Incumbent of Astley, near Manchester, addressed to Messrs. MORISON, giving an account of the Cures effected amongst his Parishioners from the year 1846 to 1848, with Mr. MORISON'S UNIVERSAL MEDICINE. ... the Particulars, Attestation of N. H. Martin, Esq., under seal, on ... of 10,000 persons in the Island of Cape Breton. Sent direct ... receipt of ... Address to the Institution, ... UNIVERSAL MEDICINE.
Such documents may be had gratis at the British College of Health New-road, London, and of all the agents for the sale of Mr. Morison's Medicines.

BARNET FAIR.

head, £12 to £14; Ayrshire in full milk, £10 to £12 per head; ditto in cal., £8 to £10; Suffolks, ditto, £10 to £13; Alderneys, of which there were some very choice samples in full milk, made from £14 to £18 per head. Barren cows and all inferior cattle went off slowly the first day.

The horse fair was well supplied with a large assortment of both draught and nag horses, the very prime cart horses, from four to six years old, making from 50 to 70 guineas each; smaller sorts, that were suitable for farmers and carmen, &c., 30 to 40 guineas each; carriage-horses, to match, from four to six years old, 150 to 180 guineas the pair. There were upwards of 1000 Welsh horses and ponies, the latter making from £10 to £16 each; and small Shetlands, £10 to £12 each.

Barnet is situated on the Great North Road; and as the London horse-dealers are, to a large extent, furnished by the great country collectors of horses in the northern districts, this town has long been noted for its fair. It stands upon an elevated site, and in Saxon grants the place is frequently named Bergnet, which signifies, in the Saxon language, "a small hill;" and in still later times it received the prefix of Chipping, in consequence of the market which the abbots of St. Alban obtained leave of Henry II. to establish in the town, and which, in time, became a large cattle and horse market.

THE CANTELOWS ARCHERY SOCIETY.

THIS Society, which has lately been formed at Camden New Town, held their first fête on Friday, the 31st ult., at their grounds adjoining the Camden-road Villas. The attendance was numerous and highly respectable: the shooting was good, and a silver medal (which we have engraved) was "awarded to the best shot;" and at the close of the sport, the archers and their friends partook of a déjeûner in a marquée pitched in the grounds, which, by the way, are private, and command a good view of Hampstead, Highgate, &c. The society, under the able presidency of Mr. Robert Horton, promises not to deviate from the spirit of the sport, or, like many such associations, to degenerate into a gambling club.

CANTELOWS ARCHERY PRIZE MEDAL.

SILVER CANDELABRUM, PRESENTED TO MALCOLM LEWIN, ESQ., BY THE HINDU COMMUNITY OF MADRAS.

CANDELABRUM, PRESENTED TO M. LEWIN, ESQ.

THE elegant silver Candelabrum, which is the subject of the annexed Engraving (as the following inscription on it states), has been—

"Presented to MALCOLM LEWIN, Esq., by the Hindu Community of Madras, in grateful acknowledgment of the independent spirit with which he upheld the integrity of the Sudder Court at Fort St. George, and thereby protected the Civil Rights and Religious Privileges of the Native Population. 13th December, 1848."

The Candelabrum is 24 inches in height, weighs 380 ounces, and cost £170. It consists of a triangular base, resting on elegantly moulded scroll feet, from whence rises a graceful stem of a palm-tree, bearing 5 prettily-formed branches for lights, whilst a sixth issues from the centre of the stem. At the base of the palm-tree, on the angles of the pedestal, are three well designed and executed emblematic figures. One of them, Justice, with her usual attributes, is represented standing; and looking at her, reverentially, is a seated Hindu; the third figure being also a Hindu, sitting reading the Shasrta. This beautiful specimen of the silversmith's art is one of the last productions of the celebrated firm of Green and Co., of Cockspur-street.

Mr Malcolm Lewin is a provisional member of the Madras Government, and the above present is intended to record the sense with which the Hindu community regarded his conduct while executing the office of Judge of the Sudr Court, the highest court of judicature in the country, under the trying circumstances of a collision with the Government, involving the rights and privileges of the Hindu population.

We do not pretend to judge of the merits of a question in itself so complicated, and it is too remote for any minute examination; it is, however, highly satisfactory to find that the Hindu community, acknowledging the obligation, have had the good taste to record their sense of it in a manner so flattering to Mr. Lewin.

It appears, from an address signed by 15,450 Hindus, that they requested Mr. Lewin's acceptance of a service of plate; but, before leaving India, the learned gentleman intimated a wish to receive nothing more than a single ornamental piece, with an inscription.

WARWICK RACE PLATE.

THIS effective group, which was run for at Warwick, on Wednesday, is a tasteful variation from the old custom of selecting literally, for the great prize, a "cup." At Doncaster, Ascot, and Goodwood, the rule has long been departed from, and with great advantage to art as well as gratification to those into whose hands the prizes have fallen; but, at Warwick, the present group is the first innovation.

Warwick and the renowned Earl Guy are so closely associated, that a fitter choice could not have been made for the composition than one of the Earl's reputed exploits. The scene is a terrific encounter between a dragon and lion, in which the chivalrous Earl charges on his steed to the rescue, and decides the conflict by slaying the dragon. The moment chosen by the artist is when the knight is dealing a fell stroke at the monster, who is springing up the right haunch of the charger. The lion is staggering near the uplifted foot of the horse, and roaring defiance. The horse and knight are cleverly designed: the figure of the latter conveys the idea of great physical force combined with activity; and the sinewy form of the limbs beneath the chain-mail is well denoted, the features evincing intense power. The figure of the horse bespeaks high action in the truthfulness of the veins and muscles shown on both sides of the group: on the front, where the right hoof is pressed forward, the leg straight, and the head thrown up, so that the sinews are stretched in lines at their utmost tension; and on the other side, where the left leg being thrown up and the knee and pastern joints doubled, the wrinkles on the surface of the skin and the deflections of the muscle become apparent.

The group is the composition of M. Eugène Lauri, a pupil of the celebrated Horace Vernet. The modeller is Mr. M'Carthy; and the work has been beautifully executed in silver by Mr. C. F. Hancock, of 39, Bruton-street.

We learn that Mr. Hancock has been appointed, within the last few days, gold and silversmith to his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Russia, and likewise to her Majesty Queen Adelaide. Mr. Hancock has had the honour of submitting the Warwick group to the inspection of the Count and Countess Nesilly, who were pleased to express themselves highly gratified with this fine specimen o English workmanship.

THE WARWICK GROUP.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE[illegible]se, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1849.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 390.—VOL. XV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1849. [SIXPENCE.

THE CHOLERA.

PRAYERS will be offered up to-morrow in all the churches of England, that Divine Providence may be pleased in its infinite mercy to stay the pestilence with which this realm is afflicted. All devout hearts will join humbly in the supplication; but, while leaving the penitence of a nation to plead at the throne of Grace, the rulers and chiefs of the people will not, it is to be hoped, imitate the Mahomedan fatalism, which relies upon prayer alone, and neglects those human means which God has put into our power to mitigate all the evils which a contravention of His laws, whether physical or moral, is sure to entail upon us.

The metropolis has suffered severely from its ignorance and neglect of those natural laws which are necessary for the preservation of health; and it may be conceded that, in most instances, the plague of Cholera, if not caused, has been greatly aggravated, by similar ignorance and neglect on the part of the people of the various towns and districts in which it has made its appearance. So surely does chastisement follow transgression of every natural law, that any one acquainted with the structure and population of our great towns, and the pursuits and habits of the people, had it in his power to point out with unerring certainty the places where Cholera would be most fatal. Predictions were made so long ago as when the first announcement reached this country of the appearance of Cholera in eastern Russia, that Paris, London, Glasgow, and other large and densely-peopled cities, would suffer the most severely from its destructive effects. We have seen how the prediction, or, more properly speaking, the calculation has been verified. It remains to be seen whether, profiting by the lessons of calamity, the people or their rulers will take efficient means to provide against the recurrence of a pest which is proved, by all we know and hear of it, to rage with the greatest virulence wherever the laws of health and cleanliness have been most grossly violated.

Experience proves that, in matters such as these, the collective people are not the best trustees of the people's interest. In London the health of two millions of people has been trifled with, and thousands of valuable lives have been lost, for want of an authority sufficiently wise, comprehensive, and absolute, to discover, to prescribe, and to enforce the means of prevention or mitigation of pestilence. Contending jurisdictions, jealous of each other, and of all interference with the right of local self-government; together with the apathy of Ignorance, which does not believe in danger until it makes itself felt, have, by their joint operation, prevented the establishment of such a central authority as we suppose. In the presence of the plague, these local jurisdictions will probably be less jealous of each other, and more inclined than they have been to cede their authority to some power that shall be more effective than they; and while London in its daily history almost recals the horrors of the great plagues of former times, even Ignorance, roused from its apathy, will cease to offer any further impediment to the efforts of those who desire to mitigate the present, and prevent future, pestilence. The "laisser faire" principle has its admirers, who will not suffer it to be infringed upon, even by such a visitation as this. It is, no doubt, admirable for many ends, in a commercial nation; but, like many other good principles, it may be carried to such an extreme as to render it an evil one. The public Wealth is one of the cases in which "laisser faire" may be safely trusted; but the public Health, it has long been obvious to the few, and is now becoming obvious to the many, is not a case in which it can be relied upon. Should the Government, as we trust it will, be disposed to take this matter into its own hands, it will meet with no real opposition at the present time. Should it neglect the opportunity, it will prove itself unworthy of its high responsibilities, and be justly open to the accusation of most culpable neglect.

We are well aware that, with all its defects, London is one of the most healthy cities of the world. There was a time when this fact was held to be a sufficient answer to any sanitary reformer who ventured to hint at amelioration. That time has passed. The Cholera has opened our eyes to the truth that, however healthy and wholesome London may be in comparison with Paris or any other city that still more flagrantly disobeys the laws of health, it is not so healthy or wholesome as it might be if we employed the proper means to keep it provided with pure air and pure water. We see that whilst our sanitary precautions have not increased with the increase of the population, that the feeders and causes of malaria augment with every addition to the numbers that are congregated together in that mighty mass of human habitations that pour their daily impurities into the Thames. Whatever advantage London may appear to possess when submitted to the ordeal of comparison with other cities, we are beginning to comprehend that there are two causes which more especially operate to its permanent unhealthiness. The first is the hourly pollution of the noble stream which runs through it; and the second is the barbarous practice of burying the dead among the living. Any one who has looked at the returns of the Board of Health, must have noticed that the mortality is greatest on the Surrey side of the Thames, from Wandsworth down to Greenwich—a low-lying district—built, for the most part, upon a marsh—and swarming with a dense and poor population. That district suffers from the combined operation of the two nuisances. The other districts of London, although afflicted with the grave-yard evil to an extent quite as mischievous, are relieved, by their higher situation, from the full effect of the malaria caused by the putrescence of the Thames. Public feeling is awakened on both subjects. It continues to express itself very strongly against the practice of intramural interments. It knows that, even when unafflicted with plague, we inter, on the yearly average, about 52,000 human bodies in such horrible places as the grave-yards of Drury-lane, St. Ann's, Blackfriars, St. Mary's, Lambeth, and a hundred others equally over-crowded. What this year's total will amount to, none can tell; but the ravages of the Cholera, by drawing attention to the subject, give some reason for the hope that we shall, ere long, imitate our ancestors, and cease to bury our dead within the bounds of our city. If the pestilence effect no other good for the living than this, we shall not have been submitted to the scourge in vain, and succeeding generations of the people of London will have reason to be thankful that their predecessors learned wisdom under affliction, and knew how to turn calamity to beneficial account.

1 PRISONER'S COUNSEL. 2. OFFICER OF THE COURT. 3. CAPT. HOPE JOHNSTONE. 4. SIR J. LOUIS. 5. MR. ELLIOTT. 6. MR. GRAHAM. 7-8. PROSECUTORS' COUNSEL.
9. CAPT. MACDOUGALL. 10. CAPT. WELLESLEY. 11. WITNESS. 12. PRISONER. 13. PROVOST MARSHAL. 14. PRISONER'S COUNSEL. 15. SIR THOMAS MAITLAND

COURT-MARTIAL ON COMMANDER PITMAN ON BOARD HER MAJESTY'S SHIP "IMPLACABLE," IN HAMOAZE, PLYMOUTH.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

The Government, however, has it in its power, in the present temper of the public, to do more than this. It may prevent the fine stream, which used to be, and ought to be, a source of health and pleasure to the people who dwell on its banks, from being poisoned by the refuse of a population now amounting to two millions, and which, in ten years hence, will probably number half a million more. No doubt, it will be an expensive process to keep the river pure, and to carry off all the drainage, by general tunnels or subterranean canals on either side, to convenient receptacles, where Science may transmute it into valuable manure. But the wealth that can intersect the realm with railways—that can find means to raise such a stupendous work as the tubular bridge over the Conway, in order that the communication between London and Dublin may be shortened by half an hour—that fed the starving millions of Ireland—and that emancipated the slave at the expense of twenty millions sterling, can find the means to drain the capital. Such an undertaking would not be all loss, even if we measured loss by pounds sterling, and counted human lives as nothing in the calculation. Science has myriads of advantages yet to offer to the world, of which our scientific men have as yet no more than a vague conception and a certain hope; but it has already been proved to demonstration, as one of its triumphs, that the liquid refuse carried by the drains of London into the Thames is capable, by its aid, of being converted into wealth. The present is the time for the Government to take the initiative. Popular sympathy and consent will not be wanting while Cholera lingers in our towns, or the remembrance of its ravages remains fresh in the mind of the public. Should, unfortunately, the present opportunity be allowed to pass, the wise and good, while they continue to pray that Cholera and Plague may not return to create another, will not fail to regret that the leaders of the people and the rulers of the State were not more prompt and patriotic in the discharge of their duty when the occasion presented itself.

COURT-MARTIAL ON COMMANDER PITMAN.

THE Court resumed its sittings on Tuesday (the 11th day), at half-past nine o'clock A.M., on board the Impregnable, in Hamoaze, Plymouth, to hear the prisoner's defence. The great interest excited by this inquiry drew together a large number of naval and military gentlemen and civilians in the ship's cabin, where the Court was held.

The prosecutors, Lieutenant Graham and Mr. Elliott, were both present, assisted by their legal advisers, Mr. John Bear and Mr. W. J. Little. Commander Pitman's law advisers were Mr. N. Lloyd and Mr. J. E. Eardley, the latter of whom, by permission of the Court, read his defence. This document was one of considerable length, occupying forty or fifty sheets of paper.

It opened by stating that Commander Pitman had for twenty-three years borne in the service a character for the most unblemished honour, until it was now attacked by two persons whose conduct he viewed with surprise and indignation, and whose charges he treated with indifference and contempt, seeing the source whence they emanated. These feelings participated in by officers of both ranks in the service. Letters from Admiral Dacre, September 4; Captain Sir F. Collier, September 3; Sir E. Lyon, September 6; Sir C. Talbard, August 31; and Captain M'Quhae, August 26, all written the present year, were read, giving the highest testimonial as an officer. A letter from Captain P. Richards, August 28, 1849, when the Childers was paid off at Chatham, showed that she was then in a highly creditable condition. Captain Lewis Jones, in another letter, Edinburgh, September, 1849, expresses his surprise at the charges now produced; and there were fifty other letters of similar tenor. These letters showed the feelings of those whose opinions were most valued, and valuable to him, Commander Pitman. The charges of cruelty and ill-usage surprised him, but the accusation of his want of a knowledge of navigation was the most surprising of all.

Unfortunately, when the Childers was commissioned, the Portsmouth division of Marines was all in Ireland, and, in consequence, some of the worst of characters had been sent on board the ship. This would not have happened under ordinary circumstances. Of the Marines they had no choice, but of the worst men in the ship. Another great source of trouble had been the character of the officers. Nevertheless, it was difficult to prove that any one officer of the ship left her through reason of misunderstanding with the commander. Who were his accusers? To them might be attributed all the misunderstanding which occurred on board. The first to whom he would allude was Mr. Elliott; he was proved to have been frequently intoxicated, and it was then he made assertions that he had pursued his present course. But for his (Commander Pitman's) forbearance, Mr. Elliott could not have remained in the ship. The Court would recollect that, when the Childers was first commissioned, Mr. Elliott was on the quarter-deck, where he was chopping the round-house with a hatchet, and was, in consequence, removed below. Mr. Elliott having subsequently expressed his regret, he was forgiven, although it was the duty of the captain to have taken a different course. Before joining the Childers, both Mr. Elliott and Mr. Graham were unknown to him. He first found to state was he knew of Lieutenant Graham; that gentleman entered the service fifteen years since, when he joined the Belvidera, from which he was discharged for purloining the mess money. In 1843 he was on board the Satellite, when he was turned out of the mess, and obliged to mess with the carpenter; he was tried by court-martial at Sheerness, dismissed, and worked his way home before the mast in a merchant-vessel. In 1846, when on board the Childers, he was appointed to the President, but the midshipmen there would not receive him into their mess; in March, 1847, when appointed to another ship, Lieutenant Graham applied to him (Commander Pitman) to remain in the Childers, and obtained his consent, in confirmation of which his private letter-book was produced to the Court. This application was subsequent to the charge of cruelty against Haigh, White, and others. Lieutenant Graham constantly associated with the ship's company; and the officers had to call him from among them when ordering together. The drunkenness of Read, the Marine, might attract to the same source; and to confirm this, when Read had been ordered in irons for a fortnight, Lieutenant Graham wrote a letter, dated "16th March, 1848," stating that he was the guilty party. At length Graham was all credit. Lieutenant Graham, when under arrest, produced a letter stating that his family had experienced great affliction by death and fire, and in a state of distress; in a letter was afterwards found to be a fabrication. In consequence of all this, he (Commander Pitman) wrote to Admiral Sir F. A. Collier, the Commander-in-Chief, 31st of February, 1849, on the subject of Lieutenant Graham's drunkenness and disorderly conduct. These were the proceedings.

Among the 16 witnesses were several who merited and obtained severe punishments, and these were the most glaring inconsistencies in several parts of their evidence, which included facts that transpired before and since the charges laid down in the charges; and, even if true and tried by a civil process, the Judge would say, "There was not sufficient evidence to go to a jury." Mr. Elliott said he was confident he was a swinger scribbled and held before the fire by the surgeon, Mr. Brake; but that gentleman denied it entirely. The letter on the skylight was probably produced through Lieutenant Graham's intimacy with the crew. When the ship was paid off, no man on board, when asked the question, had any complaint to make. Mr. Elliott, in his opinion, was the victim of Lieutenant Graham, who was the instigator. Regarding the statement of Haigh, under no circumstances could such a complaint be made responsible; the opinion of the power of prisoners to beat punishment was with other officers. Haigh's punishments were for an accumulation of crimes. It was true that he was kept on deck night and day, but his [illegible] Sargeon Gowdy mentioned Haigh's swinging fall on to a rattle. Rodney [illegible] were exhausted. [illegible] Graham, on board the Childers, and when left ashore at Hobart Town. Since then he had joined another ship, where he laughs at the medical officer for being so easily deceived as to his sickness. White was promised prospective, and not immediate punishment. The term "[illegible] reason. Three years had elapsed since White was drowned. He (Commander Pitman) saw him swimming, and it was said he had temporary hold of the jibboom. At all events he afterwards called off, but soon after they saw him drown himself. Matthews, the midshipmen's steward, was a man of bad character, and he (Commander Pitman) was not on board when he committed suicide. Of the original crew who went out, fifty-two returned to the ship, sixteen deserted, three were invalided, fourteen died, and seven were appointed to other ships. Regarding the boy Cleverton, it was not necessary for him to prove a [illegible] not take away the prosecution's [illegible] burnt, and in the act of the moment, it was [illegible] Cleverton called, and saw Commander [illegible] proved by the books that Mr. Elliott did not [illegible] on the coast of China. He (Commander Pitman) was told [illegible] words "with a straw," came on Mr. Smith's face, large tears [illegible] and Elliott left the ship on the passage home. Mr. Smith's conduct [illegible] long good, and it would give him great pleasure to see Mr. Smith restored to [illegible] service. It was stated that Read, the Marine, when returning to barracks, had been flogged and dismissed. Commander Pitman never knew that the boys wore funnels on their heads until mentioned before the Court. The cook deserted, to turn conjectioner at Hobart Town. Regarding the false entries, they might have been irregular, but the old salts were used entirely for the service of the ship. Commander Pitman concluded by showing his services; he entered the navy on board the Revenge in 1826, and was present at Navarino; joined the Asia, Serampagatam, Rose, Warspite, Herald, Victory, Asia, and St. Vincent as mid-shipman, passed mate March, 1833; served seven years in the Excellent, Dauntless, and Rattlesnake; joined the Venerable in 1839; in 1840 was Lieutenant of the Druid, and in 1843 was made Commander; in 1845 he was appointed to the Childers. Letters of thanks were then read from Consuls at Cuxaven, from Lord Palmerston, &c., for services in China, and certificates from about sixty officers.

The perusal of the defence, &c. occupied an hour and a quarter; after which the Court was cleared and remained closed for an hour; at the end of which

Mr. W. Rogers, surgeon of the Childers, was examined by Commander Pitman, to disprove the charges of cruelty; but, though examined and cross examined at great length, nothing important was elicited but that he did not know the conduct of the prisoner to have been cruel when in command of the Childers. At the close of his examination the prisoner declined calling further evidence, and the Court rose.

On Wednesday the Court opened shortly after nine o'clock; and the prosecutors and the prisoner having appeared,

The President said, "The prosecution and defence having closed, the Court is now going to consider the sentence. Clear the court." The Court was then cleared.

THE SENTENCE.

The Court was re-opened at twenty-five minutes to three o'clock, when the witnesses were called in, and the parties admitted. The Judge Advocate having recapitulated the charges, read the decision of the Court as follows:—"The Court having heard the evidence in support of the charges, as well as what the prisoner has offered in his defence, and very maturely and deliberately weighed and considered the same, is of opinion that the charges of general cruelty and oppression has been in part proved against the prisoner, Commander J. C. Pitman; and the Court further is of opinion that the charge of false expenditure of stores, and the charge of false statements in the log-book of her Majesty's ship Childers, have been proved against the prisoner, Commander J. C. Pitman, and the Court doth in consequence adjudge the said Commander J. C. Pitman to be dismissed from her Majesty's service."

The Court was then dissolved.

The illustration up in the leading page is from a sketch by our Artist at Plymouth. It shows the Court sitting on board H.M.S. Impregnable, in Hamoaze; upon the table lies the prisoner's sword, and around it are the several persons distinguished by the figures of reference.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE ADMIRALTY INSPECTION.—Sir F. Baring, Bart., the First Lord; with the Hon. Captain Berkeley, C.B., M.P.; the Hon. W. Cowper, M.P.; and Sir Stephen Parker, Bart., the Secretary for Bangor and Holyhead, where they were joined by Rear-Admiral Dundas, C.B., M.P., in the Admiralty yacht Black Eagle, and pro ceeded to Pembroke to inspect that establishment. From Pembroke their Lordships will proceed to Queenstown (late Cove), and, having inspected the Admiralty works there, will return to the Admiralty.

The Colonelcy of the 19th Foot, vacant by the demise of Sir Warren Peacocke, has been conferred on Major-General Charles Turner, commanding at Cork.

In consequence of the cholera having appeared in the detachment of the 11th Hussars stat oned at Kensington, the troops have been removed by sudden order to join the head-quarters at Hounslow. The Household Brigade of Cavalry is performing the duty hitherto allotted to the 11th.

The new system of individual payments in the naval dockyards is ordered to be put into operation at the commencement of the month of October.

THE ROYAL YACHT.—The Victoria and Albert, Royal yacht, Capt. Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence, was on Saturday last taken up to her winter moorings. The riggers returned to the dockyard, and the officers and men to the Royal George.

The Fairy is kept ready for service, and will probably be required about the 20th instant, as it is expected the Court will proceed to Osborne immediately after its arrival from Scotland.

THE ARMY PROMOTIONS.—Upwards of twenty names of officers have been selected by the Commander-in-Chief for brevet promotion in honour of her Majesty's late visit to Ireland, from the list of officers submitted by the authorities; and, as the Duke's selection has been forwarded to Balmoral for her Majesty's approval, it is probable the names of these fortunate officers will appear in the next military gazette.

General Sir Charles Napier quits India in the spring of next year. He has sent home instructions for the erection of his estate on the banks of the Thames, where he intends to take up his permanent residence. It is believed that he will become the possessor of the property now belonging to Colonel Tyrrie, M.P.

It is highly probable (says the United Service Gazette) that Sir Wm. Gomm will continue in India with the expectation of succeeding Sir Charles Napier, on his retirement from the Indian command in the spring.

LIMERICK BARRACKS.—It has been found that the accommodation for the military serving at Limerick is insufficient, the barracks are to be considerably enlarged.

POLICE.

MARLBOROUGH-STREET.

THE CHARGE OF BIGAMY AGAINST THE COUNTESS DE LANDSFELDT (LOLA MONTES).

On Monday, the day fixed for the appearance of the Countess de Landsfeldt to meet (as Mrs. Heald) the charge of bigamy, the appearances were, with the consent of Mr. Clarkson, who appeared for the prosecution, extended to Wednesday, to give time to the defendant, who had but returned from the Continent a few days previously, to prepare her defence in the case.

On Wednesday, a considerable number of persons assembled before the court, notwithstanding the wetness of the weather, in expectation of seeing the lady as she came from her carriage to enter the court. They were, however, as well as the less numerous throng within the court, were doomed to disappointment, for Lola Montes did not make her appearance.—At 2 o'clock, Mr. Clarkson, who appeared for the prosecution, entered the court. There were also present Captain Gunman from the Consistorial Court, a gentleman from the East India House, and other witnesses, who had been summoned to prove the first marriage.—Mr. Clarkson, addressing the magistrate, said, Sir, I appear on the part of Mrs. Heald, the aunt of the young gentleman who is represented to have married the lady against whom the present proceedings have been instituted. I had reason to believe that last week Mrs. James, or whatever else may be her name, and who has been charged at the instance of Miss Heald with the crime of bigamy, would have appeared here to-day. But I find that is not the case, and I can, on the part of the prosecution, only ask you to extend the recognizances. I have only further to say with respect to this charge, that there is no vindictive motive on the part of Miss Heald in instituting the present proceedings. I believe the Countess of Landsfeldt came to town on Friday last for the purpose, as I understand, of effecting a compromise or agreement; but I have to inform you that Miss Heald, who is the sister of the father of the young gentleman who has married this lady, has had nothing to do with any compromise or agreement, and I assure you that she will not consent to any, nor the report that any such compromise has been effected, and the first and best proof of that fact is that I ask you now to order the recognizances to be extended. Miss Heald has in this case, sir, been influenced by the most disinterested regard for the welfare of the son of her deceased brother, and naturally feels great indignation and indignity at the illegal and disgraceful marriage which has been contracted between her nephew and the female in question.—When further evidence has been received from India and other places with regard to the first marriage, it is the intention of Miss Heald to persevere in prosecuting the charge to the uttermost.—Mr. Clarkson, sir, he entered the recognizances.—Mr. Hardwicke: Under the circumstances, the recognizances are extended.—They amount to £2000. The proceedings then terminated.

INDISPOSITION OF BARON ROTHSCHILD.—The Gazette de France says, "Baron Rothschild, who had arrived at Lille on Wednesday, was in the evening seized with a violent attack of cholic, which was feared to be the cholera. While physicians were being sent for, a message was transmitted to Paris by the electric telegraph to the Baroness to set off immediately by the railway. She according did so, but found her husband so far recovered as to be able to return with her to Paris in the course of the day."

COLLISION WITH HER MAJESTY'S STEAMER "SALAMANDER."—A serious collision recently occurred in the Channel, between her Majesty's steam-vessel Salamander and a brig called the Lizard. Mr. Jones master, which ended in the latter immediately foundering, though all on board escaped. On Thursday week the Salamander left Plymouth for Pembroke, in charge of Mr. Dicey, and the Commander of the Impregnable, with the Lieutenant and Master attendant of Devonport Dockyard, and a party of riggers, on board, for the purpose of navigating the Galatea round to Plymouth or Portsmouth. About eight o'clock in the evening, however, the Black Head near Falmouth bearing N.E. by N. eight miles distant, and the Lizard N.W. by W., the sloop was seen coming on a starboard tack towards shore, beating to windward. There was a stiff breeze blowing E. by N., and a heavy sea on. The crew of the sloop say they saw the steamer approaching, and, anticipating mischief from her course, they hallooed to her as she neared them, after her helm. The Salamander continued her course and speed, and came in fearful collision with the Lizard, on the starboard bow, cutting her down to the water's edge. With such a terrible injury not a moment was to be lost in getting clear of the wreck and rescuing the hands on board, as she was fast settling down. Ropes were lowered down the sides of the steamer for the crew to seize hold of, and after one of them all the poor fellows were rescued in a few moments, the vessel having filled, she heeled over, and went down in deep water, the crew losing everything but the clothes they had on. The Lizard belonged to Portmadoc, and was for Portsmouth from Portsmouth.

James St. Aubyn, Esq., the lord of the manor of Devonport, has subscribed the sum of £100 towards a fund which has been formed at Devonport for the relief of the poor whose friends may have died of the cholera, to which Lady St. Aubyn has added £10.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE

The monotony of the parliamentary recess has been relieved this week by Ministerial complications arising out of the letter of the President of the Republic to his aide-de-camp, M. Ney, at Rome, the purport of which we [illegible] the Number of last week.

The letter itself is as follows:—

[illegible] 1849

My dear Ney,—The French Republic has not sent an army to Rome to strangle Italian liberty, but, on the contrary, to regulate it, and preserve it from excesses, and to enable it to arrive at the Pontifical throne the Prince who at the first glance I noticed possessed that head of all others requisite.

In unison with the benevolent intentions of the Holy Father, and our own deeds, remain unbroken, in connexion with the influence of reason and heaven's lights. It is wished to have, as the basis of the Pope's future prescriptions and [illegible] Say, then, to General Rostolan, that it cannot be permitted, under the shadow of the [illegible] to commit an act derogatory to the character of our intervention.

I sum up this the second session of the temporal power of the Pope a general amnesty, the secularization of the Administration, the Code Napoleon, and a liberal government.

I have been personally hurt on reading the proclamation [illegible]

I was I have made mention of the name of France or of the [illegible]

Very frankly offered to our flag or to our uniform gives rise to my heart; it [illegible] make known to them that if France does not ask her services, she requires at least [illegible] may have to make for her sacrifices and self-denial.

At the time when our armies are on the frontiers of Europe [illegible] at the close passage, the germs of liberty, and the [illegible] system, it shall not be said that in 1849 a French army [illegible] with even [illegible] physically it has not been treated as it deserved to be.

Nothing should be neglected to make our troops comfortable.

Receive, my dear Ney, the assurance of my sincere friendship,

LOUIS NAPOLEON BONAPART:

M. de Falloux, the Minister of Public Instruction, who is somewhat more Conservative than his colleagues, is understood to have been opposed to the framing of this letter; and, in consequence of the contradictory statements in the Paris journals on the subject, it would appear that he contemplated resigning office. The difference, however, has been patched up, and M. de Falloux continues in office for the present; only, it is said, on condition that there shall be no attempt to coerce the Pope, and that his Holiness shall be allowed to return unshackled by conditions.

The President of the Republic continues his "progresses" through the country, which produce more of a Royal than of a Republican character. On Sunday morning he left Paris at nine o'clock, for Sens, to open the first section of the Paris and Lyons railroad. Great preparations were made to receive him, and he was entertained at a grand banquet at Sens, where, as well as along the route, he was received in the most enthusiastic manner. He returned to Paris the same night. M. Edgar and General Oudinot have been returned to Paris from Rome, and have had interviews with the President. General Rostolan, who succeeded M. Oudinot in the chief command at Rome, has been recalled, his resignation having arrived in Paris the same day that his recall was announced. He resigned on account of the growing and disagreeable difficulties which beset the position of Ministry which was to be carried out in the name of the old usual word.

The Pope's nuncio at Paris has been instructed not to treat the President's letter as official, in order that the Pope may have time to consult the other powers on the subject.

A Orleans party is indisposed, but not serious

The Archbishop of Toulouse has published a letter in the Ami de la Religion, censuring severe y M. Dupanloup, curé of the Madeleine, for the expressions he made use of in his speech at the Fenelon Centenary, viz. that "the Gospel is nothing more than human reason restored and extended."

The Abbé has, in reply, published a letter to his superior, the Archbishop Paris, in which he says:—"The meaning of the words I used I persist in giving to the words in question has never been, and never could be, mine. I believe and profess that the Christian religion is essentially supernatural, and revealed by God himself, its precepts, its mysteries, its principle and immediate authority; and that it is the work not of human reason, but of Divine reason of the Eternal Word made flesh—of Jesus Christ our Lord, God and man at the same time. I submit without reserve to the decisions of the Holy Church, without any restriction whatever, all that the Holy Catholic, Apostolical, and Roman Church teaches; and I shall be always happy to retract and condemn anything that I could ever say, write, or do, not entirely conformable to the present declaration."

ITALIAN STATES.

ROME. The latest intelligence from the Papal States is disagreement between the Cardinal Commissioners and France is hourly increasing. On the 1st inst. General Rostolan issued a decree, prohibiting assemblages of people in the streets, and mal esitations of any kind, threatening transgressors with the punishment prescribed by law. There was also published a decree of the Roman Senate, signed by the French Prefect of Police, Le Rouxeau, reviving the law of the 8th of June, 1841, which has never been revoked, and prescribing certain police regulations concerning passports and permits of residence in the Roman States. These measures was, that the Romans wished to make a demonstration in favour of General Rostolan and the French, and against the Government Commission of the three Cardinals; and that this demonstration General Rostolan did not think it proper to countenance or allow.

The Swiss Guard is restored, and mounts guard at the Vatican. The finances are in a deplorable state. Every day the Cardinals are obliged to sell to the officers to pay the commissariat of the army, and it was not till three P.M. that 2000 scudi were scraped together to pay the contractor for bread, M. Carlotti, who had refused to furnish the troops for their last month's pay, unless he had such sum. One of the most lively causes of the dissatisfaction of the Romans with the present state of matters, is the inability of the Government to pay the half yearly dividend. At present the interest is at an equality with the capital, and no hope can be entertained. The letter of the President had given occasion for new riotous assemblages.

LE PAPE and the King of Naples were expected at Portici (Naples) the first week of the present month.

TUSCANY. Under date of the 7th inst. from Genoa, we learn of the arrival of the celebrated Garibaldi in that city, after various adventures. He is to remain at Genoa until he can find an opportunity to quit Italy.

AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY.

Accounts from Vienna say that the Emperor and Empress Consort remained at the terms of his submission a complete amnesty in Hungary, the permission to retain their arms, with permission to return into some neighbouring country, and an immediate cessation of hostilities. Further conditions were proposed to be offered by General Haynau, who insisted on nothing short of an unconditional surrender, which General Klapka refused to comply with. 60,000 troops were, therefore, instantly to besiege that fortress. The armistice was to expire on the 1st of October, at the 4th instant, at last to the 12th, and negotiations were meanwhile to be opened. Bem is said was personally disposed to submit to the Austrian troops, but the garrison expressed itself determined to resist to the [illegible]

Kossuth, Bem, Dembinski, and Messaros, with Count Casimir Batthyani, at Widdin, under the protection of the Turkish Pasha. They had previously placed themselves under British protection, and solicited their intention to emigrate to England. This was the intervention of the British Consul here, in concert with [illegible] and the liberty of their persons demanded.

Arthur Von Görgey has, for several days past, been at Gratz, in the full enjoyment of liberty. The whereabouts of Bem appears to be wrapt in obscurity.

PRUSSIA.

From Berlin we learn that on the 8th inst. the Majesty the King set out to-day, and unaccompanied by any of his Ministers, for Teplitz, in Bohemia, to have an interview with the Emperor of Austria there, upon the subject of forming a temperary commission, which shall be empowered to conduct a portion of the affairs of the Confederation, similar to the old Diet. His Majesty returned to Berlin on the 10th.

The Prince of Hesse-Homburg has acceded to the Constitution of the three Kings.

HOUSES FOR CALIFORNIA.

HOUSES FOR CALIFORNIA.—The construction of iron houses, intended for California, is being actively carried on at Coullet; four have already been forwarded to their destination. Six more are to start at Antwerp prior to the 15th instant. They resemble cottages, are arranged for two and three families, and contain two rooms for each. All the different parts are numbered, and are put together by means of a nut and pin. The roofing is composed of zinc tiles. We have no doubt that this article of exportation will furnish another branch to the metallurgic trade, and afford a large means of employment; but it may nevertheless require to be turned to account by the assistance of the Government. For instance, we can see no reason, to commence with, why Government should not cause, in the small cottages for the accommodation of the poor, which line the railways, to be built of iron. Besides the merit of being a perfect harmony with the railway, the adoption of this mode of construction would have that of greater economy. Nothing would be more simple than to vary the style of these little houses, so that they would present a permanent exhibition of models of iron architecture.—Journal des Débats.

DISCOVERY OF COAL IN EGYPT.—The Journal des Débats publishes a letter from Grand Cairo, of the date of the last of August, which announces the discovery, by a French civil engineer, of a stratum of coal in the vicinity of the Nile, twenty Upper Egypt. The [illegible] announced to the government of Egypt, and [illegible] land for the purchase of this indispensable article. Two engineers, an Englishman and a Frenchman, were employed to investigate the facts in the vicinity of the Nile, for the discovery of coal, about three years ago, but these superficial engineers reported that there was none, and that, moreover, none would be found. The French engineer first mentioned, more diligent and more skilful than his predecessors, has completely overthrown the bold assertion. The samples have been referred to a commission, and the excavations will be continued on a large scale.

THE STATE OF WESTERN GERMANY.

Baden-Baden, September 10, 1849.

BADEN, the queen of German watering places, has but too evidently lost its former supremacy in these revolutionary days. It still wears its coronet, so exquisitely interlaid, of nature's beauties and art's resources; but it wears it, as it were, in mockery of mirth. It is still a crowned queen, but a queen in tears. Her fine Hotel-keepers hang their Loads, and native entrepreneurs groan. Revolutions have deprived Baden of its high privileges. It is impossible to look upon the fa- fabled roi-dessous of those w o formerly sought the seductive dolce far niente of German life "sous eaux," at its most elegant source, without a sigh, so much its glories frown. It is still less possible for the thinking man to travel through this fair duchy, with its wondrous advantages of nature, its allurements for foreign gold, and its teeming fruitful land, to recall its mild and paternal government under a too yielding ruler, its comfortable and all classes under a most moderate taxation, and its prosperity, and not to shake his head with pity when he sees the country shattered by a wild chase after a phantom, wild as that of the legend of the ghostly hunter of its own Black Forest, which ir- irresistible ambition and greedy men ha- e been able to excite. A ed, for the Grand Duke had accep ed all those revolut onary demands, which the immense majority of Germany, for which the Baden deputies represented, when the insurrection, excited by a horde of self-seeking re ug- from all sorts of countries, swept over the land in the form of the most fearful civil war. A deluded people clamoured for rights already given them, and privileges the very sense of which they did not understand. And now the new travels through the country; and although all now is in seeming quiet, although nature's beauties smile as in past years, yet every step the traveller takes is re- pleie with a sad lesson. Here the wide fields, upon which the crops have been trampled down, still bear evidence that they have not been harvest fields, but battle-fields between fellow-countrymen; here, a burnt railway-station-house, with its blackened ruins, shows where the cannon has done its work; and here, again, the new-built Neckar-bridge, of costly structure, tells in its shattered t ompets how insurgent hordes have struggled to prevent the advance of pacificators who have been compelled to establish peace in the land by the cannon's mouth and the bayonet's point. The strongest evidence, however, of the desolation which revolutionary blindness has brought upon the land, is to be found, as stated above, in the absence of those pleasure-seeking foreigners who shed an annual Pactolus stream of wealth over the happy land. Baden is, to all outward appearance, at present in a state of quietude, and is likely to remain so as long as a Prussian army occupies the land; but the annual wealth Leisurers are still too shy or too disgusted to seek their pleasure in the scenes of so much late disaster; and Baden-Baden looks desolate and mournful, while hundreds in the more fortunate Belgium an unusual source of riches; and even Ems, in its secluded nest among the lovely hills of Nassau, receives its portion of the benefits bestowed by wandering foreigners. The traveling foreigner, in literally finds on every step upon his path throughout the country a host of Prussian helmets glittering in the sun, in addition to which we suspect that the accounts of the spirit of re- actionary and insurrectionary discontent, prevalent through a country, best of all countries in Germany had so little of which to complain, are exaggerated by reports of the Prussian military anxious for a pretext for the further and con nued occupation of this rich and lovely land; but yet he cannot speak with the lower classes, or even with many of those living middling classes, without discovering that the spirit of insurrection is really stul rife in the land, and that the deluded and excited people are willing enough to recommence the work of death. To obtain what? If you ask them, they will answer you with the strangest fancies about the people's right rights, to judge from the only fantastic explanations you are able to gather from their mouths, consist only in the wildest anarchy, the freedom from all constraint whatever—in other words, in the loosest pillage and destruction it may seem best to them. And this is all in the name of German unity, a unity which at present is only expressed in a detestation of Southern Germany for Northern Germany, and more especially, of this country in a hatred of Prussia. The latter feeling is, however, to be conceived in this country, which now seems to have become, and to be considered by its Prussian occupants as little more than a Prussian province; and, although this present appearance of the amalgamation of Baden into Prussia may have a nearer approach to that great principle of Germany unity for which German democrats have so lonely clamoured, than the rest of Germany may show, yet the intense hatred of the Prussian army may be understood in a land which they have as long as they remain, and still occupy, although they have come as necessary pacificators. Everywhere, in every little village throughout the country, as in every town, gleams the Prussian uniform, s- arches the Prussian behind. In the midst of lovely valleys in Western Europe, the valley in which stands the once fashionable watering-place of Baden-Baden, the congregation of bright uniforms assembled to hear the Sunday service performed by the military chaplains in the open air, by the music pavilion, where bands play as sweetly as of yore, or at the gaming-tables, which are in full swing, in spite of the Grand Duke's abolished German Parliament and Constitution, and of the absence of the visionary German Empire, who now holds a position which no [illegible] over the picturesque; but it tells a sad tale of the [illegible] its a thousand anxious questions relative to the future fate of Germany, when Austria, relieved from her precarious situation at home, may [illegible] against the continued occupation of the Duchy of [illegible] by a Prussian army.

We have been through this lovely land, so dear to our sweet associations of former days, in a state of misery and happy; but the result of this year's journeying has been a feeling of profound melancholy in the past, and of gloom in the future. Politics, confused, dreamy, unpractical, impossible, as German politics have proved themselves to be in these revolutionary times, are the signs of every conversation, and enter into all the relations of social as well as public life. At Frankfort where, let it be said en passant, in litary occupation seems to be the prevalent feature of the times, the Austrians occupying by the questionable authority of the Imperial Vicar, and the Prussians by an authority to which neither question nor answer seem to be attached, al the surrounding country with masses of troops—political feeling runs so high, that, upon the occasion of the great national fête in honour of the poet Goethe, at the hundredth anniversary of his birth, which came off lately all over Germany, the scene was marred in Frankfort—the city in which he was born by the opposition of the democrats, because the arrangements of the ceremonies had fallen into the hands of the so-called aristocrats. True, the singing and chorusing in public places the procession of all the trades, with emblems, banners, and costumes—the illuminations, and speeches, and the homage to the statue of Goethe, with a seemingly endless fountain of bouquets, formed a sight worth traveling far to see, but, in one instance, the serenade before the house in which Goethe was born, was spoilt by a troop of democrats, who sang instead the revolutionary so-called Hacker song; and on the whole necessary rested a blade of that constraint and gloom now so characteristic of Western Germany.

IRELAND.

The Guardians of the Fermoy Union are about to send out sixty more young females as domestic servants; and, in addition to the ordinary use of the facilities for female pauper emigration afforded by the Government. So great a change already effected in the relief system, that a considerable number of the temporary poor-law inspectors are to be removed at the close of the present month.

DEATH OF THE RIGHT REV. DR. KEATINGE.—On Friday last the Right Rev. Dr. Keatinge, Roman Catholic Bishop of Ferns, breathed his last at the episcopal palace in Enniscorthy, at an advanced age of seventy-two years. He had been indisposed for some time, and had just returned from England, where he had gone for the benefit of his health.

VISIT OF THE LORD-LIEUTENANT TO CORK.—The Cork Constitution says: "His Excellency Lord Clarendon is expected to arrive in the city about the 15th inst. to be present at the opening of the Provincial College."

THE CHOLERA.—There are still many deaths amongst the middle class, although generally the epidemic is declining.

CORK SCHOOL OF DESIGN.—The contractors employed in completing this useful undertaking are actively forwarding the work, under the superintendence of Sir Thomas Deane, who expects to have it open for the reception of pupils by the 1st of next month. Government intend supplying the school with some beautiful casts, in addition to the present collection. It will also be furnished with ancient rare marbles, and specimens of drawings, and patterns, the work of foreign artists, and other suitable designs. In a word, Government will supply everything needful to improve the taste and add to the skill of the Cork artisans, who will be able to enter the school and receive the best instruction at a very moderate monthly or yearly subscription.

THE NEW BELGIAN PROCESS FOR DRESSING FLAX.—At the last monthly meeting of the Royal Flax society, in Belfast, some conversation ensued upon the system of M. de Cuninge, of Brussels, as illustrated by samples lately shown by that gentleman at the Royal Exhibition at the Lancet Hall. He states his method to be independent of steeping in water, and that the rotting of the flax can be thoroughly accomplished in a few hours, the means employed being by a steam and entirely mechanical. The committee thought it very desirable that this process should be fully investigated; and to this end samples of Irish flax, in straw and as fibre, had been furnished him by the society, and by Messrs Charles Bunn and Co., and Mr. Sk. Mulholland and Hinds, to be operated upon and reported.—Northern Whig.

EVICTED TENANTS IN IRELAND.—It appears from a tab- r statement, prepared by the editor of the Essex Journal, that the evictions in the territories of Lords Kildare, Palmerston, and Lucan, as was heretofore supposed, is not going over 3000, actually exceed 6000; and preparations on the most extensive scale are in progress for further clearances on the estates of Messrs. Westropp, Samuel Vance, our Mr. Wesley, and others.

THE LONDON CORPORATION—THE IRISH PLANTATION PROJECT.—The Freeman's Journal states that they have it on good authority, "[illegible] Corporation, to which a- reference [illegible] subject, is about to present its report, which [illegible] thinking any more in the matter."

[illegible] day, all the shops in Wolverhampton were closed, the churches [illegible] and the bells tolled, in compliance with the request of the mayor, as [illegible] of humiliation and prayer, to implore the Almighty to stay the awful visitation by which the town is now visited. The deaths are numerous.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

THE CHOLERA—FORM OF PUBLIC PRAYER.

The following is the special form of prayer to be used by her Majesty's special command in all churches and chapels throughout those parts of the United Kingdom called England and Ireland, instead of the prayer used during the present visitation of Almighty God with sickness and pestilence, and to be continued during the prevalence of the cholera in this country, for obtaining pardon of our sins; and, particularly, for beseeching God to remove from us that grievous disease with which many places in this kingdom are now visited:

"O Almighty God and Father, whose power no creature is able to resist, and in whose hands are the issues of life and death; look down, we beseech Thee, from Heaven, thy dwelling-place, upon us Thine unworthy servants, who turn to Thee, their only refuge, in this season of sickness and great mortality. We confess, O Lord, that we have not deserved to be free from that visitation of Thy wrath which has afflicted other nations of the earth. We acknowledge with shame and contrition that we have shown ourselves unthankful for many special mercies vouchsafed to us, and have not made that return for our national blessings which Thou mightest justly require at our hands. We have departed from Thy commandments; we have followed too much the things of this present world; and in our prosperity we have not sufficiently honoured Thee, the Author and Giver of it all. If Thou were to deal with us after our sins, or reward us according to our iniquities, we could not stand in Thy presence.

"But Thou hast revealed Thyself unto us as a God of mercy and forgiveness, towards those who confess their unworthiness, and come to Thee in humble faith and prayer. When Israel had provoked Thee to wrath, and thousands fell by the destroying pestilence, Thou didst stay the sword of the avenging angel, when the purpose of thy judgment was fulfilled. When the men of Nineveh repented of their iniquity, Thou didst lay aside the fierceness of Thine anger, and spared the guilty city, when Thou sawest that they turned from their evil way.

"And now, O Lord, we entreat Thee after Thy rich mercy to grant unto us Thine afflicted servants this day a like spirit of repentance, that Thou mayest withdraw Thy chastisements from our land, and stay the plague and grievous sickness which is abroad, making many desolate. May the judgments which Thou hast sent work in us a true repentance, that Thou mayest be entreated, a merciful and earnest endeavour to conform to Thy will and to advance Thy glory. Make us daily sensible of Thy goodness in maintaining the domestic tranquility of our land, and preserving us from intestine commotions. And in granting a plentiful return to the labours of our husbandmen. Teach us to show our thankfulness for these mercies, by an increasing desire to relieve distress, and by a removal of occasions of discontent and murmurings, and to promote goodwill and concord amongst ourselves. And may the frequent instances of mortality which we have beheld remind us all of the nearness of death, and dispose us so to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom; that, whether living or dying, we may be found faithful disciples of Him who has taken away the sting of death, and opened the gate of everlasting life to all believers.

"Hear us, O Lord, for Thy goodness is great; and according to the multitude of Thy mercies, receive these our petitions, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

PREFERMENTS.

DEANERIES RURAL.—The Rev. Frederick Alston to the Rural Deanery of Cirencester, Gloucestershire. The Rev. Cyril George Hutchinson to the Rural Deanery of Campden, Gloucestershire.

PREBENDS.—The Prebendal Stall, in the cathedral church of St. Peter, at Exeter, which became vacant by the death of the Rev. Robert Lampen, has been conferred on the Rev. William Molesworth, rector of St. Breocke, Cornwall. Rev. G. M. Cooper, vicar of Wilmington, Sussex, to the prebend of Nova Villa, in Chichester Cathedral, vacant by the death of Rev. W. S. A. Vincent.

CANONRIES.—The venerable John Rushton, D.D., Archdeacon of Manchester, to the first Honorary Canonry in the Cathedral Church of Manchester. The Rev. F. R. Raines, Incumbent of Milnrow, to the second Honorary Canonry in the Cathedral Church of Manchester. The Rev. James Woolley Harman, Rector of Marholm, near Peterborough, to an Honorary Canonry in the Cathedral Church of Peterborough.

GENERAL ORDINATIONS.—The Archbishop of Canterbury has intimated his intention of holding an ordination on Sunday, September 23. On the same day ordinations will be held by the Bishop of Carlisle, at Ross Castle; the Bishop of Ely, at Ely Cathedral; the Bishop of Worcester, at Worcester Cathedral; the Bishop of Oxford, at Christ Church; the Bishop of Lincoln, at Lincoln Cathedral; the Bishop of Ely, at Ely Cathedral; the Bishop of Chester, at Chester Cathedral; and the Bishop of Ripon, at Ripon Minster.

The Bishop of London has fixed the 21st of October as the day on which he will consecrate the new church of St. Bartholomew-the-Less, Moorlane, Cripplegate.

The Bishop of Manchester will hold his next ordination in the parish church of Blackburn, on the 31st of October next.

A confirmation was held at the cathedral, Peterborough, on Friday week, when 289 persons were admitted to the holy rite.

THE EPISCOPAL RESIDENCE AT NORWICH.—By the death of the Bishop of Norwich, the Right Rev. Dr. Graham, the Lord Bishop of Chester, will have a seat in the House of Lords. The successor to the Bishop of Norfolk will not. That enacting the see of Manchester provided that the number of spiritual Peers should not be increased, but that the Bishop of Chester, the Bishop of Lincoln, in order o consecration, always excepting London, Winchester, Durham, Salisbu v, and Carlisle.

DIOCESE OF WINCHESTER.—In consequence of the death of Mrs. Sumner, wife of the Bishop of Winchester, his Lordship has acquainted the clergy and churchwardens of the diocese of Winchester that the visitation, intended to have been holden at the latter end of the present month, will not take place this year

The brother of the Honourable T. B. Macaulay has been appointed to the rectory of Aldingham, in Low Furness, Lancashire. The living is worth £1700 per annum.

CATHEDRAL CLERGY.—The Chapter of Hereford Cathedral have taken a step in the right direction. They have advertised for five clergymen to fill the vacancies now existing in the college of vicars choral of that cathedral. Each candidate must be well versed in ecclesiastical music, able to chant litany, and to sing the services and anthems. He must attend service regularly, and he must not hold any benefice or cure, nor engage in any occasional duties. He will be eligible (after seven years from his election to the college) to any livings in the patronage of the Chapter. The remuneration of the office may be set at something about £100 per annum, with rooms in the college, hall, common hall, &c., and the Chapter consider it would be highly desirable that the common table and collegiate mode of life shall be revived.

CHOLERA IN THE METROPOLIS.—DIOCESE OF LONDON.—In consequence of the alarming prevalence of this disease in various parts of the metropolis, it has been deemed advisable to recommend a day to be observed as a form of special supplication and prayer; and on Tuesday the following official announcement was issued: "The Lord Bishop of London has requested the clergy of those parishes in his diocese where the cholera prevails, to urge upon their parishioners the observance of some one Sunday as a day of special supplication and intercession with reference to that fearful visitation. His Lordship has suggested a Sunday for that purpose, being of opinion that any other day not appointed by authority would probably not be so generally or so devoutly observed. The form of prayer about to be put forth is drawn up in accordance with his Lordship's recommendation." Sunday next, the 16th instant, has, according to his Lordship's suggestion, been appointed for this purpose, when the general form of prayer will be used, and appropriate sermons delivered, in the metropolitan churches.

An anonymous donor has sent to the Rev. Derwent Coleridge, the principal of the St. Mark Training College, Chelsea, the munificent sum of £500, with directions that the amount is to be applied to the extension of the college, for which great exertions have recently been made by the Bishop of London and the heads of the College.

We are requested to state that the Addresses of the Metropolitan Church Union for the Revival of Convocation have not yet been presented, in consequence of the daily addition of signatures.

ILLICIT MANUFACTURE OF MALT.—At the Hadleigh sessions, on Saturday, Samuel Smith, jun., maltster, at Oldham, was charged on an information for making malt privately during the whole of the last malting season. Henry Andrew, the exciseman employed to survey the defendant, stated that a number of barley was privately wetted in a barn near the malthouse, and then brought into the malthouse and dried off in the night; and on the following morning was sent off to Ipswich and sold as "pearling," as a cheap grain price. This had occurred two or three times a week during the season, and sometimes four times. About 24 combs in a week had been wetted in this way. Several maltsters from Ipswich proved they had purchased of the defendant more malt than had been charged with duty by 950 bushels; and Andrew's statement was confirmed by other witnesses. After a lengthened investigation, the magistrates convicted the defendant in penalties amounting together to £1100. Smith and his father, who occupy the rooms in which the malt was privately made, were then charged with aiding and abetting him, for recovery of the duties which had been suppressed; and after the evidence had been gone through, with some additional facts, the magistrates convicted the defendants in the sum of £264 2s. 6d.; and warrants for the recovery of both sums were immediately issued. The fraud was brought to light through the vigilance of Mr Scott, the surveying officer of Mellord.

DISSECTING PRACTICE.—The advice given in the following notice has been extensively adopted, and hitherto with good effect in the metropolis.

"At a time like the present, when a fatal epidemic is at our doors, it is desirable that householders should be warned of the necessity of looking to the [illegible] prevention, those receipts should be cleansed by pouring down them a solution of chloride of lime, as that thus should be done simultaneously throughout the neighbourhood, in order to produce an effect in the public sewers. It is recommended that this mode of purifying be adopted between the hours of nine and ten on each Saturday morning. This plan has been carried out at Tottenham for some weeks past, and it is hoped with benefit, as no case of cholera has occurred in that parish, nor are the cases of diarrhœa more frequent or severe than is usual at this season of the year. Chloride of lime may be had of any druggist. Two ounces is sufficient to be stirred into a pail full of water and costs only one penny."

PALACE OF H.R.H. PRINCE CHARLES OF PRUSSIA AT GLINIKE.

POTSDAM, rising like a verdant oasis in the midst of sandy plains, has richly profited by the munificence of the Royal race who have, during [illegible] generations, selected it as their favourite abode. Vivified by the [illegible] of the Havel, which winds around—now restrained within narrow bounds—now [illegible] widely forth into broad lake-like expanses; sheltered by a succession of groves, and gardens, wherein noble palaces, classic pavilions, and [illegible] fountains crowned by immortal Sans Souci—arrest the eye at every step—Potsdam, so replete with magnificent objects and interesting relics, is rendered more attractive by the summer residences of the Royal Princes, which adorn the borders of its adjacent stream. Of these, Glinike is eminently worthy of notice—not only from its intrinsic and picturesque beauty, but from two or three curious historic facts connected with its site.

According to record, the angular, sandy elevation, bathed on two sides by the Havel, whereon stands the present mansion embedded in verdure, was surmounted so far back as 1589 by a small villa belonging to the then Elector, near to which grew a vineyard, "producing in favourable seasons about 50 barrels of sourish wine." This vineyard, it is added, perished in the severe frost of 1740. The remainder of the tract—a sandy, arid soil—seemed unworthy of cultivation, until, in the year 1738, Frederick William I. directed a portion to be planted with mulberries. This essay was first imitated by Count Hertzberg, then by a M. Türck, and subsequently by a merchant named Gloggert, who attempted to cultivate a mulberry plantation for the production of silk; so true to the King's mulberry plantation may be ascribed the first attempt made in Prussia to rear silkworms. The speculation failed, however, and Gloggert became a bankrupt. Of the mulberry plantation only one tree remains, "serving," to use Lindow's of an elegant writer, "as a living record of this dream of horticulture." The property, which had been purchased of the Crown by Gloggert, then passed through several hands, until, in 1784, it came into those of General Milleudori, Commandant of the Guards, and Governor of Potsdam. The new proprietor took advantage of the soil and convenient water carriage, to establish, upon a large scale, kilns for manufacturing those strongly adhesive and handsome bricks which are so much prized by Berlin architects. He likewise took some pains to plant the sandy knoll, hitherto merely feathered with a few stunted birch and junipers, and erected a villa, facing the Havel, on the [illegible]. During the General's occupation, the eminence of Glinike assumed a [illegible] aspect; but as length he was ordered to a distant military command, in 1771, the property fell to others less anxious for improve- [illegible] ever, it was acquired by Count Lindenau, Master of t- [illegible] erected a stable-house, planted some potatoes in a par- [illegible] villa, and cultivated a few patches with the plough. The unfortunate political events of 1806 put an end to the Count's exertions, and Glinike was again neglected until, in 1811, the celebrated Baron Count Gouvion Saint Cyr Laudenberg, selected the place, from its vicinity to Sans Souci, as a convenient villa residence. Here it was that he meditated and conducted many of those great political events which soon after astonished Europe. But the Baron was not until after the Peace of Paris, in 1814, that this eminent statesman entered into full possession, and seriously devoted himself to the embellishment of the property. For this purpose, the Count employed Peter Gontermann, architect, who laid out the grounds, whilst Wirkle, the most renowned horticulturist of Berlin, executed the practical works, and furnished the various indigenous and exotic trees and shrubs, which now flourish upon it so luxuriantly, in despite of the aridity of the soil. At the same time, Count Hardenberg erected a pleasing but small mansion in the Gothic style, which, subsequently much enlarged by Prince Charles, forms that part of the Palace represented in our View. At the death of the Chancellor, the property was inherited by his son, Master of the Buckhounds to the King of Denmark, who disposed of it, in 1824, to its present Royal proprietor.

Our limited space does not admit of so lengthened a description as we should wish to give of the architecture, distribution, furniture, and embellishment, of the numerous remnants of antiquity, vases, busts, reliefs, and other numerous articles of certu collected by Prince and Princess Charles in Italy and elsewhere, and appropriated in different portions of the building, and in the Antique Temple erected at the extremity of the pleasure-grounds fronting the bridge over the Havel. The portico engraved contains the main body—in which, on the ground floor, are the dining, breakfast, and the long or music room; each merely separated from the other by marble columns, and thus giving to the whole suite the appearance of one long saloon. Above, are the grand apartments of reception, furnished with Royal luxury, but, at the same time, exhibiting all that air of warmth and comfort so grateful to our English habits. Wings, the one containing the private apartments of the Prince's family, the other those of their attendants, are thrown back, and form two sides of the interior quadrangle. The fourth is carried by a range of buildings containing the domestic habitations and offices. Behind these again are the stables, where some of the best blood of England and Mecklenburg, with several of the celebrated Arab Feather Horses, Near, also, is seen the kennel of the King's buckhounds, under the special mastership of the Prince, who is a bold and generous patron of that noble sport which Sir Bee designates, in his "Book of Sizes," as "the sportsman's school of health" and which braces the spirit and gladdens the heart of all England's stalwart sons.

MALT: CROP IN THE PARK.—An experiment has been made in St. James's Park, by permission of the Commissioners of Woods and Forests, to ascertain whether malt might be successfully cultivated in this country. The result of the experiment, which was made under disadvantages which must be manifest to every practical agriculturist, is satisfactory. The spot in which the seed was put down abutted on a nursery of young trees and flowering shrubs, which absorbs a large proportion of the nutrition from the soil, whilst the foliage deprives the neighbouring plants of the benefit of heat, light, and air, all of which contribute to healthy vegetation. The little malt-s crop, however, was fully realised all that was anticipated. It was sown in the latter end of May, and now in the beginning of September it is ripe for cutting. The appearance of the plant is peculiarly graceful. The stems, which run up perfectly straight, are generally from four to five feet high, and are much thicker than the large wheat straw. They throw out, from the root upwards, a succession of flag-like leaves, to stem terminating in a little tuft, from which spring the ears of corn, somewhat irregularly clustered, and in the instance apparently not heavily laden. Its main recommendations are—cheapness of seed, rapid growth, simplicity of cultivation, and comparatively large production. It requires a sunny aspect and a warm soil. Amongst those who are about to experimentalize upon a large scale next year, are Prince Albert, who proposes sowing a piece of land at Flemish-farm, in the Duke of Richmond, at Goodwood; and the Duke of Norfolk, at Arundel.

THE CHIPPEWA INDIANS AND THE MINING COMPANIES.

IN our Journal of the 25th ult. we adverted to the recent visit to Montreal of three chiefs of the Chippewa Indians, accompanied by the Rev. Mr. Anderson, Missionary to their tribe. We are now, by the courtesy of a Correspondent at Montreal, enabled to present our readers with the portraits of the taxes Indian warriors who thus came from Lake Superior to assert the rights of their tribe.

The tribe of the red race known as the Chippewa Indians, of North America, is the most numerous of all those whom time and civilization have spared within the British dominions of her Britannic Majesty. The Chippewas or Ojibways, are, for the most part, situated on the north shore of Lake Superior, though a portion of them are resident within the territory of the United States on the south bank. The branch of the tribe to which belong the three chiefs of whom we have given portraits have fixed themselves on the river Ste. Marie, near the Sault Ste. Marie: this is the locality in which the recent discoveries of mines of copper and silver have taken place, and at which various mining companies have originated operations. The Americans, however, have also begun to mine on the opposite side the Ste. Marie, where there is another family of the Chippewas.

As far as we can learn from the missionaries, and from the agents of the mining companies, the Chippewas, in their different settlements, can muster about three thousand warriors, the tribe to which our friends belong reckoning nearly seven hundred. They are a fine, muscular race, and the handsomest Indians we have ever seen. The missionaries have succeeded in effecting the nominal conversion of the whole tribe; but, as may be supposed, it has been found much more difficult to bring the older Indians into outward conformity with the ceremonies and worship of Christianity. The younger people there is more hope of. The families at the Sault Ste. Marie have fallen under the benevolent notice of England, and the Bishop of Toronto has placed there a young and enthusiastic clergyman, named Anderson, as missionary to among the Indians in his youth, speaks their language fluently, and devotes his whole time to the education of the children. The American branch of the tribe is mostly Roman Catholic. These people are simple, kindly, and tractable, with few vices. One of the agents of the mining companies told us that he was in the habit of leaving his tent standing, with all his effects in it, sometimes during an absence of a month, close to the Indian village, and that they never lost a shilling belonging to him. Drunkenness, the red man's principal fo- [illegible] he is brought in contact with the pale faces, is not common among the Chippewas; they occasionally get whiskey from the Americans in exchange for their pelt-ry, but few of them indulge to excess. The three chiefs whose portraits we give never touch intoxicating liq- [illegible]

* Lidone. Baron de Schramm, a distinguished officer of artil- [illegible] author, among other works of a history of that splendid branch of the Prussian army. [illegible] Marshal of the Court to their Royal Highnesses Prince and Princess Charles. It is from an historical Life of Glinike written by Baron de Schramm, that we have culled these records.

CHINGWACKONCE (LITTLE PINE). NABUNAGOGING (THE ECLIPSE). MENISSINGWENNINNE (THE GREAT WARRIOR).

CHIPPEWA INDIAN CHIEFS AT MONTREAL.

the chace and on the products of the fisheries in the Lake, though, latterly, the more sensible among them have turned their attention to agriculture, having cleared and cultivated some lands near the Lake shore, and erected some comfortable log houses, instead of their ancient wigwams of bark.

CHINGWACKONCE is the Sachem or Great Chief of the whole Chippewa nation, and the immediate Chief of the branch living on the river Ste. Marie. This man is seventy-eight years of age: he is not more than five feet six inches high, but is immensely muscular, and, notwithstanding his great age, still retains wonderful activity. Chingwackonce was present at the battle of Queenston; he, with a band of the warriors of his tribe, took the part of the English in the last war with the United States, and the medal which he wears was given to him by General Brock. The father of the other Chief, who carries the war-club with the appended scalps, was killed at Queenston. To this father the club belonged, and there are thirteen scalps attached to it: some of these are coarse black hair, evidently Indian; but the finer and fairer texture of the majority of the locks shows that they were torn from Yankee heads. The scalp-locks are about eight inches in length, very tastefully twisted at the extremity by which they are attached to the club with pieces of ermine skin and dyed porcupine quills. The club itself is formed of iron-wood, and weighs about eight pounds. It is further ornamented with tufts of red feathers, and some bunches of bears' claws, which make a rattling noise. Attached to the heel of the right leg of the warrior with the club is the skin of a skunk: this means, that, as the skunk is one of the most villainous-smelling animals while alive, and makes everything stink that touches it, so he, the warrior, had better not be touched. It puts one in mind of the Irish fashion of daring any man to tread on the tail of a coat. The dresses of these chiefs are made entirely of leather—the skin of the caribou or red deer. This leather is very soft and pliant, but exceedingly thick and hot. The dresses are ornamented with fringes of the same material, and worked besides with very beautiful embroidery in dyed porcupine quills, principally scarlet, blue, and green. The leggings of the youngest warrior are of scarlet cloth, with bright blue edgings, covered with a pattern worked in white beads. The head-dresses are made of the fine inner bark of the silver birch, worked with figures of men and animals in coloured quills; these figures have a most remarkable resemblance to some of those pictured on the walls of Egyptian temples. On the breast of the young warrior is the figure of a crane; this is the totem, or crest of his family; and it is also worked on the handle of his fan: the fan, made of birch bark and the tail feathers of the large brown hawk, is an emblem of chieftainship. The feathers of the head-dresses are the white and black plumes from the wing of the great American eagle: four of these in the cap of Chingwackonce were tipped with a kind of tuft of ermine-skin and red feathers, and three tufts of the same kind hung down on strings of wampum from the side of his cap—each tuft denominated a slain enemy. The old chief had also a quantity of strings of blue and white wampum round his neck—another badge of authority. The old chief and the warrior with the club had extraordinary ornaments in their ears, made of large tufts of feathers and rings of brass wire; and the straps by which the pouches of the latter were suspended were covered with hundreds of bears' claws and the dried hoofs of deer, which made a curious jingling as he walked along. This man (whose name was Meniss-i-no-wenninne) was a very great dandy in his way; and the others used to laugh at him for the extraordinary pains which he took in ornamenting himself. This man was certainly a magnificent specimen of humanity, standing about six feet four inches high and of immense muscular developement. The names of these men in English are, CHINGWACKONCE, Little Pine; NABUNAGOGING, The Eclipse; and MENISSINGWENNINNE, The Great Warrior. Neither of them could speak a word of English.

The occasion which brought them to Montreal, and which enabled Mr. Somerville, the artist, of that city, to furnish us with the sketches, was to present an address to the Governor-General, complaining of the unjust sale of part of their lands to the mining companies by the Government of Canada. The Chippewas aythat their territory was never ceded by them to the British Government, nor taken from them in war; and that no man has, therefore, a right to sell it. They complain that the firing of the woods, and the noise of the blasts made by the miners, is driving the deer so far back into the woods as to deprive them of the means of food, without taking great trouble to get it; while the occupation of the Lake shore interferes with their fisheries. They have also sustained what to an Indian is the most grievous of wrongs, in the wanton disturbance of the piece of ground in which from time immemorial they had buried their dead. The Chippewas declare that they are the allies, and not the subjects, of their great mother, the Queen; and that, if the Government does not make a fair treaty with them for their lands, they will this winter drive off the obnoxious miners.

We understand, however, that the Canadian Government has recognised the rights of these men, and that an amicable arrangement will be immediately made. We believe that the Indians only ask for an annual sum equivalent to the interest of the money which the Government has received from the mining companies for the locations; this already amounts to £19,500; but much more has to be paid into the provincial chest. The American Government has agreed to pay the Chippewas on their side 100,000 dollars per annum for twenty-five years, for the lands which they have ceded. This income the Indians wisely receive in the shape of agricultural implements, &c.; and those in the British territory desire to have their money expended for them in the same way. It is to be hoped, for the sake of humanity, that these poor people will not be driven into acts of violence.

"THE DONCASTER CUP."

LAST year, it will be recollected, there was no plate prize at Doncaster Races, three hundred guineas being paid instead to the winner of the St. Leger Stakes. This year the old custom has been returned to, and the result is a beautiful work from the establishment of Messrs. Hunt and Roskell. It is literally a "Cup," or vase, but enriched with artistically modelled groups which entitle it to rank high above the racing cups of old. The outline is Etruscan, and the height is 3 feet 6 inches. The cover is surmounted with a figure of Neptune, in frosted silver: he wields in his right hand a burnished trident, wherewith having smote the earth, there is rising a noble steed; according to the myth of the ancient Hellen!—that the God of the Sea, contending with Minerva who should bestow the greatest gift on man, called forth the horse, unsuccessfully, while the Goddess of Wisdom raised up the olive-tree. The figure of Neptune, as well as that of the horse, is very spiritual. Upon the body of the Cup, within decorative frame-work, is depicted, in dead silver, an ancient chariot race. The neck of the Cup, as well as the handles, are richly chased bright and dead. The lower part is of circular form, and plain; and around it is grouped the classic episode of "The Fall of Bellerophon," who lies stunned by his descent from the back of Pegasus; and on the other side is the disabled winged horse. The Cup has been modelled by Mr. Alfred Brown, under the superintendence of Mr. Baily, R.A., and is a very elegant work.

THE "DONCASTER CUP."

PALACE OF H.R.H. PRINCE CHARLES OF PRUSSIA, AT GLINIKE.—(SEE PAGE 179.)

NEWSPAPER

NOOKS AND CORNERS OF OLD ENGLAND.

THE DIBDINS' HOUSE, SADLER'S WELLS.

A CHANGE has lately come over this olden theatrical locality: the massive iron gates—through which have rolled so many equipages of the great and noble, and even Royalty itself—through which, too, multitudes have thronged to witness the fun and drollery of the inimitable Grimaldi—have been removed; the long line of graceful and lofty poplars, so lofty as to be easily recognised by voyageurs from Margate as they came up the Thames, have gradually disappeared. The little garden belonging to the cottage at the entrance—once so gay with large white and yellow lilies, surrounded with its neat low white paling—was demolished some time ago; and the cottage itself—once covered with a luxuriant vine—has since been taken down. This cottage was the last vestige of all that once gave Sadler's Wells the air of a suburban theatre, where lived the two Dibdins, Thomas and Charles, and where some of the most charming songs and ballads were composed and written.

HOUSE OF THE DIBDINS, SADLER'S-WELLS.

The room, with its little bay window, in the accompanying Sketch, was at the back, and was the song-writer's and dramatist's favourite study. It then commanded a view of the area, "Sadler's Wells Field," where from 500 to 600 cows, belonging to Rhodes's dairy, used to graze; while, in the summer evenings, countless groups of children and their attendants were to be seen scattered over it. From the cottage was a view towards Primrose Hill and Hampstead; and up the road towards the Angel, with its old-fashioned balcony, where the citizens used to sit and enjoy the busy scene below. On the cottage site are to be erected three houses with shop fronts; and in the open space within the site of the gate, is to be a row of private houses, facing the New River, leaving a sufficient space for a carriage and foot-way to the theatre.

It appears that about the year 1778, if not some years earlier, Charles Dibdin the elder composed several clever pieces for Sadler's Wells Theatre; and a corner of the daily newspapers was not unfrequently headed "Intelligence from Sadler's Wells." In 1802, the theatre was purchased by Mr. Charles Dibdin, jun., and his brother Thomas, author of "The Cabinet," &c., joined by other partners. Thomas Dibdin inherited the family dramatic genius, and was for many years the inventor of the ballets, pantomimes, musical pieces, &c., by which Sadler's Wells enjoyed a long career of prosperity. Some years previously to 1802, when the interior was altered, the proscenium bore, in succession, the mottoes, "Hence, loathed Melancholy," and "Mirth, admit me of thy crew." The last was succeeded by drop-boards, communicating the titles of the successive pieces as they were acted—a plan which recalls to mind one of the most ancient usages of the English theatre, that of nailing upon a pole, near the centre of the stage, the name of the drama under performance.

Of late years, Sadler's Wells has become the home of the English drama, "pure and undefiled;" and we are happy to add, the change has been as profitable to the management as honourable to their taste and judgment.

HORBURY CHAPEL, NOTTING-HILL, OPENED ON THURSDAY.

HORBURY CHAPEL.

THE rapidly increasing population of Notting Hill, and the plans laid out for new buildings in the surrounding district, for some time rendered additional religious accommodation desirable. Two large churches have been erected within the last few years; but these, with the Baptist and Wesleyan Chapels in the Kensington Gravel Pits and Queen's Road, did not suffice to meet the continually augmenting need for religious instruction in the vicinity. The nearest Chapels belonging to the Independent denomination are in Kensington and Paddington, but they are both at a considerable distance, and are already fully occupied. Under these circumstances, early in 1848, a committee of gentlemen, chiefly connected with the congregation assembling in Horton-street Chapel, exerted themselves to meet the emergency of the case; and they commenced their good work, stimulated by a munificent donation of one thousand pounds. They next secured an eligible site at the corner of the Kensington Park-road and Weller-street east, and resolved to erect thereon a Chapel, capable of accommodating, upon the ground-floor, about 700 persons. The first stone of the building was laid by Sir Culling Eardley, Bart., on the 30th of August, 1848; and the Chapel was opened, with three services, on Thursday last.

The architect of the new edifice, which is of judicious design, is Mr. J. Tarring, of Charles-street, Middlesex Hospital. The style is Gothic, of the Transition period from early English to Decorated. The walls are faced outside with Kentish rag-stone; the door and window jambs and tracery being executed in Caen stone. The length of the building is in the clear eighty-three feet three inches; width, forty-two feet eight inches; ditto across the transepts, sixty-nine feet. The front towers will contain the staircases to the galleries, hereafter to be added to the body of the Chapel. In the rear is a large window of four lights, the head being divided into three principal compartments; the two smaller formed into cinquefoils, and the larger one containing seven quatrefoils. The whole have been filled by Mr. Ward with stained glass, of design in accordance with the style of the building.

Plans for spacious school-rooms to adjoin the Chapel, and correspond with its architectural character, have been prepared, and it is proposed to erect them as soon as practicable. The estimated cost of the Chapel, exclusive of galleries and school-rooms, but including vestries, walls, railings, &c., was about £4000.

GENERAL MEETING-ROOM OF THE LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

THIS magnificent room, built for the general meetings of the shareholders of the London and North-Western Railway Company, at the Euston Terminus, is a regal apartment in its style and size. It is 75 feet long, 45 wide, and 40 high. This room is entered by doors at the top of the great staircase from the splendid vestibule, which we have already illustrated; and, entering, the visitor is struck by the lofty proportions and general character of the room. The sides of the apartment are each divided into four compartments, by three sets of coupled Doric columns, resting on a stylobate continued round the room, except where broken by the doorways: the ends are partitioned into three compartments, by similar coupled columns. Above the entablature is a series of segmental arches in the coving of the ceiling, which after is deeply coffered, having elegant flowers in the centres of the coffers, besides much other architectural enrichment. The lands of the [illegible] are extreme[ly] [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] loche pattern running in them. The columns are painted in imitation of red granite, with white bases and capitals, and the stylobate is in imitation of grey granite. The chimney-pieces are of dove marble. The portrait indicated in our Engraving is of Mr Glyn, the chairman of the company, painted by F. Grant, R.A. To check the vibration of sound, the room being so large and lofty, some drapery was hung up in the spaces between the columns, just previous to the late meeting, and the effect of it was exceedingly good. The room will hold 400 persons, and was used for the first time on the occasion of the last half-yearly meeting of the shareholders.

GENERAL MEETING-ROOM AT THE EUSTON TERMINUS OF THE LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

ST. ASAPH CATHEDRAL.—The beauty of the interior of the choir has been much added to by the presentation of two magnificent painted windows, by the Lord Bishop of the diocese, as a tribute to the memory of the late Mrs. Short. They are placed on the north and south sides of the great eastern window. The subject on the north [illegible] is our SAVIOUR rep[illegible] M[illegible] from her [illegible] side the unbe[illegible] [illegible] (John xx. 2[illegible] saith he to Thomas, reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side; and be not faithless, but believing."

On the 2nd inst., the lady of Mr. John Sparrow, Justice of the peace for the county of Lancashire, made a public renunciation of Pr[illegible] in St. Alb[illegible]'s Catholic Chapel, Blackburn.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. A. W. BAITY.—Second Week of the Popular Spectacle of MAZEPPA, with its wonderful Horse, on which a New Grand Pantomile by Pitchall, entitled THE HORSE, THE WITCH, AND THE WOOD DEMON, will be produced on Monday, Sept. 17, and every evening at 7 o'clock with MAZEPPA, or The Wild Horse, with all its original and Equestrian Attractions. After which, Bal ve's eliminable SCENES of the ARENA, supported by the Equestrian Artistes of the Establishment. To conclude with a Favourite Afterpiece. Doors open from 11 till 1. Stage Manager, Mr. W. West

OPEN DAILY from Eleven till Five, and EVERY EVENING EXCEPT SATURDAY, from Seven till Ten.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—Dissolving Views of Rome. Lectures and Experiments with the Hydro Electric Machine. Lectures and Illustrative Exhibition of the Oxy-Hydrogen Microscope. Diver and Diving Bell. The Chromatrope. Examination of Metals by Metallurgy—Admission, 1s. Schools, Half-price.

CREMORNE GARDENS.—GRAND MORNING PERFORMANCES.—On MONDAY, SEPT. 17, A NEW ARRANGEMENT OF ENTERTAINMENTS

POSTSCRIPT.

DONCASTER RACES.—FRIDAY.

HANDICAP PLATE.

Castanette	..	..	..	..	1
Palmsinger	..	..	..	..	2

TWO-YEAR-OLD STAKES.

Knight of Avenel	..	..	..	..	1
Brother to Epirote	..	..	..	..	2

Won easily.

PARK HILL STAKES.

[illegible]	..	..	..	..	1
[illegible] Middleton	..	..	..	..	2

NORTH OF ENGLAND HANDICAP STAKES.

Semi-frame	..	..	..	..	1
Belus	..	..	..	..	2

NEW STAKES.

Vatican	..	..	..	..	1
Old Dan Tucker	..	..	..	..	2

LOW CUP.

Cameron	..	..	..	..	1
Wesow	..	..	..	..	2

INTRAMURAL INTERMENTS.—THE BOARD OF HEALTH.—The Gazette of yesterday (Friday) evening contains Instructions from Lord Ashley and Mr. E. Chadwick, as representatives of the Board of Health, authorising Mr. Austin, the secretary of the said board, to prosecute the guardians of the poor of the city of London Union; the guardians of the Greenwich Union; the churchwardens of St. Margaret's, Westminster; the churchwardens of St. Saviour's, Southwark; and the managers of the burial-ground of Trinitarians court Chapel, Middlesex—for wilful violation and neglect of orders issued by the Board of Health for the prevention of diseases and nuisances.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH AND THE GREENWICH GUARDIANS.—The Greenwich guardians have reversed their decision of last week. On Thursday they adopted the following resolution:—"That, in consequence of the increased number of cholera cases in two of the districts of this union, cases especially confined to the poorer population, the time for house to house visitation has [illegible] viewed, and that the recommendation of the Board of Health be now put in action by the appointment of eight medical officers for this district, to be hereafter apportioned to the various districts, at the salary of £4 4s. per week."

ST. ANN'S, BLACKFRIARS.—At a meeting of the vestry of this parish, on Tuesday, it was unanimously agreed to close the churchyard of the parish [illegible] ment, in accordance with the instructions to that effect from the Board of Health.

Dr. W. B. Carpenter has been appointed Professor of Medical Jurisprudence in University College, in the room of the late Dr. Antony Todd Thomson, deceased.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

ITALY.

Accounts from Rome of the 5th present the agitation there as at its height. The cardinals it was thought would quit the capital in anger, neither could nor induce or compel the French authorities to concur in their reactionist policy.

A letter from Naples of the 4th announces the arrival of the Pope in the capital. The squadron of escort consisted of three ships—one Neapolitan, one Spanish, and one French. The French ships in the bay were also drawn out in honour of his arrival. It was reported that on the day leaving Naples on the 8th he would go to Loretto, where he would be attended by a native guard, the foreign forces remaining distant at a circle of forty miles, and that, while at Loretto, his Holiness would make all proper concessions to his subjects.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

Yesterday (Friday) we received intelligence from the Cape to the 10th July, of an important character. Earl Grey's Government, once appointing the colony to be a penal settlement had arrived out, and was communicated to the public in the official Gazette of the 21st of June. It was printed afterwards in some of the local papers, surrounded by a deep black border; while the proprietors of other journals refused to print it in their regular new-papers, but gave it in a Supplement, encircled with the same mournful insignia. Several public meetings had been held to protest against the measure; but the principal one was held on the 4th of July, in Cape Town, in the open air; and, notwithstanding a violent storm of rain, the meeting continued through the whole of the excitement remaining unpressed by the drenching downpour. The following resolutions were unanimously passed; they need no comment, as they show pretty plainly the sentiments with which this important colony regards our transportation colonial system of government. Resolved:—

1 That the introduction of criminals under sentence of transportation, exile, or banishment from the United Kingdom, or any other quarter, is injurious and degrading to this colony, and ought to be resisted.

2 That [illegible] British Governor [illegible] has no right to degrade into a penal settlement the Cape of Good Hope which he received as a possession of the British Empire by capitulation and [illegible] renounce and annul her privilege or contract,—with its rights and evil [illegible] and [illegible] and tyrannical, and may so constitutionally resisted by the inhabitants of British subjects.

3 That a deputation of the Cape of Good Hope in the Orders in Council of September 4th, 1848 as a place to which convicts may be conveyed, amply by an order from one of the principal [illegible] of State in opposition to the petitions, remonstrances, and protests of the [illegible] to her Majesty and both Houses of Parliament, is subversive of the [illegible] of this community.

4 That a Select Committee of the first Meeting be Governor to ascertain the opinions [illegible] of the people on this transportation, and then acting in defiance of their [illegible] [illegible] indeed to [illegible] Lords an unoffending community, [illegible] to answer [illegible] any place in the government of a free people.

5 That the sixth resolution complains of [illegible] Sir Benjamin Smith, [illegible] measure of convict settlement, and declares that his refusal to do so proves—

[illegible] that the Government of this colony, as at present administered, is wholly at variance with the first and most inalienable rights of British subjects, and perilous to the honour, safety, and happiness of [illegible]

The sixth resolution is as follows:—

That it is the right and duty of the inhabitants of this colony, individually and collectively, in their private and public capacities, to oppose the execution of this injurious, degrading, dangerous, and cruel measure by all constitutional means and that each and every one of them [illegible] efforts, means will be to aid and rapidly advance to the [illegible] object.

We, the undersigned, do in this and the inhabitants of the Cape of Good Hope, hereby solemnly [illegible] and pledge our faith [illegible] or [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

DONCASTER RACES 1849.

THE ROAD.—THE HORSE VAN.

We are, this year, enabled to Illustrate the great Doncaster Meeting, with a very novel scene for this locality. The Railway has, at length, reached this sporting metropolis of the North; and, if we have lost the pastime of posting down to Doncaster to witness the Leger run for, we have gained what would really astonish the old school as much as did the feats of Eclipse—viz. the wonder of leaving London on the morning of the St. Leger, seeing the great race decided, and returning to the metropolis the same day.

The Doncasterians made more than customary preparations to receive their visitors, and they had to congratulate themselves on the fact—a happy contrast to the metropolis—that Doncaster was never in a more healthy state, being altogether free from that disease which is elsewhere making such melancholy ravages. The betting-room was opened, as usual, on Saturday evening; it has been newly painted and decorated in very creditable taste. The Town Council contributed a large fund to the race, and unreservedly abandoned the management of the Meeting to the Jockey Club. The Theatre opened on Saturday evening, with a clever company, under the management of Mr. Addison.

"The Flying Dutchman" arrived on Saturday, was looking remarkably well, and never went better in his life.

On Monday afternoon the trains from Leeds, York, and Manchester brought a small increase of visitors; but it was not until the arrival of the special train by the Great Northern line that the slightest approximation to the bustle which might reasonably have been expected on the eve of a great meeting was observable. Nine-tenths of the metropolitan turfites adopted this route; and it is due to the directors and their officials to state, that, although the line into Doncaster has only been opened one week, there was not the slightest confusion; the hours of departure and arrival were punctually observed, and the passengers, one and all, expressed their unqualified satisfaction with their trip.

There was a small muster at the rooms in the evening, but business was almost at a stand-still; nor did a glance at the very meagre bill of fare lead any one to believe that the events of the week would afford scope for any profitable speculation.

TUESDAY'S RACES.

SWEEPSTAKES of 100 sovs each.

Lord Stanley's Canezou .. . .. Walked over.

In cantering over, the mare knocked down and trod on a policeman, who very carelessly stood right in her track, and was nearly on her head; she escaped without injury, but the man was a good deal cut and bruised.

SELLING STAKES of 10 sovs each, with 40 added; the winner to be sold for 300 sovs, &c. St. Leger course. 5 subs.

Mr. Dawson's Little Queen, 3 yrs, 8st 5lb ..	.	(Arnold) 1
Mr. Baker's Pheasant, 3 yrs, 6st 5lb ..	..	(Charlton) 2
Mr. Walter's Little Casino, 6 yrs, 7st 5lb	..	(Osborne) 3

The race for the last half-mile was entirely between Little Queen and Pheasant, the former winning by a length; Little Casino a bad third. The favourite bolted and fell after running three-quarters of a mile, and cut himself severely: the boy was unhurt. Run in 3 min. 2 sec.

SWEEPSTAKES of 5 sovs each, with 30 added.

Mr. H. Jones's Stepping-Stone, 8st 4lb ..	..	(Holmes) 1
Mr. G. Hobson's Rhedycina, 8st 5lb ..	..	(Sly) 2

Won by half a length; St. George a bad third. Run in 1 min. 18 sec.

The CHAMPAGNE STAKES of 50 sovs each.

Mr. Melklam's The Italian, 8st 7lb ..	..	(Templeman) 1
Lord H. Lennox's William the Conqueror ..		(Flatman) 2

William the Conqueror made play at a good pace, Wallace lying with him to the distance, where he was headed by the favourite; the latter challenged half way up, and after an intensely exciting struggle won by a head. Run in 1 min. 14 sec.

The CLEVELAND HANDICAP of 30 sovs each, with 60 added.

Mr. Lillie's The Iron Duke, 3 yrs, 6st 10lb ..	..	(Harrison) 1
Mr. Walker nd. Maid of Team Valley, 3 yrs ..		(Osborne) 2

A heavy fall of rain for several hours during the night led to anticipations which were, however, agreeably disappointed; the morning was fine, and although the sky ever and anon assumed a threatening aspect, there was not a passing shower to mar the enjoyment. The company was particularly select, and of the four events decided the Champagne alone excited any interest.

THE RAIL.—THE HORSE-BOX.

DONCASTER RACES, 1849.

"FLYING DUTCHMAN," THE WINNER OF THE GREAT ST. LEGER STAKES.

To make "assurance doubly sure," the Flying Dutchman was placed under the watchful care of Leadbeiter, the ex-Bow-street officer. He had taken strong exercise since he had been at Doncaster, and every day gained fresh admirers. The noble owner and his friends were sanguine in the extreme. The ground was capital order.

The proprietors of the Subscription Betting-room have, unsolicited, offered the sum of £100 to be run for on the last day of the races next year.

WEDNESDAY.

Those who remember Doncaster in its palmy days, must have been struck with the contrast between the excitement which then prevailed on the St. Leger day, almost from daybreak, and the quietude of the town this morning. Until between nine and ten o'clock, the sound of wheels was scarcely heard; and, as the day advanced, the arrivals per coach were so few, that one would almost have imagined that it was one of the "off" days of the meeting instead of the "grand" day. The falling off, however, in this respect, is easily accounted for. Doncaster now has railway communication with all the manufacturing districts, from which the mass of visitors come, and the companies having afforded every possible facility in the hope of special trains from Manchester, Leeds, Liverpool Sheffield, Wakefield, &c., the numbers present did not exhibit so great a deficiency as might have been expected from the moderate character of the racing. The special train from London held out an opportunity, for the first time, of seeing the St. Leger run for, and returning the same night; and as the directors, with more consideration for the public than for the shareholders, were content to take one fare for the double journey, a considerable number—less, however, than had been anticipated—availed themselves of it. It reached Doncaster nearly an hour after time, owing to a detention of half an hour at Retford, the engine and tender having got off the line, in consequence of the man at the point having turned it the wrong way; no m'schief was done, and the passengers arrived at their destination in ample time for the races. Irrespective of this, the only drawback was the early hour at which it was necessary to start, an objection which will be obviated next year by the completion of the Great Northern main line from London to Peterborough. By one o'clock, the "special" visitors were safely delivered, and the crowd in the streets reminded us, faintly however, of better times. The falling off, nevertheless, was palpable; and it was still more conspicuous on the course, the Grand Stand, although crowded to the roof, containing few of the titled and fashionable personages whose patronage for so long a period made Doncaster the most popular racing town in the kingdom There was, however, a great numerical attendance, and the racing, with the St. Leger as its feature, went off with tolerable spirit. The weather, unfortunately, was unfavourable.

The DONCASTER PLATE of 100 sovs.

Mr. Payne's Farthingale, 3 yrs, 8st	(Flatman)	1
Lord Chesterfield's Penthesilea, 3 yrs, 7st	(G. Oates)	2

The QUEEN'S PLATE of 100 guineas. Cup course.

Captain Harcourt's Ellerdale, 5 yrs	(Marson)	1
Mr. B. Green's Swiss Boy, 4 yrs	(Wintringham)	2

The ST. LEGER STAKES of 50 sovs each.

Lord Eglinton's Flying Dutchman	(Marlow)	1
Mr. Nichol's Nunnykirk	..(A. Day)	2

Won by two lengths; the same between second and third; Honeycomb a bad fourth. Run in 3 min. 20 sec.

This is the third St. Leger Lord Eglinton has carried off; his previous successes having been with Blue Bonnet in 1843, and with Van Tromp, half brother of the Flying Dutchman, in 1847. This stake has been won three times by the same horse, Surplice having won both last year, and Champion in 1800. Marlow alone has had the good fortune to ride the winner in both races. The issue of the race is left against the fielders, for which reason there is not much to fear for the settling. Lord Eglinton's friends are good winners, but the noble Lord himself had only one bet on the race, having taken 60 to 5 that his horses were first and second.

THE RAILWAY STATION AT DONCASTER.

THE MUNICIPAL STAKES of 200 sovs each.
Lord Eglinton's Knight of Avenel 1
Lord Glasgow's b c by Bay Middleton, out of Canada 2
Won by a length.

THURSDAY.

HANDICAP SWEEPSTAKES of 10 sovs, with 50 added.
Lord Zetland's Casanetta .. .. (G. Oates) 1
Mr. Little's Iron Duke 2

The FITZWILLIAM HANDICAP STAKES of 5 sovs each, with 50 added.
Mr. G. Green's Weston .. .. (Whittingham) 1
Mr. Verner's The Retiree 2

The SCARBORO' STAKES of 20 sovs each ..
Mr. Bowes's Thringarth .. .. Received forfeit.

The GREAT YORKSHIRE HANDICAP of 2 sovs each, with 200 added.
Mr. Meikham's Snowstorm .. ..(Arnold) 1
Sir Joseph Hawley's Faithful 2
Won by a head.

HANDICAP STAKES of 10 sovs each, with 50 added.
Mr. H. Gee's Witchcraft .. .. (Fenn) 1
Mr. Scott's Lady Speedy 2

The FOAL STAKES of 100 sovs.
Lord Eglinton's Flying Dutchman .. .. .. Walked over

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

"The Rail," and "The Road," are a pair of characteristic pictures from the clever pencil of Mr. Henderson, celebrated for his portraitures of "stable economy." One represents the "Van on the Road," and the companion print shows the "Railway horse-box." Carriers have long been used to convey such racers from place to place as are likely to injure their feet, or otherwise suffer by travelling on hard roads; and the practice cannot be too much applauded, whether we consider the interests or the humanity of the plan.

"THE FLYING DUTCHMAN"

Is a dark brown horse, with no white about him except saddle marks, stands about fifteen hands three inches high, has a lean head, rather Roman nose, and prominent forehead; full fiery eye; carries his tail in a high and arching wave which he bows a little; fine deep shoulders, good girth, measuring five feet six inches; rum-bodied barrel, powerful back, very strong quarters, well let down; good thighs, immense arms, very large bone, rather coarse about the hind joint, light, blood-looking tail; he stands rather over at his knees; is quiet-tempered; a firm, level horse; measures nineteen inches round the arm. The Flying Dutchman was bred in 1846, by the late Mr. Vansittart. Won the Derby of 1849 by half a length, beating Hotspur, Tadmor, and twenty-three others.

THE RAILWAY

According to promise, and being especially a boon to the frequenters of Doncaster Races, the opening for traffic of the portion of the Great Northern Railway from Doncaster to Retford, in conjunction with the East Lincolnshire, occurred on the 3rd instant. This opens a line to Leeds and York on the one hand, and to London on the other. The Great Northern commences about five miles beyond Doncaster, where it joins the Askern branch of the Wakefield, Pontefract, and Goole, and thus forms a ready access to the West Riding of Yorkshire, and also to Lancashire and the manufacturing districts generally. The portion opened from Doncaster, for the first time opens a direct communication by railway between Doncaster and the metropolis, leaving the station at Doncaster (which is only a temporary erection), the line passes by the union workhouse and the proposed junction of the South Yorkshire line, and then crosses a large district of land called Potterick Carr. Here is a wide and expansive view of the surrounding country, including St. Catherine's Hall, Wadworth, and several villages and gentlemen's seats, embracing Scrooby castle and church, extensive woods, and a fine district of country. The line then crosses the river Torne, and then reaches the village of Rosington, where a station is built. Here is a gradient of 1 in 198 as the line proceeds to the next place called Pope Hinge, where may be seen the gardens and mansion of Sinnotts Hill. At King's Wood, about a mile from Bawtry, is a massive bridge, the line proceeding under what was formerly called the Great North Road, once so famous for the number of mails and other coaches plying from London to Edinburgh. The next station reaches Bawtry, a small market town, just skirting upon the county of Nottingham. And here the passenger has a pleasing view of some varied and beautiful scenery, embracing part of the counties of Lincoln, Rutland, Nottingham, and Lincoln. There are two or three viaducts over the river Idle; and the line passes Scrooby village, Ranskil, (where there is a station), Serooby hall, the residence of Lord Scrooby, the estate of Mr. Mellish, M.P., and of the Hon. B. Simp on, until it reaches the station at Retford. There is for the present the terminus of the Great Northern, but a junction is formed at Retford with the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, and passengers are conveyed to Gainsborough, Lincoln, Boston, Peterborough, and so on, by the Eastern C unties or London and North-Western to L ndon; thus forming a most convenient and ready means of conveyance for the northern country to and from the metropolis. There are six trains each way to and from Doncaster and Retford.—Railway Chronicle.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE enterprising manager of the Epsom Meetings has provided a most promising day's sport for Tuesday next, in the shape of a match between a contribution from the Brighton Railway Company of £300, amounting to £600! The Meeting, so recommended to the patronage of the owners of horses, ought to succeed: that it will do so, see that it follows two days' racing after Doncaster, and a race a week of the first of October gathering at Newmarket, admits of no question. Leicester commences on Wednesday, and Bedford, Manchester, and Luton on Thursday: Bedford usually affords good sport, and is within the reach of a large number from the metropolis.

The Cricket appointments for the week are few, but interesting. On Monday, the match between 11 of All England and 22 of Leeds, at Leeds, and the match between the gentlemen and players of the Surrey Club and Ground, and the Croydon Club, at Kennington Oval, commence. On Wednesday and Thursday, the match between 11 players and 20 gentlemen comes off at the Oval; and on Thursday, at Stockton, the match between 11 of England and 22 of Stockton will be proceeded with. A few other matches of minor interest will be played in the course of the week.

The Regattas are over for this season.

TATTERSALL'S.—No attendance this week.

THE THEATRES

SADLER'S WELLS.

"The Merchant of Venice" was revived on Wednesday. The part of Shylock is, we believe, a favourite with Mr Phillips, who certainly took up it a full share appreciation of the more theatric elements that enter into the character, but seems generally to repudiate, on system, the malignant. Miss Glyn made her first appearance this season in Portia—new only, as far as Sadler's Wells audience, but one with which she was evidently familiar by previous performances. It was, indeed, a highly-finished piece of a thing—severely artistic, but full of fervour and intensity. Her deportment in the trial scene was dignified and impressive; and the extraord nary resemblance which she bears to Kean both in style and person, became peculiarly conspicuous. Among the favourable points of Miss G ynn's acting, we remember in connexion with others affording a frivolous tone, was self-possessed, had a separate sphere, and lived "His star apart." There was, perhaps, more of the advocate than the judge in conduct with Shylock; at any rate, she was not fain to conceal her indignation at Mr. and the occasional breaking forth of this passion gave a new effect in several passages. The speech on mercy was finely delivered with impressiveness, emphasis, and discrimination such as to reflect great credit on the elocutionary school in which Miss Glyn has matriculated. A splendid piece scenes, in which she unbends, in order to obtain the ring, and to the moonlight one, in which she and her maid Nerissa (Miss Bassnal) sportively banter their husbands, Miss Glyn manifested a naïveté and comic archness exceedingly pleasing, for which we were not prepared. Her manner occasionally was even Vestris-like, and had a similar fascination. Altogether, her assumption of the part was unquestionably a fine classical performance, marked with a decided intelligence, and sufficient of itself to distinguish her as an actress of superior, original, and peculiar powers. As an example of buttonne ant, indeed, it is unique.

At the conclusion of the play Miss Glyn was decidedly recalled, and received an enthusiastic ovation from an audience crowded to the ceiling.

HAYMARKET.

A translation of the French drama, "Une Oiseau de Passage," was produced on Monday, under the title of "A Bird of Passage," in which Mr. Wright, as the hero (a Mr. Carey Clacks) performs the part of a half imbecile, half malignant humbug—who, after acting one or two scenes with the stars, gradually escapes himself from being sacrificed by his indignant victims. Mr. Wright's humour was admirable, and the piece went off with great éclat.

The ADELPHI company return to their own Theatre on Monday next.

The SURREY season for the Legitimate drama likewise commences on the same day; when, as we are announced that the Haymarket Theatre will reopen with a new tragedy. This looks like a revival of dramatic entertainment. With Drury-lane and the Olympic opening at Christmas, and the Haymarket in October, there will be five theatres devoted to the same class of drama; and we shall have to ordinary fruits of competition an improvement in the artistic [illegible]

ASTLEY'S Amphitheatre the hippodramatic spectacle of "Mazeppa" has been revived, with much success

MUSIC.

(From our own Correspondent.)

HEREFORD MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

HEREFORD, Wednesday Night.

The 126th Meeting of the Choirs of Hereford, Gloucester, and Worcester commenced yesterday, with beautiful weather; but to-day it has been cold and showery. These ancient gatherings have a two-fold object: the first is the sacred cause of charity, by contributing to the aid of the widows and orphans of the clergy who die in indigent circumstances—too frequently the case in these three dioceses, owing to the miserable incomes of numerous benefices; and the second object is to promote art-progress in the three counties. Even if charitable and musical considerations did not induce amateurs to attend these annual Festivals, the three towns are so beautifully situated, and contain such local architectural attractions, that the temptation to make the pilgrimage is very great. Railroads have made the approaches to Gloucester and Worcester easy; but for this town the glories of ancient coach travelling are yet preserved, and true magnificent rides may be selected: the first, viâ Gloucester and Ross (Great Western); the second, viâ Birmingham and Worcester (North-Western). The best way is to go by one route and return by the other, and the most luxurious scenery will be traversed. At this season, when the Festivals are in progress, the journey is indeed a treat: wooded hills, fertile meadows, hop plantations, rich orchards, highly cultivated fields, and picturesque mansions and churches, form a panorama of enchanting variety. The little mountainous district of the Malvern Hills affords an extensive view, as romantic and striking as any foreign sight-seer could desire.

On Monday the vocal and instrumental forces were collected in the cathedral for the rehearsal. Mdme. Castellan arrived from Worcester, where she remained after the Birmingham Festival, having kindly consented to sing at St. Swithin's church on Sunday, in aid of the funds to insure the improvement of the musical portion of divine service. In the morning she sang Handel's air, "I know that my Redeemer liveth;" and in the evening, Dr. Crotch's air from "Palestine," "No more sorrow, no more pain." Mr. J. Jones presided at the organ, and the church was crowded to excess. The Rector, the Rev. Robert Sergeant, M.A., preached both sermons. I heard that in the morning, on the text, "And Miriam, the prophetess, the sister of Aaron, took a timbrel in her hand; and all the women went out after her with timbrels and with dances." The discourse was an able and earnest advocacy of the extension and improvement of congregational music. The rev. preacher displayed considerable erudition in the mention of authorities to justify the use of music in our sacred edifices, and the steady singing and chanting of the choir in St. Swithin's Church is evidently the result of careful training.

Mr. Townshend Smith, the organist, played a second rehearsal (of the sectiar music) in the evening, at the Shire Hall. The dinner given by the stewards to the principal performers took place at the Green Dragon. The selection of sacred music performed at the Cathedral yesterday morning consisted of, with the old version of the Hundredth Psalm of Martin Luther, the first, third, and fourth verses sung by the chorus, and the second by the principal singers. Handel's Dettingen "Te Deum" and "Jubilate" (at Utrecht), and Dr. Boyce's Anthem (

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The General Board of Health, on the report of their inspector, Dr. Gavin Milroy, have ordered the burial-ground of the Tottenham-court-road Chapel to be closed.

The vacancy in the office of physician to St. Thomas's Hospital, occasioned by the death of Dr. Henry Burton, has been filled by the appointment of Dr. J. Risdon Bennett, late Parkes one of the assistant-physicians.

On Monday, the new hospital erected in the Liverpool-road, Islington, was opened for the reception of patients. The building contains accommodation for 30 persons, and cost about £20,000.

On Saturday, information was received by the metropolitan police, that a brown pacer parcel, addressed Messrs. Walker and Lomax, Mosaic works, Bury, and containing three £5 00, one £20, one £10, and four £5 Bank of England notes, and £5 10s 6d. or 5s, had been stolen whilst in course of transit by railway from Stafford to Bury, it is supposed through the new system of railway robbery, altering the direction

Captain W. P. Hamilton, R.N., arrived last week on a visit to his father, at Little Hampton, and took up his residence near the beach. He was missed on his farm by, and search being forthwith made, his body was discovered in a field adjoining to the town, but with no marks of violence. It is supposed the unfortunate gent eman expired in a fit of apoplexy.

The Society of Friends have established a Sabbath school in Bishopsgate-street, for boys who are unable to attend a day school.

By the death of Mr. Bynam, which took place on Saturday, at Hastings, the office of Secretary to the Board of Ordnance has become vacant. Mr. Bynam was in his 80th year.

In a communication received by Mr. Lilwall, secretary of the Early Closing Association, from Gwydr House, Whitehall, and bearing date the 7th inst., it is stated, "That the board are fully satisfied that the late-hour system, especially in close, ill-ventilated shops, has a tendency to predispose those who are subject to it to epidemic disease."

Williams, the Chartist, who had been tried some time ago with Fussell and others of the Chartists at the Central Criminal Court, and sentenced to two years' imprisonment in the House of Correction at Westminster, died there last week of cholera.

Lord Dynevor and his family have given nearly £1100 towards the restoration of Llandaff Church.

The church of Ancoats, in the parish of Althorpe, Lincolnshire, a very old but dirty, suddenly fell down on Tuesday week. The rector, the Rev. J. Aspinall, had observed a yielding of one of the walls two or three weeks before, in consequence of which he had performed the service in the school-room.

The Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowledge has promised the sum of £2500 towards the establishment of a theological institution in Colombo, for which purpose the Bishop of Ceylon has paid £2000 out of his own pocket for parch sing a site for the building, and has also promised to devote £200 a year from his income during his episcopate.

Some gentlemen, who do not wish their names to be disclosed, have caused the sum of £150 to be placed in the hands of London bankers, to be applied, under the direction of Dean Merewether and Canon Blandford, towards filling with stained glass one of the lights of the window at the east end of the choir of Hereford Cathedral, in the hope that it may induce others to fill up other lights in a corresponding style.

Letters from her Majesty's screw-cruiser Rifleman, Lieut. Commander Crofton, dated Rio, 3d July, state that she had just returned from a cruise, having captured and destroyed a fine brigantine of upwards of 300 tons, that had 600 slaves on board. She ran ashore with a tremendous surf breaking over her. They succeeded in saving 120 of the slaves, about as many more swam on shore during the night, and the others were left dead on board. As the brigantine could not be got off, she was set on fire.

The salmon fishing in the Tay has been very irregular during the last fortnight. One day last week the whole proceeds in the river were one salmon and twenty grilses. Owing to the recent rains, the fish have begun to run upwards again, and there was a fair fishing on Monday last. Prices have risen from 10d. to 1s for salmon, and 8d. for grilse.

The splendid exotic, Yucca gloriosa (Adam's Needle), is at present in full flower in the garden at Fingask Castle, Perth, measuring from the ground to the top of the flower stem eight feet, and bearing nearly 500 blossoms of a tulip-like form, of a white and green colour. Its rareness of flowering in this country constitutes it the greater curiosity

On Thursday morning week, a fire broke out in the apartments over the shop of Mr. Norbury, druggist, in Alphington-street, caused, it is supposed, by the friction of some congreve matches, which had been left in a pocket of some clothing hung behind a door, which was shut quickly ! The flames were speedily extinguished, without much damage having been done.

The Glasgow people have struck out a new subject for competition, and last week were engaged in distributing five prizes of £5 each, to twenty of 5s, to competitors keeping the cleanest houses in the east side of the Old Wynd, the New and Back Wynds, and the north side of Bridgegate-street.

The memory of the late bombardment of Genoa does not seem to hang heavy upon the minds of the citizens, for in repairing their damaged houses they fix the balls which shattered them in a conspicuous place in the walls, as memorials of a time more worthy of being consigned to oblivion.

The foundations of the Caledonian monument have been marked out, and they cover a circle of one hundred feet diameter. The foundation-stone will be laid on Wednesday, the 19th inst., with masonic honours, by the provincial Grand Master. The site of the monument, by sanction of Mr. Pirie, of Culloden, is upon the actual battle-field, and within a few yards of the graves.

A grant of quarter sessions is about to be made to Gravesend, in Kent, and also to Newport, in the Isle of Wight. The increasing commercial importance and population of Gravesend render the holding of quarter sessions there, and it will accordingly be granted upon the fulfilment of the necessary conditions as to the proper maintenance of prisons and other expenses required to be undertaken on the creation of justices.

The numerous ways in which gutta percha is now found to be capable of being appropriated causes the importation of it to continue in large quantities. The London Times, in a recent notice from Singapore, has brought 4067 blocks, 2489 pieces, and 9 bags of its article, as a portion of her cargo consigned to order Chartists at Haley Hill, near Halifax, are still drilling. A body of them was met marching in military order on one night last week, and they beat a police constable who interfered with them.

A hawker, at Halifax, has been fined £1 1s. for a lling rotten pears to children.

From a parliamentary paper recently issued, it appears that the number of persons under eighteen years of age in the tailor workmen of Ireland was, on the 9th of May, 1849 —males, 62,314, females, 66,285 : total, 128,799.

Good whitsh, 16/. to 18/. per cwt. the pack, was sold in Taunton market on Saturday last, at 8s 6d. to 6s. per bushel.

Last week, when the work men were employed in repairing the interior of Chelsworth Church, near Bildestone, a fine fresco painting, in excellent preservation, was discovered just over the chancel arch. The painting represents the Day of Judgment.

Several arrivals of bales of hops have taken place by a steam ship from Ostend, the produce of Belgium, consigned to a firm in the metropolis. These come need arrivals of this article of foreign growth are of interest, as evincing a regularity in the supply of this article of merchandise from a country which has hitherto furnished us with hops during any previous year.

There were three destructive fires on Sunday in London, one in Bishopsgate-street Without, a se.ond in Barnsbury-road, Islington, and the third in the Borough. Considerable damage was done.

Last week, as Mr. R. Rogers, a farmer of Duxston, was about to cross the railway line at North Moor Devon, a piece of coal was thrown from the tender of the engine, which stunned him, and he is now suffering from the effects of the blow.

On Saturday two young ladies went through the ceremony of "taking the veil," at the new convent of the Good Shepherd, the second Catholic institution of the kind in Hammersmith.

A vessel arrived from New York has brought 83 barrels of pigs' feet, 55 barrels of pigs' knees, and 77 barrels of pigs' heads, in addition to 3369 barrels of flour, 21,539 bushels and 316 sacks of corn, and 257 packages of cheese, of American produce.

On Sunday a sermon on behalf of the Commercial Travellers' Schools was preached before the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor and sheriffs, in St. Mary-le-Bow, Cheapside, by the Rev. Daniel Moore, M.A., incumbent of Camden church. The collection at the close of the service amounted to £60.

Agreeably to notice given on Sunday last by the Rev. R. Burgess, rector of Upper Chelsea, to the congregation of Trinity Church, Sloane-street (the rectory church), Divine service was performed in that church on Wednesday, on account of the prevailing epidemic.

Emigration from Plymouth still continues to go on very rapidly, and almost every day marks the arrival or departure of some ships whose ultimate destination is either the Land of Good Hope or the Australian colonies. The Indiaman, 468 tons register, Captain Passmore, under charter to her Majesty's Colonial and Emigration Commissioners, sailed on Wednesday morning for Port Phillip (Melbourne), with emigrants for the Cape, sailed on Thursday.

The Gateshead Observer announces the death of Peter Allan, a local celebrity, who had hewn himself a suite of a dozen rooms out of the magnesian limestone rock at Marsden, on the sea-coast between South Shields and Monkwearmouth. He died of mild amusement, aged 80; and on Sunday his remains were interred at Whitburn, in the presence of his aged father and mother, both of them upwards of 84 years old.

Mr. G. Matheson, weaver, Millstairs, Brechin, near Dundee, while picking the potatoes from a scrap in his garden last week, found a gurgling piece of metal, which, on being rubbed up, has been found to be a good Scottish coin of the reign of James VI., date 1595, and in an excellent state of preservation. Before and other old copper coins of Scotland are frequently found in the same locality.

A man was tried at Bodmin, on Friday last, for stealing a field of wheat, of the quantity of about half an acre, the property of Mr. Lawrence, sergeant, at Cheddar, Somerset, which was cut and ready for carrying, was actually stolen and carried off the ground, and was set the thieves have not been detected.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Omicron."—According to the amended scheme, Variation practicable now. The new version of No 2 shall be examined.

"Captans" is thanked, but we are obliged to make it an inflexible rule that every problem submitted to us for publication should be accompanied by the author's solution.

"Nemesis." Ingenious; but, like the former, much too easy.

"J. W." When a player has his King in check, and unconscious that, not to say at the moment in check, he cannot move him without putting him in check, and at the same time has no other piece or Pawn which he can move, he is pronounced.

"C. W. R."—In Enigma No. 480, place Black's Pawn at his K Kt 6th, instead of K Kt 3d.

"H. S., Manchester. No. 1 is too simple. The other is neat and ingenious

"North Briton."—Mr. Harrwitz has commenced his tour through the northern and midland Chess Clubs; and we trust that neither the Clubs you mention, nor those of Halifax, Wakefield, Leeds, and Nottingham, will let slip so favourable an opportunity of securing his services for a Chess tourney.

"R. B. G." Chard, "Hon. Secretary." "Philo-Chess," "P. Y.," "Diana."—The Registered Chess-man, to which we alluded last week, will, in all probability, be published before the appearance of our next Number. We shall then take occasion to direct attention to the particular advantages they possess over the men in ordinary use.

Solutions by "Nemesis," "R. H. P.," "A Country Player," "Dereven," "M. P.," "Milo," "E. S.," are correct. Those by "S. U.," "R. B. G.," are wrong.

 The answers to a number of Correspondents are unavoidably postponed until next week.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 294.

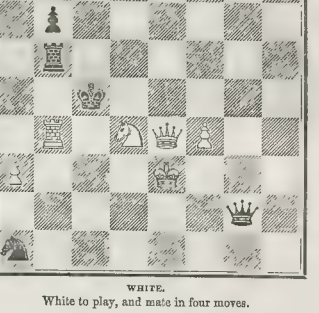
WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Q to Q B 4th	R to Q R 5th, or (a)	3. Q to K B 5th	K to K B 2d (best)
2. Q to K B sq	K B P takes P (best)	4. Q to Q Kt 5th (ch)	R to Q 3d
		5. Kt to Q 7th—Mate.
(a) 1.	Kt takes Kt #	3. Q to her 6th (ch)	R takes Q
	2 Q takes Kt (ch)	R to Q 4.h	4. It takes R—mate.

If P to K B 4th, White plays Kt to K Kt 4th (ch), &c.

PROBLEM NO. 295.

This singularly clever little subtlety we owe to Mr. McC., the Secretary of the Glasgow Chess Club.

BLACK.



WHITE.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

MATCH BY CORRESPONDENCE

BETWEEN THE CHESS CLUBS OF LONDON AND AMSTERDAM.

WHITE (Amsterdam).		BLACK (London).
41.		K to K 3d

Amsterdam to play.

CHESS-PLAYING WITHOUT THE CHESS-BOARD.

In accordance with previous announcements, a match of Chess was played at the Glasgow Chess Club on Thursday week, which excited the liveliest interest and amusement among a numerous assemblage of spectators. The conditions of the contest were that Mr. Harrwitz, the celebrated German player, should play two games simultaneously, without seeing either chess-board, against four members of the club—two in consultation over each game. Preliminaries having been adjusted, Mr. Harrwitz took his seat in a corner of the room, with his back to the company, and totally excluded from view of the chess-boards. Having to lead off in both games, he speedily announced the move he intended to play on board No. 1, and directly followed it by his move on board No. 2. The players at the first board made and communicated their move in reply, and those at the second did the same; and in this way the game proceeded to the end: the result, after a contest of about four hours, being that Mr. Harrwitz won one game, and lost the other.

At the conclusion of the games, Mr. Sheriff Bell made a few remarks on the highly intellectual feat which the company had just witnessed. He said, he was sure the members of the Chess Club, and the strangers present, would join him in expressing their sincere thanks to Mr. Harrwitz for the very astonishing performances which he had gone through that evening. When it was considered what vast powers of memory, concentration of thought, and great intellectual ability were required for such a task, he doubted if there was another person in the world he was sure there was not another in Great Britain—capable of performing it. All who respected Chess knew well that at every move the possible variations of play were innumerable, and that the operation of Casting, in particular, changed the relative position of the pieces, and the whole aspect of the game completely. Now, in these two games which had just been played, and conducted by four of the strongest players in the west of Scotland, the opponents of Mr. Harrwitz both castled about the same time, the one on the King's side and the other on the Queen's side, thereby increasing the difficulty of the task greatly, and rendering the avoidance of error on the part of Mr. Harrwitz scarcely possible. It would be remarked, also, that on one side of the board the play altogether ceased for some time; there was a complete cessation of hostilities for upwards of an hour, the battle going on in another quarter; and yet when it afterwards reverted, as it necessarily did, to the former point, Mr. H. had such a perfect perception and remembrance of the relative position of all the pieces, as to play apparently as easily as if he had all along had the boards open before him. The whole performance, he repeated, kept up as it was for more than three hours and a half, showed such a concentration of mental power, and such intellectual resources, as were truly wonderful. Chess-players alone could properly appreciate it, and to them it was undoubtedly a mental treat of the highest order. The Sheriff again expressed the thanks of the company to Mr. Harrwitz. The following is the game which was gained by Mr. Harrwitz:

CHESS-BOARD NO. 1.

(Evans' Gambit.)

WHITE. (Mr. Harrwitz.)	BLACK. (Messrs. Stirling and M'Combe.)	WHITE. (Mr. Harrwitz.)	BLACK. (Messrs. Stirling and M'Combe.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	23. Kt to K 4th	Kt takes K B P (d)
2. K Kt to B 3d	Q Kt to B 3d	24. Q R to K B 3d	Q to K 6th (e)
3. B to Q B 4th	B to Q B 4th	25. R takes Kt	Q takes R
4. P to Q Kt 4th	B takes Kt P	26. R takes Q	R to B 8th (ch)
5. P to Q B 3d	B to Q B 4th	27. Q interposes	R takes Q (ch.)
6. Castles	P to Q 3d	28. K takes R	K to Q sq
7. P to Q 4th	B takes P	29. R takes P	K to Kt 2d
8. P takes P	B to Kt 3d	30. R to Q 7th	K to K sq
9. P to Q 5th	Q Kt to K 2d	31. R to Q 7th	R takes K P
10. P to Q Kt 3d	K to Kt to B 3d	32. R takes P (ch)	K takes R
11. B takes Kt	P takes B (c)	33. Kt to Q 6th (ch)	K to B 3d
12. K Kt to Q 4th	Kt to K Kt 3d	34. Kt takes R (ch)	K to K 4th
13. P to K B 4th	B to Q 2d	35. P to Q 6th	K to K 3d
14. Q Kt to B 3d	B to Q 3d	36. K to B 3d	P to Kt 4th
15. K to R sq	B takes Kt	37. K to K 2d	K to Q 2d
16. Q takes B	Castles on K side	38. K to Q 3d	P to Q 4
17. Q to K sq	P to Q B 3d	39. P to K 5th	K to B 2d
18. Q Kt to K 3d	B to Q Kt 4th	40. K to K 5th	P to Kt 6th
19. B takes B	P takes B	41. K to K 6th	P to Kt 6th
20. Q R to K Kt 3d	R to B sq	42. P to Q 7th (ch)	P to Kt 7th
21. Kt takes P	R takes Q R P	43. P queens, and
22. K. takes Q B P (b)	R to Q B 7th (e)	Black resigned.

(a) The moves up to this point are all book, and are generally thought to be the best for black parties in this opening.

(b) Very clever played. If Black had taken it they must have lost at least a Piece in a move.

(c) K R to Q B sq, and then to Q B 7th, would greatly have improved Black's game.

(d) Quite safe. White dare not take his K Rook from the Royal line.

(e) A grave miscalculation, the consequences of which lose Black the game

RAILWAY INTELLIGENCE.

MEETINGS.

MANCHESTER, BUXTON, MATLOCK, AND MIDLAND JUNCTION: Sept. 11: Half-yearly Meeting: Derby: the Hon. G. H. Cavendish, M.P., in the chair.—The line has been opened to Rowsley, and worked by the Midland under certain agreements with the London and North-Western and Lancaster and Carlisle. The receipts have been about £100 per week. The directors do not intend to extend the line beyond Rowsley without full consideration. Certain shares which had not been taken up by land proprietors were forfeited. The report and declaratory of the above facts was adopted. The directors' allowance is reduced to £400 per annum.

MIDLAND: Sept. 7: Half yearly Meeting: Derby: Mr. J. Ellis, M.P., in the chair.—The report declared an increase in the gross receipts, but a falling off in the passenger traffic, which is attributable to general causes. The disposable balance is sufficient for a dividend of 5 per cent. The Buxton line to Rowsley is to be worked by the company, and various local and station arrangements have been made with the South Yorkshire and North-Western and London and North-Western. The board defended the lease of the Leeds and Bradford. The amount of calls in arrear is £218,932. The management is recommended to be divided into sub-committees. The chairman attributed this reduction of passenger receipts to the number of third-class passengers. Letters of resignation were handed in from Messrs. Waddingham, Murgatroyd, and Fox. The report was adopted, save that paragraph defending the transactions of the lease of the Leeds and Bradford. The £50 shares on which calls have not been paid up were declared forfeited. Messrs. Cadbutt and Beverley, of Leeds, Mr. W. Smith, of Sheffield, and Mr. Mercer, of Bristol, were recommended for seats at the board.

LANCASHIRE AND PRESTON.—September 6: Annual Meeting: Lancaster: Thomas Bell in the chair.—The differences with the Canal Company are settled. The main portion of the rent had been paid. Dividends of 3½s. 6d. on the whole shares, 23s. 6d. on the 5 shares, and 9s. 4d. on the 2 shares were declared. The country to the Canal Company is to be raised. The capital account would be closed at about £467,000. A sum of £400 was voted to Messrs. Bushell and W. Jadeson, for having so satisfactorily settled the difficulties of the company.

COCKERMOUTH AND WORKINGTON.—September 5: Special Meeting: Cockermouth: Mr. J.W. Fletcher in the chair.—It was resolved to raise £20,000 by the issue of 3761 Preference Shares, of £6 13s. 4d. each, with a guarantee of 5 per cent, and to authorise the loan by the directors of £8320. Much objection was manifested to the making of the Bridgefoot branch.

SOUTH STAFFORDSHIRE.—September 13: Half-yearly Meeting: Wm. Forster, Esq., in the chair.—The report stated that the line would be ready for opening throughout early in November next, after which interest would cease to be paid out of capital. The traffic on the small portion hitherto opened had proved most satisfactory.

The London Central Committee of the CALEDONIAN condemn the late expenditure of the funds as wasteful. The report at the half-year's meeting is to be met by a motion for inquiry, and five new directors are to be proposed.

A new line between Ulverstone and the Burton station of the LANCASTER AND CARLISLE is to be established.

It has been proposed to carry out the electric telegraph into British India, if approved of by the East India Board

There has been a discovery of an extensive system of parcel robbery on the LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN, and LANCASHIRE AND YORKSHIRE Railways, by the shifting of the direction labels; but the Manchester police are on the track of the offenders.

The steam-boats running to the French coast in connexion with the Bannister trains have been sold for £15,000 to the French Government, having originally cost £30,000

Legal proceedings, it is rumoured, are to be taken against Mr. Hudson by the directors of the YORK AND NORTH MIDLAND, and MIDLAND companies, on disputes connected with the late 5 per cent transactions.

The Clydesdale Junction of the CALEDONIAN, for traffic to and from Hamilton in connexion with the Ayrshire and Greenock lines, has been opened. The line runs from Hamilton to Glasgow, giving the company a terminus on the south side of the Clyde

A committee of influential shareholders of the GREAT WESTERN, at Bristol, has been formed, to support and assure the re-election of Mr. Jones into the board, from his advocacy of retrenchment and reform.

THE EXPELLED WESLEYAN MINISTERS.

THE three reverend gentlemen, whose portraits are here given, James Everett, Samuel Dunn, and William Griffith, jun., have, by the recent extraordinary acts of the Wesleyan Conference, attained a popularity which their confessedly superior abilities could never have secured for them.

We may briefly narrate the circumstances to which they are indebted to their present painful, yet enviable position; for, though excommunicated by their reverend brethren of the Conference, they are regarded by the vast body of the Wesleyans as sufferers in a righteous cause, and as animated by the highest principles. Some four or five years ago, a publication, reflecting on the executive of Methodism, was privately circulated amongst the preachers, and some of the leading laymen of the body. It was continued for the three succeeding years. In 1847, the Conference, instead of passing by as unworthy of notice the anonymous pamphlet, which would have been a prudent course, or boldly meeting the allegations, made inquisition for the authors. This object was sought by sending a circular, which was to be issued, for the voluntary signatures of those preachers who wished to disclaim connexion with the "Fly Sheets," the pamphlet in question.

The circular obtained a number of signatures, and the like numbers refused. At the late Conference, that which before was permissive was virtually made obligatory. Many still refused, amongst the number the three expelled. A verbal answer was then required in addition. "Are you the author of the 'Fly Sheets?'" The three refused to comply with the inquisitorial interrogatory, and were expelled. Others, who took the same ground, have been retained, but degraded.

The three gentlemen appeared at Exeter Hall on the evening of Friday, Aug. 31, when they had their case before the public. On that occasion we had an opportunity of seeing them. Mr. Everett is between 60 and 70 years of age; Mr. Dunn, about 50; and Mr. Griffith, perhaps a few years more than 40. They have been Wesleyan ministers for the periods of 43, 30, and 20 years respectively.

MR. EVERETT has for several years resided in York, the state of his health preventing him from engaging in the regular work of the ministry, though he has been in "labours more abundant." As a preacher, he is decidedly popular, and his congregations have been much sought after. His discourses are rich in evangelical sentiment, abound in apt and forceful illustration, and, while occasionally distinguished by quaintness of language and thought, are always full of poetic imagery. They well sustain the description given by a reviewer, years ago, of one of Mr. Everett's productions—they are "the poetry of prose." His manner in the pulpit is calm and dignified, giving to the hearer the impression of one who feels himself at home, especially at the opening of his sermon; while his animated action and fervid appeals, as he warms with his subject, sufficiently declare that he is not a mere actor, but that he feels the responsibility of his office. On the platform he is still more effective: there his varied powers are brought into full play, and his eloquent, speaking face, says, "We have been here before." Prone to be compared with Mr. Everett, who remarkably combines the peculiarities of two distinguished men—the late Mr. Crabbe, the poet, and Sir Charles Wetherall, the bold and powerful reviewer. Mr. Everett possesses much of the outer and the inner man of the celebrated author of the 'Tales of the Hall,' of his epigram, antithesis, simile and sarcasm, dry humour and withering satire, rush on in a resistless torrent, though the scale of his oration, interspersed with flashes of brilliancy which, while they irradiate the subject, dazzle and delight the hearer. He greatly resembles Sir Charles Wetherall in his air and manner, burst and tone, though the latter orator can hardly be described. His oratory is of a character which addresses itself to the whole man—the understanding, the fancy, and the heart. He is occasionally in a high decree declamatory, but by no means to meet so; he never declaims till he has proved, and, having impressed his point, there is an end of it. He is, moreover, endowed with the physical attributes of eloquence. His voice is one of great compass, full of flexibility, and under the most perfect command; he delivers himself with an energy scarcely inferior to that of Mr. Dawson (the subject of one of his biographies) himself; and, like the late Dr. Chalmers, and (according to Cicero) the orators of ancient times, occasionally, in the more vehement parts, he stamps with his foot, while his thunders and lightnings, shaking all around him! In a word, as Southey said of Whitfield, "he is a consummate master of all the arts of popularity." In his rapid surprises and transitions, which operate with magic effect, and expand much labour to secure the smallest trifle decidedly ante-diluvian, and will, probably, like others who ride hobbies, in his earnestness to possess the coveted treasure, fail to discern that it bears indubitable evidence of being considerably post-diluvian in its origin. He said that Dr. Clarke, with warm personal friendship, Adam Clarke, was wont to twit him unmercifully upon this foible: and, in one of his letters, requested Mr. Everett to send him, should he meet with it in hunting through the "curiosity-shops," the sun-book out of which he had seen Cain lecture. In person Mr. Everett is stout, without being corpulent, and rather over the middle height.

MR. DUNN is somewhat slighter in person, is singularly modest in his bearing, and seems, says one, "transparency, integrity, and love personified." He states his points with great accuracy and clearness, exhibits his details with close consecutiveness, and argues irresistibly. His speeches read remarkably well, and tell on an attentive audience. As a preacher, we believe he ranks high, and is universally beloved by the people to whom he has ministered. During the last three years he has been stationed in the town of Nottingham. Mr. Dunn is well and favourably known to the religious world by his various publications.

REV. WILLIAM GRIFFITH, JUN. REV. SAMUEL DUNN. REV. JAMES EVERETT.

THE EXPELLED WESLEYAN MINISTERS.

Mr. Griffith is a person tall, and of massive proportions. He is less polished exteriorly than his two fellow-expelled, but possesses a mind of no ordinary strength and range, and which has been well cultivated. As a public speaker he is effective; and, when excited, likely to carry the feelings of his audience with him. As a preacher, he has been exceedingly effective, especially amongst the working and uneducated classes, with whom he sympathises deeply. His manners are frank, and his whole bearing open, honest, and manly. The "triumvirate" are altogether men of mark; and, without expressing an opinion as to the act of the Wesleyan Conference which expelled them, we think it ought to have hesitated before it had dispensed with the services of such men.

The above Engravings are from Daguerréotypes, recently taken by Beard, and lent us by the editor of the Wesleyan Times, in which journal they are to be published on steel.

IRISH HARVEST HOME.

Many of the old customs, from various causes, have fallen into disuse in Ireland; but the Harvest Home is still kept up with much of the vigour of former days; and, as a scene of frolic and fun, it is of indescribable humour.

The proprietor of three or four hundred acres has no idea of getting his harvest in without having an evening, or rather a night's amusement for the boys and girls who assisted in reaping and securing the rich gifts of Ceres. In fact, before a sickle is drawn or a sheaf bound, preparations are made for the festivity of the Harvest Home. On the long-wished-for evening, a barn is converted into a ball-room. From roof to floor it is decorated with laurels and other evergreens, through which some dozen lights gleam from rustic chandeliers, which are generally composed of a sheaf of corn lined with yellow clay, and fastened to the leafy drapery with wreaths of flowers. At one end of the barn is placed the threshing-machine, decorated after the same fashion. Forms are arranged to accommodate the various groups apart from the dancers. The rustic beaux and belles, neatly and simply attired, dance with an animation that would astonish a citizen; and, when the mirth grows "fast and furious," pipers, fiddlers, and dancers display an energy that might rival the glories o' Kirk-Allo- [illegible] with piles of slices of bread and cake, are handed about in [illegible]; and later in the evening a plentiful supper is prepared, with the exhil[illegible]dition of the "mountain dew."

"The Master" and his fa[illegible]ways visit the scene of enjoyment, and by their presence ensure the good orde[illegible]as well as the good cheer of the labourers. Between the dances the song and jest go round briskly, with encounters of wit, in which the Irish, generally speaking, excel; by which we mean, not the heart-broken peasant, out seeking for labour in another land, but the hearty, hilarious Irishman in all his glory at home.

The Illustration is from a drawing by an Irish artist

AN IRISH HARVEST HOME.—FROM AN ORIGINAL SKETCH.

THE BIRMINGHAM EXPOSITION OF ARTS AND MANUFACTURES.

In our Journal of last week we briefly noticed this grand display of National Industry as likely to form one of the principal attractions during the present meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science. This anticipation has been realised to the full.

We now engrave another selection of specimens; previously to describing which, however, we have to correct an error of last week, which arose from the inadvertence of the Artist. The larger work, engraved in page 165, is the Morley (not Morley) Testimonial, and is the centre-piece of a superb service, manufactured by Elkington, Mason, and Co.; the other pieces being a plateau, and a pair of ice pails, one of which we engraved last week. The centre-piece bears the arms of Mr. Morley, and the following inscription:—

"Presented to Elias Joseph Morley, Esq., by those friends and fellow-shareholders in the Birmingham and Oxford Junction Railway who witnessed with admiration, and remember with gratitude, the energy, judgment, and ability displayed by him throughout an arduous and protracted struggle in defence of their common interest.—June, 1849."

We now proceed with our notice of the formation of the Exposition.

For some time efforts have been making to awaken the manufacturers to the importance of a National Exposition of Manufactures; but little progress was made until the enterprising spirit of the men of Birmingham erected the present spacious building, at a cost of little less than £9000, for this temporary purpose only. And what a magnificent coup d'œil does it present of beautiful forms, gorgeous colours, and elaborate workmanship! How worthily is METAL CASTINGS, BY MESSENGER AND SONS.

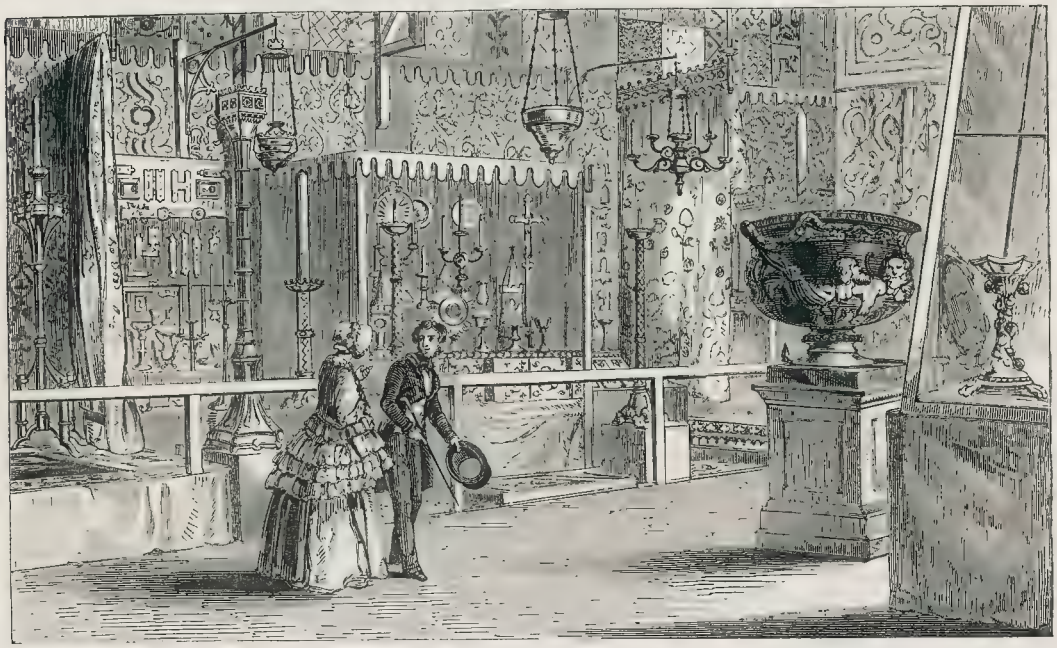
GLASS, BY RICE HARRIS.



HARDMAN'S WORKS FOR CHURCH DECORATION.

Birmingham art represented, placed in juxtaposition, as it is, with the productions of France in metallurgy, and Bohemia in glass!

It is almost incredible to observe the progress that has been made in the manufacture of glass since it was freed from the trammels of the Excise. In the pure chrystal, we have for some time far excelled our continental rivals; but it was reserved for Mr. Rice Harris to show on the present occasion that we can also compete with them not only in the different shades of ruby—the colour which has been hitherto most difficult of attainment—but also in the engraving and enamelling, in which we have hitherto been far behind. In combination of form, too, he excels; except, perhaps, in the large articles, one of which a six feet in height, and is believed to be the largest piece of glass designed and made in the case, however, great allowances must be made for the difficulties of manufacture. In colour, nothing can compare with the collection; and in engraving and enamelling, they are not excelled by any continental productions.

In the group we have engraved, from Mr. Harris's Islington Glass works, Birmingham, the tables, piece in Alabaster Glass, six feet high: the vases on each side of it are ruby and white glass; that to the left is clear, the two vases in the left foreground are enamelled, the flattened shape, with handles, being also silvered on opal and blue glass; the three other front pieces are ruby and gold

There are, likewise, several fine specimens of glass, cut, cased, and engraved, by Bacchus, of Birmingham

In metallurgy, the electro-plate demands the first attention; because, when we consider that it is scarcely ten years since the art was brought into practical operation, we cannot be prematurely the revolution it has effected in the manufacture of plate, and the great improvement of design in articles of every-day use: indeed, we doubt whether the collections exhibited by Messrs. Elkington, Collis, and Gough could anywhere be equalled. Among the specimens by Collis, we may especially notice some beautifully engraved and chased tea-trays, and a claret-jug, the handle formed of a figure of Bacchus, and the body wreathed with leaves and grapes in luxuriant profusion. At Collis's establishment, too, is on view a service of plate manufactured for the Prince Consort, which has attracted many visitors. We cannot, also, too highly praise the beautiful collection of bronzes exhibited by Messrs. Elkington.

Next to the electro-plate, we have the severe labours of the ancient workers in church decoration rivalled by the more and ingenuous work of Messrs. Hardman, aided by Mr. Pugin, have erected a stall, of which we give an Engraving This stall displays everything else in gorgeousness of detail. The most valuable portion will be found in the case which occupies the centre of the stall, and consists of gold, silver, and enamelled candlesticks, reliquaries, censers, flagons, salvers, crosses, processional crosses, staves, and a bishop's pastoral staff of chaste work, with exquisite enamels. We cannot, also, too highly praise the comparison with anything of the kind we have ever seen. On either side of this case are panels, containing hinges, hooks, rings, door-handles, &c., all as carefully wrought as those of larger dimensions; together with large-sized candlesticks for altar and processional purposes, monumental brasses, processional tiles, brackets by which are suspended coronnas, reading-desks of most elaborate workmanship, &c. In the upper part of the stall are three stained glass windows, intended to fill the mullions at the Church of St. Mohlins, Liverpool: on the sides are memorials of the Catholic clergy who died of fever whilst attending the sick. The centre one is designed for Mr. Pugin's church at Ramsgate: altogether, they are magnificent specimens of stained glass in which too much has not been attempted, and consequently success has been compete. The flint glass in the windows made by Lloyd and Summerfield, but is stained by Messrs. Hardman. The walls of this stall are covered with paper hangings, the designs for which are manufactured by Messrs. Grace and Son, of Wigmore-street, London, who have also in this stall some exquisitely carved cabinet tables and chairs. The whole of the articles are either designed from ancient examples or from designs by A. W. Pugin. Collectively, we have never before seen so complete an exposition of ecclesiastical ornament, and in such thorough good taste, brought to bear.

In front of the Messrs. Hardman's stall is a large Warwick vase, electro-deposited bronze, half the size of the original, exhibited by Messrs. Hancock, whose glass case is seen in the right-hand corner of the Engraving.

In the metal department is the stall of Messrs. Messenger and Son, from which our beautiful group is taken. The Corinthian capital, which forms the centre, is taken from the example of the Jupiter Stator at Rome, and was originally made by Messrs. Messenger for the Duke of Northumberland's mansion in the Strand, where a number of these columns ornament the grand saloon. The antique Tripod with the goats' heads, and the Candelabrum on the right of our group, were originally manufactured for Lord Forester, and are very elegant in proportion and design. The Perpetual Inkstand, in the form of an old favourite, having been brought from Italy by the late Miss Edgworth, and presented by her to Messrs. Messenger. A beautiful group of fighting horses, forming an Inkstand, from a design by Mr. Barry, of the Royal Academy, is also exhibited.

All the articles on this stall are artistic works, and are arranged with much taste. Among them is a chandelier, designed for the summer-house in Buckingham Palace garden, by Mr. Grüner.

Our next Engraving represents some of the magnificent specimens of papier maché exhibited by Messrs. Jennens and Bettridge, of Hanover-street, London. The toilet table and mirror are by the former firm, and are richly adorned with pearl and gold; the ornaments being judiciously arranged to suit the forms of the articles. The handles are of polished steel, which harmonises well with the pearl, and produces a very chaste and brilliant effect. We regret that we could not find room to engrave a robing glass of large dimensions en suite. The three stands in the illustration are of a dark morone ground, beautifully ornamented with Gruel ornaments in white and gold. The vase above is of burnished gold, with cameo figures in medallions, and inlaid with pearl. In addition, we noticed a gorgeous sofa manufactured for the Queen of Spain, and also the loo table for which Messrs. Jennens and Bettridge received the gold medal of the Society of Arts this year

Here are, likewise, some beautiful works in papier maché, by Walton, of Wolverhampton; including a large vase, five feet high; pearls jars, handled vases of Egyptian and other designs, superbly ornamented with pearl.

The effect of the show of lamps is to a great extent lost from the manner in which they are scattered over the room. The contributions, nevertheless, will support the credit of the lamp trade, and form an agreeable as well as a decided feature of the Exposition.

BRITISH ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE

The proceedings of the 19th meeting of this association commenced on Wednesday, in Birmingham. On the previous day the School of Design was opened at ten o'clock for the reception of visitors; and in the course of the day many distinguished noblemen and gentlemen arrived Amongst them were the Marquis of Northampton; Lord Lifford; the Earl of Harrowby; the Right Rev. Bishop of Worcester; the Right Rev. Bishop of Oxford; Sir David Brewster, E. H. Bunbell, Esq; Rev. E. Stanley I sland; J. Lee, LL.D., F.R.S.; Robert M'Adams, Esq., Professor Phillips; W. Gilbart, F.R.S.; W. Jukes, M.A., F.R.S.; Professor Steven; Colonel Sabine; Osborne Reynolds, Esq.; W. Hopkins, M.A., F.G.S.; Joseph Hodgson, F.R.S.; General Consul for France, Sir H. De la Beche; J. Heywood, Esq., M.P.; Sir E. Lyall, F.R.S.; Professor Sedgwick; and Robert Stephenson, Esq., M.P.

On Wednesday the first general committee held its meeting in the library of the Free Grammar School, at one o'clock, for the purpose of electing sectional Committees and the despatch of business. The Lord Lieutenant of Warwickshire, The Marquis of Northampton occupied the chair, supported on his right by the Rev. Dr. Robinson, the president elect, and on his immediate left by John Taylor, Esq., the treasurer of the association.

The name of the Bishop of Manchester was added to the list of vice-presidents.

Mr. Phillips, the secretary, read the report for the last year. It referred chiefly to the observations and magnetical and meteorological apparatus at Toronto and Kew. In connexion with this subject, the council had great pleasure in announcing to the general committee that her Majesty's Government, on the joint application of the Royal Society and British Association, had consented to submit to Mr. Ronald a pecuniary recompense of £250 per annum for the invention of his method of constructing self-registering magnetical and meteorological apparatus. This grant was made in consequence of the recommendation of the British Association. The council regretted that they were still unable to announce the publication either of Professor E. Forbes's researches in the Ægean Sea, or of the Manchley observations, for which purposes grants of public money had been sanctioned by her Majesty's Government at the recommendation of the British Association.

Professor Buncker, of Bonn; Dr. Lilgestrom, of Stockholm, and Professor H. D. Rogers, of Philadelphia, were added to the list of the corresponding members of the association

The statement of accounts read by Mr. Taylor, the treasurer, showed that the receipts of the last year were £2662 2s. 3d., and the balance in hand £1000. The expenses, there is at present a balance in the treasurer's hands of £360 7s. The association has also in hand stock in the Three per Cent. Consols to the amount of £5300

There were, it appeared, numerous applications from various towns in the kingdom for the holding of the meetings of the association in the next, and even in succeeding years. Edinburgh, Bath, and Glasgow, have been invited for 1850; Bristol, for 1850 or 1851; Manchester, for 1852; and Hull, as early as possible.

Colonel Sabine announced his resignation of the office of secretary, and left the appointment of his successor altogether in the hands of the general committee.

The officers of the various sections were next appointed. Professor Sedgwick was elected president for Geology and the chair, in the absence of Mr. Murchison, was occupied by Professor Phillips, who delivered the address.

The first meeting of the Statistical Section, Colonel Sabine-chair, was occupied by a statistics of the Queen's College. The papers read in all the sections were of a very valuable character, both as to quality and quantity. On Tuesday evening there was a promenade and conversazione at the Town-hall, the attendance of which was full. On Friday, after the meetings of the sections there was a dinner at the Hotel. On Saturday (this day), excursions are certainly intended to inspect the geological character of Dudley and the neighbourhood; as also visits to the castles of Warwick and Kenilworth, Leamington, and Stoneleigh Abbey.

The meetings for the ensuing week are thus arranged:—On Monday Professor Wheatstone will discourse on the application of [illegible] science to railways: on Tuesday, another conversazione will take place, and the proceedings of the association will terminate on Wednesday.

LITERATURE.

Stratagems: A Story for Young People. By Mrs. Newton Crossland (late Camilla Toulmin). Hall, Virtue, and Co.

The object of this little story is to impress upon the minds of children, by a well-wrought chain of circumstances, the heinousness of lying, and the beauty and holiness of truth; how forgiveness follows in the wake of true repentance, and heals the wounds of burning conscience. The "Stratagems" are the wicked ways by which the deceit is carried on; and the narrator of the tale has selected for her title-page this homely sentence from Tillotson: "Truth is always consistent with itself, and needs nothing to help it out; it is always near at hand, and sits upon our lips, and is ready to drop out before we are aware: whereas a lie is troublesome, and sets the mind upon the rack, and one trick needs a great many more to make it good." There is no fine-drawn eloquence in this passage; and, probably, falsehood never had a stronger assailant than Tillotson, than whom King William declared there was no honester man, or had he ever a better friend.

Mrs. Crossland's story is nicely written, not done to the capacities of children, but in better style than such readings are usually narrated; the moral is never lost sight of, and is made attractive from first to last. Helen, young girl, reared in the lap of luxury) receives from an aunt, who has just returned from India, a beautiful of presents, among which she finds a new sovereign, which she is tempted to appropriate: this is the first "stratagem." The next is to conceal it from her family. The coin, which had been treasured as a keepsake, is missed, and a servant girl is suspected of the theft, and discharged. Meanwhile, Helen repents, confesses her sin, and pushes the pernicious sovereign into another "stratagem" in the story of an Indian attendant, who, by feigning ignorance of English, gets possession of certain deeds and letters, and well nigh ruins her master; but mistress her story is a string of vice, and she finally is drowned by accident. The incidents, it will be seen, are simple enough; and it is by the interweaving of the accessory circumstances that the writer of the tale has shown her skill, and kept up the interest without sacrificing probability. The work is illustrated with a few pretty engravings

Gut's Learner's Poetic Task-book. Cradock and Co.

This is a well-selected assemblage of pieces, chiefly from modern British poets. Although the old stock poems to be found in most collections of the kind are not forgotten in the present one, there are also several novelties, including some specimens of American poets, of descriptive beauty and power.

Wood-Carving.—We have just seen a specimen of wood-carving, by Mr. W. G. Rogers, of Carlisle-street, of which, from its great beauty and [illegible] at the present day, we are tempted to offer our readers a description. The subject—a box intended to contain cigars upon the evening table—has been executed by order of Norman Wilkinson, Esq., a gentleman who has a passion for the art of wood-carving. The wood of which the box is composed is Italian walnut tree, with the exception of the top and the perforated panels on all sides, which are of box-wood. This arrangement secures an exquisite contrast in point of colour. The corners are supported by bold trusses of scroll-work, among flowing curves of delicate finish, which, except in their high elevation, remind one of the ornamental brackets of the Elizabethan period. The panels, of a great size, in which our City churches may be so justly pound. The lid of the box is surrounded by a moulding of raffle leaves and conventional primroses [illegible] flat space, into which are ingeniously introduced in different ways Mr. Wilkinson's monogram and crest. The entire box, in the polished state, will be one of the most elegant and tasteful objects of luxury produced for some years.

Leap from a Railway Carriage.—John Riley, charged with being concerned in the burglary and murderous assault at Handsworth on the 24th ult., was apprehended on Tuesday. He was handcuffed, and placed under the charge of a policeman, and taken to West Bromwich; but, having contrived to slip the handcuffs, he jumped out of the railway carriage with a man near the New Inn, Handsworth, but did not succeed in making his escape, being too much shaken by the effects of the leap to avail himself of his recovered liberty.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

Operations in the English Market during the past week have been principally in connexion with the settlement of the Account, which was adjusted on Tuesday and Wednesday. The markets were dull throughout the week; and on Friday Money, but on Tuesday a decline to 92¼ was registered, afterwards improving to 92⅝. A launch market succeeded on Wednesday, Consols declining ⅛ per cent; and on Thursday the Account being further adjusted, a further decline to 92¼ occurred. Money has been gradually increasing in value during the week, both in the "house" and without. Three per cent. has been paid for loans on Consols, while the minimum rate of discount for bills and good paper is 2½, a sure evidence of an improving demand. This may, perhaps, continue until after the payment of the dividends in October, which in order to prepare for, the banks [illegible] for Bank Stock, Reduced, New Three per Cents, and the Three and a half per Cents, and South Sea Annuities, are now closed; opening on the 19th of October for all except Bank Stock, which opens on the 17th. At the close of the week the Market was heavy, with a declining tendency. Bank Stock, 9; New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent. Annuities, 94; India Bonds, £1000, 75 pm; Ditto, under £1000, 75 pm.; Consols for Account, 92¾; Exchequer Bills, £1000, 1 pm., 85 pm.; Ditto, Small, 85 pm.; Ditto, £500, June, 85 pm.

Prices in the Foreign Market, as shown little variation, but generally have been pretty well supported. A slight advance in Dutch, Portuguese Four per Cents, and Mexican are the only changes worthy of recording. Little business was done at the Foreign Exchange. Brazilian Bonds, 94; Buenos Ayres Bonds, 6 per Cent., 48; Cuban Bonds, 6 per Cent., 98; Ditto, 3 per Cent., 56; Danish Bonds, 1825, 3 per Cent., 73¾; Grenada Bonds, 1 per Cent., 15¾; Mexican, 3 per Cent. Compos, 28½; Peruvian Bonds, 6 per Cent. Active, 54¾; Portuguese 5 per Cents, Converted, 27¾; Spanish, 5 per Cent., 1840, 17¾; Ditto, Passive, 3¾; Ditto, 3 per Cent., 34¾; Dutch, 2½ per Cent., 54½; Ditto, 4 per Cent., 99.

The depression exists in the Railway Market, dividend paying and new ones being equally affected. The settlement of the Account has been assumed as the cause for the panic, but it is to be feared that the timid gentlemen have taken alarm, and, by sales, are aiding the efforts of the speculators for the "fall." North-Western, Great Western, Midland, and South-Eastern, it will be seen by the annexed list, are all lower:—Aberdeen, 18; Caledonian, 17¾; Chester and Holyhead, 13; Ditto, Preference, 11¾; East Anglian, £20, L. and [illegible] and D., 2¾; Eastern Counties, Ditto, New, Guaranteed 8¾ per Cent., 11¾; East Lincolnshire, 2¾; Great Northern, 7¾; Ditto, Half, A, Deferred, 3¾; Ditto, Half, B, Six per Cents., 4¾; Ditto, Five per Cent., Preference, 8¾; Great Southern and Western (Ireland), 20¾; Great North of England, 11¾; East Kent, 1¾; Ditto, New Shares, 3¼; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 13¾; Ditto, Fifths, 19¾; Ditto, New £17, 4¾; Lancashire and Yorkshire, Fifths, 4¾; Ditto, New, Guaranteed Six per Cent., 12¾; Ditto (West Riding Union), 3¾; Lancaster, Brighton, and South Coast, 7¾; Do. Gen. Preference, 9¾; London and North Western, 3¾; Do. Fifths, 3¾; Do. New Fifths, 3¾; London and South-Western, 3¾; Ditto, New, £40, 20¾; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, New, £40 Pref., 10¾; Midland, 5¾; Ditto, £5 New, 3¾; Ditto, Birmingham and Derby, 3¾; Midland Counties, 3¾; North Staffordshire, 4¾; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 12¾; Scottish Central, 2¾; Sunderland and Birmingham, New, Guaranteed, 10; Shropshire Union, 2¾; South Staffordshire, 4¾; South-Eastern and Dover, 3¾; Ditto, Registered, No. 4, 6¾; Ditto, Scrip, No 4, 6¾; York, Newcastle, and Berwick, 17¾; Ditto, Newcastle Extension, 12; Ditto, G.N.E. Pref., 3¾; York and North Midland, 21¾; Ditto, Pref., 6¼; Anglo-Italian (late Peto), 3¾; Bahia and San Francisco, 2¾; Namur and Liege, 5¾; Orleans and Bordeaux, 3¾; Paris and Rouen, 2¼; Sambre and Meuse, 2¾.

Saturday Morning All the markets were flat yesterday. Consols quoting 92⅝ ⅞ during the day. Shares quoted again at a depression, North-Western and Great Western declining from £1 to £2 per share.

THE MARKETS.

Corn Exchange (Friday). Somewhat liberal supplies of English wheat have arrived for our market this week, exceeding that of last week as by land carriage. To-day the show of samples of both red and white was tolerably good. As the quantities of foreign taken at to-day's market for all descriptions of wheat of home produce was in a very [illegible] state at Monday's quotations. The arrivals of foreign wheat are nominated to 9670 quarters, chiefly from the Baltic. Re-sold qualities were held firmly, at about stationary prices, but all other kinds were neglected. Secondary and inferior barley was often offered on sale, but the trade was tolerably good. All kinds moved off slowly, at barely late rates. The quantity of malt [illegible] small, yet it exceeded the wants of the buyers. In prices we have no change to report. With home-grown oats we were very scantily supplied. The foreign imports have amounted to 18,410 quarters. Fine sound oats sold at full prices. Dusty and inferior qualities were neglected. Beans and Indian corn and flour are as Monday.

[illegible] wheat, 28s to 40s; Ditto, white, 28s to 40s; Norfolk and Lincolnshire red, 28s to 40s; Ditto, white, 28s to 40s; Rye, 22s to 23s; grinding barley, 20s to 22s; Ditto, 20s to 24s; Kingston and Ware, 28s to 30s; Chevalier, 31s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 15s to 18s; potato ditto, 17s to 20s; Youghal and Cork [illegible] to 18s; white, ditto, 18s to 19s; fine feed ditto, 16s to 18s; ditto, old, —s to —s; Scotch and Irish, —s to —s per quarter. Flour, American, 21s to 24s per barrel. Baltic, 20s to 22s per sack.

The Seed Market.—Canary seed is in improved request, at an advance of 5s per quarter. In all other descriptions no business is doing. Cakes are [illegible]

Liverpool, Saturday.—Wheat, 5s to 6d per 70lbs. Flour, American, 21s to 24s per barrel. Baltic, 20s to 22s per sack. Indian corn, 23s to 25s per quarter. Beans, 30s to 32s per quarter. Peas, 30s to 32s per quarter. Barley, 18s to 20s per quarter. Oats, 15s to 17s per quarter. Rye, 22s to 24s per quarter.

Smithfield.—Although a supply of beasts on offer this morning was tolerably good as to some sort, but very ill-fated in quality. The attendance of buyers being rather limited, the beef trade was steady, at prices fully equal to those obtained on Monday, the primest Scots being without difficulty got up at 3s per 8lbs. The show was a good one, the number of sheep [illegible] of which were in good request, at full rates of currency. The primest Scots and Cross-breds sold at 3s per 8lbs. Lambs were in full demand, and realised, at last week's prices viz. from 4s to 5s per 8lbs. There was a slight improvement in the veal trade, the primest calves realising 4s per 8lbs. Pigs were in slow request, at late rates. Mild cows were quoted at from £14 to £18 10s each, in a rather small call.

Head of Beasts at Market.—Beasts, 2,200; sheep, 10,000; calves, 300; pigs, 270.

Price per stone of 8lbs. (sinking the offal).—Coarse and inferior beasts, 2s 6d to 2s 8d; second quality ditto, 2s 8d to 3s 0d; prime large oxen, 3s 0d to 3s 2d; prime Scots, &c., 3s 2d to 3s 4d.

Coarse and inferior sheep, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; second quality ditto, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; prime large Downs, &c., 4s 0d to 4s 2d.

Large coarse calves, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; second quality ditto, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; prime small and prime veal, 4s 0d to 4s 2d.

Large coarse and inferior pigs, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; second quality ditto, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; prime porkers, 3s 8d to 4s 0d.

Suckling calves, 18s to 24s each. Quarter-old store pigs, 18s to 22s each.

Total supplies:—Beasts, 735; cows, 110; sheep and calves, 11,600; calves, 260; pigs, 300. Foreign supplies from Scotland, 240 beasts, 2,500 sheep.

Newgate and Leadenhall (Friday). These markets were fairly supplied with each kind of meat, which sold steadily, at full prices.

Price per stone of 8lbs.—Inferior beef, 2s 6d to 2s 8d; middling ditto, 2s 10d to 3s 0d; prime large ditto, 3s 2d to 3s 4d; prime small ditto, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; large pork, 3s 6d to 3s 8d; inferior mutton, 2s 8d to 3s 2d; middling ditto, 3s 4d to 3s 8d; prime ditto, 3s 8d to 3s 10d; veal, 3s 6d to 4s 0d; small pork, 4s 0d to 4s 4d. Port. Laurent

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

Tuesday, Sept. 11.

Whitehall, Sept. 10

The Queen has been pleased to direct [illegible] of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, for [illegible] the name, style, and title of Viscount Canning.

War Office Sept. 11.

7th Regiment of Dragoon Guards: Lieut. A. P. Gore to be Captain, vice Petre; Cornet F. G. Smyth to be Lieutenant, vice Gore.

2nd Foot, Ensign G. Gubby, to be Lieutenant, vice Kirby. 15th Ensign Assist Surgeon H. M. Fraser, M.D. to be Assistant-Surgeon, vice Kennedy. 20th Major-General Turner to be Colonel, vice General Sir W. M. Pringle, K.C. Captain Hungerford to be Lieutenant-Colonel, vice Turner. 33rd Lieut. W. Pridymore to be Captain, vice Mellish, who retires. Ensign A. C. Darrell to have the rank of Lieutenant. Ensign F. C. Corbett to be Lieutenant, vice Pridymore. 49th Ensign H. G. White to be Lieutenant, vice Jackson. Ensign J. Pretyman to be Lieutenant, vice Forster. 50th Lieut. J. Jones to be Captain, vice Pelham. Second Lieut. A. C. Da Costa Lieutenant, vice Jones. Sergeant-Major F. Fitzpatrick to be Second Lieutenant, vice Da Costa. 54th Assist-Surgeon J. H. Wilson to be Surgeon, vice Thin. Lieut.-Colonel F. Murray to be Lieutenant-Colonel, vice Cumberlege, Exempt. 55th Assist-Surgeon J. Allison to be Surgeon, vice Wilson. 82nd Lieut. J. Jones to be Captain, vice Pelham. 92nd Lieutenant Jones to be Captain, vice Pelham. Second Lieut. A. C. Da Costa Lieutenant, vice Jones. Sergeant-Major F. Fitzpatrick to be Second Lieutenant, vice Da Costa. 93rd

NEW BOOKS, &c.

INSANITY TESTED by SCIENCE, and shown to be a [illegible] with permanent Or[illegible]
[illegible] BURNETT M.D
[illegible] 12 Post-street.

THE CHRISTIAN SCHOLAR.—Thoughts [illegible] Verse. By the Author of "Solitude," "The Cathedral," &c. Third Edition. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d. morocco, 12s. Also, 32mo, cloth, 3s 6d; morocco, 5s. of Oxford: JOHN HENRY PARKER: and 377, Strand, London

TO IRISH TOURISTS.—A HAND-BOOK [illegible] OF KILLARNEY, with MAPS [illegible] By GEORGE PETRIE, [illegible] By the same Author,
A TOUR in CONNEMARA. Foolscap, 38 cloth. And GUIDE to the COUNTY of WICKLOW. Foolscap, 2s cloth.
[illegible] SMITH and SON, 136, Strand

MRS. TROLLOPE'S NEW NOVEL.
Now ready at all the Libraries, in 3 vols.
THE OLD WORLD AND THE NEW.
By Mrs. TROLLOPE.
Author of "Father Eustace," "The Lottery of Marriage," &c.
HENRY COLBURN, Publisher, 13, Great Marlborough street.

Just published, price 7s 6d,
SOYER'S MODERN HOUSEWIFE, or MENAGERE: a new work on Cookery, containing above 1600 Receipts, and Anti-Cholera Dietetically recommended by the RIGHT HON. SIDNEY HERBERT, SIDNEY SMITH, Esq., Lord PALMERSTON, and all Booksellers

SEA WEEDS.—Instructions to Find, Preserve, [illegible] HAND, price 2d, monthly, [illegible]

WAXEN FLOWERS.—Instructions how to Model them, by a PRACTICAL BOTANIST, in the FAMILY FRIEND, monthly.—London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN

LEAVES of PLANTS.—How to take Impressions of them, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 2d, monthly.
London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN

WASHING without RUBBING the CLOTHES. Mr. Twelvetree's Expeditious Method of Washing Without Hard Labour, in the FAMILY FRIEND, No. 7, price 2d London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN

MRS. WARREN'S SUPPER DESIGNS in FANCY WORK, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 2d, monthly
London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN.

THE FIRST NINE NUMBERS of the FAMILY FRIEND, containing TWO HUNDRED and FORTY SIX PAGES, Beautifully Printed and Wrappered, price 2s. 6d. each; or 1s 6d. the whole.
London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN; and all Booksellers.

FARMING PROSPECTS under FREE-TRADE.
Farmer in Norfolk. The Third Edition, with Additions. Price One Shilling. With a Plan of Farm Build[illegible]
[illegible] and R. HOGARTH, Piccadilly, and FOX, Paternoster-row, the Sale-Room of the Anti-Corn-Law League; and all [illegible]

THE CHEMIST. New Series. Edited by CHARLES and JOHN WATT. This Work, so long the only Periodical devoted to Chemistry, Chemical Manufactures, Agriculture, Chemistry, and Pharmacy, will be resumed on the 1st of OCTOBER next. It will be Part of the most perfect record of all that occurs worthy of notice in these departments. Advertisements and Cards for insertion must be delivered at the Publisher's as before th[illegible]
Published at the Office, 12, Surrey-street.

In one thick vol., Tenth Edition, enlarged, price 6s.,
MODERN DOMESTIC MEDICINE: A Popular Treatise, exhibiting the Symptoms, Causes, and most efficacious Treatment of Diseases, with a Division of appropriate Regimen, Management of Children, Doses of Medicines, &c., &c. By a comprehensive Medical Graduate for the Country, Town, and Invalids in the absence of their Medical Attendant. By [illegible] GRAHAM, M.D., &c.
"It is evidently the result of great professional talent, experience, and judgment, the Author every where appears conscientious and candid. . . . Numerous and highly respectable names testify to the utility of the Work, and its suffering over-censure. To recommend a work like the present is [illegible] Literary Journal, Feb., 1848
[illegible] deserving of permanent popularity London
W[illegible]
S[illegible] Paternoster-row; HATCHARDS, 187, Piccadilly; and [illegible] Chrapside—Sold by [illegible] Booksellers in the Week.

NEW EDITION
Now ready, Price One Shilling; or Post-free, 1s. 6d.,
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON SPELLING-BOOK.
This work is rendered peculiarly attractive by the EASY ARRANGEMENT of the SPELLING, which embodies all difficulties experienced at School, and by the PLEASING MANNER in which the LESSONS, which embody the Names of Subjects of the new Exhibition, are [illegible] HUNDRED and SEVENTY BEAUTIFUL WOOD-CUTS of objects and scenes described, forming by far the most alluring introduction to learning ever published. [illegible] Pages.)
A Few Copies are colored, price 1s extra.
Published at the Office of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand London: and all Booksellers. Allowance to the Trade and to Schools. Sapp. ed for Cash Only. Remittances to be made to the Office. On app[illegible]tion, terms may be known.

THE WESLEY BANNER: its ENLARGEMENT. This popular publication, which has hitherto contained Sixteen Pages, will be increased with the next Number (October 1) to FORTY EIGHT PAGES, while the price will be retained as at One Penny, viz.—TWELVE-PENCE. The New S[illegible] DON will contain [illegible] Editor, assisted by the Rev. JAMES EVERETT and W[illegible] [illegible], as well as by the contributors [illegible] It is the intention of the Proprietors, [illegible] of the Editor by additional [illegible] to devote their whole talents [illegible] to render the Wesley Banner [illegible] and they may for the [illegible] [illegible] plan yet begun to do so [illegible]
[illegible] their publication will be [illegible] [illegible] variety of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

INTRA AND EXTRA-MURAL INTERMENTS.

THE NORWOOD CEMETERY.

(Continued from page 190.)

company of shareholders, in the 6th and 7th of William IV.; the capital consisting of 3000 shares, of £25 each.

ST. MARTIN'S BURIAL-GROUND, DRURY-LANE.

This ground belongs to the parish of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields. Mr. Walker, in "Gatherings from Graveyards," assures us that many thousands of bodies have been deposited here. The substratum was some years since so saturated with dead, that the place was shut up for a period. The ground was subsequently raised to its present height—even with the first floor windows surrounding the place, and in this superstratum vast numbers of bodies have since been deposited. It was once a common practice here to dig a pit, place in it bodies at different periods, and cover the top only with boards! The ground is a dangerous nuisance to the neighbourhood.

ST. ANN'S, BLACKFRIARS.

This church-yard has attracted much public attention on account of the conflicting statements which have been made respecting the ever-crowded state of the ground, and the horrible disclosures connected therewith. The details, as given by Inspector Scott, were quoted in our Journal of last week. On Thursday evening, the 6th, the churchwardens and overseers of the parish assembled in the school-room of the church-entry, adjoining the churchyard, to investigate the circumstances, when much corroborative evidence was given; but the settlement of the question postponed. The inquiry was resumed on Friday evening, and during the time of meeting an order was received from the General Board of Health, directing the burial-ground to be closed; upon which the Rev. Mr. Harding, the Rector, congratulated the parish officials on the receipt of the order to close the ground, as it was what they had long and anxiously wished for.

LAMBETH BURIAL-GROUND.

This ground belongs to the parish, and is situated in Paradise-street, a short distance from the church; it is divided into the upper, middle, and lower grounds. It is very much crowded, and the tombstones are deeply sunk into the earth. At the time Mr. Walker wrote (1839), the state of the ground had rendered necessary to discontinue interment here; bones were scattered about, and a part of the ground had been raised. The neighbourhood is thickly populated; the soil is very moist, and the water flows in at the depth of four feet. The place is completely surrounded by houses; and the number of interments here is so great, and the ground so small in comparison, that the inhabitants near the spot say in simplicity, "We wonder where they put them."

ST. MARTIN'S BURIAL-GROUND, DRURY-LANE.

It is curious to notice that in our practice, as regards the health of the community, of burying the dead in crowded neighbourhoods, we are far behind the old Londoners. A correspondent of the Times states that—"In the time of Charles II., upon rebuilding the city of London after the Great Fire, it was considered injurious to the public health that churchyards within the jurisdiction of the city should be converted into burying-grounds, even beyond the municipal walls. Amongst the original decrees of a Court of Judicature, erected shortly after that event for the determination of disputes arising from the destruction of property, preserved in the British Museum, there is one by which it appears that the inhabitants of the parish of St. Buttolph without Bishopsgate denied that certain ground, mentioned as the subject in dispute, might be again laid into the churchyard as a burying-ground, and the Court was informed that to have the said ground laid into the churchyard was contrary to several acts of Common Council for the prevention of nuisances; for if the ground lying next the street and formerly built upon should now be employed as a churchyard it would be a public nuisance."—(Vide Add. MS. B. M., 5073, No. 70.)

The burial-ground of St. Botolph, we are happy to add, was closed on Monday, by order of the General Board of Health, on the report of Dr. Gavin Milroy.

BURIAL-GROUND NEAR THE PARISH CHURCH, LAMBETH.

BURIAL-GROUND OF ST. ANN'S, BLACKFRIARS.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1849.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 391.—VOL. XV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1849. [SIXPENCE.

COLONIES AND CONVICTS.

THE loyalists of Canada have quarrelled with this country because our Government, having granted them a free constitution, has wisely determined not to impede or interfere with its legitimate action. The loyalists of the Cape of Good Hope have quarrelled with us because, having had a good deal of trouble and expense, and very slight advantage from our connexion with them, the Home Government has made an effort to turn the colony to some little account as a place of reformation for convicts. It is evident from the temper both of the Canadians and the people of the Cape, that we shall have some difficulty in reconciling our differences with them. As yet, the Cape colonists, as befits the sober and steady character of their Dutch ancestry, have been the quieter of the two, as far as acts are concerned, though hardly much quieter than the Montreal agitators in the artillery of the tongue. The Canadians have burned down the Parliament House and other buildings. The people of the Cape have resorted to no other violence, if we accept the account of the Zuid African, than "a general shoving, thumping, and kicking of the three new officials," who have taken the places of those who resigned rather than lend any aid to the transformation of the colony into a penal settlement. One of these gentlemen, a Mr. Lawrence Cloete, we learn from the same authority, was rather "roughly handled." Altogether, as far as can be ascertained, the people of the Cape, although Sir Harry Smith represents them to be in a state of "indescribable" and "unprecedented" excitement, have kept more strictly within the bounds of the law than the discontented Canadians. It is not impossible, for this reason, that means may yet be found of bringing the colony again to a good understanding with this country, a result in which the colony will be a far greater gainer than we can be, unless, which we do not believe, it will pay us back the expenses of the Kaffir war, and defend itself for the future at its own expense against its too troublesome neighbours.

In the meantime, the Cape dispute gives rise to two very important questions, which affect the people of this country in a very serious degree:—Of what use are colonies to us? And what are we to do with our convicts?

This country has heard a good deal of, and paid a good deal for, the Cape of Good Hope within the last two or three years, and has been drawn into a very unsatisfactory and expensive war with the aborigines on its account. The colonists, it is true, assert their innocence of the Kaffir war. They wash themselves of all participation in its origin, progress, and cost—even while they enjoy the advantage of knowing that the savages who stole their cattle, fired their farm-steadings, and murdered their wives and children, have been so effectually coerced and beaten as to be incapable, for a long period to come, of giving them any further annoyance. It may be supposed, however, that the Cape is of some use to us in other respects. Yet it is difficult to discover in what way. It is not by any means a favourite with the British people. It offers no attractions to British emigrants. In relieving us of our surplus population, and in creating new and wealthy customers for our manufactures, the United States of America, where we do not own an inch of land, are of far more value to us than the 110,000 square miles that formed the ancient limits of the Cape, or the still larger surface to which the recent wars have extended it. To possess Australia is a matter of pride, as well as profit and convenience; but we have not even pride in our possession of the Cape. Australia is prosperous and happy; costs us little or nothing; and entices to its fertile shores a steady immigration. The Cape is not prosperous; costs us a great deal of blood and treasure, as well as trouble and vexation; and cannot tempt any noticeable influx of our population to seek their fortunes within its precincts. The people of this country, when they read of the enormous hubbub created by the threatened importation of a few convicts, who have already undergone a penitentiary probation elsewhere, will probably be inclined to think that, after all, the Cape is no such great bargain.

But important as the Colonial question undoubtedly is, both with reference to Canada and to the Cape, and to all Colonies that cost money, without attracting emigrants to become our friends and customers, the question of our treatment of criminals, which has given rise to this last-mentioned dispute, seems to us to be much more so. If the Cape of Good Hope, or any other colony, objects to the systematic introduction of our convicts, and is strong enough to resist the infliction, even to the establishment of its entire independence of our authority and control, there are few who will assert that in such a cause it would not have some reason and justice on its side. If, either by our fault or our misfortune, by our ignorance or our mismanagement, by our neglect or our fatality, we have a population in which there is a large percentage of criminals, we have no right to evade our duty towards those criminals and towards society, by the summary process of landing them in the Torrid Zone, or at the Antipodes, to the possible contamination or ruin of the honest emigrants who have preceded them.

The proper treatment of criminals is, no doubt, an excessively difficult problem to solve. The ancient and comparatively easy method of dealing with it has been to "shovel" them out of the old and over-peopled country, into a new and thinly-peopled territory, there to take their chance of amendment and usefulness. But the objections to this plan that can be raised by the people of the old country are in reality far deeper than any that can be raised, even with the greatest justice, by the colonies. Whenever these are so destitute of hands that necessary labour cannot be performed, they may not only tolerate, but be thankful for an importation of criminals; but whenever there is no such scarcity, they may complain with reason that we send the scum of mankind amongst them to deteriorate the morals of their society. But the poor and honest thousands who would gladly exchange the keen competition and semi-starvation of Great Britain, for the elbow-room and the sturdy independence that hard labour can always win in a fertile country where land is cheap, have a right to complain that convicted crime should have a better chance than they of trying its fortune in a new world. Society itself has a right to complain, on behalf of honest poverty, of a system which induces the poor and the despairing to qualify themselves by crime for the boon of expatriation. In justice to our Colonies—in justice to our deserving poor—in justice to the cause of truth and virtue—and in justice to ourselves, the punishment and reformation of our criminals ought to be tried at home. It may be difficult to punish and reform at the same time, but it ought not to be considered impossible; and as the difficulty is of our own making—the fruit of social circumstances, for which we, and not our colonies, are responsible—we have no right to delegate the charge.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE FRENCH REPUBLIC DISTRIBUTING, AT THE TUILERIES, THE PRIZES TO THE ARTISTS OF THE LATE EXPOSITION.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

To diminish crime is a more agreeable and a more sacred duty, than to punish it; but, hitherto, our efforts have been almost exclusively employed in the more vulgar and lazy task of the two. We have national establishments—prisons, penitentiaries, and hulks; we have armies of policemen, and a multitudinous array of people, from judges down to gaolers, solely employed on behalf of the nation in punishing crime; but we have, as yet, no national establishment for preventing it. While it has been proved, till the proof has become a truism, that nine-tenths of our criminals are persons who have received neither secular nor religious instruction, we have taken no efficient means to place the next generation in better circumstances. We have neglected the children of the destitute, and kept up judges, policemen, and gaolers for repression, when schoolmasters and schoolmistresses, and religious as well as secular instructors, were equally necessary for prevention. This is, in reality, the great task before us; and the better and more completely we perform it, the less troublesome and difficult will become the question of the proper treatment of our convicts. Let us diminish the supplies of crime, and strive to render the number of grown-up criminals so inconsiderable as to be easily manageable at home. This is a plan that, nationally, we have never tried. Local charity and individual benevolence have done something in the manner indicated, but nothing to be compared with our necessities. Until we take it up on this broad basis, our convict system will always be embarrassing—whether we attempt to share the responsibility with our colonies, or whether, in stricter justice, we endeavour to bear it at home. But, when a new generation shall cease to be encumbered with so large a number of utterly ignorant and utterly destitute youth as at present spring up yearly into maturity, there will be no longer any large difficulties in the treatment, the maintenance, and the reformation of old offenders. In that case, we shall not have to speculate upon revolt in a colony, or upon disaster at home, as the consequence of any system with respect to them which it shall be deemed advisable to establish. By our present neglect, we exist between both dangers.

DISTRIBUTION OF PRIZES

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE FRENCH REPUBLIC.

ON Thursday, the 13th instant, the President of the French Republic presided at the distribution of prizes (crosses of the Legion of Honour, medals, &c) to the artists whose works were exhibited at the Exposition this year.

The ceremony took place in the long gallery of the Orangery, in the Palace of the Tuileries. In the centre, placed upon two steps, was a table covered with velvet, richly fringed with gold, at which stood the President, who handed the prizes to the several artists. Around the Prince were seated the Ministers and Aides-de-Camp all in plain clothes.

In the Sketch (on the preceding page), the distribution is proceeding; whilst, on the left, M. Charles Blanc (the brother of M Louis Blanc), au Directeur de Beaux Arts, is reading aloud the names of the successful artists. Above the table and platform is a trophied group of tricoloured flags, surmounted by the Gallic cock.

In the gallery are placed, very effectively, some fine works of sculpture, among which is the prize (Penelope falling asleep), by Charles Cavelier; and Spring, by M. J. Pradier.

The ceremony was witnessed by a large company of elegantly-dressed ladies and gentlemen, and excited very great interest.

POLICE.

THE BERMONDSEY MURDER.

On Saturday last some further evidence in this case was taken at the SOUTHWARK POLICE COURT. Mrs. Manning looked healthy, and was attired as on the former occasion; but Manning, who was extremely pale, dejected, and evidently unwell, was dressed in black.

Mr. Edwin, the chief clerk, read over the depositions of the witnesses already examined, except those of Bassett and Hammond. As the depositions of Bassett (now deceased) were not signed, some difficulty may arise as to their reception as evidence against the prisoners. His statements formed a most important link in the chain of evidence which proved the disposal of the railway shares by Manning, and traced the changing of the bank-notes, and ultimately their subsequent possession to the female prisoner. Hammond, the fellow-clerk of Bassett, who had recovered from his severe attack of diarrhœa, was in attendance. Some trifling corrections were made in parts of the evidence, as taken down by Mr. Edwin, the chief clerk.

The reading of the depositions was not over until three o'clock, when the witnesses were called on to sign them, and were bound over to appear at the October sessions, to be held at the Central Criminal Court, commencing October 22.

The prisoners were then called on to stand up; but, on the application of Mr. Bittne, the male prisoner was also allowed to remain sitting, on the ground of being extremely ill; and he looked so.

Mr. Slow, who had possession of the teeth of the deceased, here produced them; upon which William Comley was examined: He said, I am a dentist. I have examined a set of artificial teeth in the possession of Mr. Slow. I made them for the deceased, Mr. Patrick O'Connor, in June, 1847.

The other evidence merely referred to the purchase of the lime by Manning, and other circumstances of a minor character, but necessary to complete the chain of testimony. It would appear from it that Mrs. Manning came away from the house in Minver-place on the Monday, without Manning's knowledge, as he came there after she had left, and appeared annoyed at her departure. The prisoners were again remanded.

On Wednesday, Manning and his wife were again brought up at Southwark Police Court shortly before four o'clock, and the same morbid curiosity to see the prisoners was again manifested by a throng of both sexes. The Secretary to the Austrian Embassy was present, with the Prince de Schonnburg. There were also several clergyman and magistrates on the bench.

On the prisoners being ordered to stand up, Mr. Hayward said that the magistrate must be aware that Mr. Buckley's evidence had been taken on a former occasion, but prior to the apprehension of the male prisoner. He had, therefore, sent for him to give that evidence in the presence of both.

Mr. Mosley was then called, and stated that he was superintendent of the Edinburgh police. He took the female prisoner into custody at a lodging-house, 25, Leith-walk, Edinburgh, on the 21st of August. Mr. Mosley here repeated the evidence already given by him.

The death of Mr Bassett, the share-broker's clerk, made it necessary to again examine Mr. Hammond, his fellow-clerk. He stated that he saw the £100 note paid to Manning by Mr. Bassett. It was a hundred pound note and ten sovereigns. Manning represented himself as Patrick O'Connor, and signed that name to the transfer. Mr. Mosley was recalled, and proved taking six £5 Bank of England notes from Mrs. Manning. Those notes had been changed at the Bank of England by the male prisoner.

Mr. Griffith, one of the clerks at the Bank of England, produced a £100 note. He changed it for a note, and handed him 50 sovereigns and a ticket for £50. The £100 note was here identified by Mr. Hammond, and the name "Frederick Manning, 7, New Weston-street," was written on the face of it.

Some conversation here took place respecting the absence of one of the witnesses, and it was agreed that the prisoners should be remanded for a week.

Mr. Secker said that he should remand them until Thursday next, at two o'clock. That would be the longest time allowed by Act of Parliament.

The prisoners were conveyed back to Horsemonger lane Gaol.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.—Tuesday night's Gazette contained several orders in council extending the provisions of the Public Health Act to the following places:—Stratford-on-Avon, Norwich, Fareham, Aylesbury, and Rugby; also orders from the Board of Health directing the authorities of the following parishes to take certain steps for promoting sanitary reform, viz. Hull; Holborn; St. James's, Westminster; St. Pancras; St. Matthew, Bethnal-green; Scalcoats Union, Rotherhithe; and St. Mary, Newington. An order directed to the manager of the new Bunhill-fields Burial-ground, directs that interments are to be discontinued for the present in that overcrowded graveyard.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

Matters continue as dull and prosaic amongst our lively neighbours as with ourselves; but the want of startling novelty in the news of the day is the satisfactory accompaniment of a revival of trade, and its consequent diffusion of comfort among the working classes.

M. de Falloux, the Minister of Public Instruction and Religious Worship, is seriously ill, and, in consequence, his department has been confided, ad interim, from Saturday, the 15th of the present month, to M Lanjuinais, Minister of Agriculture and Commerce. The illness under which M. de Falloux is suffering is intermittent fever. He has been ordered a change of air, and he purposes going to Versailles as soon as he shall have gained sufficient strength for the journey. His friends, it is said, are particularly anxious that he should withdraw at once from the Cabinet, but he has expressed his determination not to resign his office until he shall have defended his conduct before the Legislative Assembly.

General Randon, who had been named to the chief command in Rome, did not set off immediately to the "Eternal City," as had been stated last week. It is said that he himself communicated to the Government that he was not the best fitted for the delicate mission, as he is a Protestant. General Rostolan has, in consequence, been requested to continue at the head of the French troops in Rome.

Austria, it is stated, has given her full sanction to the four points in Louis Napoleon's letter to Colonel Ney, respecting the Pope's sovereignty in Rome. There is great hope entertained in France, therefore, that his Holiness will come to amicable terms through the influence of the Imperial power.

The President of the Republic, on the proposition of the Minister of the Interior, and by the advice of the Commission des Mises en Liberté, has ordered the release of 225 of the insurgents of June, 1848, confined in the pontoons of Brest, Cherbourg, and L'Orient. In consequence of this release there are now no more insurgents in the naval establishment at L'Orient.

More than 150 members of the Assembly have arrived in Paris, preparatory to the opening of the Legislative Assembly on the 1st of October. The Montagnards are the most numerous.

The Moniteur publishes a decree of the President of the Republic, authorising, during the present session, the metropolitan councils and the provincial synods which the Archbishop and Bishops may think proper to hold in their respective dioceses on matters connected with the exercise of religious worship and the discipline of the clergy. The synod of Paris commenced on Monday last.

By order of the Minister of Public Instruction, the names of the physicians and medical students in France, who have fallen victims to their zeal in treating cholera patients, are to be inserted in a marble tablet in the Dupuytren Museum.

A storm which prevailed in Paris at the close of last week tore up from the roots several trees in the Tuileries and the Champs Elysées, and laid prostrate the Tree of Liberty planted in the Bastille.

ITALIAN STATES.

ROME.—The accounts from Rome this week are uncertain; some representing the speedy settlement of all difficulties as very probable, others stating that it is far off as ever.

The intimatum of France is said to be now confined to three points—viz. a Council of State, with a deliberative voice for internal affairs; a partial amnesty; the withdrawal of all the paper money; payment of the debts contracted by, and recognition of all the acts of the Provisional Government. The Pope and Cardinal Antonelli, however, hold back, saying that the French have not kept to their promise of guaranteeing the independence of his Holiness. An answer to the notification of Europe on the adjustment of the difficulties is spoken of, but nothing of a definite character is known. Meanwhile, the Pope is at Naples, where his presence delights the sight-loving people of that gay capital.

TUSCANY.—In Florence, according to accounts dated the 11th, it was generally understood that a treaty of alliance, offensive and defensive, was about to be concluded between Austria and Tuscany. The subject created a painful impression, as it is considered to be an abjuration of independence and nationality on the part of the Tuscan Government. Moreover, under pretence that the present organisation and composition of the Tuscan troops is not such as could be wished, the army is to be entirely disbanded, with the exception of one regiment, and 6000 Austrians are to be taken into the pay of Tuscany, which, without being nationalised, will constitute the only national force of the country.

PIEDMONT.—The arrest of General Garibaldi caused a tempest in the sitting of the Chamber of Deputies of Turin on the 10th, a petition having been addressed to the Chamber by the Council of Deputies of Calasari, praying that the General might be set at liberty. The prayer of the petition was strongly supported by the Liberals. The Minister Pinelli defended the acts of the Government on the ground that Art. 35 of the Civil Code deprives subjects who have taken service in foreign armies of their civil rights. The Chamber eventually adopted the following order of the day: "The chamber passes to the order of the day, declaring that the arrest of General Garibaldi, and the threat of his expulsion from the Piedmontese territory, are contrary to the rights recognised by the statute, and to the sentiments of Italian nationality and glory. Subsequently, however, Garibaldi was placed on board the frigate St. Michael, to be conveyed to Nice, his native place, whence he returned to Genoa on the 14th, and went on board the St. Michael.

The Duke of Parma has expelled the Jesuits and Benedictine Monks from his dominions.

AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY.

Intelligence from Hungary, and Cologne, confirms an opinion which has prevailed for some time past, that the Emperor of Austria is disposed to treat severely with the defeated insurgents. Even the fate of Görgey was very doubtful for a time, his Imperial Majesty having felt at first strongly inclined to send him before a court-martial. A remonstrance on the part of the Czar has proved to have dissuaded the Government from carrying out this design. Meanwhile, it is certain that the fugitive leaders of the Hungarian revolution have no mercy to expect; and already a long list of names is drawn up, by the Austrian and Russian authorities in all parts of the empire. This list contains 69 personal denunciations, including the names of Bem, Kossuth, Madame Kossuth (born Meszenga), and Perczel. Those, together with Dembinski, Messaros, and others who have taken refuge in Turkey, have been demanded to be given up, in conformity with existing cartel treaties.

In Pesth, and, indeed, throughout all the chief cities of Hungary, there is nothing but gloom and desolation. Some of the tribes hostile to the Magyars—for instance, the Romanen have begun to retaliate on them their former ascendancy, and many of the unfortunate Magyars have been murdered by those ungenerous barbarians.

From Pesth, under date of the 10th instant, we learn that the Generals Ernest Kiss and Leakey had been condemned to be shot, and that they had even been executed.

From Comorn there is nothing certain. Klapka, who wished to capitulate, is said to have been deprived of his command and placed under strict surveillance, while the chief command had been transferred to Paul Estorazy.

The fortress of Peterwarden has surrendered. The officers sought to induce the garrison to decide against capitulation. They formed into two parties, and on the 6th proceeded from posts to blows, and several were killed and wounded. The party for capitulation remained victorious, and accordingly, at seven o'clock in the morning, the formal capitulation took place. Colonel Puffer hastened the fortress from the Szaska side, Colonel Manasi from Kamenitz, and General Hartlief from Carlowitz. The entry was welcomed by the warm acclamations of the inhabitants. The garrison was disarmed and sent to Essegg, whither the commander Kiss was also sent, under a strong escort.

On the 13th inst. Bem's army made his public entry into Vienna. A great crowd of people waited his arrival at the station of the Southern Railway, and his entrance was quite a triumph. The Ban Jellachich went to the station to salute the aged hero, who rode into the city in a state carriage. All the windows along the line were ornamented with carpets and flowers; and the people pressed round his carriage, eager to catch a sight of him.

GERMAN STATES.

Bavaria has, within the last few days, announced her adhesion to the compact which makes the Hapsburg dynasty the representative of Austria, and the rest of Germany by Austria. The definitive reply of the other Governments is expected. It is believed that they will also agree to the compact.

HOLLAND.

The King of Holland opened the States-General on the 16th instant. His Majesty congratulated the members on the favourable situation of their internal and external affairs, the absence of all convulsions which had disturbed other countries, and the amicable relations which continued to exist with foreign nations. His Majesty observed with pleasure that the harvest had proved abundant, and that commerce had resumed its activity. The sale of the colonial productions had given profits, which, joined to the satisfactory returns from taxation, had to improve the finances of the country. His Majesty enumerated certain measures which would demand their attention, and, in conclusion, declared the session opened.

SWITZERLAND.

The Swiss Government has ordered the expulsion of Heinzen, Struve, Brentano, and Mieroslawski, heads of the late insurrection of the Grand Duchy of Baden. They have the choice of passing through France or going to Genoa.

THE IONIAN ISLANDS.

An insurrectionary movement, which broke out late in the island of Cephalonia (conducted principally by the Klephtes, or bandit chiefs)—and which had for its object plunder—has caused an armament to be fitted out, as the last advices (the 5th inst.), been suppressed, in consequence of the troops sent against the malcontents by the Lord High Commissioner (Mr. Ward) not being sufficiently numerous. On the 4th inst. the Governor of the island had been nearly killed, a soldier close to him having been shot dead. Some of the insurgents who had been captured were hanged, and three shot, and four more ordered for execution the following day. A fleet of the English fleet had left Malta for Cephalonia, and there is no doubt tranquility will soon be restored.

The Government of the Ionian Islands had authorised the landing of MM. Manin, Tommaseo, and other political refugees, from Venice, who had arrived on board the French steamer Pluton; but they had been subjected to a twelve days' quarantine, on account of the cholera. Manin and Tommaseo intended to proceed to London; Pepe to Paris. The others were to go either to Constantinople, Alexandria, or Greece.

TURKEY.

We learn from Constantinople of the 31st ult. that fresh disturbances had broken out in Roumia and Servia. Some reforms had been introduced at these places, which had given much dissatisfaction. At Banyaluka, the discontented raised the standard of insurrection. The Governor of Bosnia, at the head of his troops, quickly marched against the disaffected, at the sight of whom the rebels quailed, and laid down their arms; so that the insurrection was soon suppressed, without the least shedding of blood.

On the 28th ult. Mr Layard, the celebrated archæologist, accompanied by Dr. Sandwith, Mr Cooper (a painter), and two Tartar guides, left Constantinople for Trebizond, thence to proceed to Nineveh, and Erzeroum, Mush, Zitlis, and Mosul. On Mr. Layard's arrival at Nineveh, he will commence his scientific explorations; and the results of which, it is confidently expected, will far exceed the anticipations founded on this expedition.

UNITED STATES

By the arrival of the Canada Royal Mail steam-ship, on Monday, we have intelligence from New York to the 8th inst., by which the anxiety created by the non-arrival of the Hibernia (the steamer never duly due) has been removed. The cause of her detention was the following accident: On the 31st ult. the Hibernia was proceeding at slow speed, the weather being foggy. She had a sea pilot on board, in whose charge the ship was then placed, and she continued to proceed at the same reduced speed, until 6.30 A.M., when she struck on Chebucto-head-rocks, near Halifax, and sprung a leak forward. The engines were immediately reversed, and she was got off safely, and proceeded up the harbour to her station. After undergoing repairs she resumed her voyage, with her passengers and mails. On the 4th instant she experienced unfavourable weather, which caused her to labour heavily, and the leak increased to such an extent, that on an attempt to place a thrumbed foresail over the leak having failed, a consultation was held between the Admiralty agent, the commander, and the chief engineer; and those officers, after maturely considering the imminent risk of continuing her on her course, agreed upon the urgent necessity of bearing up for Halifax, where she arrived at 5.20 A.M., on the 7th. Her mails were taken up the Canada on the 8th, and transferred to the Hibernia that has gone to New York for repairs. It is satisfactory to know that blame is in no way attachable to the captain or any of his crew. The former (Captain Stone), in his letter to the agents, says: "So far I am able to form an opinion, I think the injury the ship has sustained is entirely confined to her fore-foot; or, in other words, she only touched the rock forward."

The chief feature of domestic news from the Union is the progress (notwithstanding the proclamation of the President of the Republic) of the buccaneering expedition against the Spanish island of Cuba. Since our last advices, a Colonel White, with 400 or 500 followers, had proceeded from New Orleans to Round Island, which lies off the mouth of the Pascagoula River, not far from Mobile, to wait for the time of sailing; but the party had been ordered off by the naval officer commanding in that vicinity. Whilst at New York the sailing of the corps had been delayed nearly a week by unexpected hindrances, and a ship laden with military stores and arms, which had cleared for Curaçoa, had been detained by the authorities. The expedition is to consist of 1500 men, who are to land near to a part of Cuba where there are no troops to oppose them. This will not be difficult, as the whole Spanish force is less than 10,000 men, who cannot be spared for him Havannah and the other cities. Once landed, they will proclaim a Provisional Government, and invite those among the people and the troops who are favourable to their cause will join them; with the increase of their numbers they will move forward, and, lastly, if all goes according to their calculations, the Spanish Government will be abandoned, proclaim it a free and independent state, and take the measures necessary to establish a Republican Constitution and Government.

General Taylor was at Niagara Falls.

The cholera was decreasing.

MEXICO.

From Mexico we learn that the Mexican Government on the 11th ult. was in difficulty with Mr. C. M'Intosh in regard to a contract for the railroad across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec. The Government intend to back out from the agreement, which Mr M'Intosh insists on its fulfilment.

The cholera was prevailing in the state of Durango to a frightful extent.

CANADA.

The intelligence by this week's arrival is not of much importance. Canada was again tranquil; the riots at Montreal had been put down by a number of the citizens coming forward to be sworn in as special constables. Lord Elgin, on the 8th, entered Montreal, where he had not been since the April riots. The agitation of the separation of the Canadas from the mother country had been abated by a paper started for that purpose at Kingston.

The verdict of the jury on the body of Mason, killed in the attack on La Fontaine's house, reprehended the neglect of precautions by the authorities.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

In our Postscript of last week we noticed, at some length, the agitation caused in the colony by the measure of the Colonial-office creating it, in some degree, a penal settlement; and, in conformity therewith, despatching convicts from Bermuda to the Cape. The intelligence thus given was to the 10th of July. Later advices have been since received viz. to the 2d of August, at which date the arrival of the Neptune, convict-ship, from Bermuda, was hourly expected; and, in consequence, the agitation in the colony was at its height—the determination of the people to reject the convict element from their society having become decisive. Their irritation was partially allayed by the conciliatory and soothing effects of the Governor's proclamation on the 17th of July. In the meantime, several resolutions took place amongst the members of the Legislative Council, and other officials of the colony. These occurred in the Legislative Council—two by resignation, and one by death—had been filled up; but upon the newly-appointed councillors proceeding to take their oaths, the people assembled in front of the Council-house, and commenced hissing, groaning, and pelting them with mud and missiles. In the evening their effigies were burnt, and the windows of their houses destroyed—proceedings previously unheard of in the history of the colony. Threatening letters were also made use of to intimidate the official functionaries who resigned their appointments. This caused still more excitement. About the 14th and 15th of July business and pleasure at Cape Town were alike suspended. Assemblages of the people were organised; meetings were held; "anti-convict associations" were formed, and commenced active agitation; in a word, the people appeared prepared for resistance. It was at this juncture that the Governor addressed the memorial referred to. In it the Governor states, at much length, his reasons for not sending back the convicts (as he had been requested) to England; and adds that, as the landing of the convicts with "tickets-of-leave" would, in the exasperated state of feeling in the colony, in all probability compromise their safety, he has resolved

First, To withhold tickets-of-leave from the convicts expected by the Neptune.

Secondly, That, unless I should, by the Neptune or otherwise, receive instructions or authority from the Secretary of State to the contrary, on occasion to some other settlement, I shall cause arrangements to be made for keeping them on board some ship or ships in Simon's Bay, until they shall have undergone such a degree of penal discipline to that a similar isolation

Thirdly, That, pending the announcement of her Majesty's pleasure, no communication between the convicts and the land will be allowed, save for the purpose of supplying food, and religious and moral teaching, except in cases of sickness, when it may be necessary to remove the sufferer to hospital.

Fourthly,—That this detention, which, however distressing to the convicts, is absolutely indispensable to their personal safety, will be made as possible to be endured, and be arranged so as to preserve or promote habits of industry and order, and dissipation as little as circumstances will permit the favour with which the intention of her Majesty's clemency.

Fifthly, That whilst I am thus prepared to exert to the utmost every power belonging to my office for the purpose of allaying the present excitement, I cannot but express my conviction that no efforts in question was so powerfully exerted, if is, at the same time, to be clearly understood that the sentence of transportation is relieved by the remission of the colony; that I have no right, or a power of right, to send them to England, or any other place; that to issue such a course would render the confinement of the convicts on the high seas wholly wrongful and illegal, and would, in law justify them to take the law into their own hands.

Sixthly, That I am the more withheld from the act of unlawful force, which I have been called upon to resist, by the consideration that the Orders in Council, establishing this colony a penal settlement, an object to which the hearts and hopes of all her people were bent, have not been revoked, and that, therefore, the new element, which is intended rather than promoted, by a proceeding contrary to law, and not needed in order to the attainment of the object in view, would be a permanent injury to the colony; and a powerful, moreover, which, though recommended for my adoption, in a legal and obedient spirit, might be expected to be wanting in reverence for the authority of the Crown and Parliament of Great Britain.

ITALIAN REFUGEES AT MALTA AND THE GOVERNMENT.—Mr. Hume, M.P., has called the attention of the House of Commons (being of number of Parliament and other gentlemen, which has been formed in aid of the Italian (Roman) refugees in this country," has addressed a letter to Lord John Russell, which, we trust, will meet with marked disapprobation this despicable act of its representative in Malta, so as to manifest to the world that the British Government in no way countenances conduct which is as foreign to our national character as it is disgraceful to the British name." Lord John Russell, we believe, is aware that the state of Malta was of opinion that, although the refugees from Rome (not Romans refugees, in great part) might safely be allowed to proceed to England, he could not be responsible for their remaining in Malta if they were therefore detained on board ship for some ten days or a fortnight, with the exception of the sick, and of the women and children, who were allowed to land." And he adds, "You are probably aware that there has been a good deal during the past year a sort of circulating society of revolutionists, who have appeared sometimes in Paris, sometimes in Berlin, sometimes in Baden, and who were especially in great strength at Rastadt, and who, as far as in their power, consulted with the peace and good government of Malta, although it may be consistent with the peace and security of London, to have numerous bands of this revolutionary association at Malta, it would be an unpleasant addition to the strife and dissensions in Malta as to head a riot in Berlin or in Baden. One of these refugees was allowed only taking Malta in his way to Venice, to assist in defending that city against the besieging troops. After a short stay he has been landed in Malta, and has been allowed to remain in consequence of the representations of Mr. Temple, who has been for a long time resident in Malta, and who has known the refugees for many years. They were prevented from disturbing Malta, and that was all. Lord Grey has, therefore, with my full concurrence, expressed his approbation of the course pursued by the Governor of Malta."

Joseph Slater, aged 24, sentenced to 10 years' transportation for larceny and previous conviction, at the Stratford assizes; and Henry Palmer cabinet-maker and French-polisher by trade, sentenced to 10 years' transportation for larceny, escaped from Woolwich dockyard on Tuesday morning, and have not since been heard of.

The celebrated floating island in Derwentwater Lake, Keswick, which is one of the marvels of the district, made its "first appearance this season" on Thursday last, and has excited much curiosity among the visitors.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

SANITARY MEASURES OF THE BOARD OF HEALTH.

On Tuesday the Board of Health issued their "Seventh notification with reference to the measures for prevention and relief of cholera adopted in the metropolis," by which they "lament that it is only within this one week that the system of house to house visitation has been carried into effect in any of the metropolitan unions; and that even at the present time it is in action only in some few of the parishes, and that in no one of them has there as yet been provided an adequate visiting staff; but they lose no time in announcing the following results of this first week's trial, imperfect as that trial has unavoidably been."

The general result, as stated in the notification, "is considered to be that "The concurrent testimony of parochial medical officers, as the result of their recent experience, is to the effect, that the only method of dealing with diarrhœa of cholera, which is attended by a large number of cases, and which affords a large majority of the whole epidemic sickness, is to direct and concentrate medical treatment specially against this stage; that open dispensaries and the circulation of printed notices have afforded essential assistance in bringing this stage under early medical treatment; that hardly any cases past into cholera, after having been brought by these means under immediate treatment; that the cases of developed cholera to which they have been called, almost invariably take place among persons who have not availed themselves of these measures of prevention, and that, as regards the metropolis, such cases constitute by far the largest proportion of the entire epidemic which has occasioned so many deaths in London; that it is therefore absolutely necessary that steps should be taken to bring this large class of cases under prompt treatment, by some other course of procedure; and that the only effectual means hitherto discovered of accomplishing this object is the system of house to house visitation."

* * * * * * * *

"The sum total of the cases discovered and brought under immediate treatment up to Saturday, September 15th, in the several parts of the metropolitan districts, which have come under visitation, is as follows:—Of premonitory diarrhœa, 7465, and of rice-water purging 354; altogether 7819; of this number only 20 have passed into cholera. It must be repeated that none of these cases had received any medical treatment whatever up to the period of visitation, and that few of them, unless thus sought out, would have been brought under treatment until they had passed into the state of collapse."

The Board refer the prejudices and fears on the score of expense with which the local authorities, in many parts of the metropolis, have met their remedial suggestions for preventing the spread of the epidemic, and point out the necessity where it has been the case of obstacles to sanitary improvement, always to bear in mind that it is a false economy to let the natural supporters of families die from want of precautionary measures, leaving their widows and children a burden on the parish, from which, had they survived, the parish would have been relieved. The fatal effects of impure water are also indicated, as a warning against its use.

THE CITY BOARD OF HEALTH.—THE CITY SOLICITOR (MR. PEARSON), at the meeting on Tuesday, suggested, as a means of putting an end to the unwholesome interments, that one or two hundred acres of ground should be purchased in a suitable situation upon one of the metropolitan railroads, say within ten or fifteen miles of the City, where a proper receiving-house could be erected, to which all bodies might be conveyed by the undertakers during the night; and at the hour fixed for the interment, the mourners, poor or rich, at a small expenditure of time or money, might assemble to pay their last tribute of respect to their departed friends. A report was read from Mr. Simon, detailing the mode of procedure adopted by him for carrying out the system of house to house visitation in the city. The report was considered satisfactory.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH AND THE CITY OF LONDON UNION.—

On Wednesday, the Justice-room in the Mansion-house was crowded with gentlemen connected with the City of London Union, nearly all the guardians being present, to hear the Lord Mayor's decision on a summons which had been issued by the Central Board of Health against the City guardians for an alleged violation of the Public Health Act, in refusing to appoint a medical officer of health to be associated with Mr. Ashley Bagnall and Messrs. Finch, and to make other requirements of the Board. The Right Hon. the Lord Mayor presided on the bench, assisted by the Recorder, the City Solicitor, and Aldermen Hooper, Pirie, and Gibbs. Messrs. Grainger and Austin were present on the part of the Board of Health, with Mr. Bodkin as their professional adviser. Mr. Clarkson attended for the board of guardians.—Mr. Bodkin having read the order of the board to the guardians, and the refusal of the latter to comply with it, on the ground that the appointment and duties addressed to them by the order of the General Board of Health, if carried into effect, would be calculated to excite unnecessary fear and alarm throughout the union; and that their adoption would prove injurious, instead of beneficial, to the health of the inhabitants, by aggravating the diseases they are intended to prevent and mitigate."—Mr Clarkson stated the legal objections, which, he contended, justified the refusal of the guardians, viz., that the Board of Health had no power to issue such and detailed orders as they had done to the guardians; next, that they had not issued those orders in the proper manner.—After much discussion, and an ineffectual attempt to adjust matters by a compromise, the Recorder said that the question was one of very great importance, and, therefore, his advice to the Lord Mayor was, to take time to consider his decision.—The Lord Mayor said that he was in the hands of the learned Recorder, and must therefore reserve his decision until he had more carefully considered the points at issue.—Alderman Gibbs said that not a single case of cholera had been reported in the City that day.—The Lord Mayor was most sincerely glad to hear it. He believed that the disease was generally on the decline.—The proceedings were then adjourned.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH AND THE GUARDIANS OF ST. PANCRAS.

—On Tuesday, a numerous meeting of the Board of Directors and Guardians of the Poor of St. Pancras took place at the Vestry-rooms, King's-road, Gardens Terry, for the purpose of receiving an order from the Board of Health, relative to the appointment of four duly qualified medical men for the purpose of regular house-to-house visitation of the localities affected with cholera; and also of hearing Mr. Liddle, who had been deputed by the Board of Health to wait upon the Board of Guardians, to know their determination on the subject.—The order from the Board of Health having been read, Mr. Liddle observed that he was instructed to attend there by the Board of Health to support their views, to show the necessity of adopting the system of house visitation, as proposed. He showed the advantages which had resulted during the progress of the disease in the districts of cases of simple diarrhœa, where the system of house visitation had been adopted.—A conversation ensued, in which the proposition of the Board of Health was ridiculed by Messrs. Scales, Wesley, Douglas, and others, and supported by Mr. Dykes. It was ultimately moved, that the recommendation from the Board of Health be adopted. The chairman inquired for a seconder to the motion, but none appearing, was about declaring that it fell to the ground, when Mr. Billett, who had just entered the room, seconded the motion. Mr. Clarke moved, as an amendment, that the board proceed to the next order of the day. He saw no necessity for a compliance with the recommendations of the Board of Health.—The amendment, being seconded, was carried by a large majority, there being but one hand held up in favour of the resolution.—Mr. Liddle expressed his deep regret that the directors of the poor of that large parish should have come to a resolution so diametrically opposed to all that practical experience had proved good and useful.—After some further discussion, it was resolved that the clerk should acknowledge the receipt of the order of the Board of Health, and explain the reasons why the board did not comply with their recommendations. The board shortly after separated.

DAY OF PRAYER AND HUMILIATION.—Wednesday last having been appointed by the Bishop of Winchester as a day of humiliation and prayer to Almighty God, in consequence of the prevailing epidemic, it was observed as a close holiday by abstinence from business, &c., in the various parishes on the Surrey side of the water. All the shops were closed, and the various churches and chapels of the establishment were filled with numerous congregations. To a person unacquainted with the cause, the contrast in passing from the busie and crowded occupation of the parts of London north of the Thames to the Surrey side of the water, was almost startling.

BANK OF ENGLAND.—Sept. 20th: Half-yearly General Meeting:

Henry James Prescott, Esq., in the chair.—The chairman informed the meeting that a dividend of 3½ per cent, free of income-tax, for the half-year ending 5th inst., was declared, if it met with the sanction of the proprietors. Their profits had exceeded their usual dividend of 3½ per cent for the last half-year, by the sum of £14,573. The amount of Rest, after payment of the dividend, would be £3,087,973, which he considered ought not to be encroached on. He moved that a dividend of 4½ per cent, free of income-tax, be declared. Two amendments were then put to decrease the rate of dividend; but after a very long discussion, they were both lost by a very considerable majority, and the original motion carried. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the business of the day.

SOUTH SEA COMPANY.—Sept. 20: Half-yearly General Meeting:

South Sea House, London: Charles Franks, Esq., in the chair. The business of the meeting was very short. The accounts were read and passed. A committee to inspect the by-laws of this company.

SUPPLY OF WATER TO THE METROPOLIS.—A large meeting of the inhabitants of All Saints, Poplar, which had been convened by the parochial authorities, was held on Tuesday evening at the Town Hall, to consider the condition of the metropolis with respect to the present and prospective supply of water for domestic and general purposes. Mr. Gibbs, one of the churchwardens, was called to the chair; and the meeting having been addressed by Mr. Roberts and Dr. Bell, a petition was agreed to, explaining that the object of the present meeting by the promoters of a plan for improving the present supply, by means of an aqueduct from Henley Reach to Hampstead. After considerable discussion as to the propriety of assembling the meeting to express any particular plan without previous parliamentary inquiry, it was unanimously resolved:—"That the want of a copious supply of water is a great public evil, pressing with peculiar severity on the poorer classes, and necessarily tending to aggravate the prevailing malady by precluding the possibility of an efficient system of cleanliness, that the evils of the present defective supply have, for a long series of years, been matter of public complaint, without any remedial measures having been adopted, and that it is incumbent on the legislature not to allow another session to pass without making provision to meet this public necessity; and that with this view the inhabitants of this parish do petition the legislature and memorialise the members of the county and borough, and invite the other metropolitan parishes to co-operate in the endeavours of this parish to secure a full and impartial investigation of this subject." A subsequent resolution was also carried, directing the parochial authorities to prepare a petition embodying these views, to be submitted to a future public meeting.

INTRAMURAL INTERMENTS.

On Tuesday evening a meeting of the "Metropolitan Society for the Abolition of Burials in Cities and Towns" was held at the society's rooms, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars; Mr. G. A. Walker, President, in the chair.

Mr. Thicke, the secretary, read the answer of the General Board of Health to an application from the society for an interview with the board. The reply stated that the board had resolved to receive deputations when they were desirous of opposing the orders issued by the board for the closing of graveyards, and that they were also compelled by the terms of the Nuisances Amendment Act to confine their proceedings by hearing to each individual case. Should the society have any new information on the subject, the board would gladly accede to their request; but, as in doing so they must also hear many parties hostile, the effect would only be to occasion a delay the effects of which that the board were bent on making for the removal of the acknowledged evils.

The Rev. R. Craig, rector, Pentonville, said that the answer was highly satisfactory. It assured the principles of the society by a small standard, and fully proved that the board were prepared to comply with the wishes of the country respecting intramural burials (Hear, hear.) The board acted wisely in not admitting deputations, and in not allowing the question to be re-opened.

On the motion of Mr. G. Thompson, M.P., the following resolutions were agreed to, viz.:

1. That recognising the value and importance of the co operation of the public press in the cause of the abolition of intramural burials, as a question of sanitary improvement, and consideration of the remarks by the journals of the metropolis and the provinces as matter of sincere congratulation, that they believe that thereby essential aid has been rendered to this object, and would therefore record its expression of their gratitude and thanks in the newspaper press of the country.

2. That the evidence laid before the select parliamentary committee of 1842 on the subject of intramural burials has been strikingly illustrated, and its truth abundantly confirmed, by the astonishing and appalling facts which have been recently brought to light in the constantly recurring cracks of the dangers and fatal consequences arising from the crowding of unlimited numbers of dead bodies into limited spaces of ground fully proved in that inquiry, and that as also the opinion of the House of Commons, as declared by a majority of that assembly in 1843.

3. That, adverting to the circumstances alluded to in the foregoing resolutions, and to the lamentable fact that already many thousands of the inhabitants of the metropolis have been taken by the cholera, and that many thousands more are now suffering under the disease (with slight abatement), this committee deem it their duty, in the prosecution at this awful crisis of the work they have undertaken, to address a respectful memorial to the Secretary of State for the Home Department, with the view of bringing under consideration of the executive ministers of the Crown the propriety of proposing to the Cabinet the propriety of an order in council requiring measures to be adopted throughout the kingdom for the prevention of the practice of intramural burials—a practice which, as has been repeatedly demonstrated, is fraught with the most terrible and irremediable consequences.

Dr. Fowell felt great pleasure in stating that the medical profession fully approved of the society, and highly appreciated Mr. Walker's services. In his district the cholera was at its height, and the atmosphere was tainted in every way, and the great damage which the public health sustained from them. With that impression, they were endeavouring to get closed St. George's burial ground, which was an "open cesspool," close to the dwelling of the aristocracy, who inhaled from it a deadly poison, which rendered the very air putrid. For eighty years it had been a receptacle for the dead, who were so packed together that a shilling could not be passed between them. Such was the state of the pauper burial-grounds. In many instances, the coffins were not eighteen inches from the surface. On one occasion, in order to make room for more, a portion of a body was observed to be in a state of putrefaction, consequently it was thrown on a tree, and thrown on a tree. (Sensation of horror.) The exhalations from the grave-yard rendered the atmosphere nauseous, disgusting, and putrid; and the sensation he experienced in it were unwilling to convey to his lungs. Within forty-one medical men, requesting that it be closed, was presented to the Board of Health. (Hear, hear.)

A sub-committee was appointed to draw up a memorial to the Secretary of State; after which, a vote of thanks having been given to the chairman, the meeting separated.

ST. STEPHEN'S, WALBROOK.—On Wednesday on adjourned meeting of the vestry of the joint parishes of St. Stephen's, Walbrook, and St. Bennet's, Sherehog, was held for the purpose of considering the necessity of discontinuing interments beneath or attached to the churches under that vestry. Mr. Hart, the clerk of the churches, was in the chair, when letters were read from the Bishop of London and the Rev. Dr. Croly, the rector, approving of the contemplated removal of interments. The closing of the ground and church for burials being agreed to, measures were adopted for the purchase-ing of ground in some of the cemeteries in the outskirts of the metropolis, for the proper interment of the dead of the parish.

ST. OLAVE, SILVER-STREET.—At a vestry of the united parishes of

St. Alban, Wood-street, and St. Olave, Silver-street, held on Wednesday evening in the vestry-room of St. Alban's Church, to take into consideration the propriety of closing the churchyard of Saint Olave against future interments, it was moved—"That the churchwardens be requested to take such steps as may be necessary to close the churchyard, and to prevent future interments therein: this resolution not to interfere with the rights of parties having private vaults." To this an amendment was proposed, to the effect, "That the ground should be closed up entirely, omitting the words in the resolution respecting the rights of parties having private vaults." The amendment was carried by a majority of 13, the numbers being 19 for, and that in.

CITY OF LONDON REGISTRATION.—On Monday morning, Mr.

M'Christie, the barrister appointed to revise the list of voters for the City of London, opened a court at Guildhall. Mr. Sidney Smith and Mr. J. Ledger appeared for the Liberals, and Mr. S. Browne for the Conservatives. The following is a general summary of the registration of voters this year for the City of London:—

	Livery.	Householders.	Totals.
On the present register	7497	13,873	21,370
Omitted from lists	256	2153	2411
New names	314	2019	2333
Objected to by Reformers ..	173	694	867
Objected to by Conservatives	63	1725	1788
Claims by Reformers	13	203	207
Claims by Conservatives ..	1	2	3

Of the claims made by the Reformers 117 are for persons misdescribed on the lists, and who would be liable to be struck off if objected to. 23 of the Conservative claims are also of this kind. 397 of the objections have been made by both parties.

TOWER HAMLETS REGISTRATION COURT.—The revising barrister,

Mr. M'Christie, sat on Saturday at the Court-house, Wellclose-square, and went entirely through the list of voters. The business was merely formal, as no claims either Liberal or Conservative, being present. The number of claims was 48, of which 7 were rejected on various grounds of illegality. One objection on the ground of non-payment of rates was held good. The proceedings terminated at half-past one o'clock.

THE CITY PRISONS.—The reports made to the Lord Mayor of the state of the City prisons, as to the health of the inmates, is very satisfactory. Mr. Burden, the Governor of the Whitecross-street Prison, states that he never recollects a period in which the debtors' gaol was more free from disease. Mr. Cope, the Governor of Newgate, describes the condition of that prison to be no less favourable; and Giltspur-street Prison, although the most incommodious and crowded place of confinement in the metropolis, enjoys like exemption from the inroads of the fatal malady.

ROYAL HUMANE SOCIETY.—On Wednesday a meeting of members and the Committee of Management of this society was held at their offices in Trafalgar-square for general business. The report for the past year (being the 67th of the society's existence) congratulated the friends on the success which had attended its operations; there had been 132 cases, comprising 155 persons, of whom 144 were successfully treated and recovered, and 11 were reported unsuccessful. The total number of persons who had been taken in the Serpentine, Hyde-park, was 91,790, which number was nearly 10,000 below the usual average. Twenty persons were rescued from drowning by the society's boatmen, and recovered by medical treatment at the Receiving House there; 14 cases of supposed suicides had been prevented, and during the past year a number of skaters and others had been saved by the society's linemen. Since 1774 upwards of 20,000 lives have been saved and restored in this country. One honorary gold medallion, 16 honorary silver medallions, and pecuniary rewards in cases of rescue attended by extraordinary courage and risk, 22 bronze medals, the thanks of the society presented to nine individuals, and 125 others rewarded with money. The committee and officers are continued and increased exertions in favour of the institution and its praiseworthy objects.

THE ST. KATHARINE'S WHARF.—It is the intention of the General

Steam Navigation Company to make the premises known as the St. Katharine's Steam-Packet Wharf, adjoining the Tower, which they have taken on lease of the St. Katharine's Dock Company for a long term of years, into means for conducting the general business of the company with reference to the arrival and departure of their vessels in the foreign trade. The greater portion of this traffic has already been removed from Blackwall to St. Katharine's Wharf, including the vessels trading to and from Havre, Hamburgh, and the Belgian ports; and in furtherance of this object it is the intention of the company to remove, on the 30th inst., the remaining portion of the trade hitherto and now conducted at the Brunswick Wharf, adjoining the St. Katharine's Wharf.

RAGGED SCHOOLS, SAINT PANCRAS.—On Wednesday, a meeting of the supporters of Ragged and Sunday Schools in Saint Pancras, connected with Denbridge Chapel, New-road, was held in the school-room of the chapel, for the purpose of receiving the report, of the state of the schools. The Rev. Mr. Woodwark (in the chair) read the report, which stated that a branch school had been called into existence at Agar Town, which had produced the most favourable result in that populous neighbourhood. The progress of the ragged schools was most satisfactory. There were connected with the Denbridge Schools 193 boys and 289 girls; with the Agar Schools, about 240 boys and girls. The expenditure amounted to £43. The annual receipts reached £32, leaving £11 to be provided for. The report was adopted.

PARLIAMENTARY AND FINANCIAL REFORM.—On Wednesday evening, a preliminary public meeting was held at the Duke of York Tavern, Wenlock-street, City-road, when it was resolved to form a district society in support of the objects and principles of the National Parliamentary and Financial Reform Association. A committee was appointed to advance the objects in view.

FIRE AT HACKNEY.—At half-past eleven o'clock on Wednesday morning, a fire broke out in the premises of Mr. Buck, furniture dealer, Morning-lane, Hackney. A vigorous effort was made to save an upper building, known as "The Tabernacle," engaged as a place of worship by a body of religionists, who had very recently fitted up the place at considerable expense, but to no purpose, as the building in less than half an hour was entirely gutted. The disaster is said to have been caused by the falling of a piece of lighted wood upon some shavings. The building was partially insured, but Mr. Buck's loss is believed to be heavy.

FIRE AT STEPNEY.—About one o'clock on Wednesday, a fire occurred on the premises of Mr. Cowley, hat manufacturer, High-street, Stepney. From the house to those adjoining, that of Mr. Williams, pawnbroker, and that of Mr. Felcher, cheesemonger, the flames spread furiously. Notwithstanding all the efforts of the firemen, Mr. Cowley's house and stock were destroyed, and the greater portion of the pawnbroker's property shared a like sacrifice.

FUNERAL OF WILLIAMS, THE CHARTIST CONVICT.—On Sunday the

remains of Joseph Williams, the Chartist convict, were conveyed to their last resting-place, in the Victoria Cemetery, Bethnal-green. A morning-coach and three followed the hearse containing his father, mother, and other relatives. There were several private cabs in the rear, which were followed to the cemetery by upwards of 10,000 persons, the twentieth part of whom were carrying the Chartist staff or effigy of Williams with the wreath of the Convention. Williams was interred in the same grave with the young weaver who was killed on Sunday, June 4, 1848, when attending the Chartist meeting held in Bishop Bonner's Fields. The usual religious ceremonies over the deceased being gone through, the concourse left the ground, contributing liberally as they departed to a fund being raised for the benefit of widow Williams and her six children. The boxes for the subscription were held by females, and had inscribed on them "The Literary and Victim Fund." There was a strong body of police present, but their services were not required.

THE JEWISH FORM OF PRAYER.—A FORM of Prayer has been issued by the Chief Rabbi, to be used in all the synagogues of the United congregations in the British empire, on account of the mortality caused by the cholera. After reading the penitential Psalms of David, the 22nd, 91st, and 103rd, by the master and congregation, the following prayer is to be read:—"Lord Almighty! gracious and full of compassion, who hast created the universe by Thy wisdom, Thine eyes are upon the earth from the beginning of the year, even unto the end thereof. Thou hast formed Le Hijai and the Tempest, and the constant recurring crash of the dangers and fatal consequence arising from the crowding of unlimited numbers of dead bodies into limited spaces of ground fully proved in that inquiry, and as also the opinion of the House of Commons, as declared by a majority of that assembly in 1843.

3. That, adverting to the circumstances alluded to in the foregoing resolutions, and to the lamentable fact that already many thousands of the inhabitants of the metropolis have been taken by the cholera, and that many thousands more are now suffering under the disease (with slight abatement), this committee deem it their duty, in the prosecution at this awful crisis of the work they have undertaken, to address a respectful memorial to the Secretary of State for the Home Department, with the view of bringing under consideration of the executive ministers of the Crown the propriety of proposing to the Cabinet the propriety of an order in council requiring measures to be adopted throughout the kingdom for the prevention of the practice of intramural burials—a practice which, as has been repeatedly demonstrated, is fraught with the most terrible and irremediable consequences.

Dr. Fowell felt great pleasure in stating that the medical profession fully approved of the society, and highly appreciated Mr. Walker's services. In his district the cholera was at its height, and the atmosphere was tainted in every way, and the great damage which the public health sustained from them. With that impression, they were endeavouring to get closed St. George's burial ground, which was an "open cesspool," close to the dwelling of the aristocracy, who inhaled from it a deadly poison, which rendered the very air putrid. For eighty years it had been a receptacle for the dead, who were so packed together that a shilling could not be passed between them. Such was the state of the pauper burial-grounds. In many instances, the coffins were not eighteen inches from the surface. On one occasion, in order to make room for more, a portion of a body was observed to be in a state of putrefaction, consequently it was thrown on a tree, and thrown on a tree. (Sensation of horror.) The exhalations from the grave-yard rendered the atmosphere nauseous, disgusting, and putrid; and the sensation he experienced in it were unwilling to convey to his lungs. Within forty-one medical men, requesting that it be closed, was presented to the Board of Health. (Hear, hear.)

A sub-committee was appointed to draw up a memorial to the Secretary of State; after which, a vote of thanks having been given to the chairman, the meeting separated.

ST. STEPHEN'S, WALBROOK.—On Wednesday on adjourned meeting of the vestry of the joint parishes of St. Stephen's, Walbrook, and St. Bennet's, Sherehog, was held for the purpose of considering the necessity of discontinuing interments beneath or attached to the churches under that vestry. Mr. Hart, the clerk of the churches, was in the chair, when letters were read from the Bishop of London and the Rev. Dr. Croly, the rector, approving of the contemplated removal of interments. The closing of the ground and church for burials being agreed to, measures were adopted for the purchasing of ground in some of the cemeteries in the outskirts of the metropolis, for the proper interment of the dead of the parish.

ST. OLAVE, SILVER-STREET.—At a vestry of the united parishes of

St. Alban, Wood-street, and St. Olave, Silver-street, held on Wednesday evening in the vestry-room of St. Alban's Church, to take into consideration the propriety of closing the churchyard of Saint Olave against future interments, it was moved—"That the churchwardens be requested to take such steps as may be necessary to close the churchyard, and to prevent future interments therein: this resolution not to interfere with the rights of parties having private vaults." To this an amendment was proposed, to the effect, "That the ground should be closed up entirely, omitting the words in the resolution respecting the rights of parties having private vaults." The amendment was carried by a majority of 13, the numbers being 19 for, and that in.

CITY OF LONDON REGISTRATION.—On Monday morning, Mr.

M'Christie, the barrister appointed to revise the list of voters for the City of London, opened a court at Guildhall. Mr. Sidney Smith and Mr. J. Ledger appeared for the Liberals, and Mr. S. Browne for the Conservatives. The following is a general summary of the registration of voters this year for the City of London:—

	Livery.	Householders.	Totals.
On the present register	7497	13,873	21,370
Omitted from lists	256	2153	2411
New names	314	2019	2333
Objected to by Reformers ..	173	694	867
Objected to by Conservatives	63	1725	1788
Claims by Reformers	13	203	207
Claims by Conservatives ..	1	2	3

Of the claims made by the Reformers 117 are for persons misdescribed on the lists, and who would be liable to be struck off if objected to. 23 of the Conservative claims are also of this kind. 397 of the objections have been made by both parties.

TOWER HAMLETS REGISTRATION COURT.—The revising barrister,

Mr. M'Christie, sat on Saturday at the Court-house, Wellclose-square, and went entirely through the list of voters. The business was merely formal, as no claims either Liberal or Conservative, being present. The number of claims was 48, of which 7 were rejected on various grounds of illegality. One objection on the ground of non-payment of rates was held good. The proceedings terminated at half-past one o'clock.

THE CITY PRISONS.—The reports made to the Lord Mayor of the state of the City prisons, as to the health of the inmates, is very satisfactory. Mr. Burden, the Governor of the Whitecross-street Prison, states that he never recollects a period in which the debtors' gaol was more free from disease. Mr. Cope, the Governor of Newgate, describes the condition of that prison to be no less favourable; and Giltspur-street Prison, although the most incommodious and crowded place of confinement in the metropolis, enjoys like exemption from the inroads of the fatal malady.

ROYAL HUMANE SOCIETY.—On Wednesday a meeting of members and the Committee of Management of this society was held at their offices in Trafalgar-square for general business. The report for the past year (being the 67th of the society's existence) congratulated the friends on the success which had attended its operations; there had been 132 cases, comprising 155 persons, of whom 144 were successfully treated and recovered, and 11 were reported unsuccessful. The total number of persons who had been taken in the Serpentine, Hyde-park, was 91,790, which number was nearly 10,000 below the usual average. Twenty persons were rescued from drowning by the society's boatmen, and recovered by medical treatment at the Receiving House there; 14 cases of supposed suicides had been prevented, and during the past year a number of skaters and others had been saved by the society's linemen. Since 1774 upwards of 20,000 lives have been saved and restored in this country. One honorary gold medallion, 16 honorary silver medallions, and pecuniary rewards in cases of rescue attended by extraordinary courage and risk, 22 bronze medals, the thanks of the society presented to nine individuals, and 125 others rewarded with money. The committee and officers are continued and increased exertions in favour of the institution and its praiseworthy objects.

THE ST. KATHARINE'S WHARF.—It is the intention of the General

Steam Navigation Company to make the premises known as the St. Katharine's Steam-Packet Wharf, adjoining the Tower, which they have taken on lease of the St. Katharine's Dock Company for a long term of years, into means for conducting the general business of the company with reference to the arrival and departure of their vessels in the foreign trade. The greater portion of this traffic has already been removed from Blackwall to St. Katharine's Wharf, including the vessels trading to and from Havre, Hamburgh, and the Belgian ports; and in furtherance of this object it is the intention of the company to remove, on the 30th inst., the remaining portion of the trade hitherto and now conducted at the Brunswick Wharf, adjoining the St. Katharine's Wharf.

RAGGED SCHOOLS, SAINT PANCRAS.—On Wednesday, a meeting of the supporters of Ragged and Sunday Schools in Saint Pancras, connected with Denbridge Chapel, New-road, was held in the school-room of the chapel, for the purpose of receiving the report, of the state of the schools. The Rev. Mr. Woodwark (in the chair) read the report, which stated that a branch school had been called into existence at Agar Town, which had produced the most favourable result in that populous neighbourhood. The progress of the ragged schools was most satisfactory. There were connected with the Denbridge Schools 193 boys and 289 girls; with the Agar Schools, about 240 boys and girls. The expenditure amounted to £43. The annual receipts reached £32, leaving £11 to be provided for. The report was adopted.

PARLIAMENTARY AND FINANCIAL REFORM.—On Wednesday even-

ing, a preliminary public meeting was held at the Duke of York Tavern, Wenlock-street, City-road, when it was resolved to form a district society in support of the objects and principles of the National Parliamentary and Financial Reform Association. A committee was appointed to advance the objects in view.

FIRE AT HACKNEY.—At half-past eleven o'clock on Wednesday morning, a fire broke out in the premises of Mr. Buck, furniture dealer, Morning-lane, Hackney. A vigorous effort was made to save an upper building, known as "The Tabernacle," engaged as a place of worship by a body of religionists, who had very recently fitted up the place at considerable expense, but to no purpose, as the building in less than half an hour was entirely gutted. The disaster is said to have been caused by the falling of a piece of lighted wood upon some shavings. The building was partially insured, but Mr. Buck's loss is believed to be heavy.

FIRE AT STEPNEY.—About one o'clock on Wednesday, a fire occurred on the premises of Mr. Cowley, hat manufacturer, High-street, Stepney. From the house to those adjoining, that of Mr. Williams, pawnbroker, and that of Mr. Felcher, cheesemonger, the flames spread furiously. Notwithstanding all the efforts of the firemen, Mr. Cowley's house and stock were destroyed, and the greater portion of the pawnbroker's property shared a like sacrifice.

FUNERAL OF WILLIAMS, THE CHARTIST CONVICT.—On Sunday the

remains of Joseph Williams, the Chartist convict, were conveyed to their last resting-place, in the Victoria Cemetery, Bethnal-green. A morning-coach and three followed the hearse containing his father, mother, and other relatives. There were several private cabs in the rear, which were followed to the cemetery by upwards of 10,000 persons, the twentieth part of whom were carrying the Chartist staff or effigy of Williams with the wreath of the Convention. Williams was interred in the same grave with the young weaver who was killed on Sunday, June 4, 1848, when attending the Chartist meeting held in Bishop Bonner's Fields. The usual religious ceremonies over the deceased being gone through, the concourse left the ground, contributing liberally as they departed to a fund being raised for the benefit of widow Williams and her six children. The boxes for the subscription were held by females, and had inscribed on them "The Literary and Victim Fund." There was a strong body of police present, but their services were not required.

THE JEWISH FORM OF PRAYER.—A FORM of Prayer has been issued by the Chief Rabbi, to be used in all the synagogues of the United congregations in the British empire, on account of the mortality caused by the cholera. After reading the penitential Psalms of David, the 22nd, 91st, and 103rd, by the master and congregation, the following prayer is to be read:—"Lord Almighty! gracious and full of compassion, who hast created the universe by Thy wisdom, Thine eyes are upon the earth from the beginning of the year, even unto the end thereof. Thou hast formed Le Hijai and the Tempest, and the constant recurring crash of the dangers and fatal consequence arising from the crowding of unlimited numbers of dead bodies into limited spaces of ground fully proved in that inquiry, and as also the opinion of the House of Commons, as declared by a majority of that assembly in 1843.

3. That, adverting to the circumstances alluded to in the foregoing resolutions, and to the lamentable fact that already many thousands of the inhabitants of the metropolis have been taken by the cholera, and that many thousands more are now suffering under the disease (with slight abatement), this committee deem it their duty, in the prosecution at this awful crisis of the work they have undertaken, to address a respectful memorial to the Secretary of State for the Home Department, with the view of bringing under consideration of the executive ministers of the Crown the propriety of proposing to the Cabinet the propriety of an order in council requiring measures to be adopted throughout the kingdom for the prevention of the practice of intramural burials—a practice which, as has been repeatedly demonstrated, is fraught with the most terrible and irremediable consequences.

Dr. Fowell felt great pleasure in stating that the medical profession fully approved of the society, and highly appreciated Mr. Walker's services. In his district the cholera was at its height, and the atmosphere was tainted in every way, and the great damage which the public health sustained from them. With that impression, they were endeavouring to get closed St. George's burial ground, which was an "open cesspool," close to the dwelling of the aristocracy, who inhaled from it a deadly poison, which rendered the very air putrid. For eighty years it had been a receptacle for the dead, who were so packed together that a shilling could not be passed between them. Such was the state of the pauper burial-grounds. In many instances, the coffins were not eighteen inches from the surface. On one occasion, in order to make room for more, a portion of a body was observed to be in a state of putrefaction, consequently it was thrown on a tree, and thrown on a tree. (Sensation of horror.) The exhalations from the grave-yard rendered the atmosphere nauseous, disgusting, and putrid; and the sensation he experienced in it were unwilling to convey to his lungs. Within forty-one medical men, requesting that it be closed, was presented to the Board of Health. (Hear, hear.)

A sub-committee was appointed to draw up a memorial to the Secretary of State; after which, a vote of thanks having been given to the chairman, the meeting separated.

ST. STEPHEN'S, WALBROOK.—On Wednesday on adjourned meeting of the vestry of the joint parishes of St. Stephen's, Walbrook, and St. Bennet's, Sherehog, was held for the purpose of considering the necessity of discontinuing interments beneath or attached to the churches under that vestry. Mr. Hart, the clerk of the churches, was in the chair, when letters were read from the Bishop of London and the Rev. Dr. Croly, the rector, approving of the contemplated removal of interments. The closing of the ground and church for burials being agreed to, measures were adopted for the purchasing of ground in some of the cemeteries in the outskirts of the metropolis, for the proper interment of the dead of the parish.

ST. OLAVE, SILVER-STREET.—At a vestry of the united parishes of

St. Alban, Wood-street, and St. Olave, Silver-street, held on Wednesday evening in the vestry-room of St. Alban's Church, to take into consideration the propriety of closing the churchyard of Saint Olave against future interments, it was moved—"That the churchwardens be requested to take such steps as may be necessary to close the churchyard, and to prevent future interments therein: this resolution not to interfere with the rights of parties having private vaults." To this an amendment was proposed, to the effect, "That the ground should be closed up entirely, omitting the words in the resolution respecting the rights of parties having private vaults." The amendment was carried by a majority of 13, the numbers being 19 for, and that in.

CITY OF LONDON REGISTRATION.—On Monday morning, Mr.

M'Christie, the barrister appointed to revise the list of voters for the City of London, opened a court at Guildhall. Mr. Sidney Smith and Mr. J. Ledger appeared for the Liberals, and Mr. S. Browne for the Conservatives. The following is a general summary of the registration of voters this year for the City of London:—

	Livery.	Householders.	Totals.
On the present register	7497	13,873	21,370
Omitted from lists	256	2153	2411
New names	314	2019	2333
Objected to by Reformers ..	173	694	867
Objected to by Conservatives	63	1725	1788
Claims by Reformers	13	203	207
Claims by Conservatives ..	1	2	3

Of the claims made by the Reformers 117 are for persons misdescribed on the lists, and who would be liable to be struck off if objected to. 23 of the Conservative claims are also of this kind. 397 of the objections have been made by both parties.

TOWER HAMLETS REGISTRATION COURT.—The revising barrister,

Mr. M'Christie, sat on Saturday at the Court-house, Wellclose-square, and went entirely through the list of voters. The business was merely formal, as no claims either Liberal or Conservative, being present. The number of claims was 48, of which 7 were rejected on various grounds of illegality. One objection on the ground of non-payment of rates was held good. The proceedings terminated at half-past one o'clock.

THE CITY PRISONS.—The reports made to the Lord Mayor of the state of the City prisons, as to the health of the inmates, is very satisfactory. Mr. Burden, the Governor of the Whitecross-street Prison, states that he never recollects a period in which the debtors' gaol was more free from disease. Mr. Cope, the Governor of Newgate, describes the condition of that prison to be no less favourable; and Giltspur-street Prison, although the most incommodious and crowded place of confinement in the metropolis, enjoys like exemption from the inroads of the fatal malady.

ROYAL HUMANE SOCIETY.—On Wednesday a meeting of members and the Committee of Management of this society was held at their offices in Trafalgar-square for general business. The report for the past year (being the 67th of the society's existence) congratulated the friends on the success which had attended its operations; there had been 132 cases, comprising 155 persons, of whom 144 were successfully treated and recovered, and 11 were reported unsuccessful. The total number of persons who had been taken in the Serpentine, Hyde-park, was 91,790, which number was nearly 10,000 below the usual average. Twenty persons were rescued from drowning by the society's boatmen, and recovered by medical treatment at the Receiving House there; 14 cases of supposed suicides had been prevented, and during the past year a number of skaters and others had been saved by the society's linemen. Since 1774 upwards of 20,000 lives have been saved and restored in this country. One honorary gold medallion, 16 honorary silver medallions, and pecuniary rewards in cases of rescue attended by extraordinary courage and risk, 22 bronze medals, the thanks of the society presented to nine individuals, and 125 others rewarded with money. The committee and officers are continued and increased exertions in favour of the institution and its praiseworthy objects.

THE ST. KATHARINE'S WHARF.—It is the intention of the General

Steam Navigation Company to make the premises known as the St. Katharine's Steam-Packet Wharf, adjoining the Tower, which they have taken on lease of the St. Katharine's Dock Company for a long term of years, into means for conducting the general business of the company with reference to the arrival and departure of their vessels in the foreign trade. The greater portion of this traffic has already been removed from Blackwall to St. Katharine's Wharf, including the vessels trading to and from Havre, Ham and daily-increasing manufactures; and, like Liverpool, it is a commercial portrading extensively with every part of the world. Its population amounts to more than 350,000 souls, of whom 60,000 are Irish. Its prosperity is entirely owing to the industry, perseverance, and intelligence of its inhabitants. The new city of Glasgow, which is rapidly rising to the north-west of the ancient town, is one of the most splendid in Europe, and is not surpassed, for beauty of architecture, in its public and private buildings, and for the length, breadth, and elegance of its streets, squares, and crescents, even by Edinburgh itself renowned in all these respects though the latter may be. The motto upon the city arms is, "Let Glasgow flourish." It has flourished, and bids fair to flourish still more.

SKETCHES OF SCOTTISH CHARACTER, BY GAVARNI.

WOMAN AND GIRL OF THE SALTMARKET, GLASGOW.

There are several routes from Glasgow to Oban. One is by steam-boat from the Broomielaw, down the magnificent river Clyde as far as Dumbarton; from Dumbarton, by omnibus or coach to Balloch, at the foot of Lochlomond; from Balloch, by steam-boat through this renowned Lake, up the river Falloch, to Inveraman, at the other extremity; and from Inveraman by coach to Inverary and Oban. The tourist by this route has the advantage of seeing Loch Awe, and its mighty lord paramount, Ben Cruachan—a loch and a mountain not so much spoken of as Loch Lomond and Ben Lomond, but by no means inferior, and, in the estimation of many, far superior to them. Another route to Oban is by steamer to Ardrishaig, at the entrance of the Crinan Canal; through the Crinan in the track-boat, to Loch Crinan; and from Loch Crinan in another steam-boat to Oban—the whole distance being performed in less than twelve hours. By this route the tourist passes through the lovely Kyles of Bute, and amid the magnificent coast scenery of the mainland of Scotland and the island of Mull.

WOMAN AND GIRL OF THE SALTMARKET, GLASGOW.

Most lovely! oh! most beautiful and grand
Were all the scenes of this romantic land!
Isle after isle, with grey empurpled rocks,
Breasted in steadfast majesty the shocks
Stupendous of the wild Atlantic wave.
Many a desolate sonorous cave
Re-echoed through its inmost vaults profound
The mighty diapason, and full sound
Of Corryvreckan—awful crator—
Preaching to lonely isles with eloquent roar:
Many a mountain rear'd its lordly crest,
Bronzed or empurpled by the radiant West;
Many a hill-girt loch indented far
The mainland; many a high and frowning scaur,
The haunt of sea-fowl, raised its barren form,
Furrow'd with age, defiant of the storm:
And over all this hazy realm was spread
A halo of sad memories of the dead;
Of mournful love-tales; of old tragedies,
Filling the heart with pity, and the eyes
With tears, at bare remembrance; and old songs
Of love's endurance, love's despair, love's wrongs,
And triumph o'er all obstacles at last;
And all the grief and passion of the past.

The whole of this district is classic ground, and the reader of modern poetry will be reminded at every turn of the paddle-wheel of some incident recorded in poem, song, or drama, by Ossian, Sir Walter Scott, Wordsworth, Joanna Baillie, Thomas Campbell, and others.

The third route, which requires some pedestrianism, is equally attractive. From Glasgow to Greenock by rail—from Greenock to Kilmun on the Holy Loch by steam-boat—and from Kilmun along the side of Loch Eck to Strachur, a walk of eighteen miles, brings the traveller to the shores of Loch Fine, where, if he do not relish another walk of ten or twelve miles round the head of the loch, he can take the ferry-boat, and be rowed five miles across to Inverary. From Inverary to Dalmally, and from Dalmally to Oban, will afford the pedestrian two days delight amid some of the most magnificent scenery in Scotland, including the river Ara and its beautiful falls, Kilchurn Castle, Loch Awe, Ben Cruachan, the Pass of Awe—worthy of its name, Cornell Ferry, Loch Etive, and Dunol y and Dunstaffnage castles, renowned in many a song and legend, and deserving all their renown, not only for their past history, but for the present grandeur of their ruin and the splendour of their site.

At Oban, during the summer season, a steamer plies regularly round the island of Mull, calling at Staffa and Iona. Mull was called by Dr. Macculloch, in his "Hebridean Travels," a "detestable" island; but other travellers have not participated in his dislike. On the contrary, Mull is pronounced by all who have sailed round it, or set foot in it, to be a magnificent island; and though not possessing the advantage o good roads in the interior, and being in other respects in a very primitive state, it possesses manifold attractions for the sportsman, the tourist, the botanist, the geologist, and for the man who loves now and then to see human nature as it exists out of the beaten tracks of civilisation. The Highland girl, who is represented by M. Gavarni as crossing a mountain stream with a can of milk in her hand, may be considered a specimen of the strong women of the island. There are sturdy lasses in Mull, who do a great deal of work upon scanty fare. They are scantily clad and scantily paid, but they are cheerful and good-looking. To hear them sing, in chorus, a Gaelic song in the intervals of field labour at harvest time, is a treat of no ordinary kind—a treat which once was ours, as we came upon a bevy of the in reaping in a field that commanded a view over the Atlantic and the countless islands of the west. But as Iona and Staffa offer attractions of another kind and often, a fame that extends wherever the English tongue is spoken, the great majority of tourists are in too great a hurry to wait, even to spend much of their time in Mull. The island, moreover, is not rich in hotel accommodation, except at the one inn of Tobermory—the only town in the island. This town is not so large as an ordinary English village; and there is, therefore, no great inducement for any one to stay, except he can "rough" it, or is fortunate enough to be a friend of any of the hospitable landlords and residents of the place.

HERD BOYS OF IONA.

Iona, or Icolmkill (the island of Colm's Church), may be truly called an "illustrious" spot. Every reader will remember the raptures of Dr. Johnson on setting foot upon its shore, and the ce ebrated sentence in whichhe moralises upon the feelings that must inspire the man of refinement in such a place: "Far be from me and my friends such frigid philosophy as would conduct us indifferent and unmoved over any ground which has been dignified by wisdom, bravery, or virtue. That man is little to be envied whose patriotism would not gain force upon the plain of Marathon, or whose piety would not grow warmer among the ruins of Iona." It would take a volume to do justice to the claims which Iona has upon the attention of the scholar and the traveller—a volume as yet unwritten, but which, it is to be hoped, some competent hand will undertake, and present to the world. The best account of it that has yet been given appears in a modest, learned, interesting, but very peculiar volume, written by an enthusiastic Celt, entitled "The Native Steam-boat Companion," which ought to be in the hand of every tourist who visits these beautiful and interesting parts of Scotland. The graphic pencil of M. Gavarni gives us, in the accompanying sketches of two kilted and bare-legged "callants," and a contemplative maiden of the isle, some of the human interest of Iona in the year 1849. We will but add, for the information of the imaginative reader, that among the traditions of the place is one, that every year, on a certain night, Colm, or Columba, its patron saint, sails in a phantom boat among the Hebrides, and stands upon the ruined wall of the cathedral to count and to bless the islands of the west. Another is, that seven years before the end of the world a deluge is to submerge all Europe, except Iona.

GIRL OF IONA.

PEASANT GIRL OF MULL.

MUMMY WHEAT.

(From a Correspondent.)

THE accompanying sketch is a correct representation of the produce of one grain of Egyptian wheat obtained from a mummy. The seed was brought into this country from Thebes, by the family of Sir W. Symonds, of Hampshire; and by them presented to Chamberlayne Chamberlayne, Esq., of Maugbersbury House, Gloucestershire, and grown by Mr. R. Enock, of Stow-on-the-Wold. What is most remarkable is, the great length of time that has elapsed since the corn from which the plant was produced grew; for, at the most reasonable computation, no less a time than 571 years B. C., or 2400 years, have passed away since any record can be obtained of entombing mummies within the pits of Thebes. There are, at a very moderate computation, upwards of 1600 grains of corn in the fifteen stems produced. The stem (a) is a single ear, resembling our common ears of wheat, and this springing from the same root. May we not, therefore, infer that the wheat now grown is a degenerate class of this same species which formerly grew in Egypt? else, how could the Egyptians have supplied the empires of Assyria, Greece, and Rome from their superabundance above their own wants?

MUMMY WHEAT IN EAR, GROWN AT STOW-ON-THE-WOLD.

Grammar-School, Stow-on-the-Wold, September 18, 1849. E. ENOCK.

CURIOSITIES.—VI.

A MEMENTO MORI WATCH, GIVEN BY MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS TO HER MAID OF HONOUR, MARY SETOUN.

THIS singular Watch is illustrated the same size as the original in Smith's "Historical and Literary Curiosities;" and from the description there appended we extract the following account of it:—"On the forehead of the skull is the figure of Death with his scythe and sand-glass. He stands between a palace on one hand and a cottage on the other, with his toes applied equally to the door of each; and around this is the legend from Horace, 'Pallida mors æque pulsat pede pauperum tabernas Regumque turres.' On the opposite or posterior part of the skull is a representation of Time devouring all things. He also has a scythe; and near him is the serpent with its tail in its mouth, being an emblem of eternity. This is surrounded by another legend from Horace. 'Tempus edax rerum tuque invidiosa vetustas.' The upper part of the skull is divided into two compartments: on one is represented our first parents in the Garden of Eden attended by some of the animals, with the motto, 'Peccando perditionem miserium eorum posteris mercure.' The opposite compartment is filled with the subject of the salvation of lost man by the crucifixion of our Saviour, who is represented as suffering between the two thieves, whilst the Marys are in adoration below; the motto to this is 'Sic justitiæ satisfecit, mortem superavit, sanitem comparavit.' Running below these compartments on both sides, there is an open-work of about an inch in width, to permit the sound to come more freely when the watch strikes. This is formed of emblems belonging to the Crucifixion, scourges of various kinds, swords, the flagon and cup of the eucharist, the cross, pincers, lantern used in the garden, spears of different kinds, and one with the sponge on its point, thongs, ladder, the coat without a seam, and the dice that were thrown for it, the hammer and nails, and the crown of thorns. Under all these is the motto, Scala cœli ad gloriam via.'

MEMENTO MORI WATCH GIVEN BY MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS TO HER MAID OF HONOUR, MARY SETOUN.

"The watch is opened by reversing the skull, and placing the upper part of it in the hollow of the hand, and then lifting the under jaw, which rises on a hinge. Inside, on the plate, which may thus be called the lid, is a representation of the Holy Family in the stable, with the infant Jesus laid in the manger, and angels ministering to him; in the upper part an angel is seen descending, with a scroll, on which is written 'Gloria excelsis Deo, et in terra pax, hominibus bona volu.' In the distance are the shepherds, with their flocks, and one of the men is in the act of performing on a cornemuse. The works of the watch occupy the position of the brains in the skull itself; the dial-plate being on a flat where the roof of the mouth and the parts behind it under the base of the brain are to be found in the real subject. The dial-plate is of silver, and is fixed within a golden circle richly carved in a scroll pattern. The hours are marked in large Roman letters, and within them is the figure of Saturn devouring his children, with this relative legend round the outer rim of the flat 'Sicut meis sic et omnibus idem.' Lifting up the body of the works on the hinges by which they are attached, they are found to be wonderfully entire. There is no date, but the maker's name, with the place of manufacture, 'Moyse, Blois,' are distinctly engraven. Blois is the place where it is believed that watches were first made, and this suggests the probability of the opinion that the watch was expressly ordered by Queen Mary, at Blois, when she went there with her husband, the Dauphin, previous to his death. The watch appears to have been originally constructed with catgut, instead of chain, which it now has, which must have been a more modern addition. It is now in perfect order, and performs wonderfully well, though it requires to be wound up within twenty-six hours to keep it going with tolerable accuracy. A large silver bell, of very musical sound, fills the entire hollow of the skull, and receives the works within it when the watch is shut. A small hammer, set in motion by a separate escapement, strikes the hours on it.

"This very curious relic must have been intended to occupy a stationary place on a prie-dieu, or small altar, in a private oratory, for its weight is much too great to have admitted of its being carried in any way attached to the person."

This watch is now in the possession of Sir T. D. Lauder family, of Grange and Fountain Hall, Bart., who inherited it through the Setoun family, from which they are descended; it having been given by Queen Mary to Mary Setoun, of the house of Wintoun, one of the four Marys Maids of Honour to the Scottish Queen.

MAXIMILIAN, KING OF BAVARIA.

OPENING OF THE DIET.

THE Bavarian Diet was opened on the 10th by the King in person, with a Royal speech. The ceremony was preceded by a religious service, at which his Majesty and the Court were present. The same service was celebrated in all the churches of Munich.

The following is the substance of the Royal speech:—

"Since the spring of last year a powerful moral movement has had possession of the greater part of Europe, and given in all Germany, and consequently also in Bavaria, new activity to the public life of the people. The Princes and nations of Germany have proclaimed that the object of their common efforts is to give a free development to the interior, and strengthen the power of the common country abroad. But in this noble pursuit of enthusiasm impure elements have been mixed up, and on many points they acquired a tumultuary preponderance. Passion and blindness have shaken the bases of social order; they have endeavoured to cause what was undertaken for the happiness of the people to serve in promoting their ruin. It is a sacred duty for the Government and the Legislature to oppose with a strong hand the criminal attempt. Faithful to my conviction that liberty cannot exist without order and the law, I have endeavoured to fulfil that duty. To succeed completely, I count on the support of the representatives of my people. Before all things the German nation requires a new constitution, which will permit it to feel and act like one nation. I share this sentiment; and I maintain my conviction that, in order that the new constitution may produce good fruits, it must embrace all the German tribes without favouring any. However difficult may be the solution of this supreme problem, it may be obtained by the disinterested devotedness of all. I salute with joy, as the first important step towards this object, the well-founded hope which has been produced within the last few days, of the formation of a Central Provisional Government, of which it is generally admitted that the action would be efficacious. My Government will immediately give the most complete explanations to the Chambers on the present situation relative to the German constitution, and on its conduct in the negotiations thereon. A revision of the Bavarian constitution will be proposed to you; this constitution will carry into effect the principles relative to the fundamental rights of the German people adopted by the National Assembly. In several parts of the kingdom the political movement, to my regret, has abandoned the path of the law, and committed crime. Legal force has re-established order; the judicial power exercises independent functions. Still, I shall know how to distinguish the getters-up of disturbances from the men who have been seduced or blinded. You will not refuse me your co-operation if I obey the impulses of my heart."

King Maximilian (II.) Joseph is now in his 58th year, having been born November 28th, 1811. He assumed the reins of Government by the abdication of his father, King Ludwig, on the 21st of March, 1848; the abdication being the result of the intrigues of the Bavarian nobles on the one hand, and the charms of Lola Montes on the other. The new King opened the Chambers with a speech from the Throne, on the 22nd of March. One of his Majesty's earliest acts was the writing of an autograph letter to the Minister of the Interior, respecting the working classes; expressing his great concern at the state of commerce, and his desire for the co-operation of all parties to restore the industrial resources of the country; and requesting the Government to take immediate steps to provide work, by commencing the construction of railways, water-works, bridges, roads, public buildings, &c., as far as the public exchequer would allow the requisite expenditure. This was, at all events, a promising commencement of the new reign.

The King was married by proxy on the 5th, and in person on the 12th of October, 1842, to Frederica Auguste Maria Hedwige, Princess Royal of Prussia, and by her has two sons.

The accompanying portrait of his Bavarian Majesty is from a drawing by M. Baugniet.

BLOWING-UP OF THE SHIP "MINERVA."—Intelligence has been received at Lloyd's of the destruction of the ship Minerva, Captain Hovenden master. The ship left Sydney on the 6th of February last, bound for Portland Bay, having on board, besides passengers, 200 barrels of gunpowder, and a large quantity of rum, brandy, and sulphur. She was obliged to put into Jervis Bay to undergo repairs, and left that place on the 20th of March. On the following day, at four o'clock A.M., the hold was discovered to be on fire; and the crew, being aware of the dangerous nature of the cargo, launched the boats, and made their escape in them without delay, accompanied by the captain and passengers. Within fifteen minutes of their leaving the vessel a tremendous explosion took place, carrying the decks 500 feet into the air. The rum and brandy &c. were ignited, and the vessel, after burning to the water's edge, sank. The boats made for Port Fairy, and, after being tossed about in a tumultuous sea for six days, and having nothing but a keg of water and some baracootas to subsist upon (the baracootas proved poisonous, and were thrown overboard), succeeded in reaching Port Phillip Heads, where assurance was obtained. The loss is estimated at several thousand pounds.

MAXIMILIAN, KING OF BAVARIA.

PICTURESQUE SKETCHES OF LONDON PAST AND PRESENT.

BY THOMAS MILLER.

CHAPTER XIV.—NEIGHBOURHOOD OF ST. GILES'S.

As St. Giles's folds within its arms a portion of the fashion-frequented neighbourhood of Oxford-street, so do the low allies of Tothill-fields hem in the palaces of Westminster, creeping up to the very walls of the grey old Abbey, and dipping down to the rim of the river; while, eastward, the City of Merchants is bounded by the wretchedness of Whitechapel on the one hand, and, deep behind again, by the thickly-inhabited parish of Shoreditch. Wealth cannot wholly seclude itself—to wheresoever it moves poverty follows for companionship, for without its dependents it is useless: riches cannot dwell apart, without looking worse than the gold on gold in bad heraldry. The fungus and the lichen cling to the stem of the sound gigantic oak, the same as to the trunk of the decaying pollard. True, the wedge has been driven into the rotten heart of the old Rookery of St. Giles's, and New Oxford-street has sprung up from the corruption; but what has become of the inhabitants who battened on the core of this decayed tree? Like a nest of ants, they are turned loose to overrun other neighbourhoods: the new houses and splendid streets which have risen above the old sites of sorrow, misery and wretchedness, have but driven them from their ancient haunts,

Homeless amid a thousand hearths, and compelled them to seek shelter in other quarters, where the poverty-stricken populace "most do congregate"—where misery clings to

PICTURESQUE SKETCHES OF LONDON.—THE ROOKERY, ST. GILES'S.

misery for a little warmth, and want and disease lie down side by side, and groan together—where

But to think is to be full of sorrow,
And leaden-eyed despair.—KEATS.

Let us look these evils steadily in the face for a moment or two, without blenching. The air which now blows through the open windows of the emblazoned carriage in which the diamonded Duchess is seated, a few seconds ago swept over the poisonous avenues of Church-street and Carrier-street, and is laden with odours from the sink and sewerage of St. Giles's. Yes, the self-same breeze which now uplifts those dark ringlets, a minute ago filled the lungs of Wiggins: those parted lips inhaled the pest on that arrow from the rotten garbage of these streets, the gases arising from the churchyard, and every other smell that is born of death and decay. How essential is it, then, fair ladies for the consideration to aid us in cleansing these Augean stables, in purifying these pest-houses of poor humanity. You may build yourself a fine house, my lady, and hem it round with a lofty wall; but you cannot, while in town, still breathe the poisonous air which they breathe, until these grievous evils are remedied.

We will enter these streets and peep into those dark, close, unhealthy, and forbidding-looking rooms. In this narrow alley a dusky twilight reigns throughout the sunny noon of day: we have to feel for the noisome staircases which open on either hand; and now we have found one, we will grope our way through this land of gloom and shadows. What a dead smell floats around us; a close noisome air, such as arises from an overcrowded vault, even more death-smelling than many a vault we have in our day visited. The staircase is encrusted with dirt, a kind of black greasy mud, which has been trampled into toughness, not unlike what covers the City streets after rain or snow in winter; but "that" is "clean" dirt in comparison to this, for here we tread upon old filth, the accumulation, it may be, of years, for, by the side of the staircase, where it is least treading, it is mildewed and mouldy. The smoke of our cigar is the only wholesome aroma that rises amid these stifling rooms. The perfume of flowers could never pierce through the weight of this dense atmosphere, but would fall back again and die amid the petals whence it arose; even the strong sweet-smelling May-blossoms would struggle in vain to disperse the poison of this motionless air.

Now we have reached the room we cannot see what forms are before us, so little light streams in through that "dirt-ditched" and cobweb-covered casement, which appears as if it's were never opened, as if they knew that the noisome air was better kept out than in. There is no ventilation, no "thorough-draft" through any of these miserable rooms; the walls are damp through so many breaths, for where the moist air falls there doth it rest, hanging like cold beaded drops on the brow of one who wrestles sternly with death.

It must have been many years since these apartments were either painted or whitewashed; a black grey hue pervades everything, as if the very atmosphere had itself grown dark through hovering here so long and motionless, as if it were compelled to stand and sicken between the stench from below and the black vapours above—the one arising from the fetid cellars, the other hurled down by the rain from the soot-covered roofs—exhalations of the earth earthy, of the lower sewery, of the filth filthy—poison ever propagating poison—gutters ever generating deadly gases, and creeping into the blood of the inhabitants: and yet strange, in spite of its filth, this neighbourhood has been passed over lightly by the "fell destroyer," compared to others which he has ravaged and is still ravaging.

Behold! the curtain is at last unlifted, and those are living and breathing forms that sit or stand before us, and such—however much we may shun them here—as we shall be doomed to dwell amongst hereafter. That poor girl is tying up her watercress in bunches, ready for to-morrow's sale; she has no other place but the floor to lay them on before she puts them into her little ba-ket ready bunched. The green bunches at her feet will be sold, and eaten on the morrow by those who never bestow a thought on the filthy floor on which they now lie. In that room they will be kept all night, amid the breathing of above a dozen sleepers. Those cabbages which the man is piling up in the corner are the unsold remainder of to-day's stock; he will strip off the outer leaves in the morning, to give them a fresh look: they will also be eaten on the morrow, in spite of the poisonous exhalations they are steeped in. He will also divide them all night: the man with the three dogs will share his bed, and perhaps the dogs themselves may find a couch amongst the cabbages. The woman who has just brought in that bundle of filthy rags (too late to be sold to-day in Monmouth-street) is also a lodger, and will no doubt make a pillow of her dirty burthen. That pile of shavings, sacking, straw, and rags will be dragged out of the corner when feet disposed to sleep, and one and all lie down here and another there, and for a few hours bury their miseries in forgetfulness. How so many manage to sleep in one apartment is only known to themselves, especially in hot weather: in the bleak bitterness of the chilling winter, we can picture them crowding together for warmth. But we must stress, before we find a difficulty in breathing, and pant like a robin that has flown by mistake into a baker's oven while it was gradually heating.

Here we are again in the filthy street—for they have no back-yards into which to throw their refuse; so must either keep it to putrify and decay in the overheated rooms, or throw it out, and let their neighbours go "share and share alike" in the sights and smells which pervade the uncleansed neighbourhood. True, there is a man employed to clear away the garbage; but, when this is done, they have no water, saving what they beg, and not a drop can they spare to wash down the gutters: wherever a sunbeam alights, you see it steaming with the filth, and behold the golden ray dimmed with the vapoury and deadly exhalation.

Yet these poor people are not naturally dirty. From many of the windows you see their tattered garments hanging out to dry, though, from the colour, you have a difficulty in persuading yourself that they have ever been washed, and come to the conclusion that they are only hung there to be aired. The colour is not their fault: such an atmosphere would turn a root of milk-white daisies to the hue of parchment in a month, if it were possible that they could live so long in those breath-less and smoke-alleys, where not a green leaf has grown for years.

Sometimes little Jack, or his half-clothed sister, when playing about the room (for children play even here), catch the end of the prop on which the rags are suspended, when down comes the whole washing into the gutter; and, unless the poor washerwoman is pretty nimble in looking after them, the first dishonest passer-by will be likely enough to pick up the whole wardrobe, and to see what it weighs at the nearest rag-shop. They have not the means of keeping themselves clean; like the Israelites of old, they cannot complete the task without the straw; and in many places what little water there was has, like other conveniences, been cut off, while the new buildings were proceeding. Baths and wash-houses will, no doubt, in time supply these deficiencies; but, until these are opened, we suppose the inhabitants must be left to shift for themselves as they best can, for the "improvements," as they are called, have subjected many of the people in this poor neighbourhood to such privations as they never before experienced.

Let us lift up the flap of this cellar, and see what is going on below; for that gleam of fire, or candlelight, shows that these underground regions are inhabited—that the habits of the ancient Britons are not wholly abandoned, but that the descendants of those old burrowers of hill and rock have not yet relinquished the twilight and the damp and darkness of these sewer-like habitations. Here we behold another human hive busily preparing for dinner, although it is so late in the day; for, like our wealthy merchants, they must get through whatever business they may chance to have on hand before they have (the means of) time to eat. Saw you ever such a medley as now frizzling in that capacious frying-pan? Parings of a loin of mutton, two beef sausages, a thin rasher of pickled pork, dirto of bacon, the scrag-end of a neck of mutton, a piece of beef skirt, a small steak, and a kidney. That old fellow with the wooden leg quite enjoys the job of cooking, and has got a jug of water in readiness to make "gravy" for the whole community, who have clubbed towards the contents of the frying-pan. Those who sit on the unboarded and unpaved floor beside the wall, and who look on so wistfully, have nothing to cook—nothing to eat; they had the last penny or twopence they possessed to be allowed to sleep on the floor of that cellar until morning. When those diners or suppers are over, the broken table, the bottomless chairs, and old butter-tubs, which are used for seats, will be set aside, and the whole of the naked floor strewed over with straw or shavings, on which they may (if they can)

Look round and take their rest.

And right glad will those foodless and moneyless creatures be when all the cooking and eating, in which they cannot become partakers, ceases, and when, sound asleep on the unboarded and unpaved floor, some kindly vision may come through the mysterious murmurs of the night, and

Clay the hungry edge of appetite
By bare imaginations of a feast.

In wet weather the inhabitants of these subterranean dwellings sometimes stand peeping through the open cellar-lights at the feet which pass over the pavement; and, while doing so, their faces are spotted like leopard's with the mud. They seem as if they were overlooking at other people's fare instead of taking heed of their own ways. Happy might they be if, like the long-tailed field-mouse, they could, in their burrows, store up provision for the winter, while in summer they nibbled the herbage or fed on the acorns which fell from the broad hoary oak, quenching their thirst at the woodland brook, and, like the old barbarians who first landed on our island shore, have no care beyond what they should eat and drink, about the morrow. Yet, even they have something to be proud of, for they have only to issue out of their black and breathless courts through the breezy thoroughfares which open into Oxford-street, and there the same window, which the dandy shopman in the "well-chosen" and neat black suit "dressed" to allure the wealthier classes, is open for their inspection; and more than one merry laugh have we heard while passing by, as some half-drunken Pat pictured his (far-from-sober) Biddy in a long Cashmere shawl and bonnet, plumed with the bird of paradise.

Sometimes you may see one of the inhabitants halting outside the huckster's shop, and endeavouring to squeeze a penny out of the sixpence (which has to purchase tea, sugar, bread, butter, tobacco, and a candle) for gin; and so accommodating are some of these shopkeepers that they make halfpenny-worths of everything they sell, and are ready to cut either a candle or a penny loaf in two with the same knife.

We will now number passing through the Rookery of St. Giles's when the work of demolition first commenced; when those who had found no other residence were allowed to remain until the workmen began to pull the houses down. Many of the inhabitants who were then old were born in those tumble-down houses, and seemed to stand no longer. There they had tended the sick couch, and through those dilapidated doorways carried out their dead; smiles and tears had brightened and fallen in those apartments, which to them bore the endearing name of home. We looked up, and through the broken lattices saw the faces of little children—dirty images of mothers—and we thought of their poor mothers, and of many houses similar to these are still standing in St. Giles's, with leaning doorposts, and windows all awry; some propped up with beams, on which they rest, as if they had a stitch in their sides, and had placed their hands there to relieve the pain. Many of the door-posts are worn smooth and bright, through the idle loungers, who have rubbed and rested against them, while smoking and looking out into the streets, hour after hour, and day after day: men who seem to have no business upon earth, saving to smoke and sleep, and when they awoke, to smoke and lean against the self-same doorways until it is time to sleep again. On the steps, and on the edges of the pavement, or at the entrance of those unexplored courts, withered old women sit with felded arms, scowling at you as you pass, and proclaiming by their looks that you are an intruder. And fortunate may a decently-clad man consider himself if he meets with nothing more serious than black looks while passing through the still dangerous neighbourhood of St. Giles's.

All are not idle, be it remembered, who frequent such haunts as these; many have seen "better days," and only feel because they possessed not fortitude enough to struggle against unfortunate circumstances. Others had never been taught any trade, and when they lost such situations as ten thousand were capable of taking, they never raised their heads again, although they went many a weary day, week, and month afterwards in quest of employment, returning at night to sleep in such dens as we have here described, sick and sad at heart. At length their attire became too shabby for their admission into respectable houses only to ask for employment, and the same ends with a kind of sullen recklessness amid the filth and squalor of St. Giles's, and from that wretched state never emerged again. But these are the exceptions; the majority of the inhabitants are "to the manner born."

Glancing at the remote past, it was in St. Giles's where the criminal stopped in ancient times for the last cup of cheering draught of ale on his way to Tyburn tree; and about the time when Chaucer died the gallows was removed from Smithfield into this parish, probably because here it was more frequently needed. In the reign of Charles II. an attempt was made to improve this neighbourhood by a better class of houses, and for many years it was considered the resort of aristocratic beauty; but a change took place, and the old primeval dirt and darkness settled down again. Our modern improvers have commenced by rooting out the inhabitants; may we not expect a new St. Giles's to rise up in some other corner of this vast metropolis?

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE TROOPS IN DUBLIN.—According to the latest accounts the troops in Dublin have suffered much from the prevailing sickness.

ENROLLED PENSIONERS AT HUDSON'S BAY.—Accounts have been received of the pensioners sent to Lord Selkirk's settlement in the Hudson's Bay territory, and a large tract of land has been granted to these men, who, it will be remembered, were sent out to replace part of the 6th Foot, on its return to this country to rejoin the remainder of the regiment.

SANITARY STATE OF THE HOUSEHOLD TROOPS.—On the first appearance of the cholera in the metropolis, his Grace the Duke of Wellington, Commander-in-Chief, issued an order to the commanding officers of the three regiments of Foot Guards stationed at the Tower, St. George's Barracks, Wellington Barracks, Portman-street, and St. John's-wood, and the Life Guards at Knightsbridge and the Albany Barracks, Regent's-park, that the strictest sanitary precautions should be taken, by observing the greatest cleanliness and ventilation in the barracks, outhouses, &c., and especially the stables of the cavalry. This has been fully carried out; and although a few cases of cholera and diarrhœa have occurred, the troops, generally speaking, were never in a better state of health. A ward has been specially set aside in all the barracks for the reception of those who may be suddenly attacked; and one of the medical officers of the regiment is constantly in attendance, night and day, should his services be required. Fatigue parties are daily appointed for cleansing the quarters and out places, stables, &c., twice, and even thrice, if required, under the inspection of a commissioned officer. A similar [illegible] has been issued to the medical staff, and [illegible] lam, which has had a most beneficial effect, as, from the official returns, notwithstanding the prevalence of this dreadful malady, the troops have suffered but very few losses from its effect.

Orders, by electric telegraph, reached Portsmouth on Monday evening, from the Admiralty, countermanding the fitting-out of the Hecate steam-sloop, and ordering Commander Hewlett, the officers, and crew, back to their own ship, the Excellent; the Hecla steam-sloop, at Plymouth, recently commissioned by Commander Beauchamp, and ready for sea, being substituted, instead of the Excellent, for the command of Commander Hewlett, R.N.

PRIZE MONEY.—The following appeared in the Gazette of Tuesday evening: Notice is hereby given to the officers and company of her Majesty's sloop Heroine, Charles Edmunds, Esq., Commander, that they will be paid, on Wednesday, the 17th of October, at 32, Arundel-street, Strand, their respective proportions of slave bounties for the Brazilian slave brigantine Venus, seized on the 24th March, 1848; and that the list will be re-called at the same place on Wednesdays and Thursdays, for the three following months.—Notice is hereby given to the officers and company of her Majesty's brigantine Bonetta, Frederick E. Forbes, Esq., Lieutenant commanding, that they will be paid, on Wednesday, the 24th of October, at No. 32, Arundel-street, their respective proportions of slave and tonnage bounties for the Brazilian slave brig Dos Amigos, seized on the 15th March, 1848; and that the list will be re-called at the same place on Wednesdays and Thursdays, for the three following months.—Notice is hereby given to the officers and crew of her Majesty's ship Grappler, who are entitled to share for the palaces brig Nuestra Senora della Gardia, captured on the 26th of August, 1847, also to those who are entitled to share for the brigantine Pampa, captured by the said ship on the 26th of November, 1847, that a distribution of the tonnage bounties granted for the said captures will be made at 39, Charing-cross, on the 20th instant; and that the shares not then paid will be re-called at the same place, agreeably to Act of Parliament.

MORTALITY IN THE GARRISON OF PARIS.—According to the returns of the sanitary commission in Paris, it appears that out of the 19,750 deaths which have occurred in that capital from cholera and diarrhœa, the mortality among the troops has been very great, being upwards of 3,000, notwithstanding all the sanitary precautions. This appears to have been greatly in consequence of the hard duty the garrison has to undergo, the want of proper sewerage and ventilation in the barracks, but more particularly the water. The garrison of Paris and environs is from 60,000 to 70,000 men, not including the National Guards.

A French gentleman, named Louis Calvoet, committed suicide on Sunday afternoon, near the Magazine in Hyde Park, by shooting himself through the body with a pistol. The cause assigned by himself for the fatal act was, that he had been plundered of 30,000f. the preceding evening in the Haymarket.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, September 23.—Sixteenth Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 24.—Moon's First Quarter, 11h. 24m. A. Day breaks 3h. 56m.
TUESDAY, 25.—Twilight ends 7h. 49m.
WEDNESDAY, 26.—St. Cyprian. Sun rises 5h. 53m., sets 5h. 50m.
THURSDAY, 27.—London gift day 11h. 50m.
FRIDAY, 28.—Sheriffs sworn.
SATURDAY, 29.—Michaelmas Day.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING SEPTEMBER 29.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M. 5	A. 5	M. 6	A. 6	M. 7	A. 7	M. 8	A. 8	M. 9	A. 9	M. 10	A. 10	M. 11	A. 11
h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.
5 39	6 0	6 25	6 45	7 25	7 55	8 33	9 0	10 5	10 30	11 34	11 53	0 0	0 12

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"O. A. G."—Quarterly of wine—1. Smith, 2. Brown; 3. James; 4. Smith; 5. Brown; 6. Hall; 7. White; 8. Lock; 9. Rose.

"Zyx."—The word "Milesian," applied to Irish families, vindicates those that have been established on the native island by the followers of Milesius.

"The Voyageur."—No English coin is current in France; but it can always be exchanged readily and advantageously.

"An Irish Reader."—The Children of Mr. Wykeham-Martin, by Lady Jemima his wife, are Philip, born Jan. 18, 1839; Fiennes, born Nov. 1, 1831; Cornwallis, born Jan. 10, 1834; and Maria.

"A Subscribing Naval Paddy."—We do not feel justified in giving any opinion on the amount of income enjoyed by the noblemen in question.

"L. B."—Miss Louisa Costello has described the baths in question, in her "Bearn and the Pyrenees."

"M. A. B." Balmoral

"Midas," Birmingham.—The proscenium of a theatre is the sort of frame-work on the stage behind which is the scenery, curtain, &c.

"Alpha," Liverpool.—Hartwell Horne's "Introduction to the Classics," perhaps.

"A Country Curate" and "Liberal Conservative."—Received.

"R. W."—The interest of the trustees.

"A Manufacturer," Nottingham.—The Paris Exposition is still open.

"J. Y."—The cheapest and best edition of Byron's Poems is that published by —, in one volume.

"A Reader."—The venerable Robert Lindley, the violoncellist, is in his 73rd year.

"Ethnology treats of the rise, decline, and fall of nations.

"An Electrode," Manchester, may buy Cavallo's "Atmospheric Electrometer" for one guinea, of Knight, Foster-lane, Cheapside.

"A Rough One" cannot recover the debt.

"Omax," Downpatrick. 1. The "London and Edinburgh Pharmacopœia." 2. "Lunier's Survey." 3. The "Cyclopædia of Useful Arts and Economical Science" is published by Churchill, Prince's-street, Soho. 4. "Companion to the Greenhouse," published by Orr and Co.

"R. E. P."—1. A practical work on "Etching" has just appeared. 2. Hullmandel's two works on "Lithography."

"Peter Walker"—We have not room.

"A Bookseller's Son." Whitby.—Sarcevus's "French Pronouncing Dictionary."

"J. H.," Belfast. Thanks.

"Annette." The Balmoral Correspondent is discontinued. The Glasgow Daily Mail gives the fullest report of the Royal sojourn.

"B. H. G." Investment in a savings-bank.

"Quercus" Bread is vegetable diet.

"R. B., Birmingham.—Why did you not send the sketches? It is now too late.

"A Layman," Exeter.—The Apostles transferred the religious rest observed by the Jews on the Sabbath to Sunday. The first civil law for its proper observance was made by Constantine, A.D. 321.

"W. G.," Exeter.—Address Mr. Mansfield, 108, Fleet-street.

"Vanish," Ballater, is specially thanked for his sketches of the "Queen's Hut," engraved in our Journal of September 8.

"A Subscriber." The best mode of attacking wasps is by night, putting into the external aperture of the nest a lighted fuse, composed of unstened gunpowder, mixed with sulphur and saltpetre. After this has been in the nest about five minutes, the wasps become so stupified with the fumes of the powder, that the nest may be dug out with safety, provided it be not cut with the spade. It should be carefully tied up in a bag, as the wasps are very tenacious of life, and soon recover from the effects of the powder.—Entomological Magazine, No. 18.)

"The Father of a Family." Homœopathy was first promulgated some years since by Doctor Samuel Hahnemann, of Leipsic. Homer is stated to have been born on the western coast of Asia Minor, Palonia, and on an island in the Ægean Sea. The very fact that seven cities contend for the honour of giving him birth, proves that his native place is unknown. It is customary to maintain the anonym of authorship.

"A. B." will find railway signals illustrated in Nos. 137 and 139 of our Journal.

"Jweens." Mr. Durrell's address is Grosvenor gate, Park-lane. The Bridgewater Gallery may be viewed, by special permission, obtainable by application by letter.

"S. S." Hermel.—Mr. Whelan, dealer in coins, resides at 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury.

"E. J. C."—The terms of admission to the Asylum for Idiots, at Highgate, may be learnt there, or at the office, 34, Cornhill.

"A Reader."—You may sue by attorney for debt in a county court. The penalties for giving a receipt upon unstamped paper are £10 and £20.

"Astronomer."—The Transactions of the Royal and Astronomical Societies may be purchased by non-members through a bookseller. Various prices.

"J. G. H. R."—The latest National Debt of the United Kingdom, to January 5, was £765 6s. and 2*½d.*

"Dardanus."—The arms of Webb, of Molcombe, county of Dorset, as granted 17*th June*, 1577, are, "Or, a cross humette engr. between four falcons, or" Crest: Out of a ducal coronet, a demi-eagle displayed or. "The arms of Webb, of Canford, as borne by Sir John Webb, Bart., father-in-law of James Earl of Derwentwater, are "Gu. a cross between four falcons or." The crest is the same as that of the Motcombe line. "Letter to Hutchins" "History of Dorsetshire" for a pedigree of the Webbs, and to Archdale's "Irish Peerage" for one of the Planketts

"Virtute ques."—Clark's "Heraldry." We do not know of any plain sheets of heraldic engravings.

"A Subscriber." Philpot-lane.—The great bridge which carries the Vicenza Railway over the Lagoon, and enters Venice on the island of St. Lucia, is 3936 yards, or two miles and 416 yards in length, and contains 223 arches, divided into sections of 32 arches each, by five solid embankments. Cost of the bridge, £186,660.

"An Old Subscriber."—The cost was twenty guineas.

"South, an Old Subscriber," is thanked.

"T. B. F."—The Highgate, or North London Cemetery, was opened in 1839. The Norwood, or South London, was established in 1836-7.

"Peregrinus."—The "Diary of a late Physician" is by Mr. Samuel Warren, F. R. S.

"A Jet of Water Correspondent" suggests that the word Theodolite may be compounded of the Greek θεάομαι, I see, or behold earnestly; δούλος, a servant, or assistant, and the terminal ite: literally, an assistant, or helper of Theodolus.

"Antique."—Your coin is a sterling of Guido Count of Flanders, and Marquis of Namur, 1305

"An Irish Widow," Wicklow.—Cholera has appeared at Maidstone. (See the Returns of last week.

"Disappointed Jenny" may see the engraved portrait of Millie. Alboni (from the picture in question) at any printseller's.

"Rusticus." Leader, Coventry.—Dr. Rae's narrative has not, we believe, been published separately.

"B. B.," Penryn.—We do not know the work you speak of.

"An Old Subscriber," Plymouth.—See Sturm's "Sketch of all Denominations," &c.

"A Joint-Subscriber," Berwick.—Phonography has not yet been adopted by the Parliamentary reporters.

"J. L." The next volume of our Journal will commence January 5, 1850.

"Jacol." We cannot give any opinion upon the scheme.

"A Subscriber of some years."—Such an appointment as you name can only be obtained by the Royal interest at the Foreign Office.

"A Tourist," Ballater, is thanked. We have not room to engrave the sketches.

"Stephen W."—See "Etiquette of Courtship and Marriage," published at 86, Fleet-street.

"R. P."—You can claim.

"Bavarros" had better write to the secretary or superintendent; though, in all probability, permission must first be obtained from the Post-office authorities.

"Lyrurus."—A pamphlet descriptive of the Aneroid Barometer has just been published by Mr. Freshwater, barometer-maker, No. 84, Strand.

"Rustace."—We cannot inform you.

"A Subscriber" had better state the circumstances to the assessor.

"Whispers," Brighton. Berlin, Carnhill.

"E. Crook."—Read the work entitled "Acts to the Memory"

"Rambler." Old Bailey.—See Lyonet's "Magna Britannia" (Bucks); the article on Penny Cyclopædia, and Knight's "Journey-book of Berkshire." In the two latter we do not find the trenches at Burnham Beeches noticed among the ancient earth-works of the county.

"Ignotus." Brighton.—The "Woodcock Guide" may give the information. The regulations are printed by the College

"A. W." Bangor. The Prince will succeed to the Dukedom, as you state.

"Constant Subscriber." London.—Such a proceeding as you describe would be an act of trespass, to be dealt with accordingly.

"P. G.," Leicester. The large View of Rome will be ready to bind with the present Volume of our Journal, at close.

"An Old Subscriber," New York (postage 1*s. 8d.*), should instruct his banker not to cut the volume so closely. His suggestion as to Ireland has been, in a manner, anticipated.

"Amelia."—Address a letter to Mr. C., at Bath.

"——, Churchwarden of St. Martin's"—informs us that the parish have, besides the burial-ground in Drury-lane, a cemetery in Pratt-street, Camden-town.

"R. S. T. P."—We must decline interference in disputes at cards.

"I. B." We do not think it advisable further to illustrate the subject of Intramural Interment by engraving the burial-ground of the Tottenham-court-road Chapel, which has just been closed by order of the Board of Health. It is stated that the would forming this burial-ground, to save the consecration fees, was brought from the church-yard of St. Christopher le Stock, which was taken down to enlarge the Bank of England, in 1780

"E. P."—Bank Stock is part of the capital of the Bank of England; at 200 it will pay you 3*½ per cent. per annum.*

"J. H. B." Brigg.—The appointment of days of humiliation, in consequence of continued pestilence, has been left to the Bishops of the respective dioceses. In Lambeth, and at Brompton and Knightsbridge, Wednesday last was very generally observed

"A Norwich Subscriber."—The Moon was at the full on August 4; now, on the 18th.

"C. P." Bird-nets may be bought at most hirmers' or brushmakers'.

"F. L." Norfolk, and "A. B. C." Plymouth. The age of admission to the Blue-Coat School is from seven to ten. Lists of presenting governors and forms of petition may be had at the Hospital Counting-House early in each year (See a full account of the Hospital in No. 207 of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS)

"A Subscriber."—Apply, respecting short-hand, at 1, New-street, Covent-garden

"C. P." Ampthill. Apply to Ackermann and Co., Strand.

"A. B." Westerham. The Rev. T. Belsham was long the minister of the Unitarian Chapel in Essex-street

"Juliet." Gretna-Green marriages have not yet been invalidated by a new law.

"W. P. F." Mark-lane.—We will see about the insect puzzle

"L. P." Limerick. The Lord Mayor's jurisdiction does not extend to Westminster, which is governed by a High Steward and a High Bailiff

"J. P." Ipswich. The best and most recent work for your purpose is Mr. Jellinger Symons's "Tracts for the Times," one vol. 8vo.—one chapter of which treats of Crimes and Criminals, their statistics, &c. The work is otherwise devoted to the condition and treatment of the dangerous classes.

"Caxton," Norwich.—Voigtlander's lenses are the most perfect and best adapted to daguerreotype portraiture. The expense of a licence to practise can only be known by applying to the patentee, Mr. Beard, 89, King William-street, City.

"St. John's." Worcester.—Mdme. Castellan is a Roman Catholic.

"K. T. B." We have not the information you seek. The country edition of our Journal is published in London in time for Friday's post.

BOOKS, &c. RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

Brearly's Guide to Scarborough.—Mansell's History of Germany.—Hogg on Infancy.—Manual of Sepulchral Slabs and Crosses.

MUSIC.—Laugh while you can.—She took those young hearts with her.—Blanche and Lizette.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1849.

THE social disorganization of Ireland has recently manifested itself in a new shape. Pauperism has been a sore burden upon the landlords; but because this pauperism—immense, unwieldy, voracious, and insatiable as it is—was originated by the ignorance or mismanagement of those who possessed the soil, their complaints under the infliction of supporting it through the years of famine, have met with little or no sympathy. The case, however, is very different when their tenants appear on the scene in the character of wilful and dishonest defaulters, and refuse to pay rent. Such is the case now. Solvent tenants have entered into a conspiracy to defraud the landlords, to leave the poor to themselves, and to leave the landlords without the means of supporting either the poor or their own families. The form which the conspiracy has taken is new, but the thing itself is but a repetition of what has long been known in Ireland. The demoralization of the country is greater in the class immediately above pauperism, than among the poorest of the poor. It is a demoralization, however, which can be traced to despair. There has been a blight and a curse upon the land in the estimation of the large and struggling class of small farmers; and to raise the means, legally or illegally, honestly or fraudulently, of quitting it to seek a home in the United States, has been the object of many thousands of people of that class. For three years past it has been by no means uncommon for farmers who were able to pay rent to abscond to America without paying it. This year the evil seems to have extended. To rob a landlord seems to be considered a venial offence by such men as these; and a conspiracy has been entered into in Limerick, Tipperary, Cork, and other counties, to defraud him in the most impudent and open manner. The farmer's crops can be seized for arrears of rent, but they cannot be seized upon a Sunday. Acting upon this hint, the system has been introduced in these counties of cutting the crops on Sunday, and carrying them off before the very eyes of the powerless officers of the law. Once cut and carried off, the crops are mixed with the crops of other parties, upon whom the landlord has no claim; and, as identification of the property is impossible, the landlord is left to any other remedy at law which he may be advised to take. Before the preliminaries of such a step can be arranged the dishonest tenant is on his way to America, with his coin in his pocket, or sewed up in the multitudinous patches of his ragged vestments. The dishonesty is openly perpetrated, and whole districts are parties to acts of the kind. The people meet in such numbers as to defy the opposition of the police. At a meeting of the magistrates of the county of Cork, held on Monday last, some of these facts were stated. A motion having been made to request the Lord-Lieutenant upon the expediency of reducing the constabulary force, the expense of which, in addition to the poor-rates, was a sore burden upon property, Mr. St. John Jeffreys, of Blarney Castle, opposed the motion, on the ground that the maintenance of the constabulary force on its present footing was essential to the very existence of society. Such was the condition of the country, that the landlord had no protection whatever. "He hesitated not to say that the man knew nothing about the condition of the country, who would let an acre of land without a year's rent in advance. They had no security for property but in the constabulary; and, from his knowledge of the country altogether, he should say that it would be totally uninhabitable were it not for the police." This is a deplorable picture; and, in resisting the system of fraud and spoliation which called forth these remarks from a conscientious resident proprietor, the sympathies of the people of England, long denied to the Irish landlord for his neglect of the poor, will accompany him in every legal step he may take for the vindication of his rights and for the punishment of the delinquents. Between the incubus of a pauper population and the succubus of a dishonest tenantry, the Irish landlord leads but a miserable life; but the same law which compels him to contribute to the support of the one, will lend him all its aid for his protection against the other. But while those who know the real causes of Irish misery and demoralization condemn such acts as these, they do not wonder at them. Demoralization is the necessary consequence of such misery as Ireland has experienced; and the tenant of small means, who sees himself gradually drawn into the gulf of pauperism which has swallowed up his neighbours, loses his moral sense in the greatness of his danger, and robs his landlord without compunction, that he may have the means of escaping to a more favoured country. Matters, however, have taken a turn in Ireland. The present evil is local, and peculiar to a few only of the districts which have suffered most severely from recent disasters. We do not, therefore, share in the alarm expressed in some quarters, that it is likely to increase, or indulge in wholesale denunciations of the Irish character, because misery has begotten crime in Ireland, as it does elsewhere. We quite agree, however, with Mr. Jeffreys that at such a time the landlords will do well to bear a little longer the infliction of a police rate. The Irish constabulary is an admirable body of men. Its aid has been efficient in trying circumstances, and is still required for what Mr. Jeffreys calls the "social civilization of the rural districts." But what is still more requisite is an assimilation of the Irish law of landlord and tenant to the English law. We are glad to see that Irish landlords are becoming fully aware of the fact. Perhaps, if no Irish member has parliotism or influence enough to introduce or carry such a measure, it will be introduced and carried by the Government. With such a law, there would be no occasion for the immense constabulary force now existing; and the landlord would not be obliged to wait for a year and a half before he could take his remedy against a defaulting tenant, nor be defrauded at the expiration of that term by such a system of robbery as this Sunday cutting and removal of the crops. The Irish landlords may be certain that, if they are in earnest in wishing such an assimilation, it will not be denied them.

POSTSCRIPT.

METROPOLITAN SEWERS COMMISSION.

On Thursday a general court was held, at which the Earl of Carlisle presided; and the justices present were Sir John Burgoyne, the Hon. F. Byng, the Rev. Messrs. Stone and Murray, Dr. S. Smith, and Messrs. Chadwick, Johnson, Banfield, Jones, Lawes, Bain, Bellar, Bidwell, and Hawes.

A draft report, compiled by Assistant-Surveyors Lovick and Cresy, relating to the drainage of the Potteries at Kensington, was presented. It recommended the laying down of a number of pipes, some two inches, and others four inches, in diameter.

The noble Chairman suggested that the report should be printed, and stand for consideration to the next meeting. Agreed to.

Assistant Surveyor Donaldson brought up a supplementary report upon the drainage of Richmond, which stated that a number of letters had been received from parties residing in that locality, calling for the immediate adoption of the system of drainage already propounded in a previous report. Mr. Donaldson now recommended that the amount of money necessary be borrowed upon the credit of the rates; that a system of tubular pipes be constructed; that tubular perishable drains be laid down; and, finally, that a supply of water be procured, in conformity with the 66th section of the Metropolitan Sewers Act, for the purpose of cleansing the sewers and drains, and for water-closets.

Upon the motion of Mr. Chadwick, these recommendations were adopted.

The notice of motion given by Mr. Leslie, "That the Trial Works Committee, on account of the expenditure and small results, be abolished," was postponed.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE MEDICAL VISITORS OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

The following excellent instructions have been issued from the medical committee at Guildhall, of which Mr. Simon is chairman:—

"All persons suffering with bowel complaints, however slight, or with sickness or other unusual ailment, are earnestly requested to procure immediate assistance, either from their ordinary medical advisers or from the medical officers of the district, whose surgery will be open day and night for dispensing all necessary medicines.

"JOHN SIMON, Officer of Health for the City of London, Chairman.

"INSTRUCTIONS.

"It will be his duty to visit every house in the district assigned to him by the ordinary medical officer of the locality once each day at the least, and wherever several families inhabit one and the same house it will be his duty at each visit to see one adult member at least of every such family.

"These visits should be made as early as possible in the day, and the severer cases of indisposition should be revisited in the afternoon as early and as often as may be necessary), in order to ascertain the result of the treatment adopted.

"The medical duties of the visitor are restricted to the treatment of diarrhœa and other premonitory symptoms. So soon as any case shall have passed, or shall appear to be on the point of passing into cholera, it shall be the visitor's duty immediately to transfer the case to the ordinary medical officer, and to take care that the latter officer be apprised thereof without delay.

"The visitor shall be provided with medicines suitable to any emergency likely to fall within his observation; but in cases of no urgency he shall prescribe, and shall refer the patient to the dépôt of his district, where medicine may be procured.

"The visitor shall take notes of the particulars specified in the tabular form with which he will be furnished; and, at the close of each day's visitation, he shall communicate this return to the ordinary medical officer with whom he acts, and shall receive that officer's directions for the next day's visitation.

"The visitor shall insert in his return a notice of every locality where cleansing (either external or internal) shall appear requisite; and whenever he shall find the condition of a house irremediably bad, or the inhabitants so densely crowded so as to endanger life, he shall make this the subject of a special report.

"Especially, he should impress on the persons with whom he communicates the extreme danger of neglecting diarrhœa, and the necessity of obtaining medical advice as speedily as possible.

"He should likewise explain to them the arrangements for medical relief which prevail in the district, and should see that they know the residence of the ordinary medical officer; so that, in case of any sudden seizure in the intervals of his own visitation, there may be no ignorance of the means for procuring it.

"JOHN SIMON, Officer of Health."

DAY OF HUMILIATION AT CLERKENWELL.—Friday (yesterday) was observed in the extensive parish of Clerkenwell with commendable strictness, as a day of prayer and humiliation. All the churches were fit ed, the shops closed, and the streets nearly deserted. The appearance of the district was far more solemn than is usually the case on Sundays.

INTRAMURAL INTERMENTS.—The Gazette of yesterday (Friday) evening contains orders from the General Board of Health for the discontinuance of interments in the burial-grounds of Cadoxton, Glamorganshire; of St. George the Martyr, Southwark; and in Benjamin-street, and the churchyard of St. John, Clerkenwell.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

In yesterday's (Friday) news from Paris there was nothing of interest.

M. de Falloux was a little better, but still suffered much from debility.

A letter dated Montpellier, Sept. 14, says that the Arab prisoners in the Fort St. Pierre had been pardoned.

The Roman correspondent of the National says that the Pope will return to Rome in November.

HOLLAND.

The Dutch papers received yesterday (Friday) announce the unexpected resignations at the Ministry en masse on Monday evening. After a night's deliberation, the King accepted those resignations, and gave instructions for the formation of another Cabinet. The circumstances which led to this result have not transpired.

IRELAND.

FUTURE ROYAL VISITS TO IRELAND.—The Pictorial Commissioner deputed from her Majesty's household to sketch the most beautiful sites of natural scenery and modern cultivation in Ireland, in order that the Queen may make a selection for her visit next year, has been in Limerick on that mission, taking sketches of the delightfully picturesque wood and water-scenery of Castle Connell. He was hospitably entertained at the Earl of Cork's by the noble proprietor of the princely mansion at Mountshannon. The gentleman this engaged is Mr. Bickham Escott, late M.P. for Winchester. Limerick Chronicle.

THE LORD-LIEUTENANT.—His Excellency, with the Countess of Clarendon, the Earl and Countess of Craven, Captain Ponsonby (aide-de-camp), and Mr. Corry Connellan have arrived at Killarney. The Viceregal party meant to visit Muckross Abbey, Glengariff, and other places of interest, and to return to Dublin by Saturday (this day).

The Right Rev. Dr. Murphy was consecrated Roman Catholic Bishop of Cloyne and Ross, on Sunday, in Fermoy Chapel.

NATIONAL EDUCATION.—The report on the state of the National Education system, by Mr. Kavanagh, the head inspector of Munster, is very interesting, and has important facts. The gross ignorance of English literature shown by the teachers is a startling fact, as described by Mr. Kavanagh. He says, that numbers of them have science and classics enough to pass the yearship examination in Trinity College, Dublin, yet know nothing of English authors, nor scarcely anything even of Milton or Shakespeare (except the mere names), such as Edgeworth, Griffin, Goldsmith, and many others.

SECRET SOCIETIES.—According to the Roman Catholic clergy of Cork, Limerick, and Tipperary, secret societies are rapidly extending their numbers in those counties. On Sunday last exhortations from the altars were made against those dangerous communities.

THE LATE CONFLICT AT DOLLY'S BRAE.—The bench of magistrates at Castlewellan, when informations were applied for against a number of Orangemen charged with having taken part in the semi-barbarous practices of the 12th of July last, at Dolly's Brae, by a majority of one, refused the informations. The casting vote was given by the Earl of Roden, who harangued the Orange party in his own domain on the day of the outrage, and supplied them with refreshments!!

SUSPENSION BRIDGE FOR ST. JAMES'S PARK.—The Commissioners of Woods and Forests are about erecting a suspension bridge across the ornamental water of the enclosure, St. James's Park, similar to those thrown across the Regent's Canal to connect Primrose hill Park and Regent's Park. The proposed bridge is to be constructed directly opposite the Queen-square Gate.

PASTORAL TESTIMONIAL.—We learn from the Jamaica Despatch, that, on June 29, a handsome silver tea service was presented by the congregation of St. Mary's Church, in the parish of St. Elisabeth, Jamaica, to their worthy pastor, the Rev. James Waters, "who had faithfully proclaimed the Word of God in that immediate district for the lengthened space of nearly twenty-five years:" the reverend gentleman being about to quit Jamaica, on leave for England.

IMPROVING THE SANITARY STATE OF THE TOWER.—On Wednesday, in consequence of communications from his Grace the Duke of Wellington, High Constable of the Tower of London, respecting the sanitary state of that fortress, her Majesty's Commissioners of Woods and Forests issued instructions for the immediate demolition of all the buildings known as the Old Mint, situate on the east, fronting St. Katharine's Docks. These buildings have been the quarters occupied by the non-commissioned officers and privates; it is the most unhealthy part of the fortress, and is no longer necessary. The new barracks built upon the site of the Armoury destroyed by fire in 1841 being ready for occupation. The new officers' quarters are rapidly approaching completion. The Tower is being thoroughly drained. It is also proposed to have an artesian well for the supply of the garrison.

On Monday evening, a large pile of warehouses in Turner-street, Manchester, were destroyed by fire. The loss of the Messrs. Adams, who are insured, is about £850. Mr. Crabtree is also a sufferer to the amount of £300; he is also insured. The losses of the other occupants are comparatively trifling.

THE DYING MOTHER.

A PLEA FOR EXTRAMURAL INTERMENTS.

THE Angels call me—lo, I come!
Children, I die! I'm going home!
All pangs, save one, have pass'd away,
All griefs and sufferings of clay,
Except this lingering fond distress
That yields not to forgetfulness—
The last affection of my heart,
The pain, the grief, that we must part.

No more! a hope to sorrow given
Says earthly love may bloom in Heaven,
May soar, if pure, to God's right hand;
I go, I seek the happy land.
Ah! no, not yet; the sunshine fair
Revives me for awhile: the air
Blows calm, and cool; oh, living breath,
It gives me strength to look on death.

It gives me courage to implore,
By all the love you ever bore,
A foolish, fond, but last request,
That you will choose my place of rest
In the green fields, beneath a tree,
Where west winds linger lovingly;
Where daws may drop and buds may bloom,
And moonlight sleep upon my tomb.

I would not that my bones should lie
(Forgive the earthly vanity)
In rotting churchyards of the town,
Dishonor'd, public, trodden down,
To be disturb'd, unton'd, exposed,
The secrets of my grave disclosed,

Ere kind decay had blurr'd the line
Of form and feature that were mine.

Although no pangs can touch our dust,
And death is stingless on the just,
Yet grant my prayer, and lay my clod
Far from the town, beneath the sod.
Who strews a flow'r, or drops a tear,
Or sighs when passing crowds may hear—
Or watches fondly over graves
Where busy Traffic works her slaves?

Husband, I die—my peace is won,
I linger, but my race is run.
Oh! choose a grave where I may sleep,
Untroubled, in a silence deep;
Where thou, purchase, at evening's hour,
May'st o'er my headstone drop a flower;
And where, some sunny Sabbath day,
The children may come forth to pray.

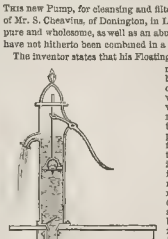
Farewell the world! Come—kiss my lips,
My soul grows dark—'tis life's eclipse.
Husband, farewell—I'm going hence—
I loved thee—love thee—parting sense.
Abide—and let my tongue bestow
A mother's blessing ere I go.
The Angels call me—lo! I come;
Children, I die! I'm going home.

CHARLES MACKAY.

PATENT FLOATING FILTERING PUMP.

THIS new Pump, for cleansing and filtering unwholesome water, is the invention of Mr. S. Chesvins, of Donington, in Lincolnshire. Its advantage is to procure a pure and wholesome, as well as an abundant supply, results which, it is believed, have not hitherto been combined in a pump.

The inventor states that his Floating Filtering Pump has been tested in a tidal river, and is now used in the extensive brewery in Spalding, where it furnishes a constant and abundant supply of wholesome water, entirely free from the sand and filth which the old leaden pipes, by being placed nearly to the bottom of the water, were in the constant habit of contracting, thereby preventing the engine from obtaining a sufficient quantity of water for the supply of the brewery; and, as a still greater proof of its utility, it may be added, that it has been frequently surrounded with the weeds and rubbish carried down the river, and yet has never, in one single instance, failed to produce a copious supply. Water is sweeter and purer at the surface than it is at the bottom, and the Floating Filter readily ejects filth of every description, such as worms, &c., and all impurities of the smallest kind. The common pump, in consequences of the pipe descending within six or eight inches to the bottom, draws up with the pure water every pernicious sediment within its reach. On the other hand, the Floating Filter, by taking a supply of water within four or six inches of the surface, and rising and falling with the water, at once secures it from all sediment; and should there be any light filth floating in the same, the Filter totally ejects it, and will supply hundreds of tons of pure and wholesome water daily if required.



The importance of the purity of water for drinking was never better understood than in the present age of sanitary improvement. Now, the Patent Filter may be fixed to tanks and butts, so as to remove all apprehension of unwholesomeness in the water by any impurity drawn up with it. The Filter can also be attached, without difficulty, to pumps of the old construction.

We have seen Mr. Chesvins's Floating Filtering Pump at work, and can fully attest its successful operation.

THE CONTRACT PACKET SERVICE.—On Saturday the report of a select committee of the House of Commons, appointed (last April) to inquire into the contract packet service, was published. The committee report—1. That, so far as the committee are able to judge from the evidence taken, it appears that the mails are conveyed at a less cost by hired packets than by her Majesty's vessels. 2. That some of the existing contracts have been put up to public tender, and some arranged by private negotiation, and that a very large sum beyond what is received from postage is paid on some of the lines; but considering that, at the time these contracts were arranged, the success of those large undertakings was uncertain, the committee see no reason to believe that better terms would have been obtained for the public. 3. The committee recommend great caution either in renewing the existing or in forming new arrangements. They suggest that if it be decided to renew the existing contracts, the most strict and searching inquiry should be instituted, by some responsible department of the Government, into the cost of the execution, into the manner in which the service has been performed, and into the profits resulting from the several transactions to the contractors, by which they have been respectively carried on; and if it should be decided to put up the several contracts to public tender, ample notice and full particulars of the terms and conditions of the service required should be given to the public, as being most likely to secure a competition by responsible parties. The committee consisted of Sir J. Hogg, Mr. Cardwell, Mr. W. Clay, Mr. Cowper, Mr. Thompson (alderman), Mr. Fitzroy, Mr. Hastie, Mr. Mangles, Mr. T. Baring, Mr. Baukes, Mr. W. Brown, Mr. Childers, Mr. Willcox, Mr. Grogan, and Mr. Anderson.

WRECK OF THE "MARY ELIZABETH."

On the 26th of May last, Commander Michell, in H.M.S. Sappho, arrived at Santa Martha (New Grenada), and was informed by an Indian, who had reached there overland, of the British vessel Mary Elizabeth, with a cargo estimated at £50,000, being on shore on the coast of La Goajira. Commander Michell, with the greatest promptitude, immediately weighed anchor, and, receiving a fresh breeze, worked up to windward along the shore of the province of Rio Hacha. On the 30th of May he descried the ship, lying on her broadside, with her masts gone (in the position in which she is shown in the Sketch), about two cables' length from the shore, with thousands of Indians on the beach. At three in the afternoon, after beating against a heavy breeze the gallant Commander succeeded in anchoring about half a mile outside the wreck. He immediately sent his boats, manned and armed, to examine her. She was lying in about seven feet water, bilged, and broken-backed, with almost the same quantity of water in her holds, about a cable's length from the shore, and a heavy ground-swell rolling over her. The vessel was fast breaking up, her rudder gone, and no human power or exertion could ever have got her off.

Some coasting vessels had secured, in the first instance, a little of the ship's rigging and furniture, and a few of the bale goods that were in the upper tiers; but the whole amount was very trifling: the remainder was past recovery, except by the Indians, who are the most expert divers in the world, and who, in one case could obtain anything; these savages kept continually diving into the holds, bringing up bales of damaged goods, and, with a broken spar, and the linen twisted round it, they formed rafts, on which the tide and wind drifted them to the shore. These Indians are the most warlike race of the whole of South America; they have never been conquered, and are of the most ferocious nature, subject to no laws, have no fixed habitations, and lead a pastoral life, grazing large herds of cattle and horses, on the produce of which they subsist. Their territory is a peninsula, one hundred miles in length and sixty miles in breadth; the soil is very rich, but quite uncultivated; their lands are common to all. They are a fine, muscular, handsome race; their women have pleasing features, light copper colour, and good-looking. The stronger sex have the barbarous custom of selling their females for a mere trifle; and, if the purchaser is not satisfied with her, he may send her back, and receive in return what they received in exchange for her. They have few laws, and are subject to the will of their chiefs; they number 40,000. They require life for life; and, a report being spread amongst them that two were taken and detained on board H.M.S. Sappho, they put a price on the commander's head.

WRECK OF THE "MARY ELIZABETH," OFF POINT GALLINAS ON THE GOAJIRA COAST.—FROM A SKETCH BY A CORRESPONDENT.

It was a strange, motley, and savage scene to behold this noble vessel, with her rich cargo, breaking up on this wild, desolate, and unknown coast—to view the devastation around her—the sea strewed with her apparel and stores—the rich and varied merchandise of British industry floating about the waters, flying like streamers of all colours far and near along the sea-lashed shore—the thousands of wild and savage Indians, all collected on the beach, where the wild surf beat furiously, some naked, and others partly clothed from the rich looms of England. It was a fit scene for reflection, and one even to stir the gentler feelings, as the waves or accident hove up or on the beach some memorial of friendship, books and papers, and letters, and articles of female ornament, destined as presents or received as such: now some little parcel was opened, soddened with the wet, a record of the heart and affections, but the giver and receiver were far away.

The Mary Elizabeth, 338 tons, of Liverpool, sailed on the 10th April from that port; and on the 14th May, at two in the morning, she struck on a bank off Point Gallinas, on the Goajira coast. As daylight broke, the crew discovered themselves about a quarter of a mile from the beach, where a tremendous surf was beating, and the Indians (who are quite uncivilised) collecting in vast numbers: they commenced swimming off to the ship; and the captain and crew, gaining for their lives, abandoned her at three in the afternoon. Commander Michell used his utmost exertions to save any portion of her cargo, furniture, or rigging; but finding all his power unavailing, left her, after remaining two days in an open and dangerous roadstead.

The Sappho afterwards went into Bahia Honda, where Commander Michell picked up Mr. Thom, late master of the Mary Elizabeth, who had used all his exertions to save as much for the benefit of the underwriters as lay in his power. After landing Mr. Thom at Rio Hacha, the Sappho finally sailed for Carthagena.

The Illustration shows the vessel as she was lying when seen by the Sappho. On the beach is a long rolling surf breaking—the Sappho in the distance running in and firing a gun; great numbers of Indians are running along the beach with all sorts of goods, and floating ashore on the spar-rafts, &c.

ARRIVAL OF CALIFORNIAN GOLD AND MEXICAN DOLLARS AT THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

A CONSIDERABLE addition has just been made to the stock in the vaults of the Bank of England; the conveyance of which our Artist has here pictured, as an illustration of "Labour and Capital."

It appears that on the morning of Monday, the 13th, the Calypso, Captain Worth, arrived at Portsmouth from the Pacific and Rio, 55 days out from the latter place. Her news had been considerably anticipated by other mercantile arrivals. She brought a freight, on merchants' account, of specie and Californian unrefined gold, which she commenced discharging at daylight on Friday morning; and in the evening the Calypso sailed for Chatham, to be paid off.

On Saturday the freight of precious metals was conveyed to London by special train on the South Coast Railway, in charge of Mr. Superintendent Sutton. It was transferred from the London-bridge terminus in fifteen vans, escorted by police, to the Bank of England, where its receipt occupied the whole day.

The amount in Californian gold thus received was about £120,000. The specie consists of upwards of 2,000,000 Mexican dollars, value about £400,000. The vans entered by the gates in Lothbury, and the treasure was forthwith stored in the bullion vaults of the Bank.

On Monday, Messrs. Gee and Co., of Hull, per Mr. Oliver Lyndall, delivered at the Bank of England about £80,000 in gold bars, ex Helen M'Gregor, from St Petersburgh, on account of the Russian Government. This, with the amount o Californian gold-dust and Mexican dollars delivered on Saturday, has added £100,000 over half a million to the stock in the Bank vaults.

ARRIVAL OF CALIFORNIAN GOLD AND MEXICAN DOLLARS AT THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

MEETING OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE.

(Concluded from page 190.)

FRIDAY.

Amongst the more interesting subjects under consideration at the statistical section on Friday week, was an address by the Chevalier Bunsen, on the relative amount and extent of the different races in Prussia and Germany, and on the statistics of Prussia in particular, having reference to railways, and the system of public instruction according to the latest returns.

The members of the Association and their friends dined together in the evening at the Town-hall. Upwards of 400 were present. At half-past five o'clock Professor Robinson took his seat at the centre of the raised cross table: seven other tables extended down the hall. Samuel Thornton, Esq., the Mayor, filled the Vice-President's chair; and amongst the distinguished persons present were M. Druuin de l'Huys (the French Ambassador), the Chevalier Bunsen (Prussian Ambassador), the Marquis of Northampton, Lord Lyttelton, Lord Lifford, Lord Wrottesley, Lord Adare, the Prince of Canino (Lucien Bonaparte), the Bishop of Worcester, the Bishop of Oxford, the Bishop of Manchester, the Dean of Ely, Sir Harry Inglis, Sir Charles Lyall, &c. The usual loyal and complimentary toasts were given, when the cloth was drawn.

THE EXCURSIONS ON SATURDAY.

Saturday, the 15th instant, was devoted to excursions—to Warwick by one party; and to the limestone caverns at Dudley Castle by another, and by far the most numerous party. The Warwick excursionists inspected the magnificent castle at Warwick, which was thrown open for their inspection by order of the Earl; they were also permitted to view the basement story of the castle, in which the massive groined vaults, and wine and ale cellars, kitchens, and usual servants' offices, are very interesting in an antiquarian point of view. After visiting this celebrated castle, the Beauchamp Chapel at Warwick, with its beautiful monuments; the famed Kenilworth Castle; and the exquisite seat of Guy's Cliff, attracted the attention of the excursionists, who rambled to such spots as they liked best, or most wished to see.

The Dudley Cavern seekers went to their destination by canal boats, of which five were engaged to transport such of the members of the Association as liked that mode of proceeding, but many went by other conveyances; and as great numbers of tickets had been issued to the residents of Dudley and vicinity, the throng of visitors to the Caverns was immense; according to some computations, nearly 15,000 persons availing themselves of the privilege during the day. The members of the Association were received near the Caverns by members of the local committee, by whom they were directed to the point of entrance, a romantic spot, enshrouded by trees, where hundreds of persons were waiting their turns of admission. Going down a few steps, the visitors passed under a great arch, excavated in the rock, and, following the track, were soon in the interior of the limestone caverns. These enormous caverns are not natural formations, but have been produced by the continued excavation of the limestone, of which immense quantities are used in the neighbourhood, and sent to various parts of the kingdom. The length of the caverns is very great, and, as may be inferred, midnight darkness reigns ordinarily throughout their recesses; but on this occasion the caves were illuminated at the expense of their noble owner, Lord Ward. The effect was most singularly beautiful; for as far as the eye could reach were rows of candles, which shed their tiny light upon the scene; and at the extreme end of the caves the candles were arranged so as to give the appearance of a temple. A short distance from the entrance the reflection of the candles in the canal which passes through part of the caverns was extremely singular, a continually flickering light being the only appearance produced; and it was not till the eye was accustomed to the darkness of the place, that the water could be distinguished. It was originally intended to have shown the mode of blasting the limestone rock; but from the circumstance that the heat from so many candles, and the great number of persons present, drew a current of air towards the mouth of the caves, so that, had the blast taken effect, the smoke and sulphurous vapours therefrom would have been exceedingly unpleasant to the crowds near the entrance. The effect of the scene in the caverns was superb in the extreme. When accustomed to the gloom that prevailed, the eye could distinguish the picturesque forms of the rock, and the huge pillars left to support the superincumbent masses of rock overhead; for it was curious to notice how little effect the thousands of candles had in dispelling the absolute darkness of the place. We should observe, the visitors did not go to the extreme end of the caverns; and at the point where they turned off to reach the entrance by another pathway, Sir R. Murchison delivered a brief lecture on the character of the rocks of the Dudley formation. Sir Roderick himself was the observed of all observers, not only in the caverns, but out of them; for the high-crowned green hat of an inhabitant of the Tyrol, and a shepherd's plaid scarf, rendered his costume picturesque and striking. On the conclusion of Sir Roderick's speech, which, by the way, he uttered through a speaking-trumpet, the French Ambassador, M. Druuin de l'Huys, made a brief and pithy address; after which repeated cheers were given for Sir Roderick the Ambassador, Lord Ward, his agent Mr. Smith, &c. making the caves resound again and again.

At a signal from Mr. Smith, red and blue fires were lighted at various parts of the caverns, the effect of which was striking and magnificent in the extreme, and drew forth shouts of admiration from the crowds who thronged the caves; and, as each successive blaze revealed the extent and form of the place, lighting up the projections and angles of the rocks, scenes of indescribable grandeur were produced. The visitors who had arrived earliest at the caverns then retired, to make room for others who could not till then enter; and all strove to get into the fresh air from the sulphureous vapours arising from the burning of the coloured fires. Hundreds, however, remained locked up as it were, for an hour or two, without being able in any way to help themselves: this promised at one time to be attended with rather unpleasant consequences, but ultimately the whole party effected an exit without accident or injury of any kind. The fault was in having orders for admission of so large a number of persons at the same time.

From the great caverns parties sauntered to other portions of Lord Ward's domain, and to visit Messrs. Cresswell's [illegible] in the thick or ten-yard coal, which scene forms the subject of one of our illustrations. It is a seam of coal ten yards in thickness; and at the spot represented, the coal, instead of being brought up from a great depth, as from a mine, is quarried as if it were stone in works in the open air. This was a source of great interest to the geological members of the Association, and its appearance was very peculiar; we should also mention that, in immediate proximity with these open works, are coal-mines worked in the ordinary way. Rambling to this and other points of interest filled up the time till about two o'clock, when all the visitors gathered, by different routes, on a portion of the estate called the "Wren's-nest," where Sir Roderick Murchison delivered another address. Sir Roderick was much applauded, and the Bishop of Oxford jocosely remarked that he thought the assemblage had better proceed at once to install the great geologist as Silurian monarch.

An excellent cold collation was provided in the School-rooms at Dudley for the members of the Association; after disposing of which, a stroll over the ruins of Dudley Castle or to some of the furnaces in the neighbourhood, as taste or inclination suggested, filled up the time till the hour to return to Birmingham, where a soirée in the Town Hall pleasantly finished the day, all being delighted with the romantic scenery they had viewed, and gratified at the courteous reception experienced at the hands of Mr. Smith.

MONDAY—TUESDAY—WEDNESDAY.

On Monday morning the Sections opened again, and some papers were read, but they did not possess much interest.

During the intervals between the hours at which the Sectional Meetings were held, the exposition of manufactures at Bingley House, in Broad-street, was visited daily by members of the Association and the immense body of strangers visiting the town. This exhibition gave the most unbounded satisfaction to all who saw it. Another exhibition in the town, which also engaged the attention of visitors was a model of Birmingham, produced by a young man named Brierly. It represents every street, and almost every house. It is wonderfully accurate, having been to the modeller a labour of six years.

On Monday night Professor Willis delivered a discourse on the application of mechanical science to railways, in the Town Hall.

(Continued on page 204.)

SIR R. I. MURCHISON'S GEOLOGICAL LECTURE IN THE DUDLEY CAVERN.

THE THEATRES.

SADLER'S WELLS.

On Wednesday Shakespeare's "Measure for Measure" was revived, with Miss Glyn as Isabella, and Mr Dickinson as Claudio, the other characters remaining in their former cast. The restoration of this play to the stage three seasons back was one of the most daring of the experiments made at this theatre. Coleridge held a bad opinion of the drama, as one of "the most painful say, rather, the most painful—part of Shakespeare's genuine works." We think that the poetic vein mean herein and the purpose of the greatest of dramatic poets. The play, to our mind, is a splendid protest against celibacy. The fairest form of this species of asceticism is depicted in the piety and disposition of Isabella; but, being wrong in itself, the best qualities her character possesses of experiences which end in redeeming her from the cloister altogether. Says the Duke:

> Dear Isabel,
> I have a motion much imports your good,
> Whereto if you'll a willing ear incline,
> What's mine is yours, and what is yours is mine.

All this is conceived in a true Protestant spirit; and the machinery of the play is cunningly contrived to serve as a vehicle for its demonstration, while it sufficiently veils the ulterior purpose. The abuse of arbitrary power, whether in Church or State, was never more significantly set forth. The Duke is as a concealed providence, present in a cloud to the whole action, and coming forth at the moment when a direct and manifest interposition becomes requisite. The part of Isabel requires much dignity and perfect elocution in the actress—both qualities which Miss Glyn eminently possesses. Her conception was complete: every word was weighed; and the entire soul of the actress was, we could feel, devoted to the meaning of the poet. The symbolical character of the play thus became more clearly manifest; and the whole performance, it may be safely recorded, has never been surpassed for force and beauty. Like the comedy itself, it must be studied as a work of art; and in the mind of all its apparent caution and rigid virtue, may be detected an under-current of enthusiasm and passion, which gives warmth for high feeling and strong emotion. The audience felt this, and, at the end, crowned the actress with the most unequivocal applause.

MARYLEBONE.

The lessee of this elegant theatre is an enterprising man, and not only promises to the public continual novelty, but has repeatedly given serious earnest of it. Monday recommenced the dramatic season, and the new engagement was bold enough to inaugurate it with a new and original tragedy, under the title of "Velasco." To be sure, we understand that in America the drama has already been frequently performed. Mr. Epes Sargent, the author, is, indeed, an inhabitant of Boston, U.S. The production, though scarcely original, either in structure or subject, is not without merit, though we could well have desired a more poetic and artistic treatment of the materials. Such of our readers as may happen to have read, in any collection of stage dramas, Cibber's "Zimena," will be familiar with the story, which Corneille had dramatised in his celebrated "Cid." The basis of the interest lies in the sentiment of honour, and is evolved in the struggle between that and the passion of love.

The hero is a Castilian; and the contention is, therefore, of the most severe intensity. Our Transatlantic poet has substituted for Rodrigo the name of Velasco: and, by the change, has certainly gained the liberty of converting the subject from a classical into a poetic one. At the beginning of the play, Velasco comes back to court, from a twelvemonth's banishment; having first signalised his return by a series of victories over the Moors, won by him as a masked warrior. The early scenes are enacted by Mr. Davenport with the visor down; it is thus that he gains an interview with his mistress, Isidora (Miss Vining), and prevents her marriage with her kinsman, Hernando (Mr. J. Johnstone). To this latter worthy the playwright ascribes all the misfortunes of the parties. To revenge himself for the loss of his bride, Hernando insinuates calumnies against Velasco to the King, and sows the seeds of strife between him and Lerma (Mr. G. Cooke). The former is the father of Isidora, and the latter of Velasco. Lerma is very old, and incapable of resenting an insult, from infirmity; a blow which he receives from Velasco he accordingly to be avenged by his son. Velasco undertakes the terrible duty, and thus becomes the slayer of his bride's father—who, with his dying breath, bids Velasco by oath to vengeance. The whole business is related by the King to Castile, who binds over all the litigants to peace, and commands the marriage of Velasco and Isidora to proceed. But Iñño (Mr C. Wheatleigh), the son of Gonzales, interferes, and, acting at the suggestion of Hernando, determines on vengeance for his father's death, and attempts to poison Velasco. Defeated in this, he stabs him, while Isadora drinks of the envenomed cup.

The part of Iñño was one of exceeding difficulty, but was performed with great tact; and that of Velasco was supported with much chivalrous bearing by Mr Davenport, who certainly gains ground in critical estimation. Miss Vining was frequently effective; but the best efforts of the evening were made by Mr. Lyon, who displayed much discrimination in the delineation of the character of the old Gonzales, and in the hands of a better dramatist, might have been a great deal more.

After the tragedy, which was finally successful, the interlude of "Perfection" was acted, to afford an opportunity for the début of a Miss Beaufort in the Lady of Munster. Possessed of a handsome person and a good contralto voice, with skilful-ish vivacity of deportment, Miss Beaufort's first appearance gave promise of her becoming, ere long, a considerable acquisition to the comic stage.

SURREY.

Mr. Shepherd, the lessee of this theatre, has announced that he has entered into partnership with Mr. Creswick, for the purpose of improving the estimation in which the theatre is held, by making adequate provision for the production of legitimate and original dramas, on which system the dramatic season of the theatre commenced on Monday. In a word, we believe that we are correct in asserting that, under the wing of Mr. Shepherd, Mr. Creswick is to be permitted to enact here the experiment which Mr. Phelps has so successfully pursued at Sadler's Wells. From the character of the opening piece, we gather that the line of business will not be so strictly Shakspearian as at the theatre just mentioned. This we think is right. Scope should be afforded for more modern efforts; and, accordingly, one of the best productions of our greatest living dramatist, Mr. Sheridan Knowles, has been selected to inaugurate the season. "The Rose of Arragon" is a play not without faults, but contains, nevertheless, some of Mr. Knowles's most powerful writing, and three or four scenes of great dramatic effect. The great drawback to its popularity is the monotony of the subject and treatment. The acts nearly all terminate in the same manner—the action, too, is kept in the background: and the dialogue is altogether of the declamatory kind. Imitation also of Euripides is apparent in it, particularly in one morassing soliloquy on the disadvantages of kingship, pronounced by the monarch of Arragon; and also in the generally reflective tone of the gentlemen and certain set speeches given to the villain Almagro—a part so elaborately written up that, on the first production of the piece at the Haymarket, Mr. Phelps was expressly engaged in support of it, the other two leading characters having been undertaken by Mr. and Mrs. Keau.

The performers on the present occasion were Madame Ponisi (Giovai), Mr. Creswick (Alonzo), and Mr. Mead (Almagro). About the last actor there is enough vigour and stern intelligence, which well qualify him for such a role. He is liable, however, to occasional exaggeration, and must cultivate discretion in the delivery of poetic imaginings. The finest specimen of Mr. Knowles' poetry, perhaps, occurs in this play—at the end of the fourth act, wherein Almagro describes the confusion of his own mind by the image of Chaos. To this we recollect that Mr. Phelps gave such careful expression, that he brought down the house with applause. Mead sacrificed the beauty to a hasty and passionate style which scarcely escaped ridicule. Mr. Creswick's Alonzo was both elegant and impassioned. It is hard work to support such a character against its rival; but Mr. Creswick succeeded in maintaining its ascendancy, and in making many effective points. Madame Ponisi was pathetic in the heroine, and exhibited the self-devotion of the character with an emphasis that reached the heart.

After the play the farce of the "Iron Boy" was performed, for the purpose of introducing Miss Dickinson, late of the Lyceum, in the part of Fanny. She was, of course, rturned with every encouragement.

In conclusion, the establishment has our best wishes for its prosperity, which we hope will equal the worthiness of its aim.

ADELPHI.

This theatre opened on Monday, with Mr. Bernard's "Marie Ducange," which was re produced with new scenes of much beauty. The house, also, has undergone improvement, two stone staircases from the pit and box lobbies having been added for the purpose of egress; and the entrance, with its panels of pink and green, and bouquet corners, looking uncommonly cheerful. The private boxes have been ornamented with damask drapery, and supplied with convenient cushions; while the chandelier, with its gas jets, has been also augmented in number. The performances went off with great applause, and the performers were welcomed back to their own proper stage with appropriate demonstrations of favour and affection.

The HAYMARKET and PRINCESS' theatres are both announced to open on the 1st October.

SMUGGLING EXTRAORDINARY.—On the night of the 13th ult., the Madrid mail, on its arrival at the Spanish town of Irun, from Bayonne, was searched by the custom-house officers and ten thousand dollars' worth of French jewellery was found therein coolly concealed in the roof. The courier in charge of the correspondence was admitted to bail. He was formerly cook to Narvaez, and seemed to be in a terrible state when the discovery was made. The night before, the letter-bags with the French correspondence, which had been sealed up at the Bayonne Post-office, were opened by the custom-house officers at Irun, who seized a large amount of gold watches, trinkets, and costly silks there.

The first list of subscriptions, just announced, for erecting a testimonial to the late Sir J. Barrow, has reached the sum of nearly £600; it is the intention of the committee to erect a column in the neighbourhood of his birthplace, Ulverstone, in Lancashire, which not only will do honour to the deceased, but likewise serve as a sea-mark.

MUSIC.

THE MUSICAL FESTIVALS.

The triennial musical meeting at Hereford has terminated prosperously, as regards the collections for the diocesan charities, but will be attended with the customary loss as regards expenditure over receipts. The collection, with additional donations since the festival, amounts to £683 14s.; in 1846 it was £812 15s. 2d.; in 1843, £690 13s.; in 1840, £1091 2s. 7d. The numbers of persons who attended the present performances were, at the Cathedral, on Tuesday, 385; on Wednesday ("Elijah"), 549; on Thursday (miscellaneous selection), 360; and on Friday (the "Messiah"), 395. The numbers at the evening concerts were—Tuesday, 155; Wednesday, 202; and Thursday, 515. A very complimentary letter has been addressed to Mr. Townshend Smith, the conductor, by the stewards, for "the admirable way in which all the arrangements have been made;" and adding "their perfect satisfaction at the excellent manner in which the whole of the performances have been given." The acting committee, of which the Rev. W. Cooke is the able and zealous chairman, have expressed their satisfaction at the general execution; and the Bishop and Canons have also congratulated Mr. Smith on the result of his labours. It appears that the meeting for 1852 is almost beyond a doubt, the Bishop and Lord Rodney having kindly offered to act as stewards, so that the list will, no doubt, be easily filled. The depressed state of agriculture in Herefordshire is considered to have affected the attendances; but, with every possible respect for the opinion of Mr. Townshend Smith, whose enthusiasm in the cause is beyond all praise, and who is a painstaking, conscientious musician, we adhere to our former opinions as to these gatherings of the three choirs. Their utility would be infinitely enlarged, and their popularity greatly extended, if there existed a thorough combination on the part of the clerical and aristocratic amateurs in the three counties (Herefordshire, Gloucestershire, and Worcestershire) to present annually, for the attraction of the musical masses a festival equal in artistic interest and importance to that of Birmingham or Norwich. Our firm conviction is, that if the present system be adhered to, these ancient festivals, which have been the stereotyped entertainments called upon to make up the deficit. Now, the three counties, with a proper organisation, could present a magnificent meeting every year, and, in order to interest the townsmen, we would suggest that whilst the Cathedral collections are properly kept sacred to the clerical charities, the local feeling inclines the financial returns. It is useless to disguise a fact which is so notorious, but the Festivals of the three Choirs do not present such performances as the increasing knowledge of art exacts. It is time to be regardful that the best music that can have the skill, experience, and self-possession to control a large orchestra; and the services of an efficient conductor are now as imperatively necessary as those of the principal singers, or skilful instrumentalist. Let the cathedral organists, by virtue of prescriptive right, retain the musical direction of the festivals, and make the requisite arrangements, and give to each of them such a portion to satisfy any reasonable professor; but, in the conduct of the music, let the endowed and experienced professor occupy the position of the directing mind to animate the masses. It is folly to suppose that the time is lost to control body of clever but unruly executants, who can only be ruled by a dictator or master-spirit, and without whose presence in an orchestra there can be no simultaneous, precise, and unanimous effect, and no expression. The general expression of a work must emanate from a cultivated conductor, having the feeling of the poet, as well as the knowledge of the musician. The mechanical gyrations of a fiddle-bow in beating time do not constitute a conductor, who ought to be the faculty of the orator who improvises—that of thinking on his legs. In the three Choirs there are all the elements to make their Festivals highly productive for charity and glorious to our art, but if it be resolved to follow the old track, then will their existence be inevitably shortened.

ITALIAN OPERA IN DUBLIN.—On the 15th instant Mdlle. Alboni appeared at the Dublin Theatre Royal as Cenerentola, supported by the sisters Mdlles. Corbari, and Sign. d'Ettorini, Gali, Ponsonni, and Tagliafico. Mr. Benedict was the conductor. Mdlle. Alboni subsequently performed Maria in Donizetti's "Figlia del Reggimento," Norina in "Don Pasquale," and Amina in the "Somnambula." Mdlle. Bosio has been engaged from "Lisbon," with her sister as Parrotta. Mr. Sims Reeves was to have appeared on Monday last, but was taken ill the last day of the Hereford Festival. He was, however, last Tuesday announced that he would appear on Thursday. The series of Italian Operas will terminate on the 22nd instant. The speculation has been completely successful.

COUNTRY NEWS.

In the early part of the week the weather was most boisterous at Margate; and on Tuesday it was so much so that none of the boats from London were able to land their passengers, but were obliged to carry them on to Ramsgate, from thence to be conveyed in omnibuses to Margate. Dreadful disasters are feared at sea.

NARROW ESCAPE.—On Saturday last, as the coach from Oban to Inverary (Scotland), en route between Tarsuit and Dalmally, was emerging from the pass of Aive, where the road is steep, a large mass of rock which had become detached from the side of Ben Cruachan was observed by one of the outside passengers to be rolling down immediately over the carriage, threatening its immediate destruction. The alarm was given to the driver, "Look out!" was the instantaneous exclamation. With admirable promptitude and presence of mind, the driver immediately unlocked the drag, urged his horses on to a gallop, and cleared the spot just as the rock bounded over the road and fell into the loch below. A moment's hesitation would have been attended with fatal consequences.

ANCIENT COINS.—An interesting discovery of coins of the 14th century was made on Saturday morning and Monday by the workmen employed in erecting some buildings at the back of the premises of Messrs. Perreau and Dallimore, drapers, of High-street, Newport, Isle of Wight. They consist principally of the pennies of the reigns of Edward I., Edward II., and III., the mints of London, Canterbury, York, Durham, Berwick, Newcastle, Lincoln, St. Edmund's, Bristol, Dublin, and Waterford, intermixed with many of the reign of Alexander of Scotland. About 2000 are in the possession of Mr. Perreau; and it is known that very many more were taken by the workmen previously to his becoming aware of the discovery. So large a hoard of coin, of one period, has not before been discovered in the island, and is equalled only by that brought to light some few years since at Dartford, Kent, and which consisted wholly of pennies of the reigns of the Conqueror. From the circumstance that all the coins now found are immediately anterior to the time of King Richard II., the period of the deposit may not unreasonably be referred to the burning of Newport by the French, in the second year of the reign of that Monarch.

BOILER EXPLOSION AND LOSS OF LIFE.—A painful catastrophe occurred on Thursday morning, at the mill of Mr. Hamer Stansfield, Burnley. Shortly before six o'clock the boiler burst with tremendous violence, blowing up the ceiling of the card-room, which is situated immediately over the boiler-house. The materials of the ceiling, in the card-room, fell upon the persons immediately above it, fell through into the boiler-house; and one poor fellow, a warper, named John Parkinson, was precipitated into the exploded boiler itself, and was taken out dead. Henry Rollinson, of Sandgrate, was so severely burnt that he survived but three hours. Samuel Barnes, a weaver, and James Pickles were dangerously hurt, and Thomas Tattersall, of Sandygate, whose escape from death was almost miraculous, was much burnt.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.—Half-past twelve on Saturday night the inhabitants of the Market-hill, Cambridge, were awakened by a cry of "fire," which was discovered by a neighbour, whose back windows overlooked the premises wherein the conflagration existed, on the Market-hill, and which, and were for many years the seat of the business of the late Mr. Alderman Bridges. This house has lately been let to a clothier named Lodge, and the flames made their appearance from several of the lower windows, and, extended with the utmost rapidity, seized the premises of Mr. Orridge, a chemist, and magistrate of the borough, on the north, and those of Mr Kent, a hatter, on the south. From Mr. Orridge's the fire communicated with the premises of Mr. Mulligan, woollen draper, and thence to those of Messrs. Modest and son, oil and colourmen, situate in St. Mary-street, which is a narrow thoroughfare, and to keep them protect the premises of Messrs. Peters and son, silversmiths, Messrs. Bacon, tobacconists, and others occupying the opposite side of the street, together with those residing in the Rose-crescent, were placed in imminent danger. On the south side, the fire passing from Mr. Kent's, entered upon the premises of Mr. Pearce, the clothier, and the premises where Mr. Orridge resides, on the northwest, down St. Mary's-street, the flames next took possession of the house of Mr. Wonfor, and thence passed into a shop in Warwick-street, and these formed the boundaries of the property annihilated. The fires were long entertained for the contiguous premises on either side, occupied by Mr D Pate and Mr Wilson, the silversmiths, respectively. The fire raged throughout the night, and eight houses were consumed. In addition to the parties whose premises were destroyed, many others suffered from the removal of their stock and furniture.

FATAL BOAT ACCIDENT AT PORTSMOUTH.—An accident, attended with a fatal result, from the dangerous practice of using chain cables instead of ropes or cordage, occurred on Thursday afternoon. Captain Somerville (late of the Royal Artillery) and Mrs. Somerville, with their female attendant, went out in one of the boat yachts. Being nearly becalmed at Spithead, and wishing to get on shore, they requested the boatmen to put the party on shore at Stokes Beach in his dingy. No sooner had the party got into her than she capsized, and the four persons were immersed in the water. The boat sank was close to, and by the exertions of the boy left in her and the boatmen, who regained the yacht, Captain and Mrs Somerville, and the attendant, were all got out of the water, but in a very exhausted state. It was supposed to be about an hour before the parties were brought on shore, when they were taken to Mr. Illingsworth's hot-baths, and every method for their resuscitation was used; medical aid was also soon got. Captain Somerville was soon recovered, and Mrs. Somerville also was resuscitated, but she remained in a precarious state for an hour or more. The attendant, Mary Anne Robinson, was lifeless before she was landed, and every endeavour to restore animation proved ineffectual. She was a confidential servant, who always accompanied Captain Somerville, who is subject to epileptic fits.

ROBBERY AT SEA.—Three men (Robert Smith, John Heaton, and William Kenney) were charged on Monday, at Liverpool, with an attempt to realise large plunder from the cabin passengers on board the Britannia, city of Dublin steam ship, during her passage from Dublin to that port, on Saturday night last. The prisoners, after dark, had obtruded themselves into the saloon, though they had not usual cabin fare. They were observed to some strange conduct on the part of one of them, but thought he was merely looking for a berth to sleep on; and, having no suspicion of his intention, did not question him. The steward soon afterwards found that several articles had been taken from his pantries; and two gentlemen passengers afterwards found that the same parties had been in their state-rooms, and had ransacked their pockets of money, &c. The vessel was off Holyhead during part of these transactions. Part of the property (nearly all of which was recovered) was found on board, after the vessel reached the waters of the Mersey. Mr. Rushton sentenced the three prisoners to be imprisoned for two months, and kept to hard labour

RAILWAY INTELLIGENCE.

MEETINGS.

EDINBURGH AND GLASGOW.—September 18: Half-yearly Meeting: Glasgow: Mr. P. Blackburn in the chair.—The traffic receipts show an increase, and the working expenses are diminished. A sum of £6230 is to be taken every half-year from revenue for maintenance of way. A dividend of 4 per cent. was recommended. The capital account is now closed: all future expenditure must be met from revenue. The directors will save £1000 a year by consolidating the services of the company. The amalgamation with the Union Canal and Wilson Town have passed Parliament. The Bathgate line will be ready in two months, and the amalgamation with this company is to be applied for. The total cost for maintenance of the main line will be £240 per mile per annum; on the branches, £200. The Stirlingshire Midland Junction may be completed next summer; as will also the junction from Bathgate to the Wilson Town Extension. The total receipts for the half-year were £90,407; expenditure, £34,042. The chairman explained the various liabilities of the company to other lines, which had been fully stated in the previous report. He could not explain the falling off in the passenger traffic. Their engagements with the canal had extended £200,000 in share purchases; but the present directors had only taken up the Wilson Town line, which was necessary to them. The report was adopted, the dividend was declared, and a notice given that evening meeting and evening trains on Sundays attached to the mails was handed in.

SOUTH-EASTERN.—Sept. 20: Half-yearly Meeting: London: James Morgan, Esq., in the chair. The directors stated that the revenue account for the half-year had been debited with a charge of £3780 for the formation of a fund for the renewal of permanent way; £4754 for deterioration of rolling stock, wagons, &c. The revenue for the half-year had been £220,308 0s. 9d., and the expenditure £128,527 7s. 4d.; leaving a balance of £86 680 13s. 5d.; which, after deducting the interest on the mortgage debt, &c., left a disposable balance of £61 295 13s. 9d. The report was adopted. A dividend of 10s. 6d. on the paid-up shares, 9s. 4d. on the 4th call, and 8s. 6d. on the No. 2 shares, declared. The directors were authorised to issue No. 4 shares remaining upon hand, with a guaranteed interest in perpetuity of 4½ per cent., and some other formal resolutions were passed. At the ordinary meeting it was resolved that a salary of £2000 per annum should be granted to the chairman, and £200 to each of eight other directors. The number of the board to be reduced to nine. A special meeting was then held, at which it was resolved, in order to complete the works, to create a new capital of £240,000, in £10 shares, bearing 4½ per cent. interest in perpetuity. The usual votes of thanks closed the proceedings.

GREAT WESTERN.—Sept. 20: Special General Meeting: Paddington, C. Russell, Esq., in the chair. This meeting was held for the purpose of adopting two or three resolutions recommended in the report of the directors to meet and confer with the directors of the said company; also, for the purpose of electing four proprietors duly qualified as directors of the said company. After very considerable discussion, Samuel Baker, Esq., of London; Richard Potter, Esq. (grandson of Richard Arkwright); Charles Wardell, Esq., London; and Thomas Williams, Esq., were elected directors; and Messrs. Withers, William Williams, Gladstone, and Sage were appointed members of the committee of investigation. A cordial vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the business of the day, which lasted nearly four hours.

The engine-drivers of the EASTERN COUNTIES have memorialised the Board, begging that certain of their grievances may be redressed; from among the firemen as a reduced rate of wages. The scale of wages for the old hands is 7s. 6d. per day, while the new drivers are paid only 4s. 6d., 5s., to 5s. 6d. This new step, in the painful railway system of dismissing the old hands, some of whom even now are not allowed the salaries originally fixed in their scale of wages

The new cylinder for the hydraulic press employed in raising the tube of the Britannia Bridge will be ready next week, and, within twelve days after it is fixed, the tube, it is expected, will be at its proper level. At the inquest on the body of the man Parry, killed on the 17th August, during the raising of the tube, by the hydraulic press, it was stated that "the cylinder alone was the cause of the accident; no other part of the machinery gave way." The tube at present rests 25 feet above high-water mark.

No reporters were admitted at the meeting of the LLANELLY, which was held on the 13th.

The GREAT WESTERN, it is expected, will have completed their passenger extension into Windsor before the SOUTH-WESTERN have finished their line from Datchet. The Great Western line is expected to be opened on the 1st of October.

It is computed that no less than £425,000 is still due from Mr. Hudson on the YORK and NORTH MIDLAND and BERWICK transactions. He has paid nearly £170,000.

Sir J. Macneil has proposed a gauge of 3 feet 10 inches, with smaller and less heavy locomotives, for branch lines whose traffic does not warrant a more expensive system.

WHAT IS OZONE?—Ozone, to which influenza is ascribed by Schönbein, and cholera by others, has been variously described and defined. It is said, by some, to be a combination of nitrogen and oxygen; by others, of oxygen and hydrogen; in a memoir by Schönbein, in Poggendorff's Draper, of New York, regards it as the active state of oxygen, or oxygen rendered active by electricity. Thus, by passing a current of electric fluid through pure oxygen, ozone is obtained, having a slight smell of phosphorus and nitre, and irritating the nostrils, as in catarrh. The test of its presence is a bit of paper dipped in a solution of iodide of potassium, and then in one of starch. The oxygen of common air contains a little ozone, which gradually passes off and disappears. Ozone and ozonised air will occasion them to act promptly on each other, producing a dark blue colour. See New York Journal of Medicine for July, 1849 —Medical Times.

HOLIDAY AND NORTH ISLINGTON DISPENSARY.—On Monday night a special general meeting of the governors of this institution was held at the Dispensary House, Francis-place, Holloway, "to confirm a resolution of the committee appointing a medical assistant to the dispensary; to consider the propriety of authorising the committee to appoint additional medical officers, if necessary; and also to consider the expediency of establishing, in connection with the charity, a benevolent fund, for supplying sick and convalescent patients with nutriment under the direction of the medical officers and a sub committee." The chair was taken by Samuel Lewis, Esq., the treasurer, who stated that during the late epidemic upwards of 1000 persons were aggravated forms of English cholera had been relieved at the chief and branch dispensaries, which were thrown open to all who applied, without the usual letter from a governor. The resolution of the committee to appoint an assistant to the resident medical officer was confirmed, and it was ordered that such assistant be a regularly qualified practitioner, and that his salary do not exceed £50a year. The committee were empowered to appoint such additional honorary medical officers as might be found necessary to the efficient working of the charity; and the following resolution was passed: "That being the opinion of the medical officers, that, in numerous cases, the recovery of patients has been very much retarded from the want of proper nourishment, particularly in typhus and other malignant cases, it is resolved that a convalescent fund be established, in connexion with the dispensary, for supplying the sick and convalescent poor patients with nutriment, under the direction of the medical officers." A considerable sum was subscribed towards the convalescent fund, Mr. Prentice handing in a cheque for £5 5s. as a thank-offering for the merciful recovery of Mrs. Prentice from a violent attack of cholera. The chairman announced the receipts of £10 0s. in aid of the dispensary funds, from the Rev. Mr. Collison.

STATISTICS OF FRENCH LITERATURE.—It is calculated that from the 1st of January, 1840, to the 1st of August, 1848, there were issued from the press in France 87,000 new works, 70 new, and pamphlets; 3700 reprints of ancient literature, and French classic authors; and 4000 translations from modern languages—more than one-third of the latter from the English, the German and the Spanish coming next in numbers, and the Portuguese and the Swedish languages having furnished the smaller contributions. Nine hundred dramatic authors are named of pieces produced on the stage, and afterwards published, 60 only of comedies and dramas not acted. Among the published works are 200 on occult science, cabalism, cheiromancy, necromancy, &c., 75 volumes on heraldry and genealogy. Social science, Fourierism, communism, and all nonsense of all sects, count 30,000 works of all sizes; 6000 romances and novels; and more than 800 works of travel. According to a calculation, for which the authority of M. Didot's (the publisher's) name is given, the paper employed in the printing of all these works would more than twice cover the surface of the 86 departments of France.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT BALMORAL.

There has been nothing to interrupt the even tenor of her Majesty's life in her Highland home during the past week. On Monday, the Queen and Prince, attended by the Marchioness of Douro, paid a second visit to the "Hut" on Loch Muick, and passed the night there, returning to Balmoral on Tuesday evening.

The unfavourable change which has taken place in the weather has somewhat curtailed the pleasures of the Court. On two or three days last week it rained so much that Prince Albert was prevented from following his favourite pastime of deer-stalking; and her Majesty was necessitated to curtail her usual walk into a short turn amid the circumjacent grounds. His Royal Highness was out on Thursday for a considerable while on Glengelder, and had superior, or, at all events, more successful sport, than he has hitherto attained. Five stags were brought in as trophies of his skill. Her Majesty, who invariably manifests an extreme interest in his pursuits, and seems to derive much pleasure from his success, was a spectator on the occasion. She accompanied the party, mounted on a beautiful and active Highland pony.

It is now definitely determined that her Majesty will leave Balmoral on Wednesday next, on her return to the south. The Royal party will pass the first night at the George Hotel, Perth; on Thursday her Majesty will arrive at Derby, where the whole of Cuff's magnificent establishment, known as the Midland Hotel, has been secured for the Royal accommodation. On Friday, her Majesty will leave Derby, and, passing over the Midland, Birmingham and Derby, Bristol and Gloucester, Great Western and South-Western railways, the Royal party will arrive at Portsmouth the same night, en route for Osborne.

THE QUEEN DOWAGER.—On Sunday her Majesty the Queen Dowager, accompanied by their Serene Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Meiningen, and the members of her Majesty's household, attended divine service at Stanmore Church. The Hon. and Rev. Douglas Gordon and the Rev. Mr. Oliver were the officiating clergymen. His Serene Highness the Hereditary Prince of Saxe-Meiningen arrived at the Priory on Friday evening, from Germany, in time to join the dinner circle. His Serene Highness Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar is staying with her Majesty.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester went, on Tuesday, to Bentley Priory, near Stanmore, to pay a visit to the Queen Dowager. Her Royal Highness, after partaking of a déjeuner with her illustrious relative, returned to the White Lodge in Richmond Park.

Her Royal Highness the Archduchess Beatrix of Este (Infanta of Spain and Archduchess of Austria) was safely delivered of a Prince on Sunday morning, at the town residence of her husband, the Infante Don Juan, in Park-square, Regent's-park.

Viscount Strangford returned at Hanover, from Brussels, on the 8th instant, on a visit to his Majesty the King of Hanover.

Viscount Brackley has rallied from his recent severe attack, and, according to accounts received in town on Wednesday, was considered better by his medical attendants.

The mortal remains of the late Bishop of Norwich, who died on the 6th instant, while on a visit at Brahan Castle, Inverness-shire, the seat of the Hon. Mrs. Stuart Mackenzie, were interred in Norwich Cathedral, on Friday last.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The experiment of an Autumn meeting was tried on Tuesday on Epsom Downs, and, if it failed to put money in the pockets of the speculators, "Messieurs the Brighton Railway and Dorling," it afforded the public a capital day's sport. The first of the three October réunions at Newmarket commences on Tuesday, with a bill of fare of extraordinary attraction, embracing the Triennials, the Hopeful, Granby, Rutland, and other two-year-old engagements, the Grand Duke Michael and Cracow Stakes for three year-olds, and a vast number of matches; it promises to be the best "first" October (query September?) week ever known. Basingstoke and Brewood races commence on Monday; Kelso and Lanthwardine on Tuesday; Southart on Wednesday; and Chesterfield, Leicester, and Hastings, on Thursday: the Chester people have knocked up a capital list. After sports are at an end; and the only cricket matches on the tapis are between eleven of all England and twenty two of Birmingham, and eleven of England and sixteen of Gravesend, both to commence on Monday. The coursing season commences on Tuesday at Abrington, in Scotland.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—A rather busy day at the Corner—chiefly, however, in settling—until late this afternoon, when the metallics found ample employment in the forthcoming events at Newmarket and Epsom, as well as on the Derby, at the undermentioned prices:—

AUTUMN HANDICAP (EPSOM)

2 to 1 agst Snowstorm	6 to 1 agst Keraun	7 to 1 agst Present
	12 to 1 agst Kisswray

CESARIEWITCH

15 to 1 agst Glenelvon	20 to 1 agst Glen Saddal	30 to 1 agst Lady Evelyn
16 to 1 —— Varlena (t)	25 to 1 —— Fire-eater	30 to 1 —— Long-grass
20 to 1 —— Sunwinton	25 to 1 —— Roby (t)	30 to 1 —— Gertrude
20 to 1 —— Bonnet	30 to 1 —— Rheum	35 to 1 —— Legerdemain
	30 to 1 agst Wenlow.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE

17 to 1 agst Ribaldry	40 to 1 agst Prior of St. Margaret's

DERBY

10 to 1 agst Lord Eglinton's 1st (t)	20 to 1 agst John o' Groat (t)	33 to 1 agst Windhound
	20 to 1 —— Mavors	33 to 1 —— Bolingbroke (t)
13 to 1 —— Pinsford	30 to 1 —— Delcomb (t)	45 to 1 —— Rio to Kyrote (t)
15 to 1 —— Goldie Callum	33 to 1 —— William the Conqueror	50 to 1 —— Sir Hugh to 1 —— The Italian		50 to 1 —— The Nigger (t)

THURSDAY. Business was on so small a scale this afternoon, that we need not preface the quotations with any observations:

SEPTEMBER THREE YEAR-OLD TRIENNIAL

7 to 4 agst Tadmor	5 to 2 agst Vatican
	12 to 1 agst Tadmor and Goldie Callum winning the two Triennials

CESARIEWITCH.

8 to 1 agst Vatican	20 to 1 agst Glen Saddal	30 to 1 agst Legerdemain
10 to 1 —— Glenelvon	25 to 1 —— Lady Evelyn	40 to 1 —— Kisswray
17 to 1 —— Essedarius	25 to 1 —— Fire-eater	40 to 1 —— Smuggler Bill
	CAMBRIDGESHIRE
30 to 1 agst Minto	30 to 1 agst Gen. Lowe	50 to 1 agst Collingwood
	DERBY
17 to 1 agst John o'Groat	40 to 1 agst Lady Geraldine	66 to 1 agst Sanza
20 to 1 —— Mavors	45 to 1 —— Bolingbroke

EPSOM AUTUMN MEETING.

The racing commenced at half-past one o'clock on Tuesday, and terminated a few minutes after six.

THE NORMANTON STAKES of 10 sovs each, with 75 added.

Lord Strathmore's Probe, 3 yrs, 8st 6lb (£100) ..	(J. Smith)	1
Mr. Death's Antagonist, 5 yrs, 7st 10lb (£100) ..	(W. Abdale)	2

BENTINCK STAKES of 10 sovs each, with 50 added.

Major Martyn's The Swede, 3 yrs, 7st 10lb	(Mann)	1
Mr. W. Ewall's Bishranger, 3st 7lb	(W. Hewlett)	2

THE EPSOM AUTUMN HANDICAP of 20 sovs each, with 300 added; winners extra. The second to receive 50 sovs out of the stakes, and the third 25 sovs.

Mr. T. B. Chaffen's Kisway, 3 yrs, 8st 11lb, carried 8st (Dockeray) 1
Mr. Wrather's Maid of Masham, 4 yrs, 7st 10lb .. .. (W. Abdale) 2

Immediately after starting, Keraun took a clear lead, followed by the St. Winfred colt and Kisseway, next to whom were Maid of Masham and Sanwinton. In this state they ran to the mile-post, where the Maid of Masham took the second place, and the speed improved, still without being by any means first-rate. Keraun maintained a lead until he fairway up the distance when he gave way to the Maid of Masham, Kisseway, and Sanwinton; a very exciting struggle between the three terminated in favour of Kisseway by a head, the same between second and third, Paquita a good fourth. Ran in 2 min. 50 secs.

THE ARISTOCRATIC STAKES (handicap) of 10 sovs each, with 25 added.

Lord Strathmore's Rat-trap, 6 yrs, 11st 4lb ..	(Owner)	1
Mr. S. L. Fox's Lady Frances, 4 yrs, 10st 6lb ..	(Mr. Bevill)	2

PLATE of 50 sovs. Heats.

Mr. Ramsbottom's f by Velocipede, out of Miss Wilfred, 3 yrs, 6st 13lb (£150)	(Ralph Sherwood)	1
Mr. Stephenson's Old English Gentleman, 3 yrs, 6st 7lb (£50) (Sabin)		2

MANCHESTER RACES.—THURSDAY.

THE AUTUMN WELTER HANDICAP of 10 sovs each, with 40 added.

Mr. G. Gaskell's The Snowgrie or Bill	1
Lord Strathmore's Spectator	2

THE CHAMPAGNE STAKES of 10 sovs each, with 50 added

Mr. Greenwood's Snowdrift	1
Mr. Greene's Candidate	2

THE CHESTERFIELD HANDICAP of 100 sovs, in specie, added to a Handicap Sweepstakes of 15 sovs each.

Mr. Gill's Pasmunger	1
Sir J. Hawley's Fernhill	2

MATCH, £100. Three quarters of a mile.

Mr. Scott's Treasure	1
Mr. Collingwood's Calomel	2

THE HELME STAKES of 30 sovs each, with a Cup added, for horses belonging to officers of the 4th Dragoon Guards.

Captain Cunningham's Chertsey	1
Captain Jones's Turpan	2

ROWING MATCH.—The rowing match between Gale, of Pimlico, and Chitty, of Richmond, the latter of whom won the prize given by Evan Morris, Esq., for watermen's apprentices, at the last Toumes regatta, took place on Wednesday; but, owing to accident, was, as far as sport was concerned, brought to an early close. The race was for £10 aside, the distance being from Putney-bridge to Chiswick-eyot; and shortly after the start, which was well taken by both, Gale's boat, one of peculiarly light construction, capsized, and he was immediately taken into his cutter. Chitty, who was a little astern, but rowing extremely well at the time of the accident, pursued his way over the course, in order to claim the stake.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Eric the Dane."—1. Is right in his five-move solution. 2. With regard to a plurality of Queens on the Chess-board, there is much to be said for and against, as he will find on referring to the "Knowells Analyser" of Major Jaenisch, where the subject is treated at length. 3. The proposal to have some distinguishing mark on the King's Pieces has been anticipated. In the new Chess-men, the King's Rook and Knight have each a small crown stamped on the top, and this improvement will very greatly facilitate both the recording and playing over games.

"C. R. L."—We are glad to recognize our old contributor again, and shall find a corner shortly for his last favours.

"Bellary."—The last is an undoubted improvement on your previous efforts in the same walk.

"A. B. C."—The Black king would obviously take the Rook, and then how could you mate to the stipulated number of moves?

"W. L. K.," Newport; "Frederick," Bath; and others.—Orders for the "Staunton Chessmen" are received, we believe, at the office of the Chess-Player's Chronicle, 21, King William-street, Charing-cross, and by any respectable chess and draughtsmen-seller in the kingdom. For particulars as to price, material, &c., we must refer you to the advertisements.

"Fearyou."—A Pawn, when advanced to his eighth square, must be exchanged for a superior Piece before the adversary makes another move.

"Lilly."—You have made some mistake in setting up the men in Problem No. 294. Look at it once more.

"Pawn."—It is no trifling matter to play two games at once, without seeing the board, against even inferior antagonists; but the difficulty is marvellously enhanced when the opposing players are skilful and experienced.

"C. E. B. C."—Your solution of the old problem appears correct.

"B. B."Barnstaple.—1. As a general principle, "A's" proposition is correct, the shortest solution of a Problem being the best. But the case he instances in illustration is inapplicable, as mate cannot be given in less than the stipulated number of moves. 2. Thanks; but they have not "point" enough for our columns.

"R. N."—Club.—We should recommend you to postpone the purchase of men for your club a few days. The new Chess-men are on the eve of appearing, and they combine advantages which entitle them to preference beyond any of the patterns named.

"H. E. K."—Very clever.

"P. C. W."—"Problem" as a misnomer, applied to such a composition.

Solutions by "Bellary," "Omicron," "S. U.," "Dereson," "M. P.," "Rev. J. T. N.," "Mire," "M. P.," Abbey, "Lilly," "M. E. R.," "C. C. C." "M. M." "Philo-Chess," "Ezra," "Antiquary." "F. R. S.," are correct. Those by "B. B." "R. T." "J. B." are wrong.

THE STAUNTON CHESS-MEN.—In reply to numerous enquiries as to when and where the new Chess-men can be obtained, we are requested by the proprietors of them to state that the delay in their publication is occasioned solely by the efforts making to render the men in every respect deserving the extensive patronage they have the promise of securing, and that the sets complete in IVORY, CARRARA MARBLE, and WOOD, including a beautifully characteristic box of "Canton Pierre," and a new treatise on the game by the author of the "Chess-Player's Handbook," will be issued to the trade on Saturday next, the 29th.

 Want of space again compels us to postpone the answers to several communications.

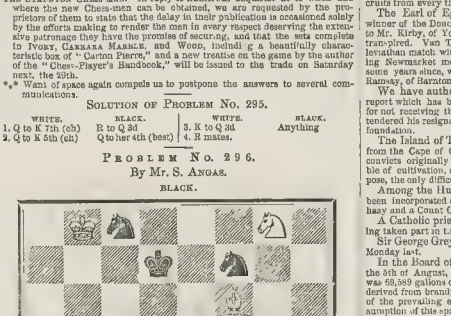
SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 295.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Q to K 7th (ch)	R to Q 3d	3. K to Q 3d	Anything
2. Q to K 5th (ch)	Q to her 4th (best)	4. R mates.

PROBLEM NO. 296.

By Mr. S. ANGAS.

BLACK.



WHITE.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

MATCH BY CORRESPONDENCE

BETWEEN THE LONDON AND AMSTERDAM CHESS CLUBS

WHITE (Amsterdam).	BLACK (London).
42. R to K 2d (ch)

London to play.

CHESS PLAYING WITHOUT SEEING THE BOARD.

The following is the Second of the two Games played simultaneously by Mr. Harrwitz without seeing the board, against four members of the Glasgow Chess Club.

(Allgaier Gambit.)

WHITE. (Mr. Harrwitz).	BLACK (Messrs. Tilchman & Knott).	WHITE. (Mr. Barrwitz).	BLACK (Messrs. Tilchman & Knott).
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	27. P to Q R 4th	Q to R 2d
2. P to K B 4th	P takes P	28. P to Q R 5th	B to Q Kt 2d
3. K Kt to B 3d	P to K Kt 4th	29. P to Q R 5th	P takes P
4. P to K R 4th	P to K Kt 5th	30. P to Q Kt 6th	P to Q R 3d
5. K Kt to K 4th	P to K R 4th	31. Q to Q 4th	P to Q 4th
6. K B to Q B 4th	K Kt to R 3d	32. P takes P	B takes P
7. P to Q 4th	P to Q 3d	33. Q to K B 4th (ch)	K to Kt 2d
8. K Kt to Q 3d	P to K B 6th	(b)
9. P takes P	K B to K 2d	34. Kt takes B	R takes Kt
10. Q B to K Kt 5th	B takes B	35. Q to K 4th (c)	Q to Q R 6th (ch)
11. P takes B	Q takes P	36. K to Kt sq	Q to Q Kt 5th (ch)
12. P to K B 4th	Q to K Kt 3d	37. Q takes Q	P takes Q
13. Q Kt to B 3d	Q Kt to B 3d	38. R to Q sq	R takes R (ch)
14. B to Q Kt 5th	Q B to Q 2d	39. K takes R	K takes P
15. B takes Kt	B takes B	40. R to Q 6th (ch)	K to Q Kt 4th
16. Q to K 2d	Castles on Q side	41. K to Kt 2d	P to K Kt 6th
17. P to Q 5th	B to Q 2d	42. K to Kt 3d	P to K Kt 7th
18. Castles on Q side	P to K B 3d	43. R to Q 6th (ch)	K to Q B 3d
19. Q to K 3d	K to Q Kt sq	44. R to Q sq	P to K R 5th
20. P to K B 5th	Q to K sq	45. K takes P	P to K R 6th
21. Q to Q 4th	Kt to K Kt sq	46. Kt to Q 4th (ch)	K to Q K 3d
22. Q R to K Kt sq (a)	K R to R 3d	47. Kt to K B 3d	P to K R 7th
23. Kt to K B 4th	P to Q B 4th	48. Kt takes P	R takes Kt
24. P takes P en passant	B takes P	49. R to K Kt sq	Kt to K 3d
25. Kt to K 6th	R to Q 2d	50. P to Q B 4th	P to Q R 4th (ch)
26. P to Q Kt 4th	P to Q Kt 3d	51. K to R 5th	Kt takes K B P

White resigned.

(a) Threatening to take the K Kt P for nothing.

(b) The loss of White's game may be attributed to this move. Had he played instead either 33 Kt takes B, or 33 Kt to Q B 5th, he might have won easily, for suppose, in the first case,

33 Kt takes B	R takes Kt	35. Kt takes R P (ch)	K to Kt 2d
34. Kt to Q B 7th	Q to R 6th (ch)	37. Q takes Q R P, and must win.
35. K to Kt sq	R to Q 6th

Secondly,

33. Kt to Q B 5th	Q takes Kt	35. Q takes P, and Black must lose.
34. Q takes R	Q takes Kt (best)

(c) Very tempting, but not so good as Q to Q B 7th (ch), &c.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No 482. By Mr. S. ANGAS.

White: K at his Kt 6th, B at Q 8th, Kts at K B 5th and K 7th, P at K R 3d.
Black: K at his B 5th.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

No. 483.—By Mr. A. G. ***

White: K at K B 5th, Q at K Kt 3d, Bs at K 7th and Q R 4th, Kt at Q 3d; Ps at K B 4th, Q 2d, Q Kt 4th, and Q R 3d.
Black: K at Q 4th, R at Q B 5th, Kts at K 5th and Q B 3d, and P at Q B 2d.

White playing first, mates in four moves.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The ship Henry Clay, 1500 tons register, took fire on the morning of the 5th inst. at New York, and was burnt to the water's edge. She was one of the Liverpool packets, and was to have left the city the following day.

The train from the north due on Monday night at five minutes past 9 o'clock did not arrive at Euston-square station till half an hour after midnight. About the middle of Watford tunnel the axletree of the tender broke, and the train was immediately brought to a standstill, without, however, any further damage. After nearly three hours' detention, the train was taken back to King's Langley, and brought through the tunnel on the down line. From the same cause, the later trains did not arrive till much after their time.

Amongst the personages of distinction who are still at Ostend for the benefit of sea-bathing, may be mentioned his Royal Highness Prince Albert of Prussia, their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Holstein-Glucksburg, the Princess Royal of Wurtemburg, &c. The town is entirely free from epidemic disease.

The Scientific Society of Lille has proposed a gold medal, of the value of 300f., to be awarded in 1851, for the first temperance society which shall be established in each of the cantons of the arrondissement of Lille, similar to those existing in America, England, and Ireland.

On last Saturday morning, at six o'clock, James Sharpe, who was tried for sedition at the Central Criminal Court with Ernest Jones and others, and sentenced to two years' imprisonment, died in the Westminster House of Correction, Tothill-fields, from an attack of Asiatic cholera.

On Monday evening the Lord Mayor had the honour of entertaining at dinner a party of private friends connected with the city of London. Covers were laid for 50.

An American paper has the following paragraph:—"Mr. Duncan, who has a plantation on the Mississippi river, has lost 91 negroes by cholera. His other cattle were in equal health."

Alderman Lawrence has appointed the Rev. D. Davison, M.A., to be his chaplain during the year of his shrievalty.

A vessel which has arrived at Chatham, from Bombay, has brought twenty-two weight of ancient sculptures from Nineveh, which are intended to be forwarded to the British Museum for deposit in that national establishment. The authorities of the Treasury have given the necessary directions for the unshipment and free delivery to the Museum of these valuable relics, without being previously disturbed.

The United States sloop-of-war, Dale, arrived at New York on the 30th ult., from San Francisco, with 65,000 dollars in specie: no freight. The Empire City was not expected in a few days from Chagres.

A recent imperial Russian ukase orders a new conscription of 18 recruits from every thousand souls.

The Earl of Eglington has sold his celebrated horse Van Tromp, winner of the Doncaster St. Leger and the Goodwood and Ascot cups, as a sire, to Mr. Kirby, of York, for a large sum, the precise amount of which has not transpired. Van Tromp will close his racing career at the conclusion of the Newmarket match with Surplice and Justice, to come off during one of the ensuing Newmarket meetings. He will then be delivered up to Mr Kirby, who, some years since, was the purchaser of Lanercost, Van Tromp's sire, from Mr. Ramsay, of Barnton, at the high figure of £2000.

We have authority for stating that there is no truth whatever in the report which has been current, that Mr. Moore O'Ferrall had been reprimanded for not receiving the Italian refugees at Malta, and that he had in consequence tendered his resignation. The report had not even a shadow of ground for its foundation.

The Island of Tristan da Cunha, which lies about 1000 miles W.S.W. from the Cape of Good Hope, is, it is said, to be made a penal settlement for the convicts originally destined for the Cape. We understand it is an island capable of cultivation, and from its isolated position is well adapted for such a purpose, the only difficulty being that the landing is always more or less dangerous.

Among the Hungarian nobles concerned in the insurrection, who have been incorporated as simple soldiers in the Austrian army, are a Count Esterhazy and a Count Erdödy, they must have been placed in the artillery.

A Catholic priest, named Straus, was shot at Pesth on the 9th, for having taken part in the Hungarian insurrection.

Sir George Grey dined with his constituents at Berwick-on-Tweed on Monday last.

In the Board of Trade tables we find that, in the single month ending the 5th of August, the increased quantity of brandy duty paid for consumption was 68,389 gallons over the same month last year; so that the additional duty derived from brandy for the single month was no less than £34,194. The effects of the prevailing epidemic are here most strikingly seen by the increased consumption of this spirit

The Port of Adelaide Observer, of March 31, records the arrival in that colony of a ketch, of no more than fifty-eight tons, called the Bountiful of Swansea, which safely arrived out from "Old England," after a passage of some six months. They must have been venturous spirits who ploughed the ocean in so small a craft.

Dr. W. B Carpenter has been appointed Professor of Medical Jurisprudence in University College, in the room of the late Dr. Anthony Todd Thomson, deceased.

The extensive quadrangle formed in Buckingham Palace by the erection of the east wing is, by the express command of her Majesty, to be entirely covered with india-rubber paving, which prevents the noise of rumbling wheels. The quadrangle contains ample room for the inspection of a squadron of horse or a battalion of infantry

Church-rates at Southampton, it would seem, are nearly doomed. At two different polls recently taken in the parish of St. Lawrence, they were refused; and in the large parish of St. Mary, a motion for collecting the amount proposed to be levied by voluntary contributions, was carried by a majority of 38 to 15.

It is ascertained that if only one-half of the objections which have been lodged against the electors in the boroughs and county of Cardigan are substantiated, the next candidate for the representation will have but little trouble to canvass, as nearly half the electors will be disfranchised.

The free harbour of Venice now extends no further than the borders of the island of St. Giorgio Maggiore. Goods warehoused elsewhere must be removed to within the limits within three months, or they will have to be introduced for consumption and pay the import duty

Gleeson Wilson, the murderer of Mrs. Henrichson, her two sons, Henry George Henrichson and John Alfred Henrichson, and her female servant, Mary Pearce, at Liverpool, in the month of March last, paid the last penalties of the law, on Saturday, on the scaffold at Kirkdale Gaol. He died without confessing his crime, and protesting his innocence.

Early on Sunday morning an oil and colour shop and the premises in Shoreditch, were burnt down, the sleeping inmates being rescued with difficulty. At another fire, which took place about the same time, at Barkside, a woman named Walsh was very serious y burnt.

At the half-yearly rent audit of the Earl of Egmont, on Monday last the noble owner of Cowdray handsomely remitted to the extent of 20 per cent, on his rental. The Hon. George Ponsonby, of Woolbeding House, has made a similar reduction on his rental.

Sixteen guillotines have been constructed in Paris during the last year for the different states of Europe in which that mode of execution has been adopted.

The congregation of St. John's Church, Broad-court, presented to their minister, the Rev. Henry Anders, on Saturday last, a very handsome pocket communion service, together with a book of offices, beautifully bound. The occasion expressed that the testimonial was presented by the congregation "as a mark of their affectionate regard."

The blockade of Venice has been raised since the 27th ult., as notified this week by Lord Palmerston in the Gazette

On Wednesday morning week a street-organ player, who had been sleeping on the public green, Glasgow, discovered that he had been robbed during the night while asleep of no less a sum than 17 sovereigns, a half-crown, and some coppers.

On Tuesday, John Doolan, charged with stealing tea in the London docks, on being taken into custody, drew a knife and pungedit with well-fighted desperation into his body. The crimson stream gushed forth with tremendous impetuosity; the constable lifted up his voice in alarm for help; there was immediately rushing to and fro in hot haste for surgeons; when, lo! it turned out the "never-do-well" had some bladders of port wine concealed beneath his vest! The rascal was committed for trial.

The Emperor of Russia, in forwarding to the Austrian Commander General Haynau the insignia of the Order of St. Andrew, brilliantly set in diamonds, wrote an autograph letter, complimenting the general on his gallant conduct during the Hungarian campaign.

The portion of Oxford-street termed the "Hollow," situated between Duke-street and South Molton-street, has been for some time past closed for the purpose of being re-paved with solid blocks of granite, and was re-opened on Saturday, to the convenience of the vast traffic of that great public thoroughfare

Mr. Godfrey Pigott, of Bolton-upon-Dearne, died on Thursday week from concussion of the brain, occasioned by a blow of the bal. under the right ear, whilst playing at cricket, eight or nine days before.

Mr. James Dalton Lamport, a young man of respectable connexions and unimpeachable character, cashier to the house of Messrs. Ewart and M'Connell, Manchester, terminated his existence on Monday by blowing himself through the brain with a pistol. The cause is unknown, as, although some trifling irregularities might be observable in the books, no deficiency in the cash could be discovered.

Prince Canino (Lucien Bonaparte), the late President of the Roman Republic, is to be entertained at a soirée at the Town-hall, at Barnsbury, on Monday evening next

The Marquis of Waterford, after the late Curragh meeting, with his characteristic liberality, gave to the Rev. P. Carey, Catholic curate of Newbridge, the sum of twenty pounds for the poor in the neighbourhood of the Curragh

Mulberry trees have been planted in several districts of the Mauritius, with the view of breeding silk-worms in a large scale; and it is hoped that silk will soon become a considerable article of export from the island.

THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION AT BIRMINGHAM.

(Continued from page 201.)

In the afternoon Sir David Brewster was elected President for the ensuing year, and Edinburgh was fixed upon for the next meeting of the Association.

On Tuesday morning the various Sections were again opened, but there were few subjects of general interest discussed: Prince Canino, on the distinction of the little blue magpie of Spain from that of Siberia; and Dr. Buckland (who attended for the first time this day), on the general presence of phosphorus in soils, were the most attractive. The number of Quakeresses who attended the meetings of the Sections were not a little remarkable.

On Wednesday afternoon the concluding general meeting of the members of the Association was held in the Town Hall, at which Colonel Sabine, the general secretary, read the synopsis of recommendations by the general committee, and they were duly adopted.

Professor Phillips, the assistant secretary, read a report, from which it appeared that, during the present meeting of the Association, there had been present old life members 277, old annual 94, new life members 11, new annual 39, associates 439, ladies 237, and foreigners who had arrived by railway 39—total, 1182 persons; from whom had been received £951 5s. 9d. These numbers had only been exceeded twice at any meeting of the Association which had been held since they had assembled in Birmingham, ten years ago.

The President, in an eloquent and fervent address, expressed the thanks of the Association to the Mayor and various local authorities of Birmingham. The meeting had been eminently successful.

Sir R. I. Murchison moved a vote of thanks to the President, which was seconded by the Mayor of Birmingham, and carried unanimously.

The meeting was afterwards addressed by Lord Wrottesley and Dr. Buckland, the Dean of Westminster; and finally the meeting of the Association for the year 1849 was dissolved, between five and six o'clock.

At a meeting of the committee, held in the morning, Lord Dunfermline was elected vice-president.

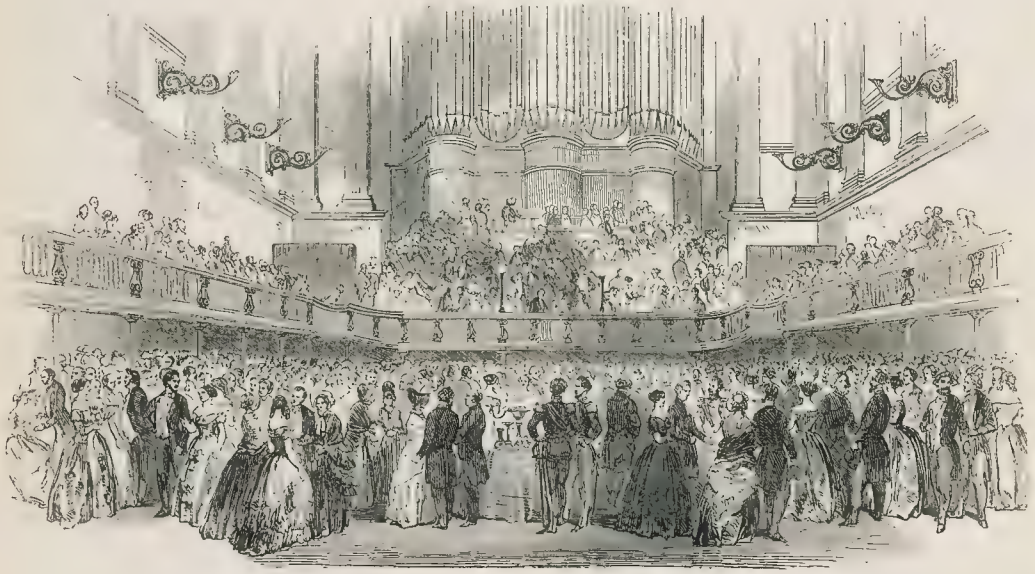
The sectional meetings were held in the Queen's College and Grammar-School. In the former, two rooms were fitted up for the purpose; and in the latter, two large rooms, used ordinarily for school purposes, were divided each into two, by screens covered with green baize; but it was not a little amusing to find even scientific gentlemen paid so little attention to the acoustics of the rooms, that on the FIRST sectional meetings, the sounds of the voices in the opposite rooms produced such unpleasant echoes as to render it necessary to find other apartments on the ground-floor, for two of the four sections.

The rooms are of themselves very excellent specimens of architecture, having been erected by Charles Barry, Esq., and therefore in unquestionably good style. One of the apartments, intended originally for a library, has a richly panelled ceiling, rising much after the fashion of Crosby Hall. This room is lighted by lofty windows on the side next the street, divided by mullions and transoms, the heads being filled with tracery. On the opposite side of the room, near the ceiling, are a range of short windows, forming part of a range of panelling which is continued along the upper part of the room, at the ends as well as on the sides. In the panels at the ends of the room are the Royal arms, with the initials of the founder of the school, Edward VI., and of William IV., in whose reign the buildings as now seen were erected.

The other room is of different character, the roof being lofty, and supported by good open-worked arches. One of the sectional meetings here held (the geological) our Illustration depicts, and the general character of the ceiling may be gathered from our view. The staircases and corridors leading to, and connecting the rooms, are of stone, with admirably groined roofs, and the details are in excellent character. The windows to these portions of the building are filled with stained glass, and harmonise well with the collegiate character of the architecture. The geological section was well attended by visitors, and it was curious to notice the various classes of persons interested in the different papers read at the meeting. The geological section, for instance, attracted a vast many persons, ladies as well as gentlemen, whilst, in most of the others, gentlemen only could be seen; even chemistry, beautiful study as that is, on Thursday could only show one fair inquirer amongst its votaries.

The soirées at the Town Hall gave variety to the proceedings of the Association; and we have depicted in one of our Cuts a slight idea of the different parties who promenaded the magnificent apartment. On the first night of the soirées, various specimens of papier mâché, silver plate, and electro-plated articles, with some fine specimens of glass, were deposited on tables in the middle of the floor. To give greater charm to the pleasures of the evening, Mr. Simpson played some pieces of music on the great organ, displaying the powers of this glorious instrument to great advantage. The feature—indeed the great feature—of the evening was a brief address from Professor Faraday, upon the electric light, and illustrated by experiments with Mr. Gassiot's enormous battery of 100 plates. The experiments, being of a remarkably effective and brilliant character, were greatly admired by the visitors; and the circumstance that Faraday was giving a running commentary upon the principles of electric light, added no little to the interest felt in the experiments.

MEETING OF THE GEOLOGICAL SECTION IN THE BIRMINGHAM GRAMMAR-SCHOOL.



SOIRÉE OF THE MEMBERS OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION, IN THE TOWN-HALL, BIRMINGHAM.

EAST CUMBERLAND AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY. On Saturday last, the the annual meeting of this society took place in Carlisle. There was a very numerous attendance. The dinner was served in the large room of the Athenæum. The Right Hon. the Earl of Lonsdale occupied the chair, and was supported on his right and left by Lord Brougham, the Hon. Colonel Lowther, M.P., the Hon. Charles Howard, M.P.; the High Sheriff, Captain Lowther, M.P.; F. Stanley, Esq., M.P.; W. Marshall, Esq., M.P.; W. N. Hodgson, Esq., M.P.; F. H. Howard, Esq., M.P.; H. Howard, Esq., of Greystoke; J. P. Senhouse, Esq., M.P.; Capt. Walker, R.N.; E. N. Hasell, Esq.; John Grey, Esq., and a numerous body of country gentlemen and leading farmers from Westmoreland, Northumberland, Durham, and the Scottish border. Covers were laid for 300. The usual loyal toasts having been given and drunk with enthusiasm, Lord Brougham proposed the health of the noble president of the society, the Earl of Lonsdale, who returned thanks, and proposed the health of Lord Brougham. His Lordship, in responding to the toast, took occasion to demonstrate, in eloquent terms, the importance of upholding such societies as the present. Several other toasts having been proposed and duly honoured, the company separated at an early hour.

IRON TRADE. — At a recent meeting of the Glasgow River Trust, it was stated that, not many years since, there was not such a thing as bar iron exported from the Clyde; afterwards, it was only in small quantities consigned to foreign houses; but for the month of last June, 13,000 tons of pig iron and 4269 tons of bar and wrought iron were exported, while the quantity brought in was only 226 tons. Formerly, vessels used to come to the Clyde from England and Wales, bringing the above-mentioned articles in ship-loads; but now, the iron-merchants could not only manufacture sufficient for their own use and for the west of Scotland, but could export 4000 tons.

BARON ALEXANDER VON HUMBOLDT.

A VERY interesting opportunity of presenting to our readers a Portrait of this distinguished savant has just suggested itself; the venerable man of science having attained his eightieth year on Friday last, the 14th instant, when, according to the Times correspondent, the Baron's friends were to keep the day as a festival in his honour; and the King of Prussia and the Court, by whom the Baron is held in the highest respect, were to take part in the celebration.

Of Baron Humboldt it has been said, with equal truth and eloquence, that, "he has devoted his life, in an especial manner, to the study of Terrestrial Philosophy. Not content with discharging the duties of a traveller, an observer and a collector of facts, his philosophic mind was ever bent on the establishment of general laws; and it is to him that we owe the first generalizations regarding the temperature of the atmosphere and the earth, its magnetical condition, and those great features of our globe which mould its external form, and indicate its internal history. With an eye sharp for observation, and strained for induction, he has surveyed the regions of civilized Europe, the frozen steppes of Asia, and the burning plains of the American continent."

"With the name of Humboldt," says another contemporary, "we associate all that is interesting in the physical sciences. No traveller who has visited the remote regions of the globe, for the purpose of observing the varied phenomena of nature, has added so much to our stock of positive knowledge. While the navigator has explored the coasts of unknown lands, discovered islands and shores, marked the depth of the sea, estimated the force of currents, and noted the more obvious traits of the countries at which he has touched; while the zoologist has investigated the multiplied forms of animal life, the botanist the diversified vegetation, the geologist the structure and relations of the rocky masses of which the exterior of the earth is composed; and while each has thus contributed to the illustration of the wonderful constitution of our planet," Humboldt "stands alone as uniting in himself a knowledge of all these sciences. Geography, meteorology, magnetism, the distribution of heat, the various departments of natural history, together with the affinities of races and languages, the history of nations, the political constitution of countries, statistics, commerce, and agriculture—all have received accumulations and valuable additions from the exercise of his rare talents."

As the Baron's valuable contributions extend through more than half a century, we shall only attempt an outline of his active life.

Frederick Henry Alexander Von Humboldt was born at Berlin on the 14th of September, 1769. He was educated at Göttingen and Frankfort on the Oder. In 1790 he visited Holland and England, in company with Messrs. George Forster and Von Geuns; and in the same year published his first work, entitled "Observations on the Basalts of the Rhine." In 1791 he went to Freyburg to receive instructions from the celebrated Werner, the founder of geological science and the results of some of his observations in the mines of that district were published in 1793.

THE BARON ALEXANDER VON HUMBOLDT.

In 1792, Humboldt was appointed assessor of the Council of Mines at Berlin, and afterwards director-general of the mines of Baireuth and Anspach, in Franconia. In 1795 he visited Italy and Switzerland. At this period the discoveries of Galvani particularly attracted his attention; and the results of his experiments on Animal Electricity were published in 1796, with notes by Professor Blumenbach. He went to Vienna in 1795, and there studied a fine collection of exotic plants. He next traveled through Salzburg and Styria with the celebrated Von Buch. Accompanied by his brother, William Von Humboldt, and M. Fischer, he then visited Paris, where he formed an acquaintance with M. Aimé Bonpland, who afterward became his associate in travel.

It was not, however, until the year 1799 that Humboldt and Bonpland left Spain, on their great Expedition, a narrative of which has been published under the title of "Voyage aux Régions Equinoxiales du Nouveau Continent, pendent les années 1799, 1800, 1801, 1802, et 1803." The translation of this work by Mrs. Williams is familiar to the English reader. The various works relating to the journey, however, extend to seventeen folio and eleven quarto volumes, magnificently illustrated. The results of this Expedition have been of the highest importance to science: in natural history, especially, the observation of six years exceeds anything that has been presented by the most successful cultivators of the same field during a whole lifetime. Our travellers brought with them an herbarium of more than 6000 species of plants; and the valuable works on this subject, which have appeared in consequence of the journey to America, form an era in the history of botany. The authors returned to Europe in 1804; but the labour of reducing their observations, and the publication of the several works, occupied many years.

In 1818 Humboldt visited London; and, in the same year, the King of Prussia granted him an annual pension of 12,000 dollars, with the view of facilitating a plan which he had formed of visiting Asia. In 1822 he accompanied his Majesty to the Congress of Verona; he afterwards visited Venice, Rome, and Naples; and in 1827 and 1828 delivered at Berlin a course of lectures on the Physical Constitution of the Globe, which was attended by the Royal family and the Court. But, excepting the results of Humboldt's investigations, which have appeared at intervals, we have no particular account of his pursuits until 1829, when he undertook another important journey to the Uralian Mountains, the frontiers of China, and the Caspian Sea. On his return, he published a brief account of his researches; and a new edition being called for, he resolved to publish it as a new work, embracing materials which he had been collecting for twelve years, together with his corrected and enlarged views of Asiatic geology. This work has appeared under the title of "Asie Centrale; Recherches sur les Chaines de Montagnes et la Climatologie Comparée (Paris, 1843);" an excellent analysis of which will be found in the "North British Review," No. X.

In this work Humboldt has confined himself to the subject of Terrestial Physics; in explanation of which he says, "As I still cherish the hope of publishing a very general work under the imprudent title of 'Cosmos.'"

The first volume of this valuable contribution to physical science was published in 1845; and the completion in 1847. The first portion presents the principal results of observations, in the form of which, stripped of all additions derived from the imagination, they belong to a purely scientific description of nature. In the second volume is considered "the impression which the image received by the external senses produces on the feelings, and on the poetic and imaginative faculties of mankind." In brief, with this volume, the author passes from the domain of objects to that of sensations. Three translations of the work have appeared in English; two of which, published in a very economical form, have had a very extensive sale.

Baron Humboldt has since produced a work of the same class as his "Cosmos," an English translation of which has been made by Mrs. Sabine, with the Baron's sanction and co-operation, and at his express desire. It is entitled "Aspects of Nature, in Different Lands and in Different Climates," and is announced for publication on Wednesday next, the 26th, almost simultaneously with the publication of the original work in Berlin.

To conclude, in the words of Dr. Macgillivray, "any formal eulogy on our illustrious author must be altogether unnecessary, for his renown has extended over all parts of the civilised world; and, at the present day, there is not a man of science in Europe whose name is more familiar. Long after his career shall have terminated, he will be remembered as one of the chief ornaments of an age peculiarly remarkable in the history of the world."

The accompanying Portrait is from that by Von C. Begas, which was engraved as a frontispiece to the "Year-Book of Facts, 1848," from the précis accompanying which the present biographical details are, in the main, quoted.

MODEL COTTAGE OF THE ROYAL PATRIOTIC SOCIETY OF SCOTLAND.

ROYAL PATRIOTIC SOCIETY OF SCOTLAND.

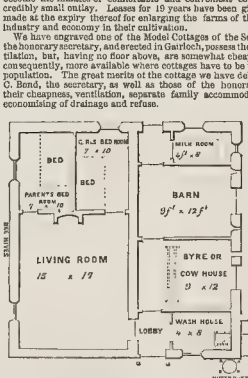
THE contrast exhibited in a highly artificial state of society, by the luxuries of the rich and the destitution of the poor, constitutes one of the great social difficulties of the country. Every organization, therefore, which is calculated practically to elevate the latter to a position of safety and of comfort, is identified with true patriotism, and merits unanimous approval and aid. We have, therefore, much pleasure in now devoting a portion of our space to the cottage improvements of the Royal Patriotic Society of Scotland; but, before explaining the accompanying sketch and plan, we shall give a brief outline of the principles and operations of the institution to which we have referred.

On the failure of the potato in 1846, about 70,000 persons in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, partly engaged in husbandry and partly in fishing, were reduced to a state of famine—chiefly owing to the faulty character of their industrial operations. Since then, the unfortunate persons referred to have been sustained upon scanty rations of meal, their circumstances daily becoming worse, and now, on the cessation of relief supplies, being fearful in the extreme. To improve generally the condition of the labouring classes in Scotland, and especially, by industrial development, to render the often destitute inhabitants of the Highlands and Islands self-supporting, was the great aim of the Patriotic Society of Scotland. Since its institution, in Sept., 1846, the Queen and Prince Consort have become its joint patrons. The great principle of the Society is to "help the poor to help themselves;" and as all great advances in science are cultivated by association, the Royal Patriotic Society has entered upon the organization, throughout Scotland, of Branch Auxiliary Societies, in which the benevolent and philanthropic may systematically co-operate in their own localities to obviate pauperism, destitution, and crime, by elevating the condition of the poor, the members, at the same time, being associated in the parent society's great and national movement.

Industrial gardens have been established at Edinburgh, Perth, Portobello, and Inverness, with great benefit to the working classes; and branch societies are extending throughout the north. Owing to the residence in London, during a considerable part of the year, of many of the most active members of the Society, a London branch of the Society was formed in March, 1848; and, at a recent meeting, presided over by the Lord Mayor, the model cottages of the Society were exhibited, and some interesting statements made of the progress of industrial improvements on the Gairloch estate, in the Highlands, where the plans of the Society have been carried out, under the direction of J. McKenzie, Esq., M.D., its honorary secretary; and under the superintendence of Lady Mackenzie, who, having devoted herself, during the last three or four years, to improve the condition of a tenantry, till then dependent upon the potato, as the staple article of food, as the inhabitants of Skibbereen, has now the high gratification of beholding a well-clad, well-housed, grateful, and daily-improving peasantry. The Society's Industrial Magazine for July contains an account of the Gairloch estate, which may be considered already a model one both for the Highlands and for Ireland, where, owing to the absence of a staple labour market, the people require to be supported as paupers, or be made to support themselves.

In January, 1846, nearly 800 families were located on five-acre farms, partly waste and partly ill cultivated ground. These they drained and trenched under the direction of agricultural overseers, who instructed them as to rotation of cropping. An improved cottage has been built on most of these farms, a model being erected for the imitation of the people, who, having assisted the mason and the carpenter, and having had wood supplied them by the estate, have become the inmates of comfortable and convenient cottages, at an almost incredibly small outlay. Leases for 19 years have been given, and arrangements made at the expiry thereof for enlarging the farms of those who have exhibited industry and economy in their cultivation.

We have engraved one of the Model Cottages of the Society: those planned by the honorary secretary, and erected in Gairloch, possess the same advantages of ventilation, but, having no floor above, are somewhat cheaper in construction, and, consequently, more available where cottages have to be provided for a numerous population. The great merits of the cottage we have delineated, planned by Mr. C. Bend, the secretary, as well as those of the honorary secretary, consist in their cheapness, ventilation, separate family accommodation, and the sanitary economising of drainage and refuse.



The cost of such cottages varies so much according to locality, that it is difficult to fix a sum, unless the cost of materials, &c. be given. The cost in Gairloch has been considerably under £10. By a letter before us from that district, dated the 27th ult., we rejoice to perceive that the cattle are stall fed, and that the cottagers' cows are not able to consume the clover grown as green food, which has amounted by the application of tank fertilizing liquid to nearly 1000 lb. weight per 36 square yards. The turnips are said to be equal to any in Britain and this once apathetic and amphibious small tenantry now declare, with gratitude, that if the season be favourable, twice as much corn will this year be grown in Gairloch as was ever grown before. Other estates are adopting similar improvements, but the most urgent necessity exists to enable the excellent society, to which we have referred, to extend its industrial improvements in those extensive Highland districts where, owing to pecuniary embarrassments, the people are neglected and on the brink of starvation.

IRON SCREEN
OF THE TOMB OF QUEEN ELEANOR OF CASTILE, IN WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

THE Dean and Chapter of Westminster have just restored and replaced the fine Iron Screen which originally decorated and protected the tomb of Eleanor of Castile, consort of Edward I. It is stated in the Athenæum for Sept. 1 that "This screen was taken down some years ago, when it was the fashion to consider everything old as necessarily ugly and useless. If we mistake not, it was sold as old iron; but, on some remonstrance being made, was re-purchased by the Chapter."

RESTORED IRON SCREEN OF THE TOMB OF QUEEN ELEANOR OF CASTILE, IN WESTMINSTER ABBEY

We are assured, by a person in authority at the Abbey, that this ironwork has never been parted with from the stores; and that not only has this piece been safe, but also the ironwork of the Chapel of Henry V., which it is in contemplation to restore to its original position

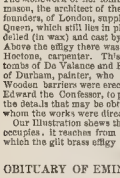
We subjoin some very interesting details, by the writer in the Athenæum, of this specimen of early ironwork, "which is, perhaps, the finest relic of the kind in this country. It is of wrought iron, rivetted; and was made by Thomas de Leghtons, smith, of Leighton Buzzard, in Bedfordshire, in the twelfth year of Edward I. 1294. It was fixed beside the tomb early in the latter year. The [illegible] of the work, including the expense of its carriage to London and of putting it up, was £13—equal to at least £180 of modern money. The [illegible] charge is sum having been paid leads us to question whether the small work now remaining is the whole of the screen as originally constructed. We think not; and have a suspicion that the screen was continued linearly to the plinth of the tomb: for, as the tomb itself was painted and otherwise elaborately decorated, there would be as much, or more, reason for protecting it as for screening the effigy, which is so high above the floor as to be out of reach of injury. However, as the ancient accounts of the cost of this work do not give its dimensions, or supply any [illegible] by which we may [illegible] these conjectures to the character of the work, [illegible] suggest some significant reflections. We have here a dated specimen of foliated scroll-work. The time in which it was executed is early in what is architecturally termed the Decorated period; yet the details are thoroughly those of the Early English style—resembling, indeed, in some points Late Norman, as, for instance, in the masks of animals' heads in which several of the main stancheons terminate among these, the head of the boar, ape, dog, &c. may be particularly remarked.

"There is, perhaps, no other monument in this country respecting which we possess so much interesting contemporary evidence as the monument of Eleanor. The stone-work of her tomb was executed by Alexander de Abyndon; the candelas, mason, the architect of the cross at Charing. William Sprott and John Ware, founders, of London, supplied the metal for casting the beautiful effigy of the Queen, which still lies in placid beauty on that tomb. The effigy itself was modelled (in wax) and cast by William Torel, a goldsmith—it may be, a foreigner. Above the effigy there was originally a canopy of wood, made by Thomas de Hoctona, carpenter. This canopy—which presented, probably, those over the tombs of De Valance and Edmund Crouchback—was painted by Master Walter, of Durham, painter, who also executed the paintings on the sides of the tomb. Wooden barriers were erected in front of the monument, towards the shrine of Edward the Confessor, to prevent too close access to it. Such are a few only of the details that may be obtained from the accounts of Eleanor's executors, by whom the works were carried out."

Our Illustration shows the position which this magnificent piece of ironwork occupies, it reaches from pillar to pillar, and almost rests upon the slab on which the gilt brass effigy of Queen Eleanor is laid.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

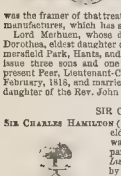
THE RIGHT HON. LORD METHUEN.



THIS venerable and much-respected nobleman died at his residence in Park-street, Grosvenor-square, on the 14th instant, aged 70. For many years previous to his elevation to the peerage, in 1838, his Lordship was Knight of the Shire for Wilts, and took a leading position among the Whig politicians of the time. His father was Paul Cobb Methuen, Esq., of Corsham, sometime M.P. for Great Bodwin, and his mother, Matilda, daughter of Sir Thomas Gooch, Bart., of Benacre. The family of Methuen takes its name from the Barony of Methven, in Perthshire, and was long of distinction in Scotland. The founder of the English branch, a younger son of the Northern stem, was John Methven, or Methuen, of Bishop's Cannings, Wilts, who was, in the reigns of William and Queen Anne, successively Chancellor of Ireland and Ambassador to Portugal: and was the framer of that treaty for the mutual interchange of port wine and woollen manufactures, which has subsisted till within a few years.

Lord Methuen, whose decease we record, married, 31st July, 1810, Jane-Dorothea, eldest daughter of Sir Henry Paulet St. John Mildmay, Bart., of Dogmersfield Park, Hants, and by her (who died 15th March, 1846) has left surviving issue three sons and one daughter; the eldest being Frederick-Henry-Paul, present Peer, Lieutenant-Colonel of the Wiltshire Militia, who was born 23rd February, 1816, and married, 14th October, 1844, Anna-Horatia-Caroline, only daughter of the Rev. John Sanford, and has one son and three daughters.

SIR CHARLES HAMILTON, BART.



SIR CHARLES HAMILTON (Senior Admiral of the Red), born May 25, 1767, was eldest son of Captain Sir John Hamilton, R.N. (who was created a Baronet July 6, 1778, for his distinguished part he had borne, as Commander of her Majesty's ship Lizard, at the defence of Quebec in the preceding year), by Cassandra-Agnes, daughter of Edward Chamberlayne, Esq., of Maugersbury, county of Gloucester. He was brother of the present Admiral Sir Edward Hamilton, K.C.B., first cousin of Commander John Chamberlayne, R.N., and a relation of the Marquis of Abercorn. He succeeded his father in the Baronetcy, Jan. 24, 1784. Hamilton entered the navy in the summer of 1778, as Captain's servant, on board the Hector, 74, commanded by his father. From that period his life was one continued course of devotion to the service and glory of his country. While captain of the Melpomene, Hamilton acquiled, after cruising in the North Sea, the official acknowledgments of Lord Hood, for his meritorious conduct and ste-dy perseverance in manœuvring, under manifest difficulties, the station assigned him off Calvi during the operations of 1794 against Corsica, where he commanded the Dido and Aimable, in unison with three hundred of the natives, in an attack on the outpost of Gerale, which surrendered at the close of a siege of ten days. During the nearly seven years and a half of his continuance in the Melpomene, he captured upwards of forty of the enemy's vessels

On his return to England he was presented with the thanks of both Houses of Parliament. In April, 1800, having assumed the command on the coast of Africa, Sir Charles Hamilton, with only his own frigate, the Ruby, 64, and Mercenaire, of 48 guns, under his orders, contrived, by a bold front, and the stratagem of dressing the crews of several merchantmen in his charge with red shirts, for the purpose of imposing on the latter the appearance of transports, to obtain possession of the island of Goree. He afterwards, in the same ship, captured the French letter-of-marque Auguste, of 10 guns and 50 men; and prior to the peace, for some time as squadron-captain in the service of the Sound, the Illustrious, Téméraire, and Tonnant were commanded by Sir Charles Hamilton on the same, West India, and North American stat ns. In 1809 he was promoted a Colonel of Marines; and from the period of his promotion to flag rank, July 31, 1810, until his receipt of a Vice-Admiral's commission, bearing date June 4, 1814, we find him officiating as Commander-in-Chief on the river Thames, with his flag in the Thalia, 36. He had previously been appointed Captain and Commander-in-Chief at Newfoundland, the duties of which office he filled from May 13, 1818, until July 5, 1824. During that period he received a very flattering address from the principal inhabitants of St. John's, to become a full admiral of July 22, 1830, and a K.C.B. January 25, 1833. Prior to the French revolutionary war, Sir Charles Hamilton held a seat in Parliament for the borough of St. Germans, county of Cornwall: and he was afterwards returned for Hindon, in Devonshire, and Dungarvan, county of Tyrone, Ireland, April 19, 1803. Henrietta Martha, only daughter of the late George Drummond, Esq., of Stanmore, county of Middlesex, the well-known banker, of Charing-cross, London. His only son, Charles John James (now the third Baronet), is a captain in the Scots Fusileer Guards.

Sir Chas as Hamilton, win at the period of his demise was Senior Admiral of the Red, and the second officer on the flag list, died on the 14th inst., at his residence, Iping, Sussex, in the 82nd year of his age. For the above particulars relative to the gallant admiral we are mainly indebted to that recent work of wonderful labour and execution, O'Byrne's "Naval Biography."

THE LADY ELIZABETH TUFTON

HER LADYSHIP, the last of the great house of Tufton, survived her brother, the late Lord Leconfield, a very brief period only. Her death occurred at Clarence-lawn, Dover, on the 16th inst.

Lady Elizabeth was born 2nd May, 1768, and had consequently completed her 81st year. She was the eldest child of Sackville eighth Earl of Thanet, by Mary his wife, grand-daughter of Lionel Duke of Dorset.

DR. COOKE TAYLOR.

WILLIAM COOKE TAYLOR, LL.D., has for many years been distinguished as a writer of great and original power, and of indefatigable industry. His works, and his contributions to periodicals, are very numerous. His principal productions were, "Factories and the Factory System," "History of the Revolutions of Europe," "Natural History of Society," "Romantic Biography of the Age of Elizabeth," and a "Popular History of British India." Dr. Cooke Taylor was particularly noted for the part he took in the abolition of the Corn Laws, and he wrote various able articles upon that subject. Dr Taylor went recently to reside in Dublin; he died there on the 12th instant, after a few days' illness, at his house, 20, Herbert-street.

The Dean and Chapter have resolved to throw open the nave and transept of Salisbury Ca hedral to the public every day, between the morning and afternoon services, thereby affording the public an opportunity of inspecting the interior of the edifice without paying a fee to the verger.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

THE NATIONAL HUMILIATION.

Sunday last being the day appointed for the offering up of a special application to the Almighty to remove from the country the pestilence which at present rages, the metropolitan churches were densely thronged, and in all of them a more than usual degree of solemnity was observed. The sermons either of the morning or evening, and in some cases of both, had a special reference to the existence of the plague, and contained innumerable examples of the visitation of sin by the Divine vengeance, and of the efficacy of prayer, repentance, and humiliation as a means of removing the wrath of the Almighty, and the suffering consequent upon it.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL.—Full choral service was performed, and the sermon was preached by the Rev. J. H. Coward. The text selected was the 16th chapter of Numbers, verse 48—"And he stood between the dead and the living, and the plague was stayed." The Hon. and Rev. H. Montague Villiers, M.A., the canon residentiary, preached in the afternoon, selecting for his text the 7th chapter of the 2nd Book of Chronicles, 13th and 14th verses—"If I send pestilence among my people; if my people which are called by my name shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from these wicked ways, then will I hear from Heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land."

WESTMINSTER ABBEY.—The sermon was preached by the Rev Temple Frere, M.A. The text chosen was the 26th chapter of Isaiah, 20th and 21st verses—"Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself as it were for a little moment until the indignation be overpast. For behold the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity."

THE CHAPEL ROYAL, WHITEHALL.—The Rev. H. B. Jones preached at this chapel, taking for his text the 12th and 13th verses of the 90th Psalm—"Oh, teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts onto wisdom."

Texts of a similar kind to those mentioned were selected for the sermons in all the churches of the metropolis.

ADDRESS TO THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.—NATIONAL HUMILIATION.

The following address to the Archbishop of Canterbury is in course of signature:—

"My Lord,—We, the undersigned clergy of the province of Canterbury, venture respectfully to request that your Grace will be pleased to authorise the observance of a special day of humiliation and prayer throughout the province, on account of cholera in this country.

"We venture to approach your Grace with this request for the following reasons:—

"First. -Because upwards of 11,000 persons have already fallen victims to this disease in the metropolis and its suburbs, and a proportionate number in the provinces.

"Secondly,—Because we are firmly persuaded that, although such an excessive mortality may be aggravated by imperfect drainage and other local causes, it can primarily be ascribed to nothing but the immediate visitation of Divine Providence; while we also believe, on the authority of Holy Scripture, and our own national experience, that we have no right to expect to be relieved from this visitation until we have humbled ourselves before the Throne of Grace, and, as a nation, implored the forgiveness of our sins.

"Thirdly,—Because, from the opportunities we have of ascertaining the feelings of the laity on this subject, we are convinced that, although in particular places days of special humiliation have already been appointed, there is a feeling of some general day by your Grace is most earnestly desired, and would be observed throughout the province with remarkable strictness and solemnity.

"We have," &c.

Signatures will be received, until after Tuesday next, by Messrs. Rivington, St. Paul's Churchyard and Waterloo-place; Messrs. Hatchard, 187, Piccadilly; and Mr. Masters, 78, New Bond-street, and 33, Aldersgate-street.

OXFORD.

LINCOLN COLLEGE.—The Bishop of Lincoln has appointed Mr. R. J. Ogle, B.A., exhibitioner of Lincoln College, son of Dr. Ogle, Clinical Professor in this University, to a Fellowship at Lincoln College, vacated by the promotion of the Rev. C. J. Meredith, B.D., to the rectory of Waddington, Lincolnshire. Mr. Ogle obtained a first class "In Literis Humanioribus" in Easter Term, 1848.

MAGDALENE COLLEGE.—Sept. 19 being the day on which the venerable President of this society (Dr. Martin Joseph Routh) entered his 98th year, the first stone of the new grammar-school of the College—the building of which has been projected many years, but hitherto by various circumstances prevented—was laid by the President himself (who appeared in excellent health), attended by the resident members of the College, at the western extremity of the gravel walk within the precincts of the ancient College walls. The following inscription, from the pen of the learned President, engraven on copper, was placed beneath the foundation-stone:—"Scholam Grammaticalem veteri Aulæ Magdalenensi, quæ in alio sede fuerat, prius erectam, tenuibus primum incrementis a militandum, curante Presse Scripsæ Magda enensæ, Anno Salutis MDCCCXLIX." The President having pronounced the words "Floreat grammatica, floreat hæc schola grammaticalis, altis academicæ disciplinæ omnibus partefacta." The ceremony concluded. The building (designed by Mr. J. C. Buckler and Son, architects) will consist of a single room, the dimensions of which are determined by those of the old grammar-school, which was pulled down in 1838.

We are informed that Dr. Hind, Dean of Carlisle, has been appointed to the vacant Bishopric of Norwich.—Morning Chronicle.

PREFERMENT.—Rev. Joseph Dale, to the Rectory Vicarage, Sussex, diocese of Chichester; value £162, with residence; patron, Frek in Chichester Cathedral; void by the death of Rev. W. Vincent.

VACANCY.—Kenwyn and Saint vicarage, diocese of Exeter; value £703, with residence; patron, the Bishop of Exeter; void by the death of the Rev. George J. Cornish, M.A.

APPOINTMENT.—St. Luke, King's-cross; The Queen has appointed the Rev. H. C. Radclyffe to this newly-formed district in the parish of St. Pancras.

PREFERMENT.—The Rev. Henry Hard has been collated by the Lord Bishop of Oxory and Ferns to the Union of Blackrath, and the Perpetual Curacy of St. Mary's, Kilkenny. The same gentleman takes a seat in the chapter of the Cathedral of Ossory, as prebendary of Blackrath.

VACANCIES.—Beckington rectory, Somerset, diocese Bath and Wells; value £540, with residence; void by death of Rev. S. T. Sainsbury, who is patron. Cheriton rectory, with Newington vicarage, without residence, Kent, diocese Canterbury, value £657; void by death of Rev. J. D. Brockman: patron, Rev W. Brockman. Church gresley, Derbyshire, Somersaltire, diocese Peterborough; value £360, with residence; void by death of Rev. J. Crowther; patron, the Chancellor of Wells Cathedral.—Milston rectory, Wilts, diocese Salisbury; value £375, with residence; void by death of Rev. Peter Hall; patron, Rev. Thomas Cadman. Cantlowe vicarage, Warwickshire, diocese Worcester; value £98 with residence; void by death of Rev. H. Hill; patron, Rev. R. S. Caries.

INDIAN CORN.

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS*)*

I HAVE read in your Journal of September 15 a notice of the recent attempt to cultivate Maize in our Indian Corn, in St. James's-park. The endeavour to cultivate Maize in this country is not new. The late William Cobbett made great efforts, through the medium of his "Register," to introduce it, and it was tried in many parts, but without success. The fact is, we have not sufficient heat to bring it to maturity. I have tried it even in a garden, but could never get the grain to harden. Cobbett introduced a dwarf sort, which he considered suited to our climate: but it did not succeed from the cause above mentioned. I send you these remarks, that your readers might be induced to make large plantations, which, if done, would, I am quite certain, end in disappointment.

Bearsted, Kent, September 17, 1849. A CONSTANT READER.

Her Majesty has been pleased to accept from Mr. Brydone, printer and publisher, of Edinburgh, the first two copies of an unique edition of the Bible, and to express her gracious approbation of the work. It is called "The Comprehensive Pocket Bible," and contains upwards of 80,000 marginal notes and various readings, by the late Dr Blaney, and 30,000 explanatory notes on Scripture difficulties, as parallel discrepancies, and Oriental customs, &c., by Dr. Davidson. The maps, vignettes, and genealogical tree of the Saviour's descent from Adam, are all engraved on steel, and of unsurpassed workmanship. The Royal copies are richly bound, the one in blue and the other in morone morocco, with the Royal Arms in gold on the back.

PIRATES.—The following is an extract of a letter from Lloyd's agent at Salonica, August 30:—"I regret having to report that the noted Kiu ti, Cept. Dulenda, has been committing depredations with a band of pirates at the island of Thassos, where they plundered, on the 22nd instant, an Austrian merchantvessel; from whence they went to Athos, where they landed and committed various acts of plunder. They then proceeded to the Gulf of Gorteess, landed at Tchiasse (marked in the charts limbali,), plundered the custom-house, and killed the three custom-house officers in charge. I have forwarded a report of these proceedings to his Excellency her Majesty's Ambassador at Constantinople, who will probably despatch the Tartarus, Commander Sir Godfrey Webster, in quest of these freebooters."

CHARGE OF ROBBING THE TRAVELLING POST-OFFICE.—A number of valuable letters have been lost from the mails that travel on the London and North-Western Railway, and a clerk belonging to the travelling post-office on the North-Western line has been apprehended on the charge of being concerned in stealing some of them. Some extensive robberies of letters passing through the Buckingham Post-office have also been discovered, and a letter-carrier belonging to that town has been taken up on suspicion of being the culprit.

On Tuesday, a commercial traveller was fined 20s, and 20s. 6d. costs, for having travel ed in a second class carriage from Southampton to Salisbury, his ticket being for the third class, and refusing to pay the difference when it was demanded

The Duke of Northumberland is at present expending a sum of £.,0,000 in improving the cottages of the tenantry on his estates.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

The half-yearly meeting of the proprietors of the Bank of England, to consider of a div dend, took place on Thursday. The profits of the half-year, after leaving the usual dividend of 3½ per cent, free of income-tax, will be £715,322; the amount of Rest, after paying the dividend, £73 [illegible]. After some discussion upon the propriety of increasing the dividend, the usual rate was adopted.

Inactivity has been again the prevailing characteristic of the markets during the week. A single fluctuation on Monday of decline, and an advance on Wednesday of ¼ per cent., which was not fully maintained, have been the only changes from the prevailing price of 92¾, which was the first quotation on Monday. Consols, however, have varied in the extremes, and 92¼ ⅝ for Money became, and continues, the current quotation. Exchequer Bills are slightly dearer than last week. India Stock is also firm, at 272. Money is a little less in demand, and hence stands slightly improved in the prices of the unfunded debt. At the close of the week the prices of the Stocks open were: Consols, 92¾; India Stock, 272; India Bonds, under £1,000, 75 pm.; Consols for Account 92¾; Exchequer Bills, £1000, June, 49 pm.; £500, June, 49 pm.; Small, June, 49 pm. There has been to some extent of speculative business during the week in the Foreign Market; the prices of Danish and Peruvian showing marked improvement, and the lower priced stocks nearly all quoting different shades of advancement. Danish Three per Cents have advanced to-day to 76; Peruvian, from 84 55 to 56-57. Portuguese Five per Cent. Converted are only a trifle better. Spanish, at the close of business, was, however, not quite so good. Prices last quoted were:—For Brazilian Bonds, 83¾; 87¾; New, 1829 and 1839, 86; Buenos Ayres Bonds, 6 per Cent., 48¾; Danish Bonds, 1825, 3 per Cent., 76; Ditto, Bonds, 1903; Granada Bonds, 1 per Cent., 17¾; Ditto, Deferred, 3¾; Mexican 5 per Cent., 1845, ex Coupons for Account, 27¾; Peruvian Bonds, 4 per Cent., Active, 56; Ditto, Account, 57; Ditto, Deferred, 17¾, Portuguese 5 per Cents, 81; Ditto, Converted, 5 per Cent., 28¾; Ditto, 4 per Cent., 29¾; Ditto, Account, 29¾; Russian Bonds, 1822, 106¾; Spanish, 5 per Cent., 1840, Account, 17¾; Ditto, Passive, 3¾; Ditto, 3 per Cent., 34¾; Ditto, Account, 34¾; Ditto 2½ per Cent., 5¾.

The Share Market is still further depressed this week, the jobbers only buying stock at damaging prices to the sellers. Neither holders nor speculators appear able to form any idea where this decline will terminate. The South-Eastern report of the state of the Great Western cannot be considered to close heavily, as the following prices will demonstrate:—Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Dudley, without guarantee, 13¾; Caledonian, 10⅝; Ditto, New £10, Preference, 9⅜; Chester and Holyhead, 11⅜; Ditto, Preference, 11; Eastern Counties, 7¼ x d; Ditto, New, Guaranteed 5½ per Cents., 11⅜; Ditto, Ditto, No 2, 10¼; East Lancashire, 14; Great Northern, 7⅛; Ditto, Half, 8, Six per Cent., 4¼; D tto, Five per Cent., Preference, 5½; Great Southern and Western (Ireland), 26½; Great Western, 47⅛; Ditto, Half Shares, 17⅛; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 12; Ditto, Fifths, 11¼; Ditto, New, £17, 7⅛; Lancashire and Yorkshire, 64; Ditto, Quarters, 13¾ x d; Do., Fifths, 8¾ x d; Do., Thirds, 4⅛; Ditto (W. Riding Unt.), 50; Ditto, Quarters, 12½; Lancaster and Carlisle, 58½; Leeds and Thirsk, 19; London and Blackwall, 4¾; London, Brighton, and S. Coast, 71; Do., Guaran. 5 per Cent., 95; Lond. and N Western, 109¾; Do., New Quarters, 12¾; Lond. and S. Western, 33¾; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, New £10, Pref., 10¾; Midland, 49¾ x d; Do., £50 Shares, 11; Do., Birmingham and Derby, 27 x d; Do., Consol. Bristol and Birmingham, 6 per Cent., 126¾; North British, 12½; Do., Halves, 5¾; Do., Fifths, 2½; North Staffordshire, 9½; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 12½; Reading, Guildford, and Reigate, 16½; Scottish Central, 18; Shrewsbury and Birm., New Guaranteed, 9¼; South-Eastern, 18¾; Do., Registered, 8¾; Do., Scrip, 3¼; York, Newcastle, and Berwick, 16¾; Do., Q.N.E. Pref., 10¼; York and North Midland, 21¾; Do., Pref., 6; Northern of France, 24 dis; Paris and Rouen, 21; Rouen and Havre 10½; Sambre and Meuse, 2¼.

The Consol Market on Friday was for some active, yet prices were mostly supported. The Three per Cents were done at 92¾ ⅞. India Stock was 272; India Bonds, 75s; and Exchequer Bills, 37s to 40s premium. The dealings in the Foreign Houses were somewhat extensive, and prices ruled firm. Brazilian, 87¾; Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents, 54¾; Mexican, 27¾. Peruvian, 56¾; Russian, 107; and Spanish Three per Cents, 34¾; Railway Shares were excessively heavy. Nearly the whole of the quotations were again lower.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—Up to our market, yesterday, the arrivals of English wheat during the present week have amounted to 6,040 quarters. By land carriage, the supplies have been likewise good. The show of samples here to-day was moderate. Select samples were nearly held as fully Monday's quotations; but in the middling and inferior sorts, very few transactions took place, at late rates. The imports of foreign wheat have exceeded 16,000 quarters, and the show of samples on hand is large. No other kinds were registered in prices we have no change to notice. We had a moderate inquiry for grinding barley. Malting and distilling sorts ruled dull. The supply of malt was small; that of foreign, good. Although the supply of malt was small, that article was a slow sale, at barely last week's quotations. The arrivals of foreign oats being somewhat large, 28.0 0 quarters—the demand for which was by no means active on the terms nearly, as the very full prices, in demand quite a very little was doing. Beans, peas, and Indian corn as last advised. The following are AVERAGES:—Wheat, [illegible] qrs; barley, 2720; malt, [illegible] qrs; oats, [illegible] qrs; beans, [illegible] qrs; peas, [illegible] qrs; Indian corn, [illegible] qrs; flour, [illegible] sacks.

ENGLISH.—Essex and Kent, red, 40s to 46s; ditto, white, 40s to 50s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 40s to 44s; ditto, white, 42s to 46s; Rye, 28s to 30s; grinding barley, 20s to 22s; distilling ditto, 26s to 28s; malting ditto, 29s to 31s; Norfolk and Lincoln malt, 56s to 58s; brown ditto, 50s to 54s; Kingston and Ware, 56s to 58s; Chevalier ditto, 60s to 64s; Yorkshire and Lincoln red oats, 18s to 20s; ditto, white, 20s to 22s; Scotch and Irish potato ditto, 18s to 19s; ditto, ditto, ditto, 20s to 21s; ditto, ditto, ditto, —s to —s; grey peas, 27s to 29s; maple, 30s to 32s; white, 30s to 32s; Tick beans, 28s to 30s; Harrow ditto, 32s to 34s; Suffolk, 32s to 34s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 32s to 34s per sack—Foreign.—Barley, —s to —s; malt, —s to —s; oats, —s to —s; beans, —s to —s; peas, —s to —s; flour, American, 21s to 24s per barrel. Baltic, —s to —s per quarter.

The Seed Market. Canary seed is in good request, at a further advance in the quotations of 2s per quarter. In other seeds exceedingly little doing.

Linseed, English, sowing, 54s to 56s.; Baltic, crushing, 38s to 42s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 40s to 43s, Hempseed, 32s to 36s per quarter; Coriander, 16s to 18s per cwt. Brown mustard-seed, 8s to 11s; white ditto, 5s to 6s per bushel. Rapeseed, English Rapeseed, new, £26 to £28 per last of ten quarters. Linseed cakes, English, £9 0s to £10 0s; ditto, foreign, £8 0s to £8 5s per 1000. Rape cakes, £4 5s to £4 10s per ton. Canary, 70s to 80s per quarter. English Clover-seed, red, —s to —s; extra, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; Trefoil, —s to —s; Carraway seed, —s to —s; extra, —s per cwt.

Bread. The prices of wheaten bread in the metropolis are from 6½d to 7d; of household do., 6d to 6½d per 4lb loaf

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 43s 0d; barley, 27s 1d; oats, 18s 6d; rye, 26s 7d; beans, 30s 8d; peas, 30s 1d.

The six Weeks' Average.—Wheat, 45s 1d; barley, 30s 6d; oats, 18s 10d; rye, 26s 8d; beans, 31s 5d; peas, 31s 5d.

Duties on Foreign Corn.—Wheat, 1s 0d. barley, 1s 0d; oats, 1s 0d; rye, 1s 0d; beans, 1s 0d; peas, 1s 0d.

Tea.—Large public sales have taken place this week. The quantities disposed of have been small, at about previous rates. Common congou, 9½d to 10½d per lb.

Sugar.—Most kinds of raw sugar have been only in moderate request In prices, however, we have no material change to notice. Refined goods are a new sale. Single, 48s; and fair to good ordinary, 45s 6d to 47s per cwt

Coffee.—The market has ruled very inactive since our last report, and there are sellers of inferior qualities on somewhat easier terms.

Provisions. We have to report a better demand for most kinds of foreign butter, at, in some instances, advanced rates in the quotations of 2s per cwt. Friesland is now selling at 80s to 84s: inferior marks, 44s, and upwards The sale for Irish butter the arrivals of which have been moderate this week—is firm, at a rise of 1s per cwt. Carlow, Clonmel, and Kilkenny, fresh, landed, 64s to 66s.; Cork, 64s to 65s; Waterford, 63s to 64s. Sligo, 56s to 58s; and Tralee, 60s to 62s per cwt.; all landed. The best Dorset butter has improved in value 1s to 2s per cwt. Middling parcels are quite as dear. Fine Dorset, 86s to 88s; middling ditto, 66s to 70s; fine Devon, 76s to 78s per cwt. Bacon has been in fair request, and prices are cleared off at a counce to hand, at the ex.-ease rates of last week. Essex and Waterford, 60s to 66s per cwt. Other kinds of provisions are tolerably firm.

Tallow continues remarkably scarce, and extremely dear. Prices have further receded 6d per cwt. P.Y.C. on the spot is quoted at 37s 3d to 37s 6s. per cwt. Town tallow, 37s 3d per cwt.

SMITHFIELD.—Per stone lb. [illegible]. Inferior Mutton, 2s 4d to 2s 6d; second quality ditto, 2s 8d to 3s 0d; prime large oxen, 3s 6d to [illegible]; prime Scots, 3s 8d; coarse and inferior sorts, 3s 0d to 3s 4d; prime Southdown, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; prime small ditto, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; large Lambs, 5s 0d to 5s 4d; prime small porkers, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; inferior ditto, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; Suckling calves, 18s to [illegible]; and quarter old store pigs, 1s to [illegible] each. Per 8lb. by the carcass—Beef, 2s 4d to [illegible]; Mutton, 2s 6d to [illegible]; Veal, 3s 0d to [illegible]; and Pork, 3s 0d to [illegible]. Foreign supplies: Beasts, 98; sheep and lambs, 1,890; calves, 210. Scotch: beasts, [illegible]; sheep, 200.

NEWGATE and Leadenhall (Friday). For each kind of meat, the supply of which was but moderate, the demand ruled heavy, at barely yesterday's prices.

[illegible] per stone lb. 2s 4d to 2s 8d; second quality ditto, 2s 0d to 2s 6d; prime large oxen, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; prime small ditto, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; large cows, 3s 0d to 3s 4d; prime ditto, 3s 4d to 3s 6d; middling ditto, 3s 0d to 3s 2d; prime Southdown, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; prime small ditto, 3s 8d to 4s 0d; small pork, 3s 4d to 4s 4d; lamb, 3s 10d to 4s 8d.

LONDON: PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY WILLIAM LITTON, OF NO. 13, UPPER JOHN-STREET, GOLDEN-SQUARE, IN THE PARISH OF ST. JAMES, IN THE COUNTY OF MIDDLESEX, PRINTER, AT HIS OFFICE IN THE PRECINCT OF WHITEFRIARS, IN THE CITY OF LONDON, AND PUBLISHED BY HIM AT THE OFFICE OF THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, NO. 198, STRAND, IN THE PARISH OF ST. MARY-LE-STRAND, IN THE COUNTY OF MIDDLESEX.—SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1849.

BIRTHS.

On the 16th inst, at 71, Cambridge-terrace Hyde-park, the wife of Mr. [illegible], of the Middle Temple, barrister-at-law, of a son.—On the 17th inst, at the Vicarage, Wickham Market, the wife of the Rev. Weston Butler, of a son.—On the 18th inst, at Bonham-grove, near Bristol, the lady of the Rev G. Warriner, of a son.—At Littleton Rectory, the lady of the Rev Peter A. L. Wood, of a daughter.—At the Rectory, Hitcham, the wife of the Rev P. W Warner, of a daughter.—At Tatsfield, Surrey, the Hon Lady Mostyn, of a daughter.—At Ashford, Kent, the wife of the Rev George A. Poole, of a son.—On the 19th inst, the wife of John Hare, Esq., Clifton-park, Clifton, of a son

MARRIAGES.

On the 11th instant, at St Paul's Deptford, by the Rev G Pottinger, M.A., Mr. [illegible], to Miss [illegible], niece and daughter of Theodorus Francis Knowles, Esq., of Deptford.—On the 13th inst, at St. Mary's, Bryanston-square, by the Rev. [illegible], Mr Wood, to Miss [illegible], daughter of Mr. Miller, to Amelia Anne, second daughter of Edward Hoop, of St Jo

DEATHS

At No 16, Clarence-lawn, Dover, aged 81 the Right Hon Lady Elizabeth Tufton, daughter of the late Right Hon Sackvil [illegible] eighth Earl of Thanet.—At Purbrook House, aged 5, Arthur Bulkeley Blackwood, Midshipman of her Majesty's ship Victory, second son of Captain Sir Henry Blackwood, K.C.—Hornsh, relict of the late Rear-Admiral Peter Puget, C.B [illegible], the 17th instant, in Beer-lane, Thames-street, Mary, the wife of Ferdinand Pr [illegible]

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 18.
WAR-OFFICE, MARCH 15, 1849.

1st Regiment of Dragoons. Cornet H F Dimsdale to be Cornet, vice Campbell. 2d—W A Wedderburn to be Cornet, vice Cumberlege. 10th Light Dragoons. F Wombwell, late to be Cornet, vice Dunsford. 2nd Foot. R S Tarrant to be Ensign, vice Gollop. 8th—F W Bristow to be Ensign, vice M'Dermott. Surg D Mc rales to be Surgeon, vice Robertson. 11th Foot. Staff Surgeon Hall, vice Bagnell. 13th—D J Massy to be Lieutenant, vice Armstrong. 19th. Ensign H Wyndham Donald to be Lieutenant, vice L Warner, G Clay to be Ensign, vice Mc. ould. 23d Hospital Assistant Torrens to be Second Lieutenant. 24th—Ensign — Harvey to be Ensign, vice Maunsell. 27th. Lieut F C Herring to be Captain, vice Barnard. Ensign C Norman to be Lieutenant, vice Herring. F Rhodes to be Ensign, vice Warren. 38th. W H Thompson to be Ensign vice Hazen. 41st. W H Berry to be Lieutenant, vice M'Gregor. Ensign Hon A Gough to be Lieutenant, vice Berry. H Wade to be Ensign, vice Gough. 49th. Lieut J Cumming, jun, to be Captain, vice Tyrie. Ensign D M Fraser to be Lieutenant, vice Cumming. Ensign W Whitehead to be Ensign, vice Fraser. 89th. Lieut A E M'Gregor to be Lieutenant, vice Berry. H Wade to be Ensign, vice Ballis. 90th. W H Lane to be Ensign, vice Farrington.
HOSPITAL STAFF.—Surgeon F Robertson, M.D, to be Staff Surgeon of the First Class, vice R Billery, M.D. Acting Assistant Surgeon C Wright to be Assistant Surgeon. D Ramsay, M.D.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE, SEPT. 18.
Royal Regiment of Artillery—Capt and Brevet Major J H Griffin to be Lieutenant-Colonel, vice Jackson, Second Capt D W Paynter to be Captain, vice Griffin. First Lieut J Sandham to be Second Captain, vice Paynter, Second Lieut H Irvine to be First Lieutenant, vice Swinton. Second Capt G R Barker to be Captain, vice Brevet Major G F Turner. First Lieut P G Pipon to be Second Captain, vice Barker. Second Lieut G W Lascelles to be First Lieutenant, vice Pipon.
Corps of Royal Engineers—Brevet Col D Calder to be Colonel, vice Woodly. Brevet Major F H Baddeley to be Lieutenant-Colonel, vice Calder.

BANKRUPTS.
J REED, Bermondsey-street, Bermondsey, hop-merchant. S MARTIN, Poole, Dorsetshire, salt-merchant. W TOWNLEY, Bristol, slate-merchant. J KING, Liverpool, licensed victualler. T REED, North Shields, banker.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.
J M'MASTER, Glasgow, provision-dealer. P MILLER, Edinburgh, shoemaker. A BALFOUR and WEIR, Dundee, merchants. R G YOUNG, Barra, Renfrewshire, cattle-dealer. J M'GREGOR, Glasgow, merchant. J A TOD, Glasgow, accountant and dealer in shares. A B HUGHES, Glasgow, contractor and commission-merchant. A ANDERSON, Bridge-end, Renfrewshire, merchant. G KIPPEN, Glasgow, writer.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 21.
WAR-OFFICE, SEPT. 21.
The Lord Chancellor has been pleased to appoint William Jacomb, J Mudge-hill 12 in the county of Surrey, to be a Master Extraordinary in the High Court of Chancery.

ADMIRALTY, SEPT. 15.
The following promotions have this day taken place, consequent on the decease of Admiral of the Red, Sir Charles Hamilton Bart, K.C.B :
Admiral of the White, sir John West, K.C.B., to be Admiral of the Red.
Admiral of the Blue, Sir Graham Eden Hamond, Bart., K.C.B., to be Admiral of the White.
Vice-Admiral of the Red Zachary Mudge, to be Admiral of the Blue.
Vice-Admiral of the White, John Ales (A), to be Vice-Admiral of the Red.
Vice Admiral of the Blue, Edward Hawker, to be Vice-Admiral of the White Rear-Admiral of the Red, Sir Lucius Curtis, Bart, C B, to be Vice-Admiral of the Blue.
Rear-Admiral of the White, Hyde Parker, C B, to be Rear-Admiral of the Red.
Rear Admiral of the Blue, Edward Henry A'Court Repington, to be Rear-Admiral of the White.
Retired Captain Abraham Lowe has also been promoted to be Retired Rear-Admiral, on the terms proposed in the London Gazette of 1st September, 1846.
SEPT 19—Corps of Royal Marines. First Lieut and Quartermaster H Mc. ..... Second Lieut G Dallas: Second Lieut G Leslie to be First Lieutenant, vice Varle.

BANKRUPTS.
T SHAW, Wolverhampton, victualler. G WEBB, Tamworth, Staffordshire, wine-merchant. J HOARE, Ilkeston, Pumbrokeshire, shipwright. J D HARWOOD, Liverpool, ironmonger.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—
The Proprietor, Mr W BATTY – Positively the last Six Nights of MAZEPPA. Astley's will positively CLOSE on Saturday next. Equestrian and Dramatic Spectacle of THE PROPHET ON MONDAY, SEPT. 24, in the presence of the Nobility and Gentry, and the Public at large, on the Wild Horse. To be succeeded by Batty's Unrivalled Troupe of THE ARENA, supported by the British and Foreign Artists of the Establishment. To conclude with a favourite Afterpiece. Doors open at Half-past Seven; to commence at Eight. Private Boxes and Stalls can be secured at the Box-office from Eleven till Four.—Mr. Batty, Manager. Mr. W. West

WILL SHORTLY CLOSE
THE MISSISSIPPI AND MISSOURI
RIVERS, exhibited, by command, to her Majesty the Queen, H R H Prince Albert and Royal Family, at Windsor Castle.—New Views, also, of the Valley of the Mississippi, the Ohio, and Illinois Villages, &c., to New Orleans, being the largest picture ever executed by man. Exhibiting at Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, every day (except on Saturday) at half-past two, evening at half-past seven.—Admission, lower seats, 2s; gallery, 1s.

OPEN DAILY from Seven till Half-past Ten.
DAGUERREOTYPE PORTRAITS AND VIEWS.
ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION
Is open for Visitors daily. Lectures and Experiments with the Hydro-Electric Machine. Lectures on Chemistry. Exhibition of the Oxy-Hydrogen Microscope. Model of Steam Engine. The Diving Bell. The Diorama. Exhibition of Models and Machinery.—Admission, 1s; Schools, Half-price.

BEARD'S PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS, by the NEW PROCESS, are taken at 85 KING WILLIAM-STREET, CITY,
34, PARLIAMENT-STREET, and the
ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION, REGENT-STREET.
"The portrait exhibits a marked improvement."—Athenæum, June 24.
"The entire colouring can only be compared to the finest enamel."—Times, June 21.

COUNTY FIRE OFFICE,
50, Regent-street, and 9, Royal Exchange-buildings.
ESTABLISHED 1807.
It is respectfully notified to parties holding policies in this office, the renewals of which fall due at Michaelmas next, that the same will be paid on or before the 14th of October—the receipts are lying at the head office, and in the hands of the several Agents.
JOHN J. BLUNT, Managing Director.

REMITTANCES TO INDIA.—The undersigned, London Agent of the AGRA and UNITED SERVICE BANK, is authorised to grant DRAFTS at the exchange of the day, and free of charge, on the Head Office, Branches, and Agencies of the Bank at Agra, Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay.
THOMAS E. HENDERSON, Corresponding Agent.
The agency also buys approved drafts drawn against funds or upon parties in India.

FRAUDULENT IMITATION.—S. MORDAN and CO. caution all Stationers and Venders of Color Pencils and Cumberland Lead Pencils for Pencil cases, that, in consequence of the numerous [illegible] they are daily [illegible] are determined to apply to the Court of Chancery for protection against all parties who either Make "or Sell" such spurious goods.
23, City-road, Finsbury, London.

GOLD PENS.
RICHARD MOSLEY and CO.'S GOLD PENS still maintain their character as the very best that have yet been introduced.
To meet all purchasers, they can now offer one at a lower price, far superior to any Steel Pen, at 2s 6d, 3s 6d, 5s, 7s 6d, and 10s 6d.
The best quality are guaranteed not to go wrong or wear at the points; excellence or value compulsory.
Sold by all stationers, jewellers &c., at 12s 6d and 3s 6d each.
Manufactory, 51, Cornhill, Finsbury, London.
Gold and Silver Ever-pointed Pencils, Penholders, &c. (best quality only).

NEWTON'S GLOBES.—Patronised by her Majesty and Prince Albert.—The nobility, gentry, and public in general, are respectfully informed that Messrs NEWTON have constantly on hand a large Assortment of GLOBES, of all sizes and kinds of mounting, varying in price from 2s per pair upwards. Also Celestial Globes, suitable for presentation, from 3s to 30s each; School Globes, 12 inches in diameter, on an improved principle, 3 guineas per pair. Manufactory, 66, Cannon-street.

JAMES SHOOLBRED and COMPANY, of Tottenham-court-road, beg respectfully to inform their friends that they have purchased the whole of the STOCK of Messrs. CHARLES EVANS and Co., of Oxford-street, at a discount of 40 per cent off the cost price. The STOCK consists of a general assortment of Silk and Satin, Silk Mercery, Glassie Hosiery, and Haberdashery.
JAMES SHOOLBRED and COMPANY have also purchased a very large [illegible] season, at an unusually reduced price, the whole of which they will offer for sale on WEDNESDAY next, the 26th instant, at their premises, No. 22, [illegible] Tottenham-court-road, and 27, 28, 29, 41, 42, 43, and 44, Grafton-street East.
JAMES SHOOLBRED and COMPANY, Tottenham-court-road.

NEW BOOKS, &c.

Nearly ready, In 3 vols. post 8vo,
SHIRLEY: a Tale.—By CURRER BELL,
Author of "JANE EYRE."
SMITH, ELDER, and Co., Cornhill.

In the Press, and speedily will be published,
"THE WESLEYAN CONFERENCE, its AUTHORITY and RESPONSIBILITIES; with a Vindication of its Recent Acts of Discipline." By THOMAS JACKSON, Preside the Conference.
Published by JOHN MASON, 14, City-road. Sold, 66, Paternoster-row.

Now ready at all the Libraries, in 3 vols,
MRS. TROLLOPE'S NEW NOVEL,
THE ROBBER:
Also, just ready, in 2 vols,
ERNEST JANE.
By ALEXANDER BALLIE COCHRANE, M.P.
HENRY COLBURN, Publisher, 13, Great Marlborough street.

Just published, Twenty-third Thousand, price 2d,
CHOLERA PREVENTIBLE. By ESTHER COPLAND, Author of "Curing not Curses." &c., &c.—London: GROOMBRIDGE and SON, Paternoster-row; and sold by all booksellers.

Just out, price 8s,
PRACTICE in GERMAN. Adapted for Self-Instruction. By FALCK LEBAHN. By the same Author, GERMAN in ONE VOLUME. 2nd Edition. Price 8s, 7s 6d.
WHITTAKER and Co., Ave Maria-lane.

THE CHRISTIAN SCHOLAR.—Thoughts on the Study of the Classics, in Prose and Verse. By the Author of "The Clubridge." Crown 8vo, cloth, 10s 6d; morocco, 14s; or bound by Hayday, 18s.
THE BAPTISTERY; or, the Way of Eternal Life. By the Author of "The Christ Child." Third Edition, 8vo, cloth, 15s; morocco, 21 1s. Also, 32mo, cloth, 3s 6d; morocco, 5s, or bound, 7s 6d.
Oxford: JOHN HENRY PARKER; and 377, Strand, London.

SEA WEEDS.—Instructions to Find, Preserve, and Classify them, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 3d, monthly. London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN.

WAXEN FLOWERS.—Instructions how to Model and Paint them, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 2d, monthly.—London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN.

REVALENTA, or ERVALENTA, the NATURAL REMEDY for CONSTIPATION Pain and Flatulency, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Acidity, Spasms, Sickness, Diarrhœa, Piles, Hæmorrhoids, Cramps, Fevers, Inflammation, Debility, Consumption, Asthma, Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Catarrh, Influenza, Hooping Cough, Croup, Rheumatism, Gout, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Liver Complaints, Dropsy, Gravel, Blood Impurities, Skin Eruptions, Scurvy, Ulcers, Tumours, Humours, Fevers, Nausea after Meals, Sea and Bilious Sickness, Heartburn, Headache, Giddiness, Indigestion, Dysentery, Low Spirits, Hypochondriasis, Hysterics, Nervous Irritability, Wasting Away, Decay, Epilepsy, Fits, Spasms, Tremors, Nervous Debility, Paralysis, Sleeplessness, Loss of Memory, Dimness of Sight, Giddiness, Universal Prostration, Decline, Exhaustion, Dropsy, Cancer, Tumours, Ulcers, Blood Impurities, Scurvy, Eruptions, Leprosy, Fevers, Jaundice, Bilious Complaints, Nausea

COSSACKS.

THE COSSACKS.

THE termination of the war in Hungary has led to the dispersion of vast hordes of those irregular troops, whom the Emperor of Russia had so unsparingly employed in the recent struggle.

We find the characteristics of the Cossacks thus vividly described in a work lately published by Count Henry Krasinski:—

"As military adjuncts, they are excellent for foraging parties, for surprising an enemy, cutting off his communications, and pursuing him when defeated. They make excellent pioneers; nor are their services less useful in pillaging a country or in guarding its frontiers. They utter most singular cries when in pursuit of a retreating foe: their horses, small in make, but extremely vigorous, and proof to all kinds of fatigue, clear all difficulties of the ground, carry their riders everywhere with facility, and are, like their masters, content with the most meagre fare: indeed, there can be no doubt, but that the Cossacks have rendered signal service to Russia, which, ever since the year 1549, has taken them under her protection, without, however, the existence of any official act, treaty, or stipulation, confirming their submission to that power. But sooth to say, these pretended heroes are, in point of fact, altogether worthless as regular soldiers: the mere aspect of a musket or a pistol suffices to disperse them: they never dare charge in line, nor can they sustain a charge made upon them; so that with a single regiment of regular cavalry, one may always successfully attack ten regiments of Cossacks. In addition to a crooked sabre, a very long lance without pennant, and pistols, some few amongst them are armed with a long carabine, which carries to an almost incredible distance, and the ball of which is exceedingly small: this is perhaps their most dangerous weapon, and in the use of which they are very expert, turning it mostly to very good account. Occasionally, they feign a sudden retreat; and when they perceive that their pursuers are comparatively small in number, they rapidly face about, and become the assailants; this, however, can only happen with an inexperienced body of troops, totally detached, and who are unacquainted with their adversaries' wily mode of warfare. The Cossack troops but rarely form into squadrons; they even appear to entertain a strong aversion to every species of order and discipline; they never decide an action; but divide in their attack, falling indifferently on the van, the flanks, and the rear of an army on its march; hovering around them like a vapoury cloud, which from one instant to another alternately augments, fades away, or dissipates entirely, again to form into shape and to revive with increased density. They but seldom make a direct charge in line with their cavalry; but keep constantly pirouetting and prancing about, wheeling round, and skirmishing about in every possible direction, with astonishing swiftness and activity. From the moment of their having taken the field in a campaign, they observe no regular intervals of repose, nor stated times for repast: they set at nought the inclemency of the weather; and rarely does anything escape the vigilance of their piercing sight, or the well-trained alertness of their acute sense of hearing: pillage is their peculiar forte, and they are dangerous only to a flying enemy. Once dismounted, they lose all their previous activity and courage, become altogether useless, and may be easily vanquished.

"The general characteristics of the Cossacks appear to be their predilection for a wandering life, love of rapine, a wild passion for democracy, and a liberty they know not how to use. A Cossack will endure any climate, and is remarkable for the instinct by which he finds his way in the wildest tracts. With many demonstrations of joy in successes, they combine sudden depression of spirits in reverses, and their passions are easily excited, being governed rather by impulse than by reason. The generality of the Cossacks are of middle size, but of robust constitution, enduring hunger, thirst, fatigue, and want of sleep with hardihood."

READING, GUILDFORD, AND REIGATE RAILWAY.

THIS line of railway was commenced about two years since, close to Broome Park, the beautiful seat of Sir Benjamin Brodie, near Betchworth, about midway between Reigate and Dorking. In our Journal of August 26, 1847, we gave an Illustration of the initiatory proceedings. In our report, we took occasion to observe that "this very interesting line will connect the county towns of Berkshire and Surrey (Reading and Guildford), and extend from the latter across 'the Garden of Surrey' to Reigate; at the same time communicating with four trunk lines—the Great Western, the South-Western, the Brighton, and the South-Eastern Railways. To the pleasure tourist we scarcely know any line presenting so many picturesque attractions. Its route lies from Reading, on the Great Western line, across Berkshire, by Wokingham and Sandhurst; entering Surrey by Frimley; then crossing the South-Western line, onward with a branch to Farnham; at the base of the Hog's Back, to Guildford; next by a branch to Godalming; and continuing at the foot of the celebrated range of chalk hills, past Dorking and Reigate to Redhill. We have alluded to the picturesqueness of the Surrey portion, which will be new ground to many a tourist; though it is, perhaps, the most beautiful scenery of its class in England. Its landscapes present a rich succession of bits for the painter, in its picturesque uplands, woodland dells, verdant valleys, rocky hills, and undulating parks and heaths—all lying within the eye of the traveller along this new line."

Our Illustration gives a specimen of this picturesque scenery, showing a portion of the railway sketched from Betchworth, or rather Beechworth, Park, among the most beautiful of the scenery between Reigate and Dorking; although the part of the chalk hills seen from this po its greatly exceeded by the bolder sublimity of Box Hill, the venerable giant of the chain, with its luxuriant clothing of patronymic evergreen.

That portion of the line which extends from Redhill to Dorking has been constructed, in first-rate manner, by Mr. George Wythes, the eminent railway contractor, of Reigate.

The state of entire line is thus given in the report of the directors of the South-Eastern Railway to proprietors at the half-yearly general meeting of the company, held on Thursday. On the 4th of July, 9¼ miles of the Reading, Guildford, and Reigate Railway were opened for traffic, viz. 8 miles from Redhill to Dorking, and 1½ miles from Reading to Farnborough. On the 20th of August 20¼ additional miles of this railway were opened, viz. 10¾ miles from Dorking to Shalford, and 10 miles from Farnborough to Guildford. The connecting link that still requires to be completed is the 1¼ miles between Shalford and Guildford, which is constructed by the South-Western Railway Company, the works on which the directors believe to be now finished, the sanction of the railway commissioners being only required to open the whole line of traffic.

As a "pleasure line," this portion will undoubtedly be very popular, since it gives the Londoner the first access by railway to the very attractive scenery of Dorking and Box Hill.

THE READING, GUILDFORD, AND REIGATE RAILWAY.—SKETCHED FROM BETCHWORTH PARK.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 1.6, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1849.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 392.—VOL. XV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1849. [SIXPENCE.

THE SUPPLY OF WATER TO THE METROPOLIS.

THE largest, richest, most populous, and most refined city in the world, is without a sufficient supply of the two first necessaries of health—pure air and pure water. This great evil and scandal to our civilisation is very generally admitted; and even at periods when the scourge of Pestilence is not applied to quicken the popular apprehension, the danger is seen and felt. From time to time an outcry is raised, and efforts are made for the alleviation of the mischief. But all such efforts are partial, and hitherto they have been next to useless, if we are to calculate their value by their results. The pollution of the river Thames, and the consequent pollution of the air, increase from day to day. A large section of the population is without any water but that which is derived from this foul source, and the supply even of that is insufficient. Another large section is supplied with a purer water—from a company holding a great monopoly, and charging a monopolist price for a scanty and quite inadequate supply; while a third section, comprising no less than seventy thousand houses, and representing a population of about half a million—a city-full of themselves—are without any supply at all but such as the poor people can draw from street pumps, and carry by hand to their wretched apartments.

In the year 1819 the subject was brought under public notice; but, after the usual amount of talking and writing, complaining and suggesting, accusing and defending, it was suffered to drop. In 1827, a Royal Commission was appointed to consider it; and, in 1828, 1829, 1831, and 1834, Committees of the House of Commons took evidence upon it. The general purport of that evidence would have justified the Legislature in putting an end to the various private monopolies which supplied the metropolis with dirty water, and abolishing the contending jurisdictions whose existence rendered impracticable any scheme for the purification of the river. Nothing, however, was done. In the year 1836, a committee was appointed to consider the project of Mr. John Martin, who proposed to carry off all the sewerage of London by means of large close sewers, twenty feet wide, on either bank of the river, into proper receptacles, where, by the aid of science, it might be converted into valuable manure. The committee stated that at that period (1836) the Thames received the "excrementitious matter of nearly a million and a half of human beings; the washings of their foul linen; the filth and refuse of many hundred manufactories; the offal and decomposing vegetable substances from the markets; the foul and gory liquid from the slaughter-houses, and the purulent abominations from hospitals and dissecting-rooms, too disgusting to detail." Since that time the population of London is computed to have increased to about two millions and a quarter. The filthiness of the Thames of 1836 must, therefore, be increased, in 1849, by all the abominations poured into it by an additional population of three-quarters of a million, a population equal to those of the three largest cities and towns of the empire, Glasgow, Manchester, and Liverpool, combined. It might be supposed that the statement and proof of such a stupendous evil as this would be sufficient to procure a remedy; and that it needed no such terrible admonition as that of the Cholera to induce the Government and the people to work cordially together till success rewarded their efforts, and every house in the metropolis, from the largest mansion to the meanest hovel, was supplied with pure water in abundance, for all necessary, healthful, and even luxurious purposes But it has not been so. The mass of the people have been apathetic, and the interests of private trading companies—necessarily stronger, while human nature is human nature, than considerations of public welfare to be purchased to their loss—have combined to deter the successive Governments which have acknowledged the evil from originating the only thorough and decisive remedies, the permanent purification of the Thames, the abolition of all private trading monopolies in water, and the establishment of a municipal authority, acting in the public name, for the public benefit, and under the public control.

The difficulties are many—but are they insurmountable? Is this metropolis too poor to pay for the construction of sewers, such as those recommended by Mr. Martin, or any others more effectual? and is it unable to give just compensation to the various private companies whose monopolies it is so desirable to abolish? We think not; and that, even should the raising of the necessary sums be burdensome for a time upon the proprietors and rate-payers of the metropolis, the infliction should be cheerfully borne for the sake of the priceless advantages of health and comfort which it would be the means of securing to us and to our posterity. The country has paid, or will have to pay, upwards of a million and a half sterling for a house to lodge the Lords and Commons of Great Britain. That sum would be more than sufficient to drain London without polluting the Thames. We cannot doubt but sooner or later it will be provided.

ODIN. HOWE (120). CALEDONIA (120). VENGEANCE (84).

ADMIRAL SIR W. PARKER LEAVING CORFU, IN "THE HOWE," FOR CEPHALONIA.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

The chief difficulty to be contended against is not a monetary one, but the absence of agreement upon the best plan to be adopted. One thing to be especially guarded against is the granting of powers to any private company whatever—however specious the pretext, and however real the comparative advantages which it offers. In the words of the Metropolitan Anti-Water-Monopoly Association, we hold that to "pass any Act of Parliament, or to grant any further exclusive powers, under any circumstances whatever, to any commercial body, for the purpose of obtaining an additional or improved supply of water to the metropolis, will be enlarging and strengthening past legislative errors, and directly opposing the social freedom of the public and the progress of improvement, by extending the field and power of monopoly." For this reason, we have nothing to say of the two projects before the public for supplying the metropolis with pure water from the Thames at Henley, and from the river Colne. They do not include what we consider to be the first essential, the disinfection and purification of the Thames within the limits of London; and they would be monopolies, like their contemporaries. There are two other projects, however, that seem to us to deserve all the publicity we can give them, although we wish to guard ourselves against the supposition that we affirm their practicability, or that we agree in all their statements. We merely desire that their merits or demerits should be brought before the public, with the hope that ultimately some plan may be elicited that will answer the great purpose in view. The first is that recommended by the Metropolitan Anti-Water-Monopoly Association, whose objects are stated by themselves to be—

> To obtain powers from Parliament to incorporate the whole water supply of London into one Institution, based upon a self-supporting principle, and to raise the necessary funds upon rates to be levied for a term of thirty years; the money raised on the security of such rates to be applied for the purchase of the plants of the present companies—the amount of the sum to be so applied to be settled by an impartial board of arbitration to be appointed by the House of Commons—and to carrying out the views of the Association in amending the water supply. To apply the large surplus revenue, which must accrue even from very reduced rates, to the gradual liquidation of the original debt, so as to pay off the whole obligation within the above period. For providing and securing an abundant, continuous, and scientifically-arranged supply of water from a pure source, for the domestic purposes of all classes; and for providing such an efficient supply for all sanitary purposes as will tend to perfect our social comforts, and promote the public health; and, finally, at the expiration of thirty years, to provide a great boon, free and unencumbered, to posterity. To establish the whole machinery of this great work under the control of a central board of management, to be appointed by a commission composed of representatives from each metropolitan parish, to be periodically elected by the ratepayers.

The supply depended upon by the Association for effecting these great purposes is to be derived, they imagine, from Artesian wells. We form no opinion as to the correctness of the estimate upon which they go. We see, however, that this company take no cognizance of, and propose no remedy for, the present state of the river Thames. Upon this point, therefore, it is a partial scheme, and, in our opinion, objectionable for that reason.

The next project is that of Mr. John Martin. That gentleman states that—

> After a careful and mature consideration of the merits of every proposal which has been advanced by myself and others, I have, at length, arrived at the unequivocal conclusions that—the Thames is the only source whence a sufficient quantity of water to meet the increasing requirements of the metropolis can be permanently obtained; and that for this and the point of supply, must be from the united body of the stream, and near to London, in order to obviate that interruption of the navigation, which would infallibly occur by abstracting the water higher up, or from the rivers and springs contributing to its flow.

He proposes, therefore, that—

> On that part of the river Thames which lies between the Chelsea Water-works on the one shore, and the Southwark works on the other, as being ready for the best adapted to afford a permanently adequate supply of water without injury to existing demands or interests, he would construct across the stream a weir as high as mean high-water mark, and, by forming communications with the river above and below the weir, and having self-acting valves to back the water in spring tides, and let off the superabundant waters in time of flood. He states that as there would be a fall of the whole body of the Thames over the weir, of nearly four feet, for about nine hours a day, this immense natural power should be applied to working water-wheels and pumps, thus saving a vast amount of steam power and nuisance from smoke, and enabling the different companies on both sides of the river to derive from this one point an unvarying high-pressure supply, without the add of steam-engines.

We have not space to enter further into details. We but present the subject as one of paramount importance to this great city; though we cannot but express our dissatisfaction with Mr. Martin's project, for not providing for the extinction of the present water monopolies, and the consolidation of the whole into a great Water Trust, under municipal control. The supply of water ought no more to be meted out to us as a matter of profit to individuals, than the atmosphere and the sunshine If the recent discovery of scientific men, as disclosed in the letters of Dr. Brittan and Dr. Budd, that Cholera is caused by the presence of a minute living organism drawn into the stomach by the use of impure water, should turn out to be correct, the efforts of those who seek to supply us abundantly with the pure element will receive an additional support from the public fear. It is high time, however, that we should act upon a nobler principle; and that this great question should be taken up in a manner befitting the common-sense and the civilisation of the age.

THE INSURRECTION IN CEPHALONIA.

IN our Journal of last week, we briefly announced the departure of the English squadron from Malta (which we have illustrated upon the previous page) We are indebted for the preceding Sketch to the courtesy of Mr. J. Connell Ogle, Professor of Drawing to the University of Corfu. It represents Admiral Sir William Parker leaving Corfu harbour, in the Howe, for Cephalonia, to assist the Lord High Commissioner (Mr. Ward) in quelling the insurrection. The Sketch also shows a correct view of the port of Corfu, and the position of the vessels as they got under weigh—the Vesuvius (Admiral Sir William Parker's ship) being towed out by H.M steam-frigate Odin; the Penelope, 84, towed by H.M. steamer Fair Rosamond; and the Caledonia, 120, waiting the return of the Fair Rosamond steamer to conduct her to Cephalonia. The squadron left Malta on the 1st of September, arrived at Corfu on Saturday evening, the 8th, at a little after nine P.M.; and left for Cephalonia on Sunday afternoon, Sept. 9th, at four P.M.

The departure of these noble vessels, with their colours flying and bands playing, was a magnificent spectacle, surrounded by most superb mountain scenery In the Sketch is shown the Citadel of Corfu, part of the island of Vido; and, in the distance, Mount St. Salvador.

Private letters from Corfu, of the 9th September, announce that up to that date as many as seventeen of the insurgents (several of whom belong to the clergy) had been taken, and immediately executed, according to martial law. It was reported that a corresponding fate existed in some of the villages of Corfu; where, in consequence of repeated acts of incendiarism, the police had been compelled to threaten summary punishment on all persons who refused their aid to detect and check the same. Vice-Admiral Sir William Parker, with the squadron under his command, would scarcely reach Cephalonia before the 11th, as the wind was dead on end.

THE EARLY CLOSING MOVEMENT.—On Wednesday evening, at a general meeting of the assistants in all branches of trade, held at the Assembly-Rooms, Great Marlborough-street, Mr. M. Mile [illegible] in Warwick-street presiding, it was moved and carried [illegible] during the coming winter, to give the public support to the Early Closing Association, believing it to be both its interest and duty to do so. A committee was also appointed to carry out the object in view.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE

The subject which almost wholly engrossed attention in Paris during the week was the assumed critical position of the Ministry, caused by the difficulties of the Roman question and of the national finances. The Cabinet was said to be torn by dissensions on those topics, which must lead either to a total dissolution or very considerable modification of its present constitution.

M. de Falloux is gaining strength rapidly, and has left Paris for the banks of the Oise, where he will continue until the meeting of the Assembly.

According to the Patrie, instructions of a conciliatory tendency have been sent to Rome.

The Débats contradicts a statement which had been circulated, that the letter of the President of the Republic had been required to be published in the official journal of Rome.

The Socialists and "Reds" are said to have abandoned their favourite mode of propagating and enforcing their doctrines, viz. by the musket and sword, from a conviction of its absolute inefficiency, and have resolved to trust to the more conciliatory weapons of discussion and journalism. They also intend to "mend their manners" in the Legislative Assembly. Pierre Bonaparte's clenched fist seems to have produced a wonderful conversion in this respect

A new Socialist journal, under the title of La Voix du Peuple, has just come out, under the direction of M. Proudhon

A considerable number of the trees of liberty planted in Paris were removed privately, during Saturday night, by order of the Government.

Fifty of the Council-General have demanded the abolition of the excise on spirituous liquors, and but a few have declared themselves in favour of its continuance.

The accounts given by the Union Médicale of the state of the health of Paris are most satisfactory. In the hospitals, the average number of new cases, from the 21st to the 23rd instant inclusively, was only eight or nine per day, and on the [illegible] the number of deaths was only six during those [illegible] the number of deaths on the 19th was only eleven, and on the 20th, nine; and they have been decreasing since.

Despatches have been received from the Governor-General of the Antilles and the Governor of Guadaloupe, of the date of the 28th August, announcing that perfect tranquillity had prevailed for the previous fifteen days in both colonies.

Several of the most influential bankers of Paris had a meeting with M. Passy, the Minister of Finance, at his official residence, on Sunday. Having examined various financial plans submitted to them by the Minister, they are said to have declared that none of them were applicable to the present situation of the Treasury.

ITALIAN STATES.

ROME.—Accounts state that the Pope had issued a very objectionable manifesto (which was published on the 19th inst.), granting an amnesty, but from which were to be excluded the heads of the Republican Government, their ministers, the whole of the Constituent Assembly, and the military chiefs.

Matters remain in the same unsatisfactory state between the French and Papal authorities.

The Giornale di Roma, of the 14th, publishes the official returns of the wounded who entered the hospitals from the 1st of May to the 30th of June. The numbers are as follow: Romans, 186; subjects of the Roman provinces, 543; Italians from different states, 332; foreigners, 41; country unknown, 206 total, 1308.

A conflict was said to have taken place between French and Spanish sentinels at Valmontone, but on both sides strict silence was observed on the subject. The Spanish troops were likely to be recalled home.

PIEDMONT. In the sitting of the 17th, the Chamber of Deputies of Turin commenced the discussion of the bill for the abolition of the law of primogeniture By this bill, the right of entailing property is to be abolished. The foundations and dotations of commanderships in the knightly order of Saints Maurice [illegible] are to be secularised. The laws and statutes of the said [illegible] order, in what concerns the distinction between Knights of Justice and Patrons; and the proofs of noble birth, hitherto required, are no longer to be insisted on.

AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY.

From Vienna we learn that the Austrian Minister of Finance has published his plan for raising a new loan. The amount of the loan is to be 60,000,000 florins; but, if the offer be made, he will take a fifth more. It is to be contracted by public subscription, in which all citizens may participate: the interest is to be 4 per cent; and bank notes are to be issued at 5 per cent. The house of Hope and Co., of Amsterdam, and that of MM. Rothschild, of Frankfort, are authorised to receive subscriptions for the loan.

The conference of ministers, generals, and eminent personages now sitting at Vienna, on the affairs of Hungary, have, it is understood, fully accepted the constitution of the 4th of March, in all its rigorous consequences, as the basis of a reorganisation of the country.

From Hungary we learn that profound discontent continues to exist, and that the people are greatly exasperated at the destruction of the bank notes of Kossuth, by which means the former have been deprived of the incorporation of the Hungarian soldiers in the Austrian army, which is considered a humiliation.

Courts trials, on a monster scale, are going on in Pesth, the military power relieving uncontrolled by the inconvenient trammels of constitutional forms.

With respect to the fortress of Komorn, the latest date from Vienna (the 22d inst.) mentions that although a portion of the garrison would rather die under its walls than submit to the Austrian forces, yet the greater part, deeming further resistance useless, feel disposed to accept the best terms they can obtain. The conditions offered by General Nugent are said to be very favourable; and it is, therefore, confidently stated that in a few days the fortress will surrender to the Imperial troops. Another account of the same date states that the fortress had actually surrendered

A rumour is in circulation, and going the round of the papers, that Bem has died of his wounds in Wallach a.

HOLLAND.

The Dutch Ministry has not yet been formed. The Address in answer to the King's speech expresses great satisfaction at the resignation of the Cabinet, which for some time past had not enjoyed the confidence of the Chambers.

PORTUGAL.

Advices dated the 19th instant state that at Lisbon financial affairs continue in a most deplorable state, and great discontent prevailed in consequence of the parties committing late robberies not having been punished.

UNITED STATES

Intelligence to the 11th inst. has arrived from America this week by the mail steamer Caledonia.

General Taylor had returned to Washington, and, though somewhat improved in health, was still in a feeble state of body.

The buccaneering expedition to Cuba, to revolutionize that island, and, having wrested it from Spain, to erect it into a "Democratic Republic," has been crushed in the outset. Under an act of Congress authorising the detention of vessels believed to be cleared for unlawful purposes, the propellers Seagull and Thorn, and the large steamer New Orleans, of New Orleans, supposed to be connected with this warlike expedition against Cuba, were seized at New York, by order of the United States district attorney, and other propellers were also seized, and are lying off Corlear's Hook, each in charge of a guard of marines. The steamer was fitted up as a transport-ship. No resistance was offered on board any of the vessels to the United States officers. The number of recruits for the expedition in New York was about 300; and there were 50 or 60 revolutionists from Cuba at different hotels and boarding-houses. Warrants were issued against five or six of the parties implicated, and two arrests had been made. Bail was tendered, and accepted in both cases.

The southern wing of the expedition, on Round Island, near Pascagoula, is at present blockaded by the Water Witch, Lieut. Craven, and that sloop of war Albany, Captain Randolph. The commanders of both vessels had written to the expeditionists, assuring them that they would be sunk or captured if they attempted to put to sea, but offering them every facility to escape to the Balearic Island. Meanwhile their supplies are cut off. It is said, however, that the New Orleans packet Union has actually sailed, with men and arms on board, for the coast of Cuba.

The cholera yet hangs about us, though in a greatly mitigated form. In Boston and other cities it also continues in a milder form.

On the 14th of September a grand "state fair" (or, as we should say, agricultural show) of the State of New York was holden at Syracuse. Full fifty thousand yeomen were assembled. The show of stock and implements was very large.

A Convention of the Pomological Society, having for its object the furtherance of a knowledge of the growth of fruits, &c., was to be held on the 14th, at the same city The subject of horticulture also came before the Convention.

Mrs. Butler's case was again to be brought before the law authorities on the 18th. The application to be made on that day is to show cause why a divorce should not be decreed.

A company of traders, with a capital of £40000, is about to proceed from Fresno [illegible] Howard's Island to California.

The reports regarding the state of the grain and potato crops come cheering from all parts of the Union save Maryland and Maine. In Pennsylvania and North Carolina especially the yield promises to be a large one. The rot has appeared in the potato crop, but is not general

The breaches which had taken place on several of the canals in Cincinnati [illegible] had completely repaired, and business would be resumed in a day or two.

A national convention is to be held in St. Louis on the 15th of October, to consider the erection of a railroad and electric telegraph to the Pacific. Delegates are expected from every state and territory in the Union.

The news of the alarm seen of Gregey and his troops to the Russian and Austrian army, and the apprehended termination of the war, excited considerable interest, as well as the fate of Kossuth, Guyon, Bem, and Dembinski, hopes were even entertained that the Hungarians would yet recover themselves

CENTRAL AMERICA

We have advices from Yucatan to the 17th ultimo. The Indians had again attacked Sacalal, and entirely defeated the Yucatecos, who left eight hundred dead on the field. The Yucatecos have been in the habit of selling their Indian prisoners into Cuban slavery. Can any severity of retaliation, under such circumstances, be considered at?

CANADA.

The advices from Canada this week are of little interest. Lord Elgin left Montreal on the 4th inst., and proceeded on the Lake in the war [illegible] from Prescott, to Niagara Falls. Two companies of soldiers [illegible] Lachine to see it in safety on board the river steamer. He was accompanied by his lady and child and a small staff. He was neither cheered nor insulted on his way. It was reported that he had expected to meet General Taylor at Niagara Falls, but he was too late. A report of the death of the Countess of Elgin, at Kingston, was contradicted. This lady, who has passed most of her days in Canada, is a great favourite with all classes, and her recovery from a recent attack of illness is the subject of general congratulation at St. Lawrence.

WEST INDIES.

By the mail steamer Trent we have the usual monthly advices from the Islands. From Jamaica, under date the 22nd ult., we learn that the [illegible] elections were progressing. Out of 47 members, of which number the Assembly is composed, 35 had been returned, of whom 23 are advocates for retrenchment. Out of the 35 members to be elected, it was expected that nine would be in favour of the measure. Thus a large majority of the country party had been secured. If the Council should refuse to pass the Retrenchment Bill, which will be laid before them early after the meeting of the new House, it was confidently stated that the Assembly will again refuse to vote the supplies, and in all probability another dissolution take place. The existing revenue bills extend only to the 1st of October, and, in the event of another dissolution, would expire before a new House could be called together, in which case a great loss to the revenue of the island will be sustained.

Business was extremely dull, and the distress amongst the poorer classes was very severe.

From Demerara the advices announce that a further attempt had been made to ensure the establishment of the Civil List, which had failed, and resulted in the resignation of the ministry, consisting of seven members. The taxordinance had been renewed for three months from the 8th of August, in order to save to the Colonial Government the necessity of an interval between the period of closing the estimate and the completion of the schemes for ways and means. The weather was very favourable, and the agricultural prospects cheering

At Tobago great distress prevailed, owing to so many estates having been wholly or partially abandoned. Trade, in consequence, was extremely dull, and holders of stocks anxious to realise at any price

Despatches had occurred at Barbadoes, owing to the temporary absence of the Lieutenant-Governor, who had left on a visit to Antigua, without appointing some person to administer the Government.

At Grenada political affairs promised a satisfactory change. The difference between the two branches of the Legislature, on the subject of a reduction of public expenditure, was likely to be arranged by a new session

From the French West India Islands, the accounts from Martinique and Guadaloupe are of a most favourable character. The Government has compensation money for the redemption of the slaves, amounting to 12,000,000f., by payments, one-half in cash, and the other moiety in 5 per cent. Rentes; one-eighth part of the latter is directed to be appropriated to the establishment of banks, which had immediately been opened. The number of slaves freed from slavery was 74,954, at the price of 20f. each.

From Cuba, however, the accounts, on the other hand, are very deplorable. The estates were almost entirely neglected, owing to the want of labour, the former workpeople leading a vagabond life. The plantations were necessarily going to ruin fast, and the returns already are extremely meagre. The colony appeared so hopelessly ruined, that the chief merchants were leaving it.

We have news from Havannah of the 3rd instant. The island was in the greatest confusion, from the formation of the Annexationary movements there, except in a single instance, in which the colonel and several officers of one of the regiments were murdered.

The Captain-General was using the most energetic measures to suppress any attempts at rebellion that might occur in any part of the island.

INDIA

Intelligence anticipatory of the Overland Mail from Calcutta to the 8th, and Madras to the 1st of August, arrived on Wednesday, but it is of the most meagre description. A tranquility prevailed in all parts, and the north of the districts generally, notwithstanding the prevalence of rumours as to the sinister designs of Ghoolab Singh. At Lahore the troops were in by no means a healthy state.

The Governor-General, Lord Gough, and Sir C. Napier, continued at Simla.

Moolraj has not been executed, nor is it likely that he will be. In the latest intelligence from Lahore it is stated that a Belief prevailed there that the order for the commutation of the sentence had actually been issued, and would shortly be made public.

A second and final distribution of Scinde prize money has been made. The amount for division, after various deductions, including one of 7½ per cent for Sir Charles Napier's additional sixteenth of the former instalment, [illegible] Charles's share on account, was 8,838,522 rs., very little short of the £70,000 at which it has been estimated. The delay of the present overland mail was occasioned by the reluctance of the paymaster being obliged to go to the south of the line to avoid its fury. The Bajun took on board the bags at Alexandria, whence she sailed on the 16th instant.

AUSTRALIA.

The latest accounts from this distant, but most valuable and important colony, are dated Sydney, June 11, and they show in a pretty clear light the difficulties which our present system of convict transportation are presenting for the Imperial Government in that remote quarter, as well as at the Cape. In the Legislative Council, on June 1st, Mr. Cowper, the member for Cumberland, moved, with reference to Sir Grey's despatches, that—

> That this council decides to accede to the proposal therein contained for the removal of transportation to this colony, and strongly protests against the adoption of any measure by which the colony would be degraded and made the receptacle of the criminal; and that this council, therefore, would earnestly entreat her Majesty to be graciously pleased to revoke the order in council by which this colony has been again made a place to which British offenders may be transported.

This important resolution was carried nem. con. without a debate. The unanimity of the colonists, supported, indeed almost led, by Governor Fitzroy, ought to secure the object the colonists seek. The Sydney Morning Herald, June 6, referring to the vote of the Legislative Council, remarks: "Earl Grey and his colleagues should now be made to understand, if they would act or would not understand before, that, so far as the colonists of New South Wales are concerned, the transportation question is settled—settled fully and finally settled for ever. To attempt to insist at any more, under whatever name or pretext, would be not only to waste precious time, but to insult this whole community."

As if to put to the severest test the state of public feeling in the colony on the subject, a cargo of convicts by the Hashemy arrived at Sydney on June 10: the colonists were immediately thrown into a state of great excitement and irritation in consequence, and they resolved at once to make a determined stand, adopting the only constitutional means of making known to her Majesty the grievance so enormously and unjustly thrust upon them by Lord Grey. Accordingly, the next day (June 11th), the people of Sydney, as one man, assembled on the vacant ground near Circular-wharf. The chair was taken by Mr. Lowe, the late Colonial Secretary and present member for the city of Sydney. The following resolutions were unanimously agreed to:—

> We, the free and [illegible] her most gracious Majesty, inhabitants of the city of Sydney, [illegible] assembled, do hereby declare and [illegible] transportation of British criminals to the [illegible] Australia in violation [illegible] the will of the [illegible] colonists, as it clearly evinces [illegible] to us the [illegible] and [illegible] of the British Government, that transportation to [illegible] cannot be [illegible] for ever
>
> 2. Because it is incompatible with the existence as a free colony, desiring self-government, to be made the receptacle [illegible] another country's felons.
>
> 3. Because it is [illegible] just degradation to subject the great social and political [illegible] of the present people of a fraction of its inhabitants
>
> 4. Because we [illegible] unalterably attached to the British Crown, we greatly fear that the perpetuation of [illegible] transportation to this country will [illegible] to sever for ever the [illegible] which [illegible] us to the parent state.
>
> For these and many hundred reasons in the [illegible] we [illegible] the [illegible] Her Majesty's Government [illegible] Australia Felix [illegible] Moreton Bay [illegible] for Almighty God to prevent the landing again of British convicts on these shores.

This protest was presented to Governor Fitzroy by a deputation, with a request that he would forward it to her Majesty.

Governor Fitzroy had signified his intention not to land the convicts until the answer of Earl Grey had been received.

THE LORD CROWN OF HUNGARY.—One of the many subjects of speculation at the present moment is the fate of the Hungarian Crown—for, by a figure of speech, the Hungarian monarchy, but the actual "round and top of sovereignty," the golden diadem itself. It is generally believed that Kossuth has carried it with him in his flight, and that it has for a second time crossed the frontiers of Turkey. The past history of this crown is a curious one, and as full of vicissitudes as the lives of some of those who have worn it. The Magyars claim a descent from the Huns who settled in the Danubian monarchy; there is a legend that it was wrought by the hands of angels for St. Stephan, who was crowned with it in 1001: history, with a more limited faith, records that it was sent as a present to Stephan by Sylvester II., a Pope of the 10th century. As to what has become of it there are [illegible] conjectures. According to some, it has been buried in a secret place. According to others, Kossuth has it in his person as possession.

A PACIFIC STEAM-SHIP.—On Monday next the new act for regulating the carriage of passengers in merchant vessels (12 & 13 Vict. c. 33) will come into force. It contains 64 sections and some schedules. Several statutes are repealed, and the present one is to form the law on the subject. The commissioners of emigrants are to carry the act into effect, and have power to appoint assistant officers. Passenger ships are to be surveyed before they proceed to sea, and every precaution seems to have been taken to secure the accommodation of emigrants. Her Majesty in Council may issue rules for the regulating of vessels proceeding to the colonies. Among the provisions is one declaring that passengers shall be entitled to remain on board six hours after the arrival of a vessel at its place of destination. There is another section regulating the space to be allotted to each passenger, according to the size and tonnage of a vessel. An opinion is gaining ground that some model should be adopted to make new laws known to those who are required to obey them, and by this act abstracts of the new law are to be exhibited in conspicuous places on board ship, so that passengers may know their rights, and the owners of vessels be compelled to comply with the enactments of the same.

CHOLERA.—HOUSE VENTILATION.

[DR ARNOTT has communicated to the Times the following letter, of peculiar importance and interest.]

SIR, In the notification from the Board of Health respecting cholera, reprinted from the Gazette in your paper of the 19th instant, the following passage occurs, after the description of an ill-ventilated dwelling:—"Under such circumstances considerable and immediate relief may be given by a plan suggested by Dr. Arnott, of taking a brick out of the wall near the ceiling of the room, so as to open a direct communication between the room and the chimney. Any occasional temporary inconvenience of down-draught will be more than compensated by the beneficial results of this simple ventilating process." As applications have since been made to me for further information on this subject, I beg, through your paper—the vehicle of so much good to the public—to give the following detail respecting the contrivance and the rationale of its action.

I assume that most of your readers already understand, or will now learn, that the air which we breathe, and which is used to stuff air-pillows, consists of material elements as much as the water which we drink or the food which we eat—indeed, consists altogether of oxygen and nitrogen; the first of which forms 23 seven-eighths by weight of the substance of water, and the other nearly one-fifth by weight of the substance of flesh; and that there is surrounding our globe, to a depth of about fifty miles, a light fluid ocean of such air, called the atmosphere, into which near the surface of the earth certain impurities are always rising from the functions of animal and vegetable life, and the decomposition of substances in putrefaction, combustion, &c., just as into the sea and great rivers some impurities are always entering from the sewers—all which impurities, however, are quickly so diluted or dissipated in the great masses as to become absolutely inappreciable, and eventually, by the diffusive and purifying powers of nature, are decomposed and changed, so that the great oceans of air and water retain ever their state of perfection.

I assume, further, that your readers know that fresh air for breathing is the most immediately urgent of the essentials to life, as proved by the instant death of any one totally deprived of it through drowning or strangulation; and by the slower death of men compelled to breathe over again the same small quantity of air, as when lately 73 passengers were suffocated in an Irish steamboat, of which the hold was shut up for an hour by closely-covered hatches; and by the still slower death, accompanied generally by some indirect form of chronic disease, of prisoners condemned to breathe habitually impure air, like the dwellers in crowded, ill-ventilated rooms and foul neighbourhoods; and lastly, as proved by the fact that pestilence or infectious diseases are engendered or propagated almost only in those impurities in the air and water to abound, and particularly where the poison of the human breath and other emanations from living bodies are allowed to mingle in considerable quantity—as instanced in the gaol and ship fevers, which so lately as in the days of the philanthropist Howard carried off a large proportion of those who entered gaols and ships; and as instanced in that fearful disease which at the Black Assizes at Oxford, in July, 1577, spread from the prisoners to the Court, and within two days had killed the judge, the sheriff, several justices of the peace, most of the jury, and a great number of the audience, and which afterwards spread among the people of the town. This was a fever which its work as quickly as the cholera does now.

Assuming that these points are tolerably understood, I shall proceed to show that, from faults in the construction and management of our houses, many persons are unconsciously doing, in regard to the air they breathe, nearly as fatal a work as those who are guilty of the most flagrant crimes. Instead of the abundant supply of the vast rivers or boundless sea streaming past them, they shut themselves up in holes near the shores filled with water defiled by their own bodies and from other foul sources. And I shall have to show that the poison of cinders in this country has been much influenced by the gross oversights referred to.

All the valued reports and published opinions on cholera go far to prove that in this climate, at least, any foreign morbific agent or influence which produces it, comes comparatively harmless to persons of vigorous health, and to those who are living in favourable circumstances; but that, if it find persons with the vital powers much depressed or disturbed from any cause, and even for a short time, as happens from intemperance, from improper food or drink, from great fatigue or anxiety, but, above all, from want of fresh air, and consequently from breathing that which is foul, it easily overcomes them. If we take into account that such an air or morbid agent could as little, by itself, produce the fatal disease, as one of the two elements concerned in a common gas explosion, namely, the coal gas and the atmospheric air, could alone produce the explosion. The great unanimity among writers and speakers on the subject in regarding foul atmosphere as the chief vehicle or favourer, if not a chief efficient cause, of the pestilence, is seen in the fact of how similar to the common names we have lately become the words and phrases "malaria, filth, crowded dwellings, crowded neighbourhoods, confined air, fœtid sewers, drains, and cesspools, or total want of these; effluvia of graveyards," &c.; all of which are merely so many names for foul air, and for sources from which it may arise. Singularly, however, little attention has yet been given from authority to the chief source of poisonous air and to means of ventilation, by which all kinds of foul air may certainly be removed.

A system of thorough cleansing—water supply and flushing, for instance—to the obtainment of which chiefly the Board of Health has hitherto devoted its attention, can, however good, influence only that quantity and kind of morbific impurity which arises from retained solid or liquid filth, while, or even about a house, but leaves absolutely untouched the other and really more important impurity, which, in known quantity, is never absent where men are breathing; namely, the filth and poison of the human breath. This latter kind evidently plays the most important part in the causation of a severe pestilence, and therefore must be that of the Tooting school, with 1100 children, of whom nearly 300 were seized by cholera; of the House of Refuge for the Destitute, and of the two great crowded lunatic asylums there, where the disease made similar havoc; of the gaol, the public asylum, and visited daily by numerous strangers, could not be allowed to remain visibly impure with solid and liquid filth, like the Rookery of St. Giles's, and other localities. Now, good ventilation, which, although of the same means comparatively are as yet aware of the fact, is easily to be had, not only entirely dissipates and renders absolutely inert the breath-poison of inmates, however numerous, and of new patients, but, in doing this, increases enormously, at the same time, carries away at once all the first-named kinds of poison, arising from bad drains, or want of drains, and thus acts as a most important substitute for good drains, and there be time to plan and safe opportunity to construct such. It is further to be noted that it is chiefly when the poison of drains, &c. is caught and retained under cover, and is there mixed with the breath, that it becomes very active, for scavengers, nightmen, and gravediggers, who work in the open air, are not often assailed with disease; and in the foul neighbourhoods persons like butchers, who live in open shops, or policemen, who walk generally in the open streets, or in Paris the people who manufacture a great part of the town filth into portable manure, suffer very little.

To illustrate the efficacy of ventilation or dilution with fresh air in rendering quite harmless any aërial poison, I may address the explanation given in a report of mine on fever, furnished at the request of the Poor-law Commissioners in 1840, of the fact that the malaria or infection of marsh fevers, such as occur in the Pontine Marshes near Rome, and of all the deadly tropical fevers, affects persons almost only in the night. Yet the same vapour or gas containing decaying organic matters which causes these fevers is formed during the day, under the influence of the hot sun, still more abundantly than during the colder night; but in the day the direct beams of the sun warm the surface of the earth so intensely, that any air touching that surface is similarly heated, and rises nearly like a balloon, carrying up with it of course, and much diluting, all poisonous matters formed there. During the night, on the contrary, the surface of the earth no longer receiving the sun's rays, soon cools, and a thermometer lying on the ground is found to be several degrees colder than one hanging in the air a few feet above. The poison formed near the ground, therefore, at night, instead of being heated and lifted, and quickly dissipated, as during the day, is rendered cold and comparatively dense, and lies on the earth a concentrated mass, which it may be death to inspire. Hence the value in such situations of sleeping apartments near the top of a house, or of a high garret-room, which shun out the night air, and are large enough to contain a sufficient supply of the purer day air for the persons using them at night, and of mechanical means of down-pure air from above the house to a sunny open space, during the night. At a certain height above the surface of the earth, the atmosphere being nearly of equal purity all the earth over, a man rising in a balloon or obtaining air for his house, from a certain elevation might be considered as having changed his country; any peculiarity of the atmosphere below, owing to the great dilution effected before it reached the height, becoming absolutely inasensible.

Now, in regard to the dilution of aërial poisons in houses by ventilation, I have to explain, that every chimney in which a fire is burning is a shaft or drawing pump, of a certain force, and can easily be rendered a valuable ventilating pump. A chimney is a pump: first, by reason of the suction or approach to a vacuum made in the open fire by any rube across which the wind blows direct y; and, secondly, because the flue is usually occupied, even when there is no fire, by somewhat warmer than the external air, and has, therefore, even in a calm day, what is called a chimney draught proportioned to the difference. In England, therefore, of old, when the chimney fire was always made higher than the heads of persons sitting or sleeping in rooms, a room with an open chimney was tolerably well ventilated in the lower part, where the inmates breathed. The modern fashion, however, of very low grates and low mantel openings has changed the case completely, for such openings can draw air only from the bottom of the rooms, where generally the coldest, the poisoned, and therefore the purest air, is found, while the better side of the breath of lights, of warm food, and of an of subterranean drains, &c., rises and stagnates near the ceilings, and gradually corrupts there. Such heated, impure air, no more tends downwards to escape or dive under the chimney-piece, than it will do inverted bottle immersed in water will dive down through the water to escape by the bottle's mouth; and such a bottle or other vessel containing oil, and so placed in water so that its open mouth communicates with a low but rapid stream, would retain the oil for any length of time. If, however, an opening be made into a chimney flue through the wall near the ceiling of the room, then will all the impure air of the room, and the warmer gas away by that opening as oil from the inverted bottle would instantly all escape through a small opening made near the elevated bottom of the bottle. A top window-sash, lowered a little, instead of serving, as many people believe it does, like such an opening into the chimney flue, becomes generally, in obedience to the chimney draught, merely an inlet of cold air, which first falls as a cascade to the floor, and then glides towards the chimney, and gradually passes away by the hole, leaving the hotter impure air of the room nearly untouched.

For years past I have recommended the adoption of such ventilating chimney openings as above described, and I devised a balanced metallic valve, to prevent, during the use of fire, the escape of smoke to the room. The advantages of these openings and valves were soon so manifest, that the referees appointed under the Building Act added a clause to their bill allowing the introduction of valves, and directing that they were to be [illegible], and they are now in very extensive use. A [illegible] stration of the subject was afforded in St. James's parish, where some quarters are densely inhabited by the families of Irish labourers. These localities formerly sent an enormous number of sick to the neighbouring dispensary. Mr. Toynbee, the able medical chief of that dispensary, came to consult me respecting the ventilation of cellars, and on my recommendation had openings made into the chimney flues of the rooms near the ceilings, by removing a single brick, and placing there a piece of wire gauze, with a light curtain flap hanging against the gauze, to prevent the issue of smoke in gusty weather. The decided effect produced at once on the feelings of the inmates was so remarkable, that there was an extensive demand for the new appliance, and, as a consequence of its adoption, Mr. Toynbee had soon to report, in evidence given before the Health of Towns Commission, and in other published documents, both an extraordinary reduction of the number of sick applying for relief and of the severity of diseases occurring. Wide experience in other parts of the town, and in other hospitals and poor-houses in the kingdom now have these chimney-valves; and most of the medical men and others who have published of late on sanitary matters have strongly commended them. Had the present Board of Health possessed the power, and deemed the means expedient, the chimney openings might, as a prevention of cholera, almost in one day, and at the expense of about a shilling for a poor man's room, have been established over the whole kingdom.

DR. ARNOTT'S VENTILATING CHIMNEY-VALVE.

Mr. Simpson, the registrar of deaths for St. Giles's parish, an experienced practitioner, whose judgment I value much, related to me lately that he had been called to visit a house in one of the crowded courts, to register the death of an inmate from cholera. He found five other persons living in the room, which was most close and offensive. He advised the immediate removal of all to other lodgings. A second died before the removal took place, and soon after, in the poorhouse and elsewhere, three others died who had breathed the foul air of that room. Mr. Simpson expressed to me his belief that if there had been the opening described above into the chimney-flue of the room, this fearful history would not have been to tell. I believe so too, and I believe that there have been in London lately very many similar cases.

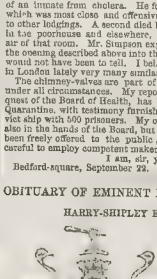
The chimney-valves are but one of a class of means devised by me for ventilation under all circumstances. My report on the ventilation of ships, sent at the request of the Board of Health, has been published in the Board's late Report on Quarantine, with testimonials furnished to the Admiralty as to its utility, in evict ship with 500 prisoners. My observations on the ventilation of hospitals are also in the hands of the Board, but not yet published. All the new means have been freely offered to the public, but persons desiring to use them should careful to employ competent makers.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

Bedford-square, September 22. NEIL ARNOTT.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

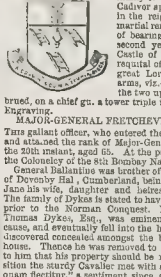
HARRY-SHIPLEY ERSKINE, LORD CARDROSS.



THE death of the youthful Lord Cardross occasioned the assumption on the 2.st inst., of scarlet fever, in his 15th year. By this melancholy event, the Hon. David Stewart Erskine, the deceased's uncle, becomes heir apparent to the family honours.

Lord Cardross was grandson and heir apparent of Henry-David, present Earl of Buchan, by Elizabe h, his first wife, youngest daughter and coheir (with her sisters Grace, wife of Sir John Colonel Warner, and Augusta Mary, married to James-Alexander Manning, Esq.) of Sir Harry Erskine, Major-General in the Charles Slupley, Colonel of Engineers and Governor of Grenada. Few families in Scotland rank higher in antiquity of race and personal distinction than the noble house of Erskine, and few more was the heir. In early times, the Earls of Mar and Buchan occupy a prominent page of Scottish history; and in our own days, what name in oratory and forensic repute surpasses that of Erskine? From the Lord Chancellor Thomas Erskine, Lord Cardross's great-grand-uncle, His Lordship has left one surviving sister.

JOHN PHILIPPS LLOYD, ESQ.



THIS gentleman (the eldest son of John William Lloyd, Esq., of Dan-yr-allt, county of Carmarthen, and late of South Park, in Kent) died on the 17th inst., aged 41. The Lloyds of Dan-yr-allt are the family of great antiquity, derive in direct descent from Cadivor ap Dyfnwal, Lord of Castle Howel, who lived in the reign of Henry I. of England, and acquired martial renown in a battle in which every man capable of bearing arms was bound to be a soldier. In the second year of Henry II. he took, by escalade, the Castle of Carlisle, and in the 13th year of that reign he acquired of his valour, obtained from his Prince (the great Lord Rhys of South Wales) a new shield of arms, viz.—"Sa. three scaling ladders, and between the two uppermost a spear's head arg. its point imbrued, on a chief gu. a tower triple turretted, of the second," as depicted in our Engraving.

MAJOR-GENERAL FRETCHEVILLE DYKES BALLANTINE, H.E I.C.S.

THIS gallant officer, who entered the Hon. East India Company's service in 1797, and attained the rank of Major-General in 1838, died at Richmond, Surrey, on the 20th instant, aged 68. At the period of his decease, and since 1830, he held the Colonelcy of the 8th Bombay Native Infantry.

General Ballantine was brother of the late Joseph D. Ballantine Dykes, Esq., of Downby Hall, Cumberland, being second son of Lawson Dykes, Esq., and Jane his wife, daughter and heiress of John Ballantine, Esq., of Crookdale. The family of Dykes is stated to have been located at Dykesfield, in Cumberland, prior to the Norman Conquest. In the Civil War, Dykes, then representative, Thomas Dykes, Esq., was eminently distinguished by devotion to the Royal cause, and eventually fell into the hands of the Parliamentarians, having been discovered concealed amongst the branches of an ivy-berry-tree in front of his house. Thence he was removed to Cockermouth, and there had an offer made to him that his property should be restored if he simply recon ed. This proposition the sturdy Cavalier met with a decided negative, and "preferred to be hanged in quam fecilitur," a sentiment since adopted as the family motto. He married a lady of the noble house of Fretcheville, and thus introduced that name into the family of Dykes, by whom it has been used in every generation since.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

EXPERIMENTS.—ACCIDENT.—Some interesting experiments were made on Monday at Rat Island, in Portsmouth Harbour, under the superintendence of Captain Chads and Captain Savage, R.M.A., in blowing up stockades. Several bags of powder were hung against the stockade, but exploded without doing any damage. A hole was then made and the powder placed at the foot of the defence, not being covered, without doing any injury; but 10 lb. of powder placed in a hole and covered with a heavy sand-bag, blew the stockade to pieces. All the officers from the Excellent and Naval College were present, with a number of other persons. At the last trial, when the stockade was blown to pieces, one of the fragments struck Commander Hewlett a severe blow across the thigh, and knocked him down. It was at first thought the bone was fractured. We are happy to say, however, that, although very severely bruised, no bone was broken.

RECIMENTAL BENEFIT SOCIETIES.—By an act passed in the late session (12 and 13 Vict., cap. 71), certain benefit societies which have been formed among non-commissioned officers and privates of regiments of cavalry and infantry, for their advantage, were dissolved, and the funds of such societies, by an order of the Secretary-at-War, transferred to the Paymaster-General. The funds transferred are to be deposited in the Military Savings Bank, [illegible] of any soldier [illegible] to be [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE COUNCIL OF BISHOPS, IN THE CHAPEL OF ST. SULPICE, AT PARIS.

THE SYNOD OF PARIS.

Last week, we stated the commencement of the Synod of Paris, pursuant to the decree of the President of the Republic, authorising, during the present year, the metropolitan councils and the diocesan synods which the Archbishop and Bishops may think proper to hold in their respective dioceses, on ecclesiastical matters.

The Synod or Council held its first sitting on Monday week, in the chapel of the religious seminary of St. Sulpice. A private conversation took place in the morning of that day to verify the claims of those desirous of attending, to regulate the order of the proceedings, and to name the theologians who were to be present. The same day, at three o'clock, the first general congregation took place, when the Archbishop of Paris delivered an address, indicating the objects of the Council. Three decrees were then read, De aperiendo synodo; De modo vivendi in concilio; and De professione fidei, which were to be promulgated at the first general sitting. That sitting was held on Tuesday, with much solemnity. Mass was said by the Archbishop of Paris, in the sanctuary being placed the fathers of the Council in full canonicals—Messrs. de Meaux, Versailles, Blois, Orleans, and the delegate of the Bishop of Chartres, whose great age prevented his attending in person. Several other Bishops were also seen in the sanctuary, some of whom, as those of Sens and Troyes, had come of their own accord, to be present at the proceedings; and others, like two Irish prelates now in Paris, had been invited to attend. The members of the Chapter of Notre Dame de Paris were seated on benches down the aisle, as were the Vicars-General, the delegates of the Provincial Chapters, and the theologians of the Council. The three decrees were then read and voted. The nomination of the officers of the Council was then proceeded to. MM. Sibour and Ravinet were appointed secretaries; MM. Bouquet and Héron, promoters; and MM. Eglée, de Conny, and Rugin, masters of the ceremonies. Amongst the theologians of the Council, are M. de Courson, superior-general of the Company of St. Sulpice; Father de Ravignan, of the Company of Jesus; Father Rubillon, MM Carrière and Icard, professors of the religious seminary of St. Sulpice; the Abbé Langlois, superior of the religious seminary of Foreign Missions; M. Hamelin, curé of St. Severin; the Abbé Bautain, the Abbé Serbet, &c. After the appointment of the officers, the sitting was brought to a close.

The course of proceeding of the persons connected with the Council is as follows:—They rise at five o'clock, recite the breviary, and then hear mass, which is celebrated at half-past seven o'clock; after that the private sittings of the Bishops and theologians; breakfast takes place at eleven o'clock; and during its continuance, portions of the Holy Scriptures, and of the life of St. Charles, the restorer of Councils in the sixteenth century, are read; at one o'clock, the divine office; at three, the general sitting of the Council; at six, dinner, accompanied by reading, as in the morning; and the day closes by prayers at nine.

The Council is divided into five committees: 1. that of decrees; 2. doctrine; 3. ecclesiastical studies; 4. discipline; and 5. canonical law. Precedence is given not to dignity, but to seniority of nomination. The Council holds—1. private congregations or sittings; 2. general ones; 3. solemn sessions. The private congregations are a kind of bureau, where the matters to be afterwards examined are first discussed; the general congregations are the meetings to which the private ones send in their reports; and the solemn sessions are intended to pronounce on and publish the decrees decided on in the general congregation.

Our Artist has depicted the impressively picturesque scene of the Synod. The presiding Archbishop of Paris (M. Sibour) is seated, in full pontifical robes, and wearing his mitre; behind his chair is borne the crozier; and around and in the rear is a crowd of priests. Facing the Archbishop are seated the Bishops, with the cross, a pair of tall candelabra, priests with incense, &c. In the right corner is a pulpit, in which a priest is reading the decree that regulates the opening of the Council; and around the pulpit are stationed several other priests. Behind the Archbishop is the altar.

BURIAL-GROUND FOR THE CHINESE, AT CALCUTTA.

CHINESE BURIAL-GROUND AT CALCUTTA.

(From a Correspondent.)

Walking abroad, a few mornings back, in the less frequented parts of Intally, in the suburbs of Calcutta, my attention was attracted by observing the tops of several white tombstones above a dilapidated wall and jungly hedge which skirted the road. On entering a gate, which was open, I was as much surprised as interested to find it was a Chinese Burial-ground; for, albeit many years a resident of Calcutta I had never even heard of such a place; a fact illustrative of the trite remark that constant residents of a city seldom know the half of what it contains.

Induced to repeat my visit the next morning, I sketched the place, and herewith beg to forward the drawing for the pages of the Illustrated London News.

The Chinese of Calcutta are almost exclusively shoemakers; the only exception, in short, within my knowledge, being a few carpenters—all residents of one of the narrowest, but busiest mercantile streets of Calcutta, called the Cossitollah. There was, at one period, a Chinese doctor here, who might have been seen almost nightly, conspicuous in one of the side boxes of the old Chowringhee Theatre. He has passed from amongst us, leaving the humble (but, I suspect, not very poor) residents of the Cossitollah the only representatives of the Celestial Empire. I was, therefore, the more surprised both at the character and expensive structure of some of the tombs (one of which I observed of solid granite), and their number; for the ground—a portion only of which is represented in the Sketch—is but one of three distinct enclosures, which, also to each other, I found similarly appropriated. The arrangement of all appears to be nave."

At the head of the ground, overshadowed by a cluster of fine almond and date trees, is a tomb, which, from its superior structure and size, might be supposed either the resting-place of some person above the common order (perhaps the donor of the ground), or intended as a distinguishing mark to its principal end, and guide to the arrangement of the tombs, which I observed were all placed (as in English burial grounds) in the same direction. Their formation varied but little. The nearest in the foreground of the Sketch, therefore, will furnish a fair idea of the whole. In substance, a thick wall; in shape, a horse-shoe, elevated at the back: it rather surrounds than covers the grave. At the head is the tablet—a slab of stone; and before it, stuck into a little loose earth, or between the crevices of the stones or flat tiles which cover the grave, the remains of some five or six small coloured wax candles, which, I believe, are burned by the Chinese both at the time of burial and of subsequent festivities on the first day of their year.

The tombs near the head of the ground are nearly all in good order, but many of those toward the opposite end are in a dilapidated condition, sunk into hollows—the abode, as I was warned, of dangerous snakes.

Near the extreme rear of the ground, to the left of the principal object, is a tomb distinguished by its greater height, surmounted by an urn, partaking altogether of a mixed style of architecture, European and Chinese, upon the tablet of which, flanked on one side by Chinese characters, is the inscription in English.

The September Fetes at Brussels.—Brussels, Sept. 25.—The annual fêtes in celebration of the revolution of 1830 have taken place with more than ordinary display this year. This has been caused in a great measure by the desire of the Belgians to manifest their delight at having escaped the revolutionary torrent that has inundated the Continent, and partly to rival the efforts of the provincial towns, which have latterly vied with each other in doing honour to the King, Queen, and royal family during the visits they have recently paid them. The first day of the fêtes (Sunday) was ushered in by a salvo of artillery at eight o'clock, and all the public edifices, the hotels of the Ministry and the foreign Legations, were hung with flags. The Place des Martyrs was ornamented with a profusion of funereal decorations around the monument, and a guard of honour was posted on duty. At eleven o'clock several provincial harmonic societies arrived by the railway, and were conducted to the Hôtel de Ville, where they were received by the Burgomaster, and the usual d'honneur distributed. In the evening the city was illuminated, and presented a very gay appearance. By Monday morning the number of arrivals of strangers and foreigners was so great as nearly to double the ordinary population. The proceedings of the day were, however, sadly marred by the rain, which fell heavily during the morning. At ten o'clock a solemn service was performed in memory of the citizens who died for the national independence, which was attended by the civil and military authorities. At noon the different corps of archers and riflemen assembled, with their bands, and proceeded to try their skill in the places allotted to them. The principal point of attraction was the esplanade of the Porte de Namur, where games, exhibitions, and amusements of all descriptions were congregated in great force. At six, notwithstanding the heavy rain which was falling, the concert on the Grand Place, given by the bands of the garrison, was attended by a numerous audience. At its conclusion the choral societies competed for the prizes offered by the town; after which balls took place in different parts of the city, thus closing the proceedings for the day. The fête extended over the greater part of the week.

Dumfries Prison.—Inscription Plate.—The Dumfries Prison is at present in course of being pulled down, with a view of erecting a new one on the same site, a portion of the old building being allowed to remain for the reception of prisoners until a sufficient part of the new one is rendered fit for occupation. In the work of excavation on Saturday last, the labourers came on the foundation stone of the building, and a brass plate, about twenty inches square, containing an inscription. The plate was broken by the blow of a pick-axe, but is otherwise in good preservation; and the inscription, which is in Latin, and rather grandiloquent, is pretty legible. It bears that the stone was laid on the 3d of September, 1703, by the Most Noble Charles Earl of Dalkeith, under the authority of the Grand Master of the masonic lodge of Scotland, in compliance with a resolution of the leading men of the county and burgh of Dumfries, to have a building, in which persons undergoing punishment for offences might be so imprisoned that decency should always preside; and, in immediate connexion with their Court-house, which was sufficiently ample and commodious for the administration of justice with dignity, and the holding of county meetings.

A Supplement to the "Index Purgatorius."—The Pope, by a Decretum bearing date the 30th of May, but renewed on the 6th of June, and first published in the Giornale di Roma of the 31st of August, "condemns and proscribes" the following works:—1. "On the Five Wounds of the Catholic Church," &c. 2. "The Constitution according to Social Justice, by Rosmini; with an Appendix on the Unity of Italy," by Antonio Rosmini Serbati. 3. "The Modern Jesuit," by Vincenzo Gioberti. 4. "Funeral Discourse for the Slain at Vienna," by Father Ventura—four books already in everybody's hands in Italy.

THE BIRMINGHAM EXPOSITION OF ARTS AND MANUFACTURES.

GROUP OF SILVER PLATE (MESSRS. ELKINGTON).

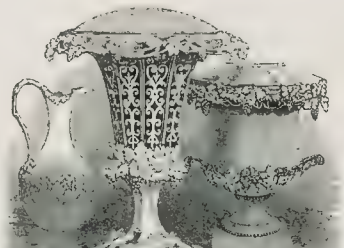
CHANDELIER FOR SUMMER-HOUSE, BUCKINGHAM PALACE (MESSRS. MESSENGER AND SONS).

IN our Engravings this week, from the articles exhibited at the Birmingham Exposition, will be found some of the most noticeable works of Messrs. Elkington and Collis, in the silver and electro-plate departments; Messrs. Messenger, Winfield, and the Coalbrookdale Company, in brass and iron; and Copeland in the Parian statuettes. Messrs. Elkington's display of silver and electro-plate is of the most exquisite character, in point of design and in delicacy of workmanship. Indeed, their productions will stand comparison with anything ever realized in silver; and in two of the examples we have selected, great novelty of design and successful treatment are eminently conspicuous. These are an epergne and a fruit stand, of silver, in both of which the graceful twining Ipomœa, with its bell-like blossoms, is employed as the ornament. The former has also the additional novelty of the shaft and stand being of prismatic glass; and the brilliant effect produced by the combination of the glass and silver, heightened as the latter is in parts by gilding, is truly beautiful, showing a new mode in which such pieces of useful and ornamental plate may be produced. This epergne and flower-stand are worthy of notice, too, for another and more important reason, that there is no false taste in them; the shafts supporting the glass dishes at the top evidently can support them; and the slender Ipomœa twining round are elegant additions to them and no more: while in similar pieces of plate the general rule is to perch a glass dish amongst the branches of a tree, so that one may really wonder how a dish got there; or else on a shaft composed of curved lines, as though the dish were too heavy, and so twisted or bent or broke it; and then, to add to the absurdity, dogs, sheep, horses, and cupids, and other miscellaneous adornments are grouped in to produce an effect, which we may certainly designate as vulgar in the extreme, as it violates all rules of taste and propriety. We wish all designers for silver works would imitate the simple yet exquisitely beautiful effect which the faithful copying of flowers has produced in the two pieces of plate of which we have been writing. The other pieces in our group are a cup and tankard, in gilt mountings, of a new material called "ductile ivory," a very beautiful and exact imitation of ivory, having the additional recommendation of being inexpensive. The cup has round it an elegant scroll ornament, with cherubs on its convolutions; and the tankard is a copy of an ivory one, which erstwhile belonged to Martin Luther.

¶ A copy, in electro-deposit, of the exquisite silver cup in the British Museum, known as the "Cellini cup," is a most perfect fac-simile of the original; and in dead silver the effect is truly wonderful. The bronzes exhibited by Messrs. Elkington (as we briefly observed in our former notice) are of most admirable character, some of them being of important size; and they are all distinguishable for careful and spirited modelling, and perfection of workmanship.

Our copies from the plate manufactured by Collis and Co. are but few, as their display chiefly consists of copies from plate made some years since, or else well-known forms in candelabra, inkstands, salts, dishes, &c. The central figure in our illustration is a flower vase of extremely beautiful character in workmanship, and it forms part o. a splendid service of plate lately finished by Messrs. Collis for Prince Callimaki. The pierced work, in arabasque, in the body of the vase is of good design, and is a happy arrangement. The other piece in our Illustration is a wine cooler, of dead blue glass; and the ornaments being gilded, the effect is very rich and sumptuous. A claret jug, with vine handle, completes our Illustration.

The Chandelier exhibited by Messrs. Messenger and Sons is a copy of one executed by them for her Majesty, to adorn the summer-house in the gardens of Buckingham Palace. It was designed by Mr. Grüner, and is extremely elegant in character; the vine branches to support the candles, the group of young satyrs at the base, and the crouching panthers in the vine branches, are all emblematic of the poem whence the decorations of the summer-house are drawn.



GROUP OF PLATE (MESSRS. COLLIS).

In point of execution, this chandelier is especially to be admired; the figures and animals being most artistically wrought, and reflecting the very highest credit on the Messrs. Messenger, whose workmen have so ably followed Mr. Gruner's designs. This chandelier is exhibited by special permission of her Majesty.

Our group of Mr. R. W. Winfield's manufactures shews a table of brass, and a portion of a staircase, with balustrade of brass. The table is of extremely nice design, and has a marble top. The balustrade is of truly beautiful character and delicacy of workmanship, the foliage being well designed and wrought. The display of Mr. Winfield's manufactures is very large, comprising chandeliers, cornices, bedsteads, &c., all of them distinguished by novelty of design and effect, and some of them extremely elegant.

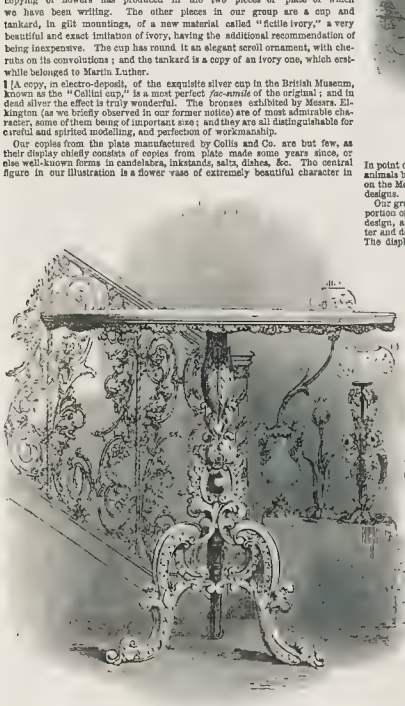
Amongst the things exhibited by Messrs. Mapplebeck and Lowe, but not manufactured by them, are several beautiful specimens of the iron-work of the Coalbrookdale Company, and from them we have chosen for illustration two elegant flower-stands—one a pedestal stand, the other for a sideboard. Most of the other Coalbrookdale works are of subjects well known. In the same Illustration we have given the rest for the fire-irons, and part of fender, to one of the most superb grates ever shown. The grate is Sylvester's new patent, and is manufactured by Stewart, Smith, and Co., of Sheffield, and is of bright steel, enriched with ormolu ornaments of the finest character, whilst the hearth is composed of encaustic tiles, and the fender is of elaborate pierced work. The portion shown in our Illustration will give some idea of the elegant form of the rest and its adjuncts, but the brilliancy and richness pervading them cannot be given without the aid of colour, and then but comparatively. It is a truly regal grate. Whilst on the subject of stoves we must not omit noticing some of very beautiful workmanship, manufactured by Poole and Co., of Sheffield, one being designed by Owen Jones, in the picturesque style of the Alhambra. A novel form of grate, called the "solar grate," is also remarkable, the opening for the fire being circular, the cheeks concave and circular also, as is likewise the ash pan. The effect of this is very good. A massive chimney-piece, of Berlin iron, made by Marsh, of Dudley, is noticeable from its novelty, and we were assured the iron would keep its polish with very little trouble. This new application of iron is worthy of remark, as a wide field is open to designers in producing some effective and good combinations with the stoves to which they may be applied.

Another recent feature, also, is the application of iron to the manufacture looking-glass and picture frames. The display of stoves, fenders, and fire-irons was highly creditable generally to the different exhibitors, though some of the designs exhibited a singular infelicity in ornamentation, animals, plants, and figures being represented on the fenders, where, from the use to which fenders are applied, they ought never to be introduced.

Our last Illustration is one of the largest pieces of Parian ware exhibited by Mr. Copeland; it is a flower-stand, supported by the Graces, and is a very beautiful work. The collection of statuettes in Parian, exhibited by the worthy alderman, is very extensive; they are all distinguished for their high character.

In table and ornamental china there were no striking novelties displayed, many of the portions of dessert services having scenes painted on them—a fashion which should be exploded. As regards table china, we prefer Messrs. Minton's display, as being less ambitious, and therefore more pleasing. In jugs, vases, &c., the two firms of Copeland and Minton are close rivals, and both are alike distinguishable for high finish, taste, and workmanship. Some imitation Sèvres, by the latter firm, are magnificent. The china slabs for fire-places exhibit many beautiful patterns. At Minton's, also, we noticed some garden seats of Gothic character, manufactured from Pugin's designs, and, therefore, we need scarcely observe, in strict accordance with the style adopted.

Our limits will not permit us to specify every object worthy of note in this highly interesting Exposition; suffice it, that it is most creditable to the manufacturers. In the pecuniary point of view the Exposition has been eminently successful, the receipts at the doors up to the present time being £1037. We cannot conclude our notice without paying a tribute to Mr. Belshaw, whose labours in superintending the multifarious, and oftentimes conflicting, duties attendant on the Exposition are most praiseworthy.



LARGE TABLE, &c. (MR. R. W. WINFIELD.)

FLOWER-STAND AND (MR. W. T. COPELAND)

COALBROOKDALE IRON-WORK, &c., (EXHIBITED BY MESSRS. MAPPLEBECK AND LOWE.)

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, 8.—Seventeenth Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, October 1.—Queen Mary crowned. 1553. Pheasant shooting begins.
TUESDAY, 2.—Michaelmas Law Sittings commence. London University opened, 1828.
WEDNESDAY, 3.—Old St. Matthew's
THURSDAY, 4.—Length of day 11h. 21m.
FRIDAY, 5.—Sun rises 5h. 56m.; sets 5h. 29m.
SATURDAY, 6.—Faith. Louis Philippe born, 1773.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCTOBER 6, 1849.

Sunday		Monday		Tuesday		Wednesday		Thursday		Friday		Saturday
M. h m	A. h m	M. h m	A. h m	M. h m	A. h m	M. h m	A. h m	M. h m	A. h m	M. h m	A. h m	M. h m	A. h m
40	1	0	20	1	55	1	35	2	15	2	55	3	35
4	45	5	24	6	1	6	40	7	20	8	0	8	45

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"A Constant Reader."—Apply to the manager of the theatre.
"Paddy."—Galop.
"Mob."—Ross and Co., Newcastle-street, Strand; or Copeland, New Bond-street.
"G. M."—Blandford-square.—No.
"An Old Subscriber."—The profit will be £500.
"C. S."—St. Paul's Churchyard. Prestige, in French, is enchantment or fascination. We use it for influence or prepossession.
"W. C. H."—Atherstone.—The height of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, from the pavement in the street to the top of the cross, is 404 feet.
"L. M. T."—Apply to some professor of music in London.
"T. F. T."—Manchester. We cannot hear of the publication.
"Poodle Dog."—The lady in question is engaged at the Princess' Theatre, to be opened for the season on Monday next.
"A Constant Reader," Aldgate, is thanked, though we cannot engrave the oddity.
"J. C."—Stowe. Sea the cheap works on Mathematics, recently published by Chambers, Edinburgh.
"A Correspondent."—For the history of the "Vo-Kuhja, see Laing's "Chronicle of the Kings of Norway."
"B. S."—Gibraltar. Murray's "Encyclopædia of Geography," with Supplement, and the geographical articles in the "Penny Cyclopædia," are, altogether, the most valuable contributions to geographical science made in this century. Your letter cost is postage.
"G. P. B."—Oxford, had letter consult a solicitor.
"J. J. W."—Hampton.—Apply to Harris, bookseller, Bow-street, Covent-garden.
"T. D. F."—Cranbrook.—The value of property in Great Britain and Ireland is stated at £3,629,000,000
"J. W." and "A Welsh Tourist."—We cannot inform you.
"An A."—We do not see the "question."
"Anastasia."—We believe there is to be a New Bond street an establishment where "chess" is to be taught.
"T. W." Newcastle.—Apply respecting Philipp's Fire Annihilator at 105, Leadenhall-street.
"An Ulster Man."—Out of fashion.
"A Man in the Far West."—It is not our practice.
"Major Armstrong."—We believe so, but a stockbroker is the best authority.
"A Constant Subscriber," Pinching.—Apply, with your coins, to Mr. Webster, 17, Great Russell-street, Covent-garden.
"Arcuate de Paris."—The outline of the coast of Great Britain is 1460 miles; but as the coast, especially on the western side, is a succession of projecting promontories, and deeply penetrating bays, the coast-line probably exceeds three times that amount.
"Mary Ann."—Orders sent to Mr. Egan, Killarney, for the bog oak ornaments will be duly attended to.
"G. R. S."—We do not understand the question.
"W. J.," Bedford.—A narrative of the Thorn Riot is published at Canterbury.
"X. Y. Z."—The price of Prichard's work on Animalcules is 8s.: it may be had, by order, of any bookseller.
"S. M.," Kettering.—Declined.
"J. H. G.," Manchester, is thanked; but we have not room for the Epigram.
"G. F. L."—Signora Addamayer made her début at Drury-lane Theatre, and subsequently sang at Her Majesty's Theatre in 1846.
"Scrutator."—Madame Pleyel ranks as the greatest vocal executant of her time.
"H. W. M."—Particulars of the Satanas may be found fully detailed in Wood's edition of Douglas's "Scottish Peerage."
"Numitor."—The seal sent is the arms of the family in question. The blazon we gave referred to another family of the same name
"X. Z. A." Chatham.—The arms of Sandford are, "Paly of six arg. and sa." Another coat belonging to the name is "Arg. on a chev. sa. three boars' heads couped or." Crest, a boar's shuttle threaded ppr.
"S. G."—By cutting a newspaper, you render it chargeable, if sent by post.
"S. P."—From the swearing rate.
"A Constant Reader," Banbury.—We do not remember the passage.
"A Weekman."—Apply to the secretary of the college.
"F. W. E."—We do not intend to illustrate Captain Fitzmaurice's rotary steam-engine, as it is so closely connected with that patented by Mr. Galloway, and engraved in No. 300 of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.
"Exercise"—There is a public gymnasium near the foot of Primrose-hill, Regent's-park; and one for the use of the school at Unsersity College, Gower-street.
"A Constant Reader." Upper Harwood.—Lucifer matches may be rendered sweet by putting into it a little fresh charcoal in powder; or its "burning" may be prevented by well charring the inside of the cask before it is filled.
"G. S.," Glasgow.—A sheet of paper may be split by passing it between two rollers or cylinders of glass or amber, resin, or metaline amalgam, and strongly erecting them so as to produce the attraction of cohesion. We are not aware if this be Mr. Ralston's method. (See Communication, No. 1088.)
"W. Anderson."—See Dr. Bird's "Annals of India in the year 1848."
"Fine Arts."—See the "Wilkie Gallery," now in course of publication.
"J. B. D." Wonder.—In 1825, June 24 fell upon Tuesday.
"Z. P. G."—Mr. Lumley, bookseller, Chancery-lane.
"C. E. B."—Beheading was introduced into England from Normandy, by William the Conqueror, 1074, when Waltheof, Earl of Huntingdon, &c., was first so executed. (Solomon's Chron.) Mahogany was first used in England for furniture about a century and a quarter ago.
"J. H. G." Manchester.—Probably, next week.
"W. B. D."—By a suit in the Ecclesiastical Court.
"Lancrick."—We must decline further reply
"A. M.," Brewer street.—Bunbury's "Account of the Cape," published last year. Chambers's cheap treatise
"Anti-Cholera."—See Sir Thomas Browne's "Hydriotaphia, or Urn-burial," reprinted in Wilkin's edition of Browne's works, 3 vols., 1835.
"Dyspepticus."—We do not know the address.
"R. A." Ashton.—We cannot spare room.
"An Anxious Enquirer after Truth."—See Neale on "Feasts and Fasts," 1845; a good authority on the laws relating to Sunday and other holidays, &c.
"Z. O. D.," Trowbridge, had better consult a solicitor
"H. S."—Aston.—The artist has not been employed by us.
"Two Constant Subscribers," Loughborough.—Her Majesty's Theatre has five tiers of boxes
"E. B."—Your thin gold coin about the size of a sovereign is the ducat of Holland, still current
"Anxious"—Your copper coin is an 8-maravedis-piece of Charles IV. of Spain. The Spanish kings being of the family of the Bourbons since Philip V., carry the fleur-de-lis.
"J. C. E." suggests that Theodolite is derived from Θεάομαι δόον λιτόν, "I see a level road;" which is the use, we well know, of the instrument. Another correspondent suggests θεᾶν δόον λιτόν, "I make a level road;" 1. e. an instrument for levelling roads
"Τηλεθεάματος." —See a work on "Taxidermy," to be had at 1, Paternoster-row.
"Giuseppe"—A worthless coin wrought of Louis XIV. Coin-dealers usually make a charge when coins are worth the information given; but when they are worthless it is given gratis-house.
"A Constant Subscriber."—We have not the Liverpool dimensions. The Birmingham organ is 45 feet high, 40 feet wide, and 17 feet deep; and within the case there are four separate organs—the grand organ, the choir organ, the swell organ, and combination organ: the first has 1620 pipes; the second, 710, the third, 498; the combination, 498, and the pedal, 720—in all, 4062 pipes, with 78 draw-stops.
"Commerce Candle."—It is not optional, the father's crest must be used.
"William."—The appearance of the coronet as portion of the crest does not indicate nobility.
"Beta."—The use of plate with any crest engraved thereon would render the possessor liable to the tax on armorial bearings.
"Antiquus."—Charlewood, widow of Henry Sconser Lucy, Esq., the lineal descendant, on the female line, of Sir Thomas Lucy, of Shakespeare's notoriety.
"A Subscriber," Milford.—We regret that we have not room for the report
"R. J.," Clerkenwell.—A brass coin we get of John V. of Portugal, date 1747, by order of which
"I. L. P."—The fee does not exceed a few shillings
"J. M. W."—The Duke of Cumberland is the youngest son of King George III.
"E. W."—We find a list of the Trustees of the British Museum in the Post-Office London Directory for the present year
"J. H."—We do not know the address
"[illegible]" Woolwich.—Captain Marryat wrote "The Pirate and Three Cutters."
"T. H.," Lawrepool.—The play of "Strathmore" is published at 2*s. 6d., and may be had of any bookseller.*
"B. A. B."—A letter to the Patriot newspaper may elicit the required information respecting the late Mr. Hone. Thomas Carlyle is the author of "Hero Worship."
"Constance."—We do not find the name in the "London Directory."
"M.," Ireland.—The third cellar has been searched, and the clairvoyance proved inane.
"Ajax."—Mr. Grossmith, surgical machinist, 175, Fleet-street
"[illegible]" Rose, 4 Radley, Seedsman, 112, Strand
"Delta.—We do not remember to have answered the questions.
"H. H.," Coventry, will find a list of the East India Directors in this year's almanack. The changes will be found in our Journal for April 14 last, p. 235.
"A S."—The wax-horn is manufactured by M. Saxe, of Paris. The Distant denominated the trombones, trumpets, and cornet à piston under this general term. The instruments are brass, and have keys, and are now generally used in the French military bands.

BOOKS, &c., RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.
The Agriculture of Suffolk.—Andrew the Savoyard.—Sketches of Northumbrian Castles.—Desert Isle.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1849.

SCARCELY a mail arrives in this country that does not bring accounts of dissatisfaction or turbulence from our colonies, properly so called, or from the dependencies which we have acquired by conquest, treaty, or purchase from other nations. Now it is Canada that complains, or Jamaica that despairs; and now it is the Cape that remonstrates with the luckless Colonial Secretary. Sir William Molesworth, in his admirable speech upon colonial affairs, in the last session of Parliament, sketched with a masterly hand the multifarious duties supposed to be performable by the Secretary of State for that important department, and depicted him as "giving a few hours to one dependency, and then a few hours to another; traversing and re-traversing, in his imagination, the terraqueous globe; flying from the Arctic to the Antarctic Pole; hurrying from the snows of North America to the burning regions of the Tropics; now in Ceylon, a financial and and religious reformer, promoting the interests of the coffee-planter, and casting discredit on the tooth and religion of Buddha; now in Van Diemen's Land, striving to reform the fiends whom he has transported to that Pandemonium; now in Canada, discussing the Indemnity Bill and the war of races; or, in the fair isles of the Ionian Sea, enjoying a life of luxurious ease and perfect tranquillity." The last stroke of Sir William's pencil was the most unfortunate in the picture; for the Ionian Islands, even at that period, offered no exception to the general dissatisfaction of all our colonies and dependencies within a nearer distance of us than Australia and New Zealand.

The discontent in Cephalonia—the largest of the seven Ionian Islands, which were placed under the protection of Great Britain in 1815, by the stipulations of the treaty of Paris—dates from the very day of our taking possession. The independence of Greece, with which the Ionian islanders not unnaturally desire to be incorporated, increased this feeling of hostility to British rule; but no overt act displayed the temper of the inhabitants until September, 1848, when the anniversary of the Greek Revolution was the signal for a partial outbreak. "The badge of Greek freedom," says a letter, in a daily contemporary, from a gentleman who for many years held a civil appointment in the island, "was publicly worn by almost the whole population; the day was made a festival; the Resident, or Civil Governor, was passed in the streets without the slightest mark of respect; and, at a great banquet, which was given in honour of the Greek struggle for independence, the health of King Otho was proposed and received with shouts of enthusiasm, while that of her Majesty the Queen of England was omitted, for the first time on such an occasion." Disturbances afterwards ensued—the Greek flag was hoisted in various parts of the island—several persons were killed—and it was not until reinforcements arrived from Corfu that the riots were suppressed and tranquillity restored.

The accounts recently received show that the feelings engendered at that time have not subsided. We learn that, between the 28th and 31st of August, various outrages of the most serious kind were committed. Mr. Ward, the Lord High Commissioner, appears to have acted with courage, promptitude, and discretion, under the circumstances. The latest accounts extend to the 9th instant, at which time the insurgents, under the command of Theodore Vlacco, and a priest named Nodaro, had been attacked and dispersed by the British troops. Nine prisoners were taken, and afterwards executed.

It is easy to suppress such an insurrection as this; and the guilt of men like Vlacco and Nodaro, who, with such puny means at command, brave the power of a state like Great Britain, and cause the useless shedding of their countrymen, cannot possibly be exaggerated. But, having restored tranquillity in these islands, the more difficult task will remain of governing them in such a manner as to give satisfaction to the inhabitants. Though a natural, it is but a sentimental wish on their parts to be incorporated with Greece, whose language they speak, and whose history and traditions belong to the islands as well as to the continental portion of that illustrious land. The Ionians could gain nothing by the transfer of their allegiance to a state in such a deplorable condition as Greece; and, even if they could, any attempt to throw off the yoke of Great Britain would amount to insanity. But the very powerlessness of this small dependency is a reason why this country should be even more than usually anxious to stand towards it in the light of a real benefactor; of a redresser of acknowledged grievances; and of a friend of its commercial, social, and political progress. We are confident that such is the feeling of the country and of the Government; and that to oppress the Ionians is as far from the wish as it is from the interest of Great Britain. The country will be glad to hear of Mr. Ward as the successful queller of this revolt. It will be still more glad to hear of him as an able and kindly administrator, employed in the removal of abuses, in the conciliation of enemies, and in granting to the Ionians any just privileges, the withholding of which, contrary to promises made long ago, may have stimulated the feelings of nationality, and exasperated them into the present outbreak.

M. DUPIN, the President of the French National Assembly, has lately been lecturing an Assembly of 2000 French peasantry, on the folly and wickedness of Communism. The subdivision of the soil in France is so minute, that, of these 2000 peasants, the large majority must have been in the condition of proprietors; yet it does not seem, from the published report of M. Dupin's speech, that he did them the good service of pointing out to them that the compulsory subdivision of estates which made them proprietors, was, in itself, a species of Communism which was gradually reducing all the cultivators of the soil into a Communism of misery and bankruptcy. It is not enough for men in the high position, personal and political, of M. Dupin, to preach respect for law and order. They should do something more. They should inculcate those sound political, philosophical, and economical principles, which, in their timely application, save nations from the social disorganization which the hopeless misery of millions of the people is sure to produce. Men in that position should go deeply into the causes which lead to the disturbance of public order. The repeal of the mischievous law passed in the first revolution, which forces the subdivision of estates, and the establishment of a right to relief on the part of the destitute, would lay French Communism prostrate, and render it quite unnecessary for M. Thiers to write, or M. Dupin to speak against it. As long as millions of petty landed proprietors, in a state of bankruptcy, exist in France, that country cannot hope for real repose. The social question, there as elsewhere, lies at the root of politics. A solvent proprietary and a well-cultivated soil are essential to national freedom, and to the social progress of all classes of the community.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

CAMBRIDGE

Persons desirous of passing the voluntary theological examination have been requested to send in their names to the examiners, the Rev. Dr. Olivant and the Rev. Professor Blunt, on or before the 10th of October, and to attend at the Senate House on Tuesday morning, the 30th of October, at nine o'clock.

APPOINTMENTS.

BISHOPRIC.—Dr. Hinds, Dean of Carlisle, to the Bishopric of Norwich

DEANERY.—The Rev. James Aspinall, of Althorpe Rectory, Lincolnshire, to the Deanery of Carlisle.

CANONRY.—The Hon. and Rev. John Grey, to be an Honorary Canon of the Cathedral at Durham.

PRESENDS.—The Rev. James Ford, of Heavitree, to a Prebendal Stall in Exeter Cathedral. The Rev. J. L. Popham, Rector of Chilton and Rural Dean, to the Prebendal Stall of Yetminster, in the Cathedral of Salisbury

Her Majesty has appointed the Venerable Archdeacon Jennings to be incumbent of St. James's Chapel, St. Marylebone, in place of the late Rev. Dr. White QUEEN'S COLLEGE, BIRMINGHAM.—The winter session of this college will commence on Tuesday, October 2nd when the Rev. Horace Gray, M.A., Vicar of Filton, Prebendary of Bath and Wells, Professor of Theology, and Resident Warden of the Arts Department, will deliver his inaugural address.

The Episcopal Chapel in Gray's-inn-lane, of which the Rev. Thomas Mortimer has for some years been the minister, is about to be resigned by him to the Rev. Edward Garbett, now lecturer of St. George's Church, Southwark. This is the chapel which it was appreciated would be taken by the friends of Mr. Baptist Noel. Mr. Garbett commences his incumbency early in October.

ST. PAUL'S.—The vacancy which has been occasioned in the office of preacher to this society by the lamented death of the Rev. Dr. Shepherd, will, we understand, be filled up by the benchers in the course of next Michaelmas term. Among the numerous candidates is the Rev. James Bampfield, Fellow of King's College, Cambridge, and formerly chaplain to his Majesty the King of Hanover, and at present curate of St. Mark's, North Audley-street.

THE See of Madras, vacant by the resignation of Dr. Spencer, is understood to be given to Archdeacon Dealtry, on account of Mr. Baptist Noel at St. John's Chapel. The Archdeacon having spent many years in India, and being still in the vigour of life, the appointment is a judicious one in every point of view. It is also anticipated that the Rev. Thomas Nolan, one of the most eminent of the Liverpool clergy, will succeed the Archdeacon in St. John's Chapel.

CATHEDRAL AT DUNKELD.—On Saturday, Sept. 15, the Bishop of Brechin, as representative of the aged Bishop of Dunkeld, laid the first stone of the intended cathedral of that diocese, the original cathedral at Dunkeld being in possession of the Presbyterian establishment.

THE BISHOP OF LLANDAFF.—We regret to learn from Hardwicke-house, the episcopal residence, near Chepstow, that the Right Rev. the Bishop of Llandaff is very seriously indisposed.

DIOCESE OF OXFORD.—By order of the Bishop of Oxford, Wednesday next is observed as a day of prayer and humiliation throughout all the churches in his diocese. The service appointed for Ash Wednesday was used on the occasion.

HIS Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury has presented the treasurer of the Colonial Bishopric Fund with a donation of £500.

MUNIFICENT DONATION.—An anonymous donor, under the signature of "Z," has presented to the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, in Foreign Parts, the munificent donation of £2000 in the Three-and-a-Half per Cent. Consols, "to be applied towards the funds of the Colonial Bishoprics Endowment Fund."

IRELAND.

FATHER MATHEW AND HIS CALUMNIATORS.—Attempts have been perseveringly made in portions of the press, both of this country and America, to represent the "Apostle of Temperance" as having pandered lately, in the United States, to the pro-slavery prejudices of parties there—this abandoning his former avowed hostility to the institution of slavery; while, at the same time, the renowned good man has been made to express a desire to the Pope in his pension from the English Government, in order to be the more free to accept the pecuniary assistance of an anti-British faction in the States. The whole turns out to be a fabrication. The answer to an address, in which Father Mathew was reported to have made such harsh expressions towards England, proves to have been not authentic. The very opposite language was used by the good friar. The Cork Constitution (a Tory journal) has the following paragraph, which will satisfactorily correct the mistake made by some persons in this matter: "As we copied and commented on a contemptuous and (had it been used) an ungrateful and indefensible expression attributed to 'Father Mathew,' in reference to the pension which he receives from Government, it is fair to state that his friends deny that the expression ever escaped him, and that, in answer to an address from the committee of St. Mary's Abgmens Society in Boston, enclosing more than 100 dollars, he speaks of that pension as 'the pension generously granted by the British Government,' and 'the pension kindly granted by the British Government.'"

THE Right Hon. R. More O'Ferrall, Governor of Malta, is now at his seat, in the county of Kildare.

THE DOLLY'S BRAE AFFAIR.—Mr. Beers, the magistrate, has addressed a pancrous and indignatory letter to the Protestants of Ireland, in which he presents a detailed style on Dolly's Brae, and takes occasion to rant about "Popish ruffians," "priests and rebels," "Popish senators," "hireling officials," &c. The Freeman's Journal insinuates that this letter was written "under duress," in order that Mr. Beers may become the scapegoat for Government to punish, passing by Lord Roden. Nothing has yet been done about the matter, beyond the investigation. The popular prints continue to attack the Government on the subject.

Mr. Redington, the Under-Secretary, has reduced his rents four shillings per acre.

Cholera is still seizing many victims in the better classes. There has been, however, a decline in its virulence. It is to be formidable that the Roman Catholics have received permission publicly to eat meat on Fridays for the next two months.

INDIAN CORN.

(To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

I HAVE read with some astonishment a letter from Bearstead, Kent, signed "A Constant Reader," relative to the cultivation of Indian Corn.

Some years ago I published in the Times an account of my experience in the cultivation of that valuable cereal, and I now give you the substance of my communication.

I planted Cobbett's Indian Corn for fourteen successive years, cultivating it rigorously after Mr. Cobbett's instructions Three years I planted it in poor ground, eleven years in rich ground, but I never applied any manure to either. I never changed the ground in either case, but used the seed, and never failed to have a good crop, perfectly ripened, which I applied to diff rent purposes, constantly making bread of it, amongst other uses. My enemies were the wireworm for the seed under ground, and the birds for the ripening corn above ground.

I remain, sir, your obedient servant,
WILLIAM NAPIER, Major-General.

September 24th, 1849.

MR. BRIGHT, M.P.—This gentleman returned from Ireland on Monday, having completed upwards of a month's observation and inspection throughout the south and west of that country. In the course of his tour Mr. Bright has visited the counties of Dublin, Wicklow, Wexford, Cork, Kerry, Limerick, Tipperary, Clare, Galway, Mayo, Roscommon, and some others. As might have been expected, the union workhouses have been carefully visited, and the condition of the peasantry and of the land has been extensively observed. With regard to the existing relations between landlord and tenant, we have reason to believe that Mr. Bright has seen enough to convince him of the absolute necessity of a law to give security to the tenant for the improvements he may create; and it is not improbable that, should the Government refuse to legislate on this all-important subject, Mr. Bright will be prepared to bring the matter before Parliament at the opening of a ext session, backed by influential opinions from all parts of Ireland. We should be glad to hear that English members in large numbers had been visiting a country where confusion so much demands their attention. Manchester Examiner.

Mr. Wyld, M.P. for Bodmin, who is at the head of the agitation for a bridge with a span sufficient to allow vessels to proceed up the river, addressed a large open-air meeting of persons on the Black Fell, Gateshead, on Saturday last. Resolutions were adopted in favour of a measure to enforce sufficient ventilation, and also of a combination to resist reductions of wages, and ensure employment to all miners who are willing to work.

FINANCIAL DIFFICULTIES OF EUROPEAN GOVERNMENTS.—At the present moment France is about to contract a loan of 200 millions of francs. Austria has opened a direct subscription for a loan of 60 millions of florins, or about 120 millions of francs. Should the appeal be responded to, the amount may be raised to 75 millions of florins. Piedmont is said to be anxious to effect a loan of 80 millions of francs, and Naples above the 75 millions which she is obliged to procure to pay the war indemnity. Tuscany, also, is endeavouring to borrow 24 millions, and Naples from 25 to 30. All this gives a sum of nearly 500 millions, which Europe is trying to borrow to see the end of the year RIVAL CARRYING COMPANIES.—The competition between the railway companies and those who carry by water is now most excessive; the extremely low rates which, in order to secure the traffic to themselves, the railway companies charge for the carriage of goods having compelled the canal companies to a proportionate reduction, until the price now charged for carriage, in many instances, bare y covers the cost of transit. The noble proprietor of the Bridgewater Trust is making the most vigorous efforts to secure the traffic by canal, while the Merchants' Carrying Company have also very considerably reduced their charges for the carriage of goods, and by this means alone they have been enabled to compete with the excessively low fares of the London and North-Western Company.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

PARLIAMENTARY AND FINANCIAL REFORM.

On Monday evening a public meeting took place at the George and Vulture, in Castle-street, Lombard-street, for the purpose of explaining the principles and objects of the National Parliamentary and Financial Reform Association, which was given by Mr. F. Knowles, as a deputation from the central association, and of forming a district association in connection with the parent society. The following resolution was acted to unanimously:—"That this meeting, highly approves of the principles and objects of the National Parliamentary and Financial Reform Association, and deems it advisable to form itself into a district society, to be called 'The Lombard-street and Branch Reform Association;' and a committee was appointed to carry it into effect.

On the same (Monday) evening, a numerously attended meeting of the Walworth branch of the National Parliamentary and Financial Reform Association was held at the Bee-hive Tavern, Carter-street, for the purpose of explaining the objects of the council, as explained in their report to the first aggregate meeting, recently held in Drury-lane Theatre. Mr. Ellis was called to the chair; and Mr. Almy, who was present as a deputation from the Central Association, at the request of the meeting, entered into a lengthened explanatory statement, in which he showed the necessity for promoting the registration of members throughout the metropolitan districts. The movement, he observed, had, in point of fact, assumed a national character, as would be shown by the proceedings about to be commenced in Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, and other great towns. The most encouraging assurance of co-operation had been received from all grades of Reformers in every part of the country. It required a little more "pressure from without" to render the movement already an imposing, entire, and permanent successful. Mr. Almy, in the course of his address, adverted to the gratifying progress made in the midland and in some of the home counties by the Freehold Land Societies, whose principles he explained and vindicated; and he announced that they were rapidly developing their usefulness in more distant places. A discussion then took place, in which several speakers dwelt upon the local and national burdens which the middle and working-classes are compelled to bear, in consequence of past extravagance and misgovernment. They uniformly insisted upon an extension of the franchise, the protection of the ballot, and the limitation of Parliaments to a duration of three years. All these views were associated by the meeting; and it was eventually resolved that another and more general meeting should be convened for a future day, for the promotion of these essential purposes. The proceedings then terminated.

At a meeting of the inhabitants of Hoxton, held on Tuesday evening, at the Bridge House Tavern, Whitmore-road, it was resolved—"That this meeting, fully approving the principles and objects of the National Parliamentary and Financial Reform Association, and approving the energy with which the council of that body has hitherto most successfully conducted its proceedings, rises to promote those objects by forming a district society, to be called 'The Hoxton Old Town Branch Reform Association.'" A committee was also appointed to carry out the objects of the association.

SHERIFFS' FUND SOCIETY.

On Wednesday afternoon the annual meeting of the governors of this society was held at the London Tavern, Mr. Sheriff Finnis in the chair. The usual formal proceedings having been gone through, the report was read by the Rev. Mr. Davis, the secretary. These cases of distress which induced the sheriffs of 1849 to found the society, and to appeal to an annual decree during the past year, at every session of the Central Criminal Court, and, of course, the operations of the society had been more extended. The different cases of distress were minutely considered by the committee. Some discharged convicts were furnished with tools to enable them to return to their work. Others were furnished with the means of reaching their friends in distant parts of the kingdom, if their conduct justified a reasonable hope that they would reform. Young women, led into trifling acts of dishonesty by a love of finery, were either sent to their friends or placed in situations as servants. Some were sent at the expense of the charity to the Philanthropic Society; and, finally, discharged prisoners, who hoped to redeem their character in another country, were helped to emigrate to Australia. In the selection of deserving cases amongst the young women, the claims were much indebted to the exertions of the ladies' committee. The funds of the society during the past year had not received any great increase. The Committee had received under the will of the late Mr. Andrew McLean, in addition to the £100 received last year. The sum of £500 had been set aside for the encouragement of "Sheriffs' Fog rushes," for deserving cases amongst discharged prisoners. The permanent funds of the society were £8100 in the Three per Cents, £1000 in the Three-and-Quarter per Cents, £1000 in the Reduced (produced by donations), and £100 per annum under the will of the late Mrs. Stafford. The committee noticed, with expressions of regret, the death of Mr. Cooper, the late honorary secretary. On the motion of Alderman Sidney, Mr. Joseph Bowyer Bedford, the report was received and adopted; and, after appointing Mr. Alderman Hooper treasurer, and Mr. Alderman Sidney trustee, the meeting thanked the chairman and separated.

GOODALL'S BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.—On Tuesday evening, a special general meeting of the members of this institution took place at the Freemasons' Tavern, for the purpose, among other business, of electing six additional stewards. J. W. Thomas, Esq., the president, occupied the chair. The report showed that the institution was established in 1833, for the purpose of relieving the distress of poor, aged, or infirm persons of good character, whether journeymen, clerks, shopmen, or other persons connected with any of the many branches of the goldsmiths' and jewellery business; and also to relieve their widows. The amount of pension allowed to males is £15 per annum, and to females. Member subscribers or non-subscribers; but, as an inducement to become subscribers, half of the gross amount contributed will be annually added to the annuities of subscribers. The receipts of the past year, including a payment of £251 8s., amounted to £502 1s. 6d.; and after the purchase of stock and defraying the necessary expense, there remained in the treasurer's hands £244 6s. 10d., to add ten to the funded capital of £3900. The produce of the last festival was about £950, and the president, J. W. Thomas, Esq., had recently added a donation of £100. From a list of ten candidates, four males and two female annuitants were elected in addition to the thirty-seven now on the funds. The chairman, in a feeling address, congratulated the meeting, and expressed sympathy for the unsuccessful, concluding by presenting the latter with a donation of 10s each.

CITY OF LONDON GENERAL PENSION SOCIETY.—The annual general meeting of members to this charity was held on Monday, at the London Tavern, to receive the report and accounts of the past year, and to arrange for the transfer of the funded property of the society into the hands of new trustees; Mr. Sergeant Wood in the chair. The secretary (Mr. George Manby) read the report, from which it appeared that during the year two elections had taken place, by which eight new pensioners had been added to the list. There are at present fifty-eight aged persons receiving relief from the charity. Three pensioners died in December, last year, since which no death has taken place. The secretary called attention to the gratifying fact, that, although the ages of the recipients of this charity ranged from 77 to 90 years, not one of them had been swept away by the recent mortality. The men receive 27s. and the women 18s. per month; and the directors do not feel justified in recommending any increase of the monthly stipend. The festival in April last had been most productive, the net proceeds having been £300, with £250 worth of subscriptions. A legacy of £200 had been received, and the late secretary had repaid the whole of the balance due by him. During the year, £800 had been paid to pensioners; and stock to the amount of £435 18s. 7d. had been added to the society's funded property, which now amounted to £7306 3s. The total working expenses were £289 0s. 8d., leaving a balance in the Bank of England of £13 1s. 1d. The report having been adopted, and the election of officers was proceeded with. His Grace the Duke of Bedford was elected president for the ensuing year; Mr. L. J. Hassard, treasurer; with a board of twenty-four directors, Mr. G. Manby was confirmed in his office of secretary. Auditors were then appointed, thanks were returned to the late auditors, and the following gentlemen were appointed trustees of the life fund G. Hayward, W. Kemble, R. North, and R. B. Cabbell, Esqrs.

CLERGY ORPHAN CORPORATION.—A special general court of this charitable association was held on Wednesday, at the house of the Lord Bishop of London, St. James's-square. It was numerously attended by clergymen from almost every portion of the United Kingdom. This admirable and truly benevolent institution has for its object the clothing, maintenance, and education of poor orphan children belonging to clergymen of the Established Church of England, until such time as they are fit to be put out to some honourable employment. The relief which it has afforded is to the otherwise destitute of one of the most deserving classes of the community has been considerable.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH AND THE SAINT PANCRAS BOARD OF GUARDIANS.—On Tuesday, at a very numerous meeting of the Boardof Directors and Guardians of the Poor of St. Pancras, held at the new vestry-rooms, King's-road, Camden-town, Mr. Churchwarden Healey in the chair, Mr. Liddle, one of the members of the Board of Health, attended for the purpose of further discussing how far the orders of the Board of Health, with regard to the prevention of cholera, had been carried out, and again entered upon the attention of the Board to the necessity of medical inspection and house visitation. The numerous and great difficulties attended house to house visitation. That parish would not now to any one in the metropolis in having made proper and efficient provision to meet and check the cholera. They had twelve medical men constantly employed; and, in order to test the principle of house visitation, they had appointed one medical gentleman for that purpose. If, however, the proposal of the Board of Health were carried out as a general measure, it would require one hundred medical men, at least, to carry out house visitation throughout the entire of such a parish as St. Pancras.—Mr. Hickman said it appeared to him that the Board of Health not only required the boards of guardians that they should provide medical attendance and physic for the poor, but that they should also provide the poor with intelligence. They had no desire to act in opposition to the Board of Health, but this was not the way to treat a public board.—Mr. Liddle expressed his ignorance of any intention on the part of the Board of Health to take legal proceedings.—Mr. Hickman recommended that the recommendations of the Board of Health be taken into consideration, which was carried, and, after the retirement of the inspector, the Board ultimately agreed to the appointment of an additional inspector of nuisances, but made no further provision for house visitation, as ordered by the Board of Health.

MEETING OF MASTER BAKERS IN ST. PANCRAS.—On Monday evening a numerous meeting of master and journeymen bakers was held at the Argyle Tavern, Liverpool-street, King's-cross, to establish a district Board of Call and Benefit Society, for the mutual co-operation and support of the master and journeymen bakers in the district of King's-cross, somers-town, Tot-tenham court-road, and Camden-town, with a coffee, reading-room, and library for the use of the members: to establish a Trade Protection Society for the master bakers of the district, and to establish a Benefit Building Society in connection with the Operative Bakers' Society, to obtain a domicile of the bonds of labour, and the abolition of night-work in the baking trade, Mr. H. M'Neil, of Sidmouth-street, in the chair. Resolutions were adopted to the effect that a legislative enactment was necessary to remove the evils consequent on the undue amount of labour exacted from the men; and that the meeting pledge itself to support the Operative Bakers' Society in its efforts to obtain for the better organisation and improvement of the members of the trade in that district, an institution be established for their accommodation, convenience, and benefit; that a committee of masters and men be appointed to carry the object into effect.

EARLY CLOSING ASSOCIATION.—A general meeting of assistants of all trades of the City and Holborn Divisions was held on Tuesday night, at the Saracen's Head Hotel, Snow-hill, for the purpose of promoting the early closing movement. Mr. Lilwall, the secretary of the association, having explained that the chief object sought was to put an end to evening shopping, in order to give time for rest and self-improvement to the assistants, and that moral reformation which was absolutely necessary for the furtherance of their spiritual and moral welfare, a resolution was passed to the effect that the meeting should give its best support, personal and pecuniary, to the Early Closing Association, believing it to be both its interest and duty to do so. Several gentlemen having addressed the meeting, district committees were appointed to carry out the objects proposed.

ELECTION OF LORD MAYOR.—The election of Lord Mayor for the City of London takes place on Saturday (this day), being Michaelmas-day. The number of Aldermen who have not passed the chair is ten, all of whom will be put in the list, viz.—Sir John Key, Bart., Thomas Kelly, Esq., Sir Chapman Marshall, Tooley-street, elected Alderman of the ward Bassishaw in 1841, being the next in rotation, if returned to the Court of Aldermen, will be declared Lord Mayor The choice rests between him and Alderman Musgrave and Hunter.

THE NEW SHERIFFS' CARRIAGES.—Messrs. Laurie and Marner have again been honoured with the order for the civic carriages for the ensuing year, which they have completed in their usual good taste. The prevailing colours are a dark blue and yellow, with the arms of the City and their respective private arms, and those of the company elaborately emblazoned on the panels. The interior is lined with white satin, and the hammer-cloth is of rich gold colour, edged with blue fringe and gold tassels. The harness is made entirely of padded leather, with the arms and crests richly chased, and has a very handsome appearance, the pad cloths being of rich gold colour, to match the hammer-cloth, and edged with gold lace.

DAY OF HUMILIATION AT GREENWICH.—Wednesday last was observed as a day of special supplication and intercession. In compliance with the suggestion of the bishop of the diocese, Sunday last had been observed for the purpose, but a general desire having been expressed that a deep humiliation under the hand of God, by an interruption of worldly business as well as by special prayer, the clergy of the parish took on themselves to order the same for Wednesday. Divine service was accordingly performed in the morning, (accompanied by the Holy Communion) and in the evening at all the churches connected with the Establishment, as well as in the dissenting places of worship, the ministers of which, in most instances, gave their congregations the same invitation. The interior is lined with white satin, and the hammer-cloth is of rich gold colour, edged with blue fringe and gold tassels. The harness is made entirely of padded leather, with the arms and crests richly chased, and has a very handsome appearance, the pad cloths being of rich gold colour, to match the hammer-cloth, and edged with gold lace.

DAY OF HUMILIATION AT GREENWICH.—Wednesday last was observed as a day of special supplication and intercession. In compliance with the suggestion of the bishop of the diocese, Sunday last had been observed for the purpose, but a general desire having been expressed that a deep humiliation under the hand of God, by an interruption of worldly business as well as by special prayer, the clergy of the parish took on themselves to order the same for Wednesday. Divine service was accordingly performed in the morning, (accompanied by the Holy Communion) and in the evening at all the churches connected with the Establishment, as well as in the dissenting places of worship, the ministers of which, in most instances, gave their congregations the same invitation. The shops, with a very few exceptions, were closed, and but for the fact of the neighbouring town of Deptford and Woolwich pursuing their business in the usual manner, Greenwich had all the appearance of Sunday. On Friday a similar act of devotion was observed in Deptford

Wednesday was observed as a day of fasting, humiliation, and prayer, also in Wantsnapel, Mile end, and its vicinity. Every shop and place of business was closed, public and eating-houses excepted. Divine service was performed in the different churches and chapels both morning and evening, and the attendance was numerous. The shops and warehouses in Aldgate, Houndsditch, &c., occupied by the Jews, were likewise closed, it being their day of "atonement," or "white fast."

THE LOCAL PREVALENCE OF CHOLERA IN THE METROPOLIS.

The registrar-General appends the following valuable observations to his report this week:

The facts which have been published in detail will, it is believed, be found the best contribution to the natural history of the epidemic. They will show the regular course of the disease through a vast city population, the influence of sex, age, profession, and locality, and a great variety of circumstances on its mortality. It may be useful to point out one or two remarks suggested by study on the fatality of the epidemic, although the proportions may yet be altered by subsequent deaths.

London is divided into 36 districts for registration purposes, and the districts are sub-divided into 138 sub-districts. The population was enumerated in 1841, and the nearest approximation that can be easily given to the actual population is obtained by assuming that the population increased in 1841-2 at the same rate as from 1831 to 1841. Dividing the deaths from cholera in the thirteen weeks ending September 15, 1849, by the population thus estimated, the following results are arrived at, and cannot be far from the truth:—

More than 1 in 100 of the inhabitants of London died of cholera; the more accurate proportion was 53 in 10,000 inhabitants. From all causes the mortality was 116, a rate which is equivalent to an annual rate of 4·64 per cent.

85 in 10,000 of the inhabitants on the north side of the Thames died of cholera. 104 in 10,000 of the inhabitants on the south side of the Thames died of cholera.

The mortality was, therefore, three times as great on the south as it was on the north side of the river.

Taking 10,000 inhabitants as the basis of comparison in each district, the mortality was as follows, and in the following order:—

The large north districts extend from the Edgware-road to the river Lea: the mortality was, for Marylebone, 15; St. Pancras, 17; Islington, 20; Hackney, 8; Chelsea, 9; Kensington, 8; Hampstead and St. Marylebone, 7; Middlesex and University College Hospitals. Some cholera patients were sent out of Islington to the Free Hospital in St. Pancras, where their deaths were registered.

The middle districts, extending in a curve from Kensington to Bethnal-green, present generally a much higher rate of mortality; yet there are remarkable exceptions. The mortality in Kensington district, including Paddington and Pimlico, was 19; St. James, Westminster, only 12; St. Giles, 48; Clerkenwell, 28; Clerkenwell, 15 (5 less than Islington); St. Luke, 30; Shoreditch, 65; Bethnal-green, 78. St. James, Westminster, is a wealthy parish; the houses were rated at £29 on an average in 1841. The Rookery and other crowded streets contributed, among other things to raise the mortality of St. Giles district to 48. Clerkenwell, extending across the higher part of the New-road to Pentonville, has lost only 15 in 10,000; St. Luke, double that proportion. The rated value of the houses, and probably the income of the inhabitants, diminish rapidly in passing from the west to the east parts of London. The average rating of the houses in 1841 was, for St. James, Westminster, £60; St. Giles, £24; Holborn, £30; St. Luke, £28; Shoreditch, £13; Bethnal-green, £8. The two last districts are poor, and badly drained. Some of the deaths registered in Shoreditch, in a certain sense, belong and have been counted to the district of St. Luke, whose work house is in Sairecatch.

The river-side districts of the north present a higher rate of mortality than children than the average mortality of the whole of the metropolis. Chelsea lost 42 in 10,000 inhabitants; Kensington, we have seen, 19; St. George, Hanover-square, extending from Oxford-street to the river, lost only 14 in 10,000, and 11 out of the 14 were deaths returned in Pimlico. The highest mortality (37) was high with less than half the population in the low Westminster district; St. Martin-in-the-Fields and the Strand districts rising fast from the banks of the river that of 27 and 31 in 10,000; the city of London, within the walls, 33; the Inner Temple and Lincoln's Inn districts, 27; Clerkenwell and the Fleet Diten, 70 or 128, accordingly as we include or exclude the deaths in St. Bartholomew's Hospital. At the close of the epidemic these deaths may be distributed over the districts from which they have been brought; in the meantime the mortality of the City from cholera must be between 43 and 57. Whitechapel lost 80; St. George-in-the East, Scopney, and Poplar, 35, 40, 67—the mortality here increasing very rapidly as the river is approached.

Opposite the City and Waltcchapel lie, on the other side the Thames, St. Saviour, St Olave, and St. George, Southwark, where the mortality was 141, 141, 143; the mortality of the whole district rising to 151 in Bermondsey, and in Rotherhithe, or intersected by stagnant water, reaches the maximum, 225 in 10,000, or 2¼ per cent. It will be observed that on the north bank, opposite Bermondsey and Rotherhithe, the highest mortality was 39 and 42 in 10,000; yet the ordinary rate of mortality in St. George-in-the-East is 2·89, and of Rotherhithe 2·77 per cent. The mortality of Greenwich, including Deptford and Woolwich, was 61 in 10,000; Camberwell and Newington, 91; Lambeth, less than the mortality of districts on the south river-side, but much higher than even Shoreditch and Bethnal-green. The Lambeth district extends from the Thames to Newington; over the great area and population the average mortality was 95 in 10,000. The mortality from cholera of the river-side districts is as high as the mortality of St. Saviour, St. Olave, &c. The parts on the south side of the river where the cholera has prevailed with so much violence are below the Temple high-water mark. At Norwood there were only two deaths by cholera; at Dulwich, in Camberwell district, none; at Eltham, 3; Sydenham, 5, in Lewisham district; so that the mortality from cholera on the high ground, and in the outer districts of the Surrey. They both side of Thames, was as low as in Hampstead, Kentish Town, Stoke Newington, and Stamford Hill.

The physical causes of cholera, or rather of the mortality of cholera, may now be investigated in the soil, atmosphere, and people of the several districts of London.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS IN THE METROPOLIS.—The number of births registered during the week ending the 22d of September were—Males, 741; Females, 695; total, 1436. The number of deaths were—Males, 919; Females, 962; total, 1881. The weekly average of deaths in 1844-5-6-7-8 was 1008. The mortality from cholera has rapidly declined. The deaths from all causes registered in London in the three weeks ending September 22 were 2160, 2242, and 1981. The decrease has been exclusively in the cholera deaths, which were 2026, 1692, and 839 in the three weeks. The deaths from cholera, which in the first week of September were 300 and 400 a day, fell on the 19th to 110, and have since not exceeded 123. The number of deaths in each week registered during the 26th of May, have been 5, 9, 22, 42, 45, 124, 75, 339, 678, 783, 926, 823, 1293, 1273, 1862, 2026, and 1642, and for the week ending the 22d of September 839.

POSTSCRIPT.

DEPUTATION OF HOP GROWERS.—At one o'clock yesterday (Friday) noon, one of the largest deputations that ever assembled in London, consisting of presenting memorials to the Marquis of Clanricarde, the representative of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, in the absence of that functionary, there were at least five or six hundred of the most influential gentlemen of Lords of manors, engineers, brewers, and owners, from the districts of Kent, Sussex, Hereford, and Worcester, who have to enforce the prayer of their petition, that her Majesty's Government would postpone the duty of 1848 payable in the ensuing October, until next year, or, at all events, to such a time as would enable the growers to realise. It was absolutely out of their power to pay the duty until they should have received payment for the hops grown during the present year. Mr. Hodgson, and several other members, addressed the deputation, stated at great length the distressing statements contained in the memorial. The Chancellor of the Exchequer answered the deputation that he would give them an answer as soon as it was possible for him to make the determination of it as to cases, after any had considered the subject; but he would, at them to understand, in the plainest terms, that he could not forego the eventual payment of the duty, and, as regarded the further postponement of the duty payable in October, was sure the Government would not grant a very strong case indeed to induce them to postpone its collection. The deputation then withdrew.

SWEARING IN OF THE NEW SHERIFFS.—On Friday (yesterday) the Sheriffs elect—T. D. [illegible] and Alderman Lawrence, having attended Divine service at [illegible] Guildhall, where they were sworn into office for the ensuing year, before the civic authorities, with the usual formalities.

PRIMARY VISITATION OF THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.—The charge of his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury was delivered on Thursday afternoon, in the Cathedral, at Canterbury. There was a large attendance of the laity. The Archbishop, it is understood, will proceed, in the course of the next few weeks, to Ashford, Dover, Sevenoaks, Maidstone, and other places

DUTIES.—SUNDAY DUTIES.—We are authorised to contradict the statement which has appeared in several of the London (daily) newspapers, as to the intended abolition of the Postmaste.-General with reference to Sunday mails. The object of the measure in question has been altogether misunderstood; instead of adding to the Sunday duties in the Post-Office, as intended, it will, on the whole, very greatly reduce it; and it will not bring in or take out a single London letter. It is unnecessary, therefore, to say that there will be neither delivery nor collection of letters in London on the Sunday. Out of London no Sunday deliveries will be reduced.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

Ledru Rollin and the other Montagne ds of France, who are cited to take their trials at Versailles on the 16th prox., have, with the full approbation of their friends, determined not to appear on that day. It is announced that they would not be permitted to take that line of defence when they believe would lead to an acquittal, owing to the state of feeling in France. This determination has the entire concurrence and support of their French friends.

In Paris it has not failed to be remarked upon, though it was not altogether unexpected, that throughout the whole of the Pope's new manifesto, the cause of France nowhere occurs, though it has played so prominent a part restoring the Sovereign Pontiff to his temporal government. This studied omission has grievously wounded the pride of that country, and is certainly not calculated to heal the differences so long existing between the two nations.

ITALIAN STATES.

ROME.—The concessions granted by the Pope to his beloved subjects, as set forth in his recent manifesto of the 19th, are, besides the amnesty referred to in another column, a council of state, which shall give its advice on the before days any subsidies to be borne, and sanction the state communities for the finances provincial councils confirmed the municipalities to [illegible] of the budget, franchise, and reforms and much actions in the civil, criminal, and municipal legislation. These concessions, we are told, were considered by the Court of Rome to be so staggering, that the greatest discont it was manifested as they became generally known. The proclamations were torn down from the walls, and the populace vented forth loud denunciations in the streets in terms of ridicule and disgust. As for the amnesty, no language could convey the degree of calumny and regret with which it was contemplated.

A [illegible] to the Sovereign, sanction a state committee for the finances, loan of 3,000,000 francs, guaranteed by the King of Naples, to be repaid by annuities bearing interest at 2½ per cent. only, and the loan, it is added, is to be accepted by his Holiness.

HUNGARY.

From several sources confirmation is presented of the statement already published, that the Sultan had refused to surrender to Austria and Russia the Hungarian chiefs who had taken refuge in the Turkish territory. Some accounts say that the ambassadors of both powers have suspended diplomatic relations with the government of the Porte, until they shall receive further instructions.

POLICE.

THE BERMONDSEY MURDER.

Mr. and Mrs. Manning were again brought up at Southwark court on Thursday. As upon preceding occasions, the interior of the building was thronged in every corner by well-dressed ladies and gentlemen, who were specially admitted by cards.

At two o'clock the prisoners entered the court.

Barnes, the police-constable, said, that Mr Linthorne, the broker, was unable to attend, owing to indisposition, and produced a certificate from Mr. G. Roper, surgeon, of Soho-square; and Mr. Turner, of Bermondsey-square, gave a similar certificate of the illness of Mrs. Bambridge.

Mr. Parood Serjeant Stevens's deposition was then read over to him. Mr. Edwin, in whom he detailed his transactions with Manning relative to the purchase of railway shares.

Mr. Bodkin said, if the witnesses had not been ill, he should have perfected the case this day, and asked the magistrate to commit the prisoners for trial; but, under the circumstances, he must ask for a further remand; but, as he did not think that he should have any further information upon the subject, should his witnesses be well enough to attend, he would then request the magistrate to further remand them in the gaol, as no good could result from those frequent exhibitions of the prisoners.

Mr. Selfe remanded the prisoners till next Friday, at two o'clock, when it was his intention to commit the prisoners for trial; but, if it should be necessary to remand them again, he would attend the prisoners in the gaol for that purpose.

TESTIMONIAL.—Mr. Edward Marshall, long known as chief examiner of [illegible] who has lately retired from the War Office, after a service of [illegible] years, upon which occasion he was presented by his colleagues with an elegant epergne and candelabrum, in token of their high esteem and respect for him.

DISPENSING OF OBEDIENCE IN THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.—The following is the act of submission addressed by the celebrated Italian preacher, Father Ventura, who is at present in exile for his liberal political opinions, to the Archbishop of Paris:—"I, the undersigned, having learned to-day, from the Journal des Débats, the decision [illegible] pour, and having pronounced and printed at Rome at the end of November, 1848, has been placed amongst the number of prohibited works; knowing what the Church has a right to require of me in the judgment of the Apostolic See; having declared that I am ready to prove the truth of such declaration, without being constrained or compelled by any one, but yielding solely to the sentiment which are united to every true Catholic, I here declare that I am ready to submit to it, and I hereby accept the said decree of condemnation against the writing mentioned above, without restriction or reservation; furthermore, I regret and condemn all and every of the doctrines, maxims, expressions and words that in last writing, or in any other of mine, have been found, or may be found, in contradiction to the tenets of the Holy Catholic, Apostolic, and Roman Church. Finally, I declare that I hope, with the aid of divine grace, to die in that holy Church in which I was born, and in which I have lived, ready for that object to endure everything and even every sacrifice.—JOACCHINO VENTURA, of the order of the regular Theatines. Montpelier, Sept. 8."

A HUMAN SKELETON was discovered on Wednesday in an empty rum hogshead, which had been lying undisturbed in one of the warehouses of the London Docks for many years.

DISEASES OCCASIONED BY CHOLERA.—The Association for Promoting the Relief of Destitution in the Metropolis, and for Improving the Condition of the Poor by means of Parochial and District Visiting, under the superintendence and direction of the Bishop and Clergy, have issued an urgent appeal to the public in general, and to the subscribers to their funds, now so reduced as to be inadequate to meet the ordinary demands upon them. The committee entertain a confident hope that many pious and charitable laymen will be ready to answer the call which is made upon them by the agency of the present crisis; and to assist the clergy by their personal co-operation, as well as by pecuniary contributions, in the charitable work of visiting and relieving distress.

A NEW COMMISSION.—A new commission has been pleased to appoint Henry Thomas Ear. of Chichester, Henry George Fran[illegible] Earl of Dudley, Harry Vane, Esq. (commonly called Lord Harry Vane), John Wood [illegible] cliffe, Frederick Peel, Esq., Thomas Henry Sotheron, Esq.; John Elijah Blunt, Esq.; Barrister-at-Law; James Hill, Esq.; Barrister-at-Law; and Henry Kilcate, Esq., to be her Majesty's Commissioners for inquiring into those cases which were investigated and reported upon by the Charity Commissioners, but not certified to the Attorney-General.

LLOYD'S.—At the half-yearly general meeting of the members of Lloyd's, held on Wednesday, the honorary silver medal of the establishment was voted to Robert B. Forbes, Esq., of Boston, United States, a passenger on board the Europa steamer, to mark the sense entertained of his gallant and disinterested conduct in leaping overboard (at great personal risk) and assisting in saving a part of the passengers of the Charles Bartlett, when that vessel was unhappily run down by the Europa steamer on the 27th June last.

OSBORNE, ISLE OF WIGHT.

OSBORNE, FROM THE SEA.

WE this week commence the series of Illustrations of the marine residence of Osborne, which, by the gracious permission of her Majesty, have been taken expressly for our Journal by Mr. Joseph L. Williams. Our representations are Osborne, as viewed from the sea; and a view on the Terrace. Our first Illustration was sketched in a boat: it gives the general features of the building as seen from a distance; and from this point are well displayed the undulating character of the grounds attached to the house. The park extends for a considerable length by the sea-side, and, in many parts, is clothed with trees down almost to the water's edge. It is, perhaps, scarcely necessary to observe that the beach is strictly guarded, to prevent inquisitive strangers from invading the retirement of her Majesty and her Royal Consort.

There is a small jetty carried out for some length, for the especial use of her Majesty: so that on occasion of the frequent nautical trips made by the Royal family, there is no necessity to land at East Cowes; and thus the crowds of gazers, who are ever on the alert to catch a glimpse of Royalty, are avoided.

This representation shows a portion of the terrace, which is to the front of the building opposite the sea. The terrace runs the whole length, following in plan that of the building; and the part shown in our Engraving is the angle corresponding to the angle of that portion called the "Pavilion." The terrace is elegantly laid out as a flower-garden, the parterres being disposed in tasteful forms, and filled with choice flowers. Vases and other elegances add to the beauty of the spot; and on the balustrade, at intervals, are arranged vases.

The view from the terrace is very pleasing, the undulating and well-wooded grounds of the park being seen to great advantage. The Solent, in the middle distance, makes a beautiful object; the numerous vessels of all sizes and forms continually passing, and the steamers plying with their dusky wreaths of smoke adding life and character to the scene; whilst the coast of Hampshire, bounding the whole, thus constitutes, in clear weather, a view of great beauty and animation.

In our View the coast of Hampshire is not seen as during the whole time our Artist was making his sketches the weather was too hazy to admit of its being seen.

RETURN OF THE COURT FROM SCOTLAND.

HER Majesty the Queen and the Prince Consort left Balmoral for the south on Thursday morning.

It was originally intended that the Royal party should leave Balmoral on Wednesday, proceed direct to Perth, and pass the first night at the Royal George Hotel in that city. In consequence, however, of the unfortunate prevalence of cholera at Perth, this determination was changed, and her Majesty did not leave her Highland Home until Thursday morning.

The Royal party travelled post to Cupar, and there took the rail, and proceeded direct to Berwick-upon-Tweed. Here her Majesty was to receive an address from the corporation of that ancient borough; and, passing on to the York, Newcastle, and Berwick Railway, proceed (under conduct of the directors of that company) to the Little Mill station, which is distant only about 14 miles from Howick Hall, the seat of Earl Grey. At this station the Queen and the Prince were to be met by the noble Earl; and, having alighted from the saloon carriage, her Majesty and her Royal Consort were to be conducted to the ancient seat of the family, and there the Royal party were to pass the night.

On Friday morning the Queen and the Prince were to take leave of the Earl and Countess Grey, and return to the Little Mill station, and come on by railway to Newcastle. At this place, upon the High Level Bridge, her Majesty was to receive addresses from the Corporations of Newcastle and Gateshead. Proceeding onwards, at Darlington her Majesty was to receive another address; and at York, where the Royal party were to arrive at three o'clock, a similar welcome was to be accorded to the Sovereign.

On Friday night her Majesty was to sleep at the Midland Hotel, Derby; and it was expected that the Royal party would reach Osborne this (Saturday) evening.

THE QUEEN AT BALMORAL.

BALLATER, FRIDAY.

Her Majesty remained at the hunting-lodge, on the Birkhall property, on the occasion of her second visit, for the same period as on her first. The "Hut" was again made the Royal lodging for the night.

The day had been exceedingly warm and pleasant, and the evening was lovely. The mountains rose on every side in huge masses; the little clump of trees amid which the cottage stands presenting a speck of green that relieves the heathery waste of the surrounding scenery.

Lady Douro and Colonel Gordon were of the party. The Queen left Balmoral at an early hour on Monday, in a light phaeton, and drove down almost to Ballater, and made the passage up Glenmuick from its entrance.

Prince Albert has shown himself a thorough sportsman. No one could have a keener relish for, or reap more enjoyment from, a day on the moors. Very soon after the arrival at the Lodge, his Royal Highness was off to the hills. Both on that and the succeeding day he had excellent sport. He bagged a great many grouse, and killed a large number of hares as well. On the evening of Tuesday the party returned to the Castle.

At Bridge of Crathie, a short distance from the Castle, there is a cluster of cottages. Some of the labourers, and others connected with the grounds reside there, as well as several persons employed at the adjacent distillery. Her Majesty almost daily passed these in her walks. It appeared that she was anxious to introduce his Royal Highness to the villagers: and, accordingly, on Wednesday, they walked out together, going first to the distillery. They visited several houses there, and also examined a bothy where some of the persons employed in the distillery sleep. On returning, they took Bridge of Crathie in their way. The house of the brewer there they also visited. Her Majesty and the Prince conversed with the mistress of the house with much urbanity and frankness; but the Queen had to sustain the principal part of the conversation, his Royal Highness being unable wholly to understand the "guid wife's" meaning until it was put in other language.

The Duke and Duchess of Saxe Meiningen, accompanied by the Hereditary Prince and youthful Princess Mary of Saxe-Meiningen, closed their visit to her Majesty the Queen Dowager on Thursday week, after a séjour of a fortnight with her Majesty, at Bentley Priory, Stanmore. Their Serene Highnesses left for Germany by the way of Dover, the Earl of Denbigh (Master of the Horse to the Queen Dowager) attending on the illustrious Duke and family to the Continent.

We understand that Miss Jorry, of the Post-office, Banchory, had the honour to present a cake of her own manufacture to her Majesty the Queen, at Balmoral on the 19th inst. which the Queen most graciously accepted

PART OF THE TERRACE AT OSBORNE.

AUTUMN.

AN AUTUMNAL LYRIC.

How liberal and lovely
Is all the varied year;
The winter only showers,
And the summer only flowers,
To bring ripe autumn here.
When roar'd the wintry tempest,
When fell the sleet and snow,
When rush'd the mountain torrents
In vernal overflow;
When fell the sweet spring blossoms
Into the lap of June,
And leaves grew thick and juicy
In many a summer noon:

'Twas all for sake of autumn,
So bountiful and free:
'Twas all for the golden harvest,
'Twas all for thee and me.

We've lost the spring-time glories,
And pomps of summer's-day,
We prized them well and truly,
But form'd no wish unduly
That all the months were May
We knew, and we were grateful,
That after these had fled,
The wheat-stalk, fully laden,
Would bear a heavy head;

That mulberries would ripen,
And filberts cluster brown,
And winds through orchards roving
Shake pulpy apples down.
We knew that fruitful autumn
Would smile on field and tree,
And pour its annual treasure,
And all for thee and me.

And now that we have garner'd
The tributs of the year,
We'll seek our humble fellows
For whom no corn-field yellows,
And bid them to our cheer.

And grateful for the blessings
So bounteously bestow'd,
We'll share them with the needy
That meet us on our road;
With the gleaner and the beggar
And the man of low estate,
With the widow and the orphan
And the stranger at our gate.
So shall the autumn bless us,
And Heaven be pleased to see;
And the pray'rs of the sorrow-stricken
Ascend for thee and me.

CHARLES MACKAY.

THE LORD-LIEUTENANT IN KILLARNEY.—THE VICEREGAL BARGE SHOOTING THE RAPIDS OF OLD WEIR-BRIDGE.

THE LORD-LIEUTENANT AT KILLARNEY.

(From our own Correspondent.)

In our Journal of last week we briefly announced the visit of the Lord-Lieutenant to Killarney—that delightful district which we have of late so fully illustrated described in our columns.

On Monday evening (the 17th), his Excellency, accompanied by the Countess of Clarendon, Lord and Lady Craven, the Hon. Mr. Matde, Corry Connellan, Esq., Captain Ponsonby, and suite, arrived at the Royal Victoria Hotel, and expressed himself highly gratified with the admirable arrangements which had been made by Mr. Finn for the Viceregal party.

Upon the arrival of his Excellency at Mallow, he was shown over the works in progress in that part of the line by the directors and officials; and, after partaking of luncheon, proceeded at once in carriages which had been sent down from Dublin to Killarney, where his Lordship arrived at seven o'clock, and was warmly welcomed by some hundreds of people who had assembled in the street in expectation of his arrival, and was driven to the Victoria Hotel.

On Tuesday morning the Viceregal party left at nine o'clock, under the guidance of [illegible] Ross Island and Coosaun, O'Sullivan's Cascade, Glenna Old Abbey, Muckross, up the jaunting cars to Roscarvie's island and Berasonchley Cottage, [illegible] carriage awaited him. His Lordship returned to Killarney through the beautiful domain of Muckross, and was most heartily cheered by the vast crowd of visitors assembled at the Murrass Hotel.

Wednesday was the day fixed for the stag-hunt, which, however, his Lordship requested might be deferred until Thursday, as he wished to go to Glengariff on that day.

His Lordship started from the hotel at seven o'clock, and reached Glengariff at twelve, where Lord Bantry met the party, and escorted them to his native abode and sniff the breezes from the steeps of Glenna and rocky eminences of Tusk and the Eagle's Nest.

At twelve o'clock his Lordship's barge made its appearance at the place of meeting (Miss Plumber's Island), immediately under Closheen-a-bonnive, where he was saluted by two English gentlemen and an Irish gentleman, in one of Mr. Roche's boats, which his Lordship most graciously returned, and was then recognised and most heartily cheered by the surrounding crowd.

The hounds were at once put on, and immediately on the first notes of their glorious music being heard, a fearful rush was made for Old Weir-bridge, as it was intimated that the stag was making towards Glenna. His Lordship's barge led for some way, but sailed rather cautiously towards the rapid, which, being noticed by Mr. G. Thornton, of the Grange, near Skipton, who was steering a famous Killarney boat for his land—a desire was made by him past his Lordship's barge into the rapids. The feat elicited the cheers of the surrounding hundreds, and seemed to have won the admiration of his Lordship, who followed immediately in his wake.

Our Artist has pictured this truly exciting incident in the day's sport. For fully two hours all were on the qui vive for the stag's appearance, and alive to the cry of the hounds in the mountains, until about two o'clock, when a fine full-grown doe made her appearance at the water's edge in Glenna Bay, close by the cottage; and almost as quickly disappeared again, after refreshing herself by a short swim, up the mountains, whence she must have mixed with some others, as shortly after the pack was broken up into four or five hunts, and so scattered as to quite preclude the possibility of again bringing them together. At this Lake Glenna may be said was past has did sight with the cataract-like effect of the oars of some hundred boats literally tearing through the water; added to which were the brilliant tints or sparkling effects of the Marcus Sterlin' bonnets in their gracious red caps and snowy shirts and trousers. It will not, however, attempt to [illegible] the scene of their rounding the point out of the bay, so as to make for O'Sullivan's Cascade, where it was thought the stag would next take the water; but here, too, all were disappointed, as it was then ascertained, from the breaking up of the hounds, that no stag would take water that day; and thus would have ended the day's sport, had not our dashing friend of the Jenny Lind as leading down his gunnel to Mr. Roche, who was steering a beautiful race gig, and who as freely entered the lists to do battle against Yorkshire. The race was well contested on both sides, and watched with breathless anxiety by the surrounding hundreds, as also the Lord Lieutenant's party, close by whose barge they ran. To say that an English gentleman was coxswain against an Irish lady, will be at once to decide the race; and so it did, for as in all courtesy the lady won. Immediately afterwards his Lordship took away to his hotel, and all others followed his example.

On Friday his Excellency left the Victoria Hotel for Dublin, highly gratified with his visit to Killarney.

His Lordship had reason to be proud of his reception amongst the mountains of Kerry. In Mallow and Buttevant, the only military stations through which his Excellency passed, the 47th Regiment supplied the requisite guards of honour.

We should add that on Wednesday a meeting was held at the Kenmare Arms, and an Address of congratulation was presented to the Lord Lieutenant of Clarendon, on their visit to the Lakes: Christopher Galwey, Esq., M.P., in the chair. On Thursday morning this address was presented by a deputation, at the Victoria Hotel, which was followed by the following most appropriate Address of Kerry read the address, to which his Excellency read a reply; and the noble Earl having cordially shaken hands with Mr. Crosbie and the High Sheriff of Kerry, the deputation retired.

THE VOYAGE OF THE AIR.

(Suggested by Mr. Arban's recent trip in a balloon from Marseilles to Turin, in eight hours, a distance of four hundred miles.)

I saw, as I ascended, paleness change
Some faces that I love; but of their Art's silent strength soon bore me from the range,
And made me ride the skies like a magician.

Those mighty streets, the churches,
and the halls,
And all the glory of that seaport, seeming
Like some nice model in the gewgawsinals
Of fancy-fairs with little toy-things teeming

And the tall pines appear'd as heather-blades
Upon a highland; while the rock-built castle
(The fount of old whence bubbled feudal raids)
Looked smaller than the thistle's greyish tassel.

And soon one indistinguishable hue
Stole o'er the variousness of hill and valley,
But yet a hum ascended, and there flew
A vague sound which would fain faint, and then would rally.

And now the clouds were round me;
on
Of earth departed and the bleak, thin, upper coldness
Fix'd in my limbs a transitory blight,
And even crush'd my spirit's present boldness.

Away, away still soars the car sublime,
It shakes aside the clinging mists that blind it;
It scales into a fair and radiant clime,
And leaves whate'er is dull or dark behind it.

How strangely bright and mighty was night's noon!
Each star shot down an arrowy diamond lustre
Through all the deep—and, like the sun,
the moon
Rained with a full look amid a country cluster.

All softly blew the south-wind from the seas,
From the great tideless seas and "midland" ocean,
Wafting my chariot with propitious breeze,
And gentle upward undulating motion.

Small time was pass'd, ere I was far away
From fair Marseilles, and saw up-piled the famous alpine summits, and the ray
Of their perennial snows, all brightening.

I knew that I had travell'd towards the north.
And something eastward—or strange confusion
Had chased me; the icy scene sent forth
A wat'ry look, an ocean-like illusion.

Enraptured, not deceived, I much admired
The newness and the strangness of my station
Which, clearer soon, displayed the peaks
all fired,
Like crystals, with the stars' illumination.

And now, beneath the left hand,
tower'd Mont Blanc, Unquestion'd King of those great heights appearing;
And as my airy chariot swept along,
Savoy's fair capital, I knew, was nearing.

I look'd upon the grandeur of the view;
Like bats the soaring eagles seem'd, whose screaming
Rose faintly through th' immeasurable
blue,
And the huge hills like ladies' gems
were beaming.

It was not safe to gaze too long below:
A girl might sit Mount Jura on her forehead,
And make titans of what seem'd to grow
So small, if truth had not such seeming borrow'd.

Alas, how small is man! and yet, how great!
A puny frame, and a victorious spirit!
A soul which almost angels for its mate,
And a frail clayey prison to immure
it!

Amid a plain, four hundred miles afar
From where I had arisen, I now, delighted,
Sank downwards in the safe though
ventrous car,
And (only eight hours spent) remote alighted.

A "rago and great "high mass" for Albert's soul
Were in the Turin churches sweetly pealing;
And bells, in many an awful, long-drawn toll,
Proclaim'd a mournful, God-revering
feeling.

And so I made the voyage of the air—
It is a recollection I shall cherish Far lower than where I have set my chair
No bird could soar, nor trumpet send its flourish

MILES GERALD KEON.

The deliveries of tea last week from the London warehouses were [illegible], being rather larger than the [illegible] average. The deliveries in the year to the 16th inst. have been [illegible] 000lb., as compared with [illegible] 000lb. to the same date in 1848. The imports have been 32,721,000lb., against 26,560,000lb last year; and the stock on the 16th inst., was 32,527,000lb., against 33,962,000lb. at the same time in 1848.

MUSIC.

CONCERTS IN THE PROVINCES.

(From our own correspondent.)

[illegible] ISLINGTON, WEDNESDAY.

It is somewhat strange that a town so beautifully situated as Southampton should have been so utterly abandoned by tourists as it has been of late. The choler[illegible] frightened away the fashionable visitors; but it is more probable that the supineness of the town authorities in not providing a museum of some kind is the main cause of its desertion, if it started with spirit and vigour, would purchase the pier, and relieve it from its heavy tolls, collected in a most annoying manner by its contractors, and throw it [illegible] promenade for residents and strangers. With such amelioration as those of late [illegible] Southampton from the pier, with its finely wooded hills on the other [illegible] must be a delightful excursion to Southampton from [illegible] there are the famed cathedrals of [illegible] and Winchester, of which it may be said "When these fail [illegible] waters, bodies will be acceptable to posterity;" there is the New Forest, with the cottage of William Rufus; there are the ancient ruins of Portsmouth, Southsea, the Isle of Wight, besides the delightful rides within five or six miles of Southampton, with the episode of a gipsy banquet at the venerable ruins of Netley Abbey. Nature has, indeed, been bountiful in bestowing picturesque attractions and beautiful views; and, since the construction of the docks, there are the decorations of the colossal steamers for the East and West Indies, a never failing source of admiration; and yet, by the unreasonable severity of the local [illegible] Southampton from a place of transit.

I have been given up, [illegible] to be related: it may be judged, therefore, that my announcement of a Morning Concert, on Monday, at the Archery Rooms, was considered as a godsend by the amateurs here. A Mr. Wellman was the speculator: he had the judgment not to demand too high prices, and the result was a crowded and fashionable concert.

Madame Sontag was the magnet of attraction. She sang five times, namely Donizetti's "O luce di quest' anima;" Dessauer's bolero, "Ouvrez;" with the grand finale, in the 4th act—Meyerbeer's duo, "Con parmi;" Sir H. Bishop's air, "Home, sweet home;" and, finally, Rode's "Variations." Her brilliant execution was immensely appluded, and she was encored repeatedly. F. Labbaze, Hatton, and Calcott were also the vocalists. Mr. Lindley, prince of cellists, and Chatterton astonished and delighted the auditory with pianoforte performances.

Sontag, with the artistes we have just enumerated, had a Morning Concert yesterday at Islington, which was also fashionably attended.

On the 1st of October, the celebrated German prima donna will sing at Miss Whitnall's concert at Liverpool. To-morrow (Thursday) Madame Dulcken will give a concert, at the Archery Rooms, supported by the pianists, Herr Schonhoff; the violinist M. de Kontski; the violoncellist Herr Hausmann, and the Tentonic vocalist Mdlle. Schloss. This same party has given concerts at Margate and Ramsgate. John Parry, with his amusing entertainments, has also been going the round of the watering-places. Mr. Beale's Athenæum Concerts terminated at Dublin last Saturday; Sims Reeves was unable to appear during their engagement, which gave severe indisposition. Mr. Templeton has been giving concerts in the Isle of Man. Miss Catherine Hayes, who has been singing in some of the French towns, accompanied by Mr. Osborne the pianist, and Ernst the violinist, will return to England for a few months, with Miss Poole, Mr. Benedict, Herr Danske, and Mr. Benedict. Alboni sang at Leeds yesterday.

THE ITALIAN OPERA IN ST. PETERSBURGH.—Grisi, Mdlle. Corbari, Mdlle de Meric, Mario, Gardoni, Tamburini, Coletti, and Tagliafico are on their way by the Warsaw railroads to the Russian capital, for the Italian opera season, beginning in October and ending in February. Madame Frezzolini and Signor Ronconi (ballo) are engaged for the troupe.

THE ITALIAN AND FRENCH OPERA-HOUSES IN PARIS.—Ronconi is the director, and will commence the season in November. He has engaged Mdlle Sofia Cruvelli, who was at Her Majesty's Theatre in 1848 as prima donna. M. Roger, after singing in German, French, and Italian, at Frankfort and Hamburg, has returned to the Grand Opera in Paris, and reappeared as Fernando in Donizetti's "La favorite," with great success. Mdme. Julienne was Leonor; Mdme. Castellan was to reappear in October, in Weber's "Der Freyschutz," in Nicolo's recitatives. Mdme Viardot was to return about the same time, in Fidès in Meyerbeer's "Prophète." Halévy's new opera, "La Fée aux Roses," will be produced shortly at the Opera Comique. The Horsto is by Scribe and St. Georges.

THE PRINCESS'S THEATRE.—This establishment will open in a few days, with an operatic company. Mercadante's "Don Giovanni" will be the first work; Mdlle. Nau appearing as Donna Anna, Mrs. Weiss as Elvira, and Miss Pyne as Zerlina. Miss Pyne lately sang Amina at the Boulogne Theatre with distinguished success: it will be her first appearance on a London stage. Mr. Harman is to be Don Giovanni.

THE THEATRES.

SADLER'S WELLS

The comedy of "She Would and She Would Not," by Colley Cibber, was revived on Saturday, for the purpose of further exhibiting Miss Fitzpatrick's claims to some excellence, by her performance of Hypolita. The play, as our readers are aware, is one of Spanish intrigue, derived from Spanish sources, and composed by one who eminently understood the art of stage situation and effect. The comprehension of the characters is altogether admirable, and the dialogue is sparkling and vivacious to a fault. Hypolita is a dashing character, assuming the male costume throughout, and indulging in all the cavalry which the stage lady in disguise has the prescriptive privileges to exercise. Miss Fitzpatrick's style, though polished and graceful, is deficient in power and decision in the requisite to express fully the high animal spirits of the character. But the actress [illegible] of her art, and supports herself [illegible] throughout, and in the [illegible] triumph. Mr. Younge was the Don Manuel, and perform[illegible] but the character, which is perhaps the finest example of [illegible] Cibber's gentlemanly Beau, Don Dowdee, is not [illegible] to give it appropriate embodiment. Mr. Marston, as Don Philip, was respectable; and Mr. Dickinson, as Don Octavio, pleasing. To Miss Julia St. George, as Flora, we must award the highest praise. Her part was [illegible] throughout.

To the comedy succeeded the "Day after the Wedding," with Miss Carlstein as Lady Elizabeth Freelove. She looked it beautifully, and performed it with more natural gratitude than she showed to her Amanda; but she has very much to learn before she can become fitted to compete with the great variety of female talent by which the modern stage is illustrated

On Monday and Tuesday, "Measure for Measure" was repeated. On the latter evening, Miss Glyn's Isabella had arrived at a pitch of uncommon excellence. Her acting was like inspiration; full of emotion and impulse, but beautifully restrained by the art in which she has now become the most consummate living exemplar. Her mighty improvement in every character she undertakes is one of Miss Glyn's most remarkable points. Generally it is, as in the present instance, the fourth night of performance in which she attains the climax of impersonation. Nothing can be conceived more perfect than was her Isabella on Tuesday evening.

SURREY.

This theatre still continues with Sheridan Knowles's dramas, and on Monday presented "Virginius" to a crowded audience. Mr. Creswick's embodiment of the character is thoroughly artistic and remarkably elegant. He reserved himself with great skill for the stronger passages, which told with powerful effect. Mr. Mead's Appius Claudius was not without merit; and the Dentatus of Mr. Bruce Norton was full of force and energy. Mrs. Mead, as Virginia, gave a very pathetic character, exquisitely [illegible] tender and simple style. On Wednesday the "Stranger" was performed. The hero was finely acted by Mr. Creswick; but Mrs. Henry Vining has not sufficient dignity of carriage for such parts as Mrs. Haller.

MARYLEBONE.

Mrs. Mowatt made her re-appearance on Monday, as Beatrice, in "Much Ado about Nothing," and [illegible] performed it with her usual grace and sweetness. This lady's acting is something not to be judged of by the ordinary rules of art, or by comparison with other actresses. We must take it as it presents itself to our [illegible]dsyncrasy, which is both peculiar and pleasing. The Benedict of Mr. Davenport was an intelligent reading; the Leonato of Mr. Johnstone a vigorous piece of acting; and the Dogberry of Mr. Cooke a highly humorous embodiment of character.

ADELPHI.—The Performances at this theatre during the week have been "Sweethearts and Wives," "A Bird of Passage," "Stasher and Crasher," and "John Jones," a piece of the most amusing bill of fare, but presenting no novelty.

The HAYMARKET opens on Monday next; but it is not until Monday week that Mr. [illegible] performances commence, which, we are told, are really to be farewell ones, an [illegible] express stipulation to that effect having been made with the manager.

The LYCEUM will also open on Monday.

The Earl of Jersey has arrived at Murchmont House, N.B., on a visit to Sir Hugh and Lady Hume Campbell. The Countess of Jersey and Lady Clementina Villiers were to leave Vienna this week, on a tour through Germany, en route home as early.

Sir John Cam Hobhouse is staying with his only daughter, Miss Charlotte Hobhouse, at Estlecote Park, Wilts. We regret to add that the right hon. Baronet received a most severe shock by the sudden demise of his eldest daughter, Miss Julia Hobhouse. Sir John is not expected to return to town before the meeting of Parliament.

The Earl of Arundel and Surrey is making a tour through the various districts of Ireland, with the view of making himself thoroughly acquainted with the condition of the agricultural classes of that part of the empire prior to the opening of Parliament.

Captain J. D. Cunningham, the author of perhaps the best history of the Sikhs that has been written, has been removed from his appointment of political agent in Bhopal, in India, as a punishment for having in his book "made unauthorised use of official documents entrusted to his charge as a public officer." Other officers have been allowed without rebuke to do that for which Captain Cunningham is punished so severely; and his removal is, therefore, attributed to his having written a book which the Government does not like.

COUNTRY NEWS.

SOUTH-WEST MIDDLESEX AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—ANNUAL PLOUGHING MATCH.

On Tuesday, the fifteenth annual ploughing match, under the auspices of this [illegible] took place in a field [illegible] Hounslow Heath, in the immediate neighbourhood of the [illegible] station, on the Great Western Railway. The trial of agricultural skill took place under the most favourable auspices. The weather was very fine, and the attendance numerous. The proceedings commenced [illegible], and the ploughmen presented a very gratifying appearance with an aptitude amounting to that had hitherto been seen in that part of the country [illegible] Middlesex and Surrey, which was at last determined in favour of the latter county, ended peculiarly [illegible] to both.

In the course of the day pecuniary gifts and testimonials were presented to farm servants (male and female), and labourers who had complied with certain conditions respecting duration of servitude and good conduct, specified. Shortly after twelve o'clock the successful candidates were assembled under a tree close to the canal; and Mr. Cox, of Hyde Park Hall, the chairman of the day, proceeded to pack his purse and the testimonial accompanied with an suitable admonition to all to persevere [illegible] had already produced such good results. The recipients appeared highly gratified, and were cheered, in good country, cordial peculiarity, at every agreement was everything that could be wished for.

After the termination of the ploughing match, the leading members of the society and their friends dined in a pavilion which had been prepared for the occasion, close to the Red Lion, Southall; Mr. Cox presiding. About 120 gentlemen sat down to dinner.

On Saturday last, being the eve of St. Ninian, the foundation-stone of the choir and transepts of the Cathedral Church of St. Ninian was laid in Perth, by the Right Rev. the Bishop of Brechin, acting by authority from the Bishop of St. Andrews.

The neighbourhood of Perth will, before spring, be ornamented by another exquisite gem of architectural skill—the design of Mr. Henderson of Edinburgh—viz. the Chapel at Trinity College, Glenalmond. This building is to be 130 feet long within the walls, and will be the private chapel of the Chapel of William of Wykeham, at Winchester College. It is also in the Decorated style. The stained glass in the windows will represent passages in the life of our Blessed Lord. Without doubt, in point of taste, this will be proper as there has this chapel could not have been erected without the munificent contribution of the Warden of Trinity College.

BUNGE ASSOCIATION FOR THE EQUALISATION OF TAXATION AND MAINTAINING PUBLIC CREDIT.—We perceive by the Bucks Herald that a society, under the above name has just been formed for the purpose of carrying out the principles enunciated in Mr. Bunge's address. The meeting, which was held at the Bear, Chesham, is the chairman, and has addressed a circular "to the owners of real property and agriculturists of the county of Bucks."

GRAND CENTRAL DAHLIA SHOW OF ENGLAND.—On Wednesday, the second grand exhibition of dahlias took place at the Town Hall, in Birmingham. The exhibition was excellent in quality, but the quantity was not so large [illegible] ceded. The following are the first-class prizes: Mr. C. Turner, of Slough, won the 100 guinea prize in the amateur class for the finest stand of 24 dahlias; Mr. Bragg, of Slough, won the second prize; the third prize was won by Mr. Drummond, of Bath; the fourth prize, by Mr. Sealey, of Bristol; the fifth prize, by Mr. Barnes, of Stowmarket; the sixth, by Mr. Lodge, of Manchester.

DAY OF FASTING AND PRAYER AT BRISTOL.—Tuesday last having been set apart, by the recommendation of the Lord Bishop of the diocese, as a day of fast and humiliation, and of prayer to Almighty God for the removal of the cholera, the day was observed by a[illegible] classes of the citizens abstaining from business, closing their shops and warehouses, and resorting to their several places of worship, at most of which three services were held during the day and evening. The [illegible] lands issued an address giving "concise reasons" why they did not join in the fast, which reasons concentrate themselves into this—that public [illegible] of [illegible] hospital, but of the Jewish law. Meanwhile, the [illegible] have [illegible] to [illegible] and [illegible] to [illegible] having been seized with, and some died of it in several parts of the city.

THE TEA HOURS ACT AT ASHTON.—The workpeople of Messrs. Henry Lees and Brothers, Droylsden, have entreated their employers, in a very respectful memorial, to work their mill only ten hours a day, pledging themselves to devote the leisure thus granted to useful purposes. They state that [illegible] Messrs. Lees and Bennett, and the proprietors of the Edge Lane Mills, [illegible] to concede this request, if their neighbours will do the same; and Messrs. Lees are, therefore, requested to set the first example, by trying the ten hours' system for one month. If at the end of that period, if the others do not follow this example, the petitioners would, they state, willingly go back to the old hours. Messrs. Lees have replied that they are willing to comply with this request, provided all their neighbours will do the same; but they will not commence first. They suggest that a day should be fixed, on which all should begin to work ten hours.

EXTENSIVE ROBBERY OF BANK NOTES.—On Monday, Jane Mary Maher, John Maher; her husband; Robert Fraser, his father; and Francis Sharp, described as their servant, were brought up at the police-court, Liverpool, by Mr. Dowling, the chief constable. On the 19th inst. Mr. Hunt, sail-maker, went to Union Bank, and received there the sum of £928 in two £100 notes, a £10 note, and the rest in gold and silver. After calling at the Exchange News-room, and several other places, he returned to his office, and placed the money in a drawer, which he locked. While he was absent for about one quarter of an hour afterwards Mr. Hunt left the office for the purpose of taking some lunch, but did not lock the office, which is at the rear of his sail-room. Whilst absent, he found a prisoner Maher was desirous to enter the premises to see a man named Taylor, in Mr. Hunt's employ. She also enquired for Mr. Hunt, and then left. On Hunt's coming, he discovered, on attempting to unlock his drawer, that it had been broken open, and the money all taken away. Nothing was heard of the matter until last week, when the female prisoners called at the shop of a Mr Fallsner, draper of Athol-street, Douglas, Isle of Man, and after purchasing drapery to the amount of 3s. tendered a £100 note in payment. Mr. Fallsner, not having sufficient change in his possession, sent the note to Mr. Holmes' bank, where it was changed, the prisoner Jane Mary Maher endorsing it at the back "Jane Mary Maher, wife of Ann Maher, now at Mr. Holmes to a banker's in Liverpool, when it was discovered to be one of those stolen from Mr. Hunt Information was then given to Mr. Dowling, when he despatched Bates, one of the most active of the detective force, to Douglas, where the prisoners were apprehended, and a considerable sum in gold and silver, besides jewellery, was found upon them. The next day the other note was handed to Bates, the husband subscribing it in the usual manner, at right. The whole amount recovered is £158 18s. The prisoners were remanded for seven days.

DARING BURGLARY.—Early on Tuesday morning, the shop of Mr. Gwynne, pawnbroker, High-street, Worcester, was broken into, and goods to the value of £200 or £300 were stolen. The thieves effected an entrance first by picking the lock of the passage door of the house adjoining Mr. Gwynne's, and secondly by breaking through a lath and plaster wall, which separated the passage from the shop. Amongst the gold and silver goods stolen were the following: A silver tankard and goblet, 24 gold watches, 20 silver watches, about 100 gold rings, and about 150 fancy and mourning rings; six dozen of silver table-spoons, a dozen dessert knives, five dozen of dessert and table forks (all silver), a large silver candlestick, silver salt-cellars, and a variety of other articles.

SCOTCH JURISDICTION.—Justice.—A child, four years of age, belonging to Mr Taylor, shipmaster, was brought up, on Monday, before Provost Mackinnon and Bailie Japp, for the offence of throwing a stone at Jessie Bell, in the service of Sergeant Lee, living in Academy-square. Lee lodged a very heavy complaint [illegible] child as being generally troublesome, besides the present [illegible] charged. Captain Taylor, in behalf of his child, stated that he was often from home, and could not watch over every trifling transaction of his family. The child, in his opinion, was a vexatious case, as the child was a mere infant. He could attend to the clearing up of quarrels amongst girls and boys at their play. Captain Taylor was here interrupted by the Provost fining the child (not more than four years old) 1s. 6d!—Arbroath Guar.

POOR CHILDREN POISONED.—One of the most diabolical attempts ever made to destroy human life by poison was perpetrated in Nottingham on the morning of Friday week. About five o'clock, a young man, residing near the house occupied by a hawker named Burke, a widower, in Eves's-yard, Narrow-marsh, discovered that the poor man's children had been suddenly taken ill in the absence of their father, and, proceeding to render them assistance, found that they had been vomiting dreadfully. At first it was thought they had been seized with cholera; but a cup, containing some substance resembling sandwich, which was upon the table, a number of the neighbours were called in, and the whole family (with the cup and its contents) were instantly carried off to the General Hospital, where, restoratives being promptly applied, the two youngest were soon pronounced out of danger. Their names are, Mary, aged 1., Thomas, 6, Catherine, 4; and Sarah, 8. On Saturday the eldest (Mary) was sufficiently well to make a statement, from which it appeared that, having gone out to buy some small article as of [illegible], she was met on her return by a woman, who asked her if her name was not Burke. The girl, replied in the affirmative, and was asked [illegible] from [illegible] a good many [illegible] some tea-

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The current week will long live in the memory of every genuine turfite, for having been remarkable for the best and most important first October meeting ever held. Not only was the last prolific of sport, but it abounded in two-year old engagements, in some of which several Derby horses of high pretensions made their appearance: the results cannot fail to have a material influence on their position in the betting. The Chester Autumn meeting came quite up to the mark in respect of sport, but, having been most unwisely fixed in the same week as Newmarket, drew only a small portion of the patrons of the turf. The appointments for next week embrace Felton, on Monday; Monmouth, Macclesfield, and Wrexham, on Tuesday; the Caledonian Hunt on Wednesday, and Rugeley on Friday. None of them possess the slightest public interest.

The cricketers, like the "Sons of the Thames," having concluded a long and brilliant season, the out-door amusements will henceforward be confined to racing, coursing, steeple-chasing, and hunting. Steeple-chasing, we suspect, has seen its best days, and hunting has long ceased to be pursued with any zest.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—Three-fourths of the members having started for Newmarket, the business this afternoon was on a small scale, but, in two or three respects, at prices varying from those previously quoted.

TWO YEAR-OLD TRIENNIAL.

2 to 1 agst Knight of Avenel	3 to 1 agst Hardinge

THREE-YEAR-OLD TRIENNIAL.

7 to 4 agst Tadmor	5 to 2 agst Vatican

GRAND DUKE MICHAEL STAKES

5 to 2 on Vatican	4 to 1 agst Honeycomb

CESAREWITCH

8 to 1 agst Vatican	20 to 1 agst Blue Saddel	20 to 1 agst Lady Evelyn
13 to 1 —— Glenalvon	20 to 1 —— Ruby

DERBY.

12 to 1 agst Pitsford	20 to 1 agst John o' Groat	40 to 1 agst Dacoy Colt
18 to 1 —— Italian	33 to 1 —— Delecon	45 to 1 —— Hottinghroke (t)

CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

18 to 1 agst Woolwich	16 to 1 agst Rhadire	20 to 1 agst Malton

NEWMARKET FIRST OCTOBER MEETING.—TUESDAY.

The weather was favourable in the extreme, and the attendance, without being so great as many had anticipated, the best we have seen at a First October Meeting for many years. The course was in capital order. The new betting-ring on the flat affords more space for horsemen, and is decidedly an improvement on the old one.

HANDICAP SWEEPSTAKES of 20 sovs each.

Sir J. Gerard's Jest, 4 yrs, 7st		.. (Dockeray)	1
Lord Clifden's Sagacity, 5 yrs, 7st 9lb		.. (Flatman)	2

Run in 1 min 11 sec.

HOPEFUL STAKES of 40 sovs each, the second to receive 8 sovs out of the stakes.

Lord Eglinton's Rollingstone, 8st 7lb	.. (Robinson)	1
Lord Chesterfield's Penang, 8st 7lb	.. (F. Butler)	2

MATCH, 200.—Mr. Payne's Gauca, 8st 7lb (Flatman), beat Lord Exeter's Slashing Alice, 7st 9lb (S. Mann), by a length. 3 to 1 on Gauca. Run in 1 min. 13 sec

GRAND DUKE MICHAEL STAKES of 50 sovs each.

Sir J. Hawley's Vatican	.. (Templeman)	1
Lord Clifden's Honeycomb	.. (Robinson)	2

MATCH, £100.—Sir J. Hawley's Cranberry, 7st 7lb (Flatman), beat the Duke of Bedford's Minto, 8st 7lb, by half a length. 7 to 4 on Cranberry. Run in 1 min. 14 sec.

WEDNESDAY.

THE GRANBY STAKES, of 30 sovs each.

Mr. H. Frankum's Catalan, 8st 7lb	.. (Pettit)	1
Lord Exeter's Preslaw, 8st 7lb	.. (Flatman)	2

SWEEPSTAKES of 10 sovs each.

Sir G. Gerard's Grimston, 6 yrs	.. (Marlow)	1
Lord Clifden's Tiresome, 3 yrs	.. (J. Marson)	2

FIRST YEAR of the SECOND TRIENNIAL PRODUCE STAKES of 10 sovs each.

Lord Eglinton's Knight of Avenel	.. (Marlow)	1
Mr. Bowes's Brother to Epirote	.. (F Butler)	2

SWEEPSTAKES of 50 sovs each.

Col. Peel's Longima, 8st 7lb	.. (Flatman)	1
Duke of Bedford's Bordeaux, 8st 7lb	.. (F. Butler)	2

HANDICAP SWEEPSTAKES of 15 sovs each.

Lord John Scott's Abreda, 7st 12lb	.. (J. Sharp)	1
Colonel Peel's f by Gladiator, 8st 7lb	.. (Flatman)	2

The Sir. LEGER STAKES of 25 sovs each. (15 Subs.)

Lord Strathmore's Oidipus, 8st 7lb.	.. (J. Marson)	1
Sir J. Hawley's Queensberry, 8st 2lb	.. (Templeman)	2

FIFTY POUNDS, for three-year olds.

Mr. Barne's Satterley, 4 yrs	.. (Flatman)	1
Lord W. Powlett's Brandyface, 5 yrs	.. (Rogers)	2

THURSDAY

SWEEPSTAKES of 5 sovs each.

Rochester	.. ..	.. ..	.. 1
Cayenne	.. ..	.. ..	.. 2

SWEEPSTAKES of 10 sovs each.

Memento	.. ..	.. ..	Walked over

CHACOW STAKES.

Fire-eater	.. ..	.. ..	.. 1
Memento	.. ..	.. ..	.. 2

The TRIENNIAL.

Vatican	.. ..	.. ..	.. 1
Borneo	.. ..	.. ..	.. 2

Won easy.

SWEEPSTAKES of 100 sovs each.

Eyrephus	.. ..	.. ..	.. 1
Tingle	.. ..	.. ..	.. 2

QUEEN'S PLATE.

Satterley	.. ..	.. ..	.. 1
Retail	.. ..	.. ..	.. 2

RUTLAND STAKES.

Ghul is Callum	.. ..	.. ..	.. 1
Notabell	.. ..	.. ..	.. 2

LATEST BETTING AT NEWMARKET.

CESAREWITCH.

8 to 1 agst Vatican	14 to 1 agst Blue Saddel	25 to 1 agst Lady Evelyn
12 to 1 —— Glenalvon	20 to 1 —— Esmeralda	33 to 1 —— Snowstorm
	1000 to 25 laid once agst Esmeralda

DERBY

12 to 1 agst Pitsford	20 to 1 agst Ghillie Callum	33 to 1 agst John o' Groat
15 to 1 —— Knight of Avenel	20 to 1 —— Italian (t)	30 to 1 —— Hollingbroke

ROWING MATCH.—The scullers' match between E. F. Gale, of Pimlico, and B Oxlade, of Peal's-wharf, waterman's apprentice having some claims to superiority as rowers, took place on Tuesday, the distance being from Putney to Barnes-bridge, for £10 a side. The men effected a good start at so early an hour of the morning that there were few or no spectators present, save the immediate friends of the parties, and immediately afterwards Gale took the lead, which he maintained throughout, exhibiting a style of rowing of no ordinary description, and winning by four or six lengths, his opponent rowing a very determined and manly stern wager.

LAYING OF THE FIRST STONE OF THE NEW CITY PRISON.—On Wednesday, the first stone of the great City Prison at Holloway was laid by the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, accompanied by a large number of the civic functionaries, and the governors and principal officers of the great criminal persons of the metropolis. The following is the inscription engraved upon the plate deposited in the stone:—"The first stone of this building, erected by and at the expense of the city of London, intended for the reception of convicted prisoners, was laid on the 26th day of September, 1849, and in the thirteenth year of the reign of her Majesty Queen Victoria, by the Right Hon. Sir James Duke, M.P., Lord Mayor; assisted by David Waldane Wire, Esq., chairman of the committee of the Court of Common Council, and Thomas Challis, Esq., Alderman, chairman of the committee of the Court of Aldermen, appointed to superintend the work, and the members of the Court of Aldermen and of the Court of Common Council upon the Prisons Committee. May God preserve the city of London, and make this place a terror to evil-doers." The stone, which weighed four tons and a half, having been slowly lowered, his Lordship tuning the trowel in a singularly skilful manner, it was accurately fixed in its destined position by the architect. Mr. Wire then struck the stone with his mallet, and Mr. Alderman Challis ascertained with his level that the operation was perfect. The Lord Mayor then delivered an appropriate address; the ceremony being closed by a prayer from his chaplain, Mr. Catley.

LANSDOWNE HOUSE.—The Marquis of Lansdowne has, in a considerable degree, thrown his splendid town mansion and grounds, in Berkeley-square, open to the view of the public, by the erection of an iron gate in Berkeley-street, directly opposite Hay hill.

THE LONDON CORPORATION ACT.—By the new act relating to the City of London, which became operative on the 1st inst., it is enacted that on the 1st day of November in every year, the Aldermen and Common Councilmen of each ward shall make, or cause to be made, out an alphabetical list of all persons who shall be entitled to vote as freemen occupiers under the act, such list to be duly signed by the Alderman of the ward, and the ward clerk shall keep a true copy of such list, to be perused by any person without payment of any fee, at all reasonable times between the 1st and 15th of November in every year, and shall at all times deliver a written or printed copy of such list to any person requiring the same, on payment of a reasonable price for each copy, and the said list shall be the list of freemen occupiers entitled to vote after the passing of this act at any election for Alderman, Common Councilman, or ward officer for any ward. In future elections for Aldermen or Common Councilmen the poll is to be kept open only "one day."

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Nemesis."—Your Problem of five moves is easily solvable in three, and your emendation in Problem No. 295, we fear, is equally faulty.

"An Irish American."—The "little Problem" is doubtless a very pointed shaft of Hibernian pleasantry, but we are not Œdipus enough to detect the joke

"T. P. B.," Nantwich.—1. In the position cited, Black cannot take the Queen with his King. 2. Your Problem is defective in arrangement, besides being much too easy

"Perse," Brighton.—They shall be reported on in our next.

"A Would-be Philidor."—Your defence to Problem No 294 would serve to facilitate rather than delay the mate. Upon Black's playing the Rook to Q 2d (ch), the White Kt could take it, giving mate on the move

"G. K." Liverpool.—If a player moves one of his adversary's men, his antagonist has the power of compelling him—1st, to replace the Piece or Pawn and move his King; 2nd, to replace the Piece or Pawn and take it; 3d, to let the Piece or Pawn remain on the square to which it had been played, as if the move were correct.

"An Old Salt" asks, Who are the best players in the navy and army? We object to questions of this kind, because, nine times out of ten, they lead to vexatious comparisons, but, in this instance, as the enquiry is apart from general club-play, we may venture, without offence, to say for the navy, that Mr. Harry Wilson, of the Isle of Wight, undoubtedly carries his flag at the main, where it is likely to wave unabjured. Of the army, Colonel Nesbit and Major Robertson may probably be considered the élite, though we have the pleasure of knowing many other capital players in the service

"Penn," "Sigma," and "H. W."—The new Chess-men, we presume, are now ready. They are manufactured by Messrs. Jaques, the eminent ivory-turners, of Hatton-garden; and can be obtained, we are told, at the office of the Chess-Player's Chronicle; at W. Lincker's, Piccadilly; and, we think, through any Chess-board-maker in London. For the prices and other particulars asked, we must refer you to the advertisements.

"R. D. E."—We penalty is incurred by saying "Check," provided the player has not let go the Piece he meant to check with; but having touched that Piece, he must play it somewhere.

"Inquirendo."—Practice and study of the kind you mention may do something to improve you; but no one became a good player without collision with good players.

"Pyro."—Our solution of the beautiful little Problem No. 295 is perfectly correct. We never gave to ally a defence to Black to Kt to Q 4th for the second move that would admit of his being mated at once by Q to Q B 7th. Our move was—1. Q to her 4th (best). It is your solution which is erroneous, as a little examination will show you.

"R. H. T."—Many thanks for your advocacy of the good cause.

"W. P."—You must mean mate in one move.

"W. N. B."—A player of a week's standing would see through your Enigma at a glance.

"J. C. W.," and "H. C. E. C," Guernsey.—Ingenious, but much too obvious.

"Hon. Sec."—Mr. Harrwitz's first brilliant exhibition of Chess-playing, during his present tour, took place at Glasgow on the 6th inst. He has since played without seeing the board at Edinburgh and Newcastle, and is now en route for Halifax, Liverpool, Manchester, and, we believe, Nottingham

"W. B."—1. Hoyle is no authority at all upon Chess. 2. The privilege of the Pawn to take a Pawn en passing is not a modern innovation; it has been sanctioned by all the Chess-playing countries of Europe, except Italy, for nearly 200 years. 3. See our answer to "Penn" and others, above.

"A Constant Reader," Margate.—The two admirable Problems which "A Constant Reader" treats with so much misplaced ridicule, are of too high an order to be at once comprehended by an inexperienced player. If he will sit at the pains to set up the pieces according to our diagrams, and devote himself steadily to their examination, he will hardly fail to see that, in No. 295, mate cannot possibly be given under the supposed number of moves; and that in the other, if the Queen were taken as he suggests, mate would be given by the White Kt next move!

Solutions by the "Harrowgate Duo," "S. U." "B. F." "M. E. R." "R. H. Z." "G. W. G." "Middlesex" are correct. Those by "Pyro," "A Would-be Philidor," "R. R." "P. R. S." are wrong.

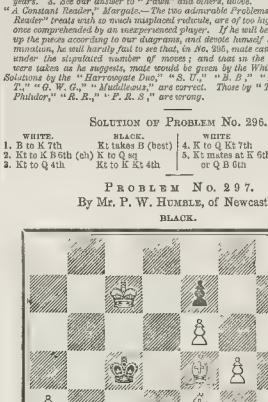
SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 296.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE	BLACK.
1. B to K 7th	Kt takes B (best)	4. R to Q 8th	Either Kt moves
2. Kt to Q 6th (ch)	K to Q sq	5. Kt mates
3. Kt to Q 4th	Kt to K Kt 4th	or Q B 6th

PROBLEM NO. 297.

By Mr. P. W. HUMBLE, of Newcastle.

BLACK.



WHITE.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

MATCH BY CORRESPONDENCE,

BETWEEN THE CHESS CLUBS OF LONDON AND AMSTERDAM.

WHITE (Amsterdam).	BLACK (London).
42.	43. R take R (ch)
43. K takes R	43. P to Q B 6th
Amsterdam to play.

The following very lively and entertaining game has just been played between M. LE BARON DE RENIOUILLE and Mr. F. DEACON, a young amateur, of Bruges.

(A Kt opening.)

BLACK (M. de R.)	WHITE (Mr. D.)	BLACK (M. de R.)	WHITE (Mr. D.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	13. P to Q 3d	Q B to K Kt 5th
2. K Kt to B 3d	P to Q 4th	14. Kt to K Kt 6th	Q Kt to Q 5th
3. P takes Q P	P to K 5th	15. K B to Q Kt 3d	P to K R 3d
4. Q to K 2d	Q to K 2d	16. P to K R 3d	K Kt to K B 4th
5. K Kt to Q 4th	P to K Kt 3d (a)	17. Q to her 2d	Q B to K R 4th
6. Q to K B 3d	B to K Kt 2d	18. K Kt to K 4th	B to K B 6th (d)
7. Q to K 3d	B to K 4th	19. K to R sq	Q to K R 8th
8. Q K takes K P (b)	K Kt to K 2d (c)	20. Q to K B 4th	Q takes K K P (ch)
9. K Kt to K B 3d	Q takes Q P	21. Q to K R 2d	Kt takes Kt P (ch)
10. Q Kt to Q B 3d	Q to her 3d sq	22. K to Kt sq	Q Kt to K B 6th—
11. K B to Q B 4th	Castles		Mate.
12. Castles	Q Kt to B 3d

(a) The object of this, we presume, was, to make an outlet for the K's Bishop

(b) Beautifully played.

(c) It is apparent that, if White had taken the K Kt, he must have lost the game For, sup., 0000—

BLACK.	WHITE
9.	Q takes Kt
10. Kt to K B 6th (double ch)	K moves
11. Q to K Kt—Mate.

(d) The winning move

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 484.—By W. G., of York.

White: K at Q Kt 5th, Q at K sq, Bs at K R 4th and Q Kt sq, Kts at Q 7th and Q kt 4th.

Black: K at Q 8th, Rs at K B sq and K B 3rd, B at K R 3d; Ps at K Kt 4th, Q Kt 3d, and Q 4th.

White to play, and mate in two moves.

No 485.—By the Same

White: K at K R sq, Rs at K Kt 2d and Q Kt 7th, B at K Kt 5th, Ps at K R 2d and K 5th.

Black: K at K Kt sq, R at K B sq, Bs at K sq and Q B 4th; Ps at K R 2d, K R 4th, and K 3d.

White to play, and mate in four moves

No. 486. By Mr. DEACON, of Bruges.

White: K at Q 3d, Q at her R 3d, R at Q R sq, Kts at K 4th and Q B 4th.

Black: K at Q 4th, Kt at Q Kt 4th; Ps at K R 2d, K B 5th, K 3d, Q 3d, and Q R 2d.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

Sunday last was observed as a day of prayer and humiliation in St. Pancras and Marylebone parishes.

Lord Brougham completed his seventy-first year on Wednesday week, on which occasion a large party assembled at Brougham Hall.

A vessel arrived in the river from Belfast has brought five packets of bank, the presence of treasure, as a portion of her cargo. This is the first arrival of this article from the sister country.

We are authorised to state that the reports which have been circulated that the Iacate had been ordered, at short notice, to the Cape of Good Hope, are entirely unfounded. No vessel has been ordered especially for that destination.

Notwithstanding the decree of the Frankfort National Assembly, gambling is still carried on in Aix la Chapelle almost as publicly as formerly, and with the tacit connivance not only of the civil authorities, but of the Government in Berlin.

A deputation from the commercial classes of the city of Prague arrived in Vienna last week, and presented Field-Marshal Radetzky with a laurel wreath of silver, accompanied with an earnest request that he would honour the city of Prague with a visit.

It appears by a letter addressed by the Czar from Warsaw to the Minister of War, Count Tschernischew, in which he thanks him for the services rendered in the Hungarian war, the Russian army of intervention amounted to 150,000 men.

The rumours of the project of marriage between Louis Bonaparte and a Swedish Princess is gradually gaining more and more ground in Sweden.

The Swedish Hall of Commerce has announced that all the Prussian ports and the city of Bordeaux are to be considered as infected with cholera.

It will hardly be believed that the whole quantity of gold currency in the world, taking it at its usual estimate of £150,000,000, would only weigh two tons, and that in bulk a room 20 feet long, 12 feet wide, and 10 feet high would hold it all.

The Lords of the Treasury have authorised the admission, duty free, of pig's tongues from America.

A fine fresco painting, representing the Day of Judgment, in excellent preservation, has been discovered over the chancel arch of Chelsworth Church.

It is said that Mr. Pitman, late Commander of the Childers, dismissed the Royal Navy, has determined on appealing to the Court of Queen's Bench against the result of the court-martial, with the view of superseding the sentence passed upon him.

An American paper says that so numerous is the company in some of the inns in the vicinity of the White Mountains, that at night they place travellers on the floor in rows till they get to sleep, then set them up against the wall and lay down another lot, and so on till all are accommodated!!!

The town of Whitby has had a large accession of visitors during the present season. There are few places more distinguished for its fine bracing air and the general health of its population; indeed, it stands third in the returns of health in the United Kingdom. The cholera has not presented a single case either in the town or district.

A letter from Beyrout, of the 31st ult., says:—"Sir Moses Montefiore has founded at Damascus a large hospital, and two primary schools, for indigent Jews, among whom he has already distributed 160,000 Turkish piastres (about 40,000*l.*) The Jews of Damascus, in order to testify their gratitude to Sir Moses Montefiore for these acts of benevolence, have bestowed on him the title of Nassi (Prince) of the Israelites of Damascus."

The result of the investigation of the Crown authorities into the fall of the bridge at Roxburgh, on the line of the North British Railway, by which several persons were killed and injured, is the indictment for trial at the next assizes of the contractor and resident engineer.

It is said that there are now in Indiana (United States) not less than 200,000 Germans—some say 250,000

The excavations at the centre of Silbury Hill having been completed, without discovering the least indication of any interment, the committee of the Archæological Institute have directed a record of the operations to be placed at the centre of the hill, and the entrance of the tunnel to be closed next week

Rhode Island, United States, has within her limited territory 163 cotton-mills, consuming annually 86,000 bales of cotton, and manufacturing 70,000,000 yards of cloth.

The returns which have been published by the Paris Moniteur respecting the movements of trade and commerce during the past month show that there is a slight revival, especially in cotton and woollen goods; but in Paris the stagnation still continues.

Eight pictures, illustrative of the life of Lord Viscount Nelson, have been purchased by subscription, and deposited in the Naval Gallery at Greenwich Hospital, at a cost of £300, of which the sum of £136 was contributed by Mr. Jasper de Sainte Croix.

The Rev. Dr. Gilly stated, at the recent Berwick dinner to Sir George Grey, that the Dean and Chapter of Durham had expended about a quarter of a million sterling in the improvement of poor livings and extension of Church taelfdeas.

On Friday week, the Bishop of Chichester consecrated the new church of Kemptown, Brighton, erected principally at the expense of the Marquis of Bristol, and containing church accommodation for the whole of the pupils of St. Mary's Hall, for the education of the daughters of deceased clergymen left in less than circumstances.

On Thursday night, the Queen's Head, Blackfriars-road, was broken into, and a quantity of cigars, £5 in silver, and £5 in farthings, were stolen. Had the burglars examined an iron chest behind the bar, which had been left unlocked, they would have found £15 in silver, £30 in gold, and about £100 worth of plate.

The convoy of agricultural colonists from France which was to be sent off this autumn for Algeria, is postponed to next spring, it being found impossible to get the movable wooden framework for their cottages prepared in time for their departure this year.

The Rev. Angus Mackenzie, of the Roman Catholic congregation, Eskdale, Inverness, has received £3 from Sir Robert Peel, for distribution amongst the poor of that congregation.

The amount of the imports of foreign cereal produce into Liverpool, from the 5th to the 18th of September, is considerable, viz. 29,948 bushels wheat, 94,087 bushels Indian corn, 2952 barrels Indian corn meal, 35,003 barrels flour, 3000 bushels rye, 12,380 bushels oats, 3,824 bushels barley, 14,848 bushels beans, 41,792 bushels peas, 207 barrels oatmeal.

An old bell, having been last week taken down from the church tower at Wenhaston, Suffolk, a new musical mouden bell, in the key of C, weight 7 cwt., has been fixed up in its place. The old bell was made in the year 1500, and bore the legend, "Sancta Maria, ora pro nobis."

We regret to state that Matthew Bell Esq., M.P., met with an accident on riding from Newcastle on Tuesday week. His horse fell with him, whereby the small bone of his right leg was broken, and the leg otherwise much injured.

Mr. James Fernley, of Edgeley, in Stockport, has connected with his house clock a simple piece of self-acting mechanism, which, at any given hour or minute of the night, rings a bell and lights a candle.

The Free Trade Club was dissolved, by the vote of a meeting of its members, on Saturday last, and has been succeeded by the known as the National Reform Club, is to be formed forthwith, and will occupy the premises in St. James's-square, hitherto enjoyed by the free-traders.

Mr. Frederick Inglis has returned to London, after a tour through some of the eastern and southern districts of Ireland, whither he went a short time back to procure information necessary for the completion of the forthcoming volume of his history.

A vessel arrived in the river from Dublin has brought 20 packages of charcoal as a portion of her cargo

In Hungary, courts-martial continue to try persons concerned in the insurrection; but of late, sentences to death have been less numerous, and have been replaced by condemnations to hard labour at the hulks for different periods.

In Normandy and Brittany the apples used for cider are in extraordinary abundance this season. In the country of man the trees were never seen so abundant. The farmers have been obliged to prop up their tottering under the branches to enable them to support the heavy weight of fruit that bends them to the earth. The cider crop will, in most places, be twice or three times more abundant than in ordinary years.

The lead-mines of north Derbyshire, after being for some time partially neglected, are now fully worked

It is a remarkable fact, that whilst the prevailing pestilence is committing its awful ravages, and daily sweeping off its numerous victims in so many of our districts, including the metropolis itself, the borough of Birmingham, with a population exceeding 200,000 souls, has had but one indigenous case of cholera.

On the 14th inst., a public sale of a portion of the effects of Kossuth took place at Pesth, but the attendance of the public was less numerous than had been expected. The effects of Count Casimir Batthyany and others were also to be offered for sale.

Four hundred officers, sub-officers, and soldiers of the Russian army, who were passed on to the citadel of Warsaw some months ago, for being concerned in a conspiracy against the Government, have just been sent to Siberia and the Ural Mountains

The insurrection in Bosnia has been terminated by the capture of the fortress of Novi by the Turks, after a combat with the insurgents, in which 300 were killed on both sides. The ruling had nothing of a political character in it, but arose from the manner in which the taxes were assessed.

On the 12th inst., the trophies taken in the war in Hungary, consisting of 65 flags, among them that of the fortress of Arad, were solemnly paraded in the principal streets of St. Petersburgh, and deposited in the Winter Palace.

The Milan Gazette of the 19th inst. announces the death of the celebrated painter Bellosio, on the borders of the lake of Como. He was the author of the great picture of "The Universal Deluge."

CULLODEN MOOR.—FROM AN ORIGINAL SKETCH.

THE CULLODEN MONUMENT.

THE Centenary of the Battle of Culloden (April 16, 1846), appears to have suggested the erection of this memorial to the brave Highlanders who fell in that decisive struggle. A subscription was opened for the purpose, and a meeting of the subscribers held at Inverness, on the 24th ult., at which Mr. Carruthers, of the Inverness Courier, presided. Having examined the plans and designs furnished for the proposed Monument, the meeting adopted that by Mr. Mackenzie, architect, Elgin, as being best suited to the locality, as susceptible of future improvements as funds are forthcoming; and, therefore, under all circumstances, the most appropriate. It was then agreed to lay the foundation-stone on Wednesday, the 19th instant; and this arrangement has been very effectively carried out.

The morning of the 19th was rainy, but by noon the weather cleared up, and continued fine during the day, with the exception of a slight shower which fell at the moment the stone was committed to its bed. Culloden Moor lies nearly five miles from Inverness, where the day was observed by many as a holiday. The ceremony had been arranged to take place with Masonic honours; and the various bodies of which the procession was composed assembled at 11 o'clock in the Academy-park; and, after forming in line, they passed up Inglis-street, then turned down Petty-street, and next took the Millburn-road. No regular order was, however, observed by the procession from Millburn House until it had approached the Moor. About a mile from the site of the Monument a halt was called, and the procession re-formed. First came a band of music; next the boys of several schools; then the Inverness band; the Inverness Abstinence Society, with its banners; the Six Incorporated Trades, headed by their Convener; a deputation from the St. Duthus Lodge of Freemasons, Tain, and the Tain and Ross Royal Arch Chapters; a deputation from the St. Mary's Lodge, Inverness; a deputation from the St. Lawrence of Forres; and, lastly, a deputation from the St. John's Lodge of Forres, constituted, pro tempore, the Provincial Grand Lodge, and decorated with the gold and other insignia of the Grand Lodge of Scotland. Mr. Bryce, Grand Tyler of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, was present, and was of great service. The procession was composed in all of three or fourhundred persons.

By this time, at least 2500 individuals, including many ladies, had assembled round the site of the Monument, and twelve or fifteen carriages and coaches lined the road. Amongst those present were Mackintosh of Mackintosh, and party; Mr. Grant, of Glenmoriston; Mr. Mitchell, of Viewhill, and party; Mr. Mackintosh of Holm (who wore the Highland dress); Mr. Dun. Forbes, of Leanach; Mr. Fraser, of Balcony; Mrs. Dr. Nicol and Miss Nicol; the Misses Wood, from England; Mr. and Mrs Haig, Cantray; Mr. Macpherson, Drummond; Mr. Bankes of Letterewe; Mr. Laing, Forres; Mr. Allan Maclean, Burnside, &c. A considerable number of tourists were present; and every neighbouring strath sent forth its representatives. The banners of the procession were seen approaching at a few minutes past two, and shortly afterwards, as the bands played a well-known Masonic air, the lodges assembled round the spot where the stone was to be laid. The Rev. Mr. Campbell of Croy, chaplain to the Kilwinning Lodge, of Inverness, then offered up an impressive prayer, and a parchment containing the following was read by the secretary:—

"The foundation-stone of the Culloden Monument—a monument raised by public subscription, and dedicated to the memory of the brave Highlanders who fell at Culloden on the 16th April, 1746, fighting gallantly for a cause which they conscientiously believed to be a just one, was laid on the 19th September, 1849, by William Anderson, R.W.M. of the St. John's Operative Mason Lodge of Forres, in presence of the following bodies, who marched in procession from Inverness for that purpose. Thomas Mackenzie, Elgin, architect; John Hendry and John Batchen, Inverness, builders; Kennedy Macnab, secretary." Here follows a list of the subscriptions received up to this date, &c.

This parchment having been placed within a glass bottle, with coins of the present reign from a halfpenny upwards, a copy of Douglas's Northern Supplement, copies of the Inverness newspapers, &c., the bottle was sealed and deposited, and the stone was then lowered with the usual ceremonies, the band playing the "Queen's Anthem," "Hail Masonry," &c. The stone was laid by the Right Worshipful Master of the St. John's Lodge, Forres. The completion of the ceremony was hailed with three cheers by the large crowd; and at the same moment two large cannons, brought up from the tower for the occasion, began a Royal salute. The scene at this moment was highly interesting—the immense crowd, the fluttering of flags, the rows of carriages, the firing of guns, and the strains of music, all united on spot usually so solemn in its stillness, proved that the occasion was not a common occurrence. The splendour of the day added not a little to the effect of the scene, showing in great beauty the magnificent panorama of mountain, plain, wood, and sea which stretches around the fatal plain of Culloden.

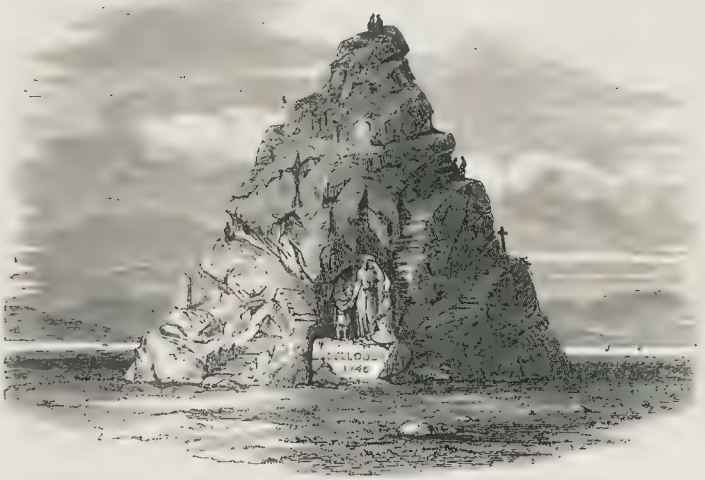
Immediately after the ceremony, the Masons adjourned to a marquée close by, and partook of refreshments: Mr. John Ross, convener of the trades, took the chair. Several toasts were given before the meeting separated, including the health of Culloden, Kilgmore, and other neighbouring proprietors.

The Monument, says the Inverness Courier, will occupy the highest ground on the Moor of Culloden. The spot chosen for the site is that upon which the struggle took place which decided the fate of the day, and where the greatest carnage occurred. It is within the line occupied by the foremost rank of the Highland army, and close by the long trench, still green, where repose the bodies of the brave men who fell in that struggle. This spot is about half-a-mile north-west of the block known as the Duke of Cumberland's Stone, and about a mile to the east of the tree pointed out as the position of Prince Charles and his guard.

The Monument will be a gigantic cairn or artificial rock, the top of which will be accessible by flights of rustic steps and winding paths. Various spots will be so formed that tablets and small monuments to particular clans or individuals may at any time be erected; and in front it is proposed that a group of statuary should be placed. This, however, must depend upon the extent of the public sympathy in the object of the memorial, for the subscriptions as yet received will not complete the bare design.

We have engraved the Monument, with the proposed sculptural additions, from a clever lithograph, published by Messrs. Keith and Gibb, of Aberdeen. The second illustration is a View of the Moor, from an original sketch by one of our own Artists. The scene is deeply tinged with characteristic melancholy may, shrouded with the recollection of human suffering; and it has in the artistic treatment much of the feeling in which poetry has so frequently commemorated the sad event which has invested the spot with its celebrity:—

> Drummossie Muir, Drummossie day,
> A waeful day it was to me!
> For there I lost my father dear,
> My father dear, and brethren three.



THE PROPOSED MONUMENT ON CULLODEN MOOR, FOUNDED SEPT. 19, 1849.

UNEXPECTED TERMINATION OF A VOYAGE.—We copy the following singular narrative from the Dublin Evening Mail:—"The colliers which frequent the southern ports of Ireland frequently take passengers to England or Wales at a very low rate—such as half-a-crown a head. In April last one of those vessels took in sixty passengers in a small southern port, and, fortunately for them, took in a large number of sheep. Shortly after the vessel had sailed she encountered heavy adverse gales, which drove her down the Channel and into the Atlantic, where she was tossed about for several days, steering at random, the worthy skipper being in utter ignorance of his position. The sheep were slaughtered to save the crew and passengers from starvation. At length the wanderers fell in with a ship, and, like the celebrated navigator who sought Fingal, they discovered where they were. They were informed that a perseverance for two days, not in a nor-east but in a nor-west course, would bring them to New York, and there they arrived with all the passengers, save the sheep, safe. The half-crown men were delighted to find that their voyage terminated under the star-spangled banner. The families of those who thus unexpectedly crossed the Atlantic gave them up as lost, but have lately received letters informing them of their safe arrival in America, and that they would shortly send money to enable their friends to join them in a country as yet—happily for themselves—unskilled in the science of political economy, and so selfish as to deem it better to support their own citizens than encourage and reward the industry of foreigners. Awaiting the expected remittances the several families retired into lodgings in the —— union workhouse.

Sir Charles Shakerley, Bart., has purchased, for 600 guineas, the two splendid pictures by Count d'Orsay, one being the representation of our Saviour, and the other the portrait of Queen Victoria. The former is intended for the private chapel in Somerford Park, and the latter as a present to the corporation of Congleton.

The Earl of Egmont has considerately made a reduction of twenty per cent. on his rents at his recent half-yearly audit.

CRIME IN ALGERIA.—The Akhbar of the 12th inst. narrates two or three cases of atrocious crime, showing that the Arabs have already profited by the example of French civilised society. Some human remains were recently discovered at Dariah, in a thicket of bushwood. It appears that they were the remains of the carcase of the Sieur Buneau, a farmer, who had disappeared for some fifteen days. He was evidently the victim of a brutal assassination, Fragments of the cranium bore the traces of a gunshot wound, and the brambles were partly burnt, either from the shot or from an attempt of the Arabs to burn the body. A few days later, not a particle or a trace of the body could have been discovered, for wild beasts had carried away everything with the exception of a thigh, a tibia, and some fragments of the skull. A shoe and cap of poor Buneau were found near the body, and served to prove the identity. Two individuals have been apprehended on suspicion. A week ago, adds the Akhbar, a young Arab woman made an attempt, after the English fashion, to poison the whole of her family. Her husband alone perished; the others were saved by copious doses of oil. The guilty woman confessed her crime; but she pretended that she had acted "on advice," and with an innocent object in view! The excuse appears improbable, and will hardly save her neck. The crime was committed by means of a powder partly composed of arsenic, with which the natives manufacture a pomatum for the hair, of which great use is made.

A grand entertainment was given last Saturday evening, in the Townhall, by John Potter, Esq., Mayor of Manchester, in honour of the Right Hon. Sir James Duke, Bart., M.P., Lord Mayor of London. Among those present were Lieutenant-General Earl Cathcart, K.C.B.; the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Manchester, Lord Greenock, Chevalier Bunsen, Alexander Henry Esq., M.P., &c.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR OCTOBER.

The winter fashions will soon be determined; already the autumnal shades are closing upon us, and light dresses are quite out of season. At this season of the year morning dresses absorb almost entirely the attention of the ladies; dinner and evening parties are now mostly given in the country, and persons of high fashion have left town, amply provided with toilettes. The preparations for October, rather than the actual fashions, therefore, demand attention. Merinos and cashmeres will be much worn as morning dresses; the bodies tight and very high; the skirts very full, and not so long as those of last year; and bishop sleeves with a small cuff. The skirts, open up the front, are trimmed with gimp as wide as the hand, and of the same colour as the dress. Large buttons are sometimes placed in the middle of the two rows of trimming. A collar, a fine French cambric frill, and cuffs consisting of five little rows plissés, complete this autumnal toilette. Bronze and deep blue are the colours most worn. Valenciennes lace is very suitable for these dresses. Some light cashmere dresses are embroidered up the front with silk; they seem, however, little in vogue, from their extreme analogy with the costume amazone. The élégantes who study comfort will wear douillettes of levantine; this simple and becoming material, by its numerous folds, giving so small degree of grace to the figure. These douillettes are made open, over a silk or fine white cashmere slip, trimmed with ruches. This is a charming breakfast costume. Satins and velvets cannot yet be worn; and until they appear, brocaded silks will continue very fashionable. The shades are varied, and seem to follow the aspect of the season—mellow sunshine, and autumnal shades.

We perceive a few furs, but as yet they are neither fashionable nor seasonable; they are not handsome, and are only worn, under the form of boas, as simple preservatives against the winds of autumn.

The shape of the bonnets has not undergone any great change; the pokes forme ballon are still very graceful; silk bonnets are worn; those of velvet are in preparation; those of gauze, tulle, and straw are laid aside.

One month more, and there will not remain a vestige of all the fresh summer elegances; for the toilettes will then borrow some of winter's sombre and severe hues. In Paris it is said that the beautiful watered Irish poplins will be the rage in London, on account of Queen Victoria's recent visit to Ireland. This is a fashion which many Parisians must envy, without being able to follow it easily; for these magnificent stuffs are extremely rare in France, and Parisians must really travel to London to procure them.

The season for capes has arrived; they are very elegant, both for morning and afternoon. They are, for the most part, made of lace, Valenciennes or Mechlin, trimmed with ribbon for the morning; Brussels, or pillow lace, point d'Alençon, with flowers, for the evening. They are placed quite on the top of the head, with long lappets hanging behind.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR OCTOBER.

MAGDALEN COLLEGE SCHOOL, OXFORD.

In our Journal of last week we noticed the laying of the first stone of the new Grammar School of Magdalen College, on the 9th instant, by the venerable President of the Society, Dr. Martin Joseph Routh, who, on that day, entered his 95th year.

The new School will occupy the western extremity of the gravel-walk, within the precincts of the ancient College walls. The architects are Messrs. J. C. Buckler and Son. The building will consist of a single room, the dimensions of which, 72 feet by 24 feet, are determined by those of the old Grammar School. The front towards the High-street will present an elevation of five bays, formed by buttresses, and containing an uniform range of transomed windows of lofty proportions. The north elevation is to be distinguished by a porch in the centre, with a room over, approached by a stone staircase in an octangular bell-turret, terminating in a crocketed pinnacle. The parapet of the School is to be embattled, and the east and west walls finished with gables; the windows in these aspects will be distinguished by superior dimensions, pointed arches, and tracery. The roof is to be of open timber framework, spanned by single arches, springing from stone corbels.

And now, in the words of a New College Correspondent to one of the Oxford Journals—

> Floreat hæc Schola, per multos hanc floreat annos,
> Doctrina, insignis, moribus, et studiis.
>
> May Magdalen School long continue to flourish,
> And plants of good morals and learning to nourish.

This Grammar School was founded by William of Wayntlete, Bishop of Winchester, about 1480, in connexion with the College. It is at present conducted by a master and usher, on the foundation of the College, and by two mathematical and writing masters. The pupils are prepared for the University, and in very many cases have succeeded to Demyships or Bible-clerkships in the College, and to the higher advantages to which those appointments commonly lead.

MAGDALEN COLLEGE NEW SCHOOL, OXFORD.

The Sheppard Exhibitions are open to boys not on the foundation, viz. one of £70 per annum, tenable for four years by a member of the University; and three, of less value, to be held in the school.

PICTURESQUE SKETCHES OF LONDON, PAST AND PRESENT.

BY THOMAS MILLER.

CHAPTER XV.—SUBURBAN CEMETERIES AND CITY CHURCHYARDS.

That it was customary in ancient times to bury the dead outside the city walls the Holy Bible bears witness, even as far back as in the early chapters of the Book of Genesis, where it is recorded how Abraham bought the field of Macphelah of Ephron the Hittite, "and the cave which was therein, and all the trees that were in the field, (and) that were in all the borders round about." (Chap. xxiii.) Here we find a rural cemetery in a green field bordered with trees, in which the venerable patriarch buried his wife nearly four thousand years ago, while we, with all our boasted improvements, are in the present day thrusting the dead together in countless thousands, in the very heart of our close and overcrowded cities—where the living have scarcely room enough to breathe, and the dead of to-day are crammed amongst the remains which have been disinterred to give them a short lodgment; when they again in turn are cast out, and mysteriously consumed or wounded into the smallest possible compass under our very eyes, in so unfeeling, heartless, and brutal a manner that we dare not shock our readers with the revolting details.

The head-stone, reared by the hand of pious affection, instead of pointing to the remains it was erected to commemorate, stands over the graves of strangers, and we shed our tears over those whom we never knew; while the sexton and the grave-digger grin at us behind the neighbouring tomb-stones, chinking the silver in their pockets and laughing to think that the poor paupers whom they shoved into "our" grave on the previous night in a "huggermugger" way should be wept over by the broken-hearted mourner whom they have thus cheated. With these facts dinned into our ears every day by the uplifted voice of the press, are we not guilty of disrespect towards the dead by burying them in these ever-changing and common lodging-houses? We know not where their remains are to be found at the end of the year; cannot tell whether they have been removed to lay the foundation of a new road, or sold and ground up to manure some distant field.

Let us not forget that when the heathen Greeks and Romans brought the remains of their heroes and poets into their ancient temples, the bodies were first burnt, and only the ashes preserved in richly sculptured urns, on which the achievements of the dead were pictured; their classical minds fashioned "a thing of beauty" out of the ashes of the departed; they gave to the dead a beautiful dwelling-place, and those who were buried unscathed by the funeral fire were interred in cemeteries where trees were planted over them, and marble monuments erected; and, idolators though they were, such places were held sacred, and were called "the silent cities of the dead," and were ever remote from the abodes of the living.

I have in a former work* remarked that, amid the din and tumult of a populous city, the dead are sadly misplaced. I never look upon those close unhealthy corners, crowded with graves, without feeling that it is wrong to bury the dead there; that they ought to be removed from such shadowy and sunless spots to where the tall trees would make a soothing murmur above their heads, and all around them "e" gentle images of rest." Their business with this world is ended; they have finished their long day's work; the roll of carriages, the tramp of busy passengers, and living voices, clamorous for gain, ever in my ear sound harshly when they come grating and jarring amongst the resting-places of the dead. The price of corn, the state of the money-market, or the rising and falling of the funds, are matters which ought to be discussed far away from those we followed, and wept over, and consigned to their silent chambers, there to sleep till the last trumpet sounds.

In the open Cemetery, we seem to walk through a land lettered with living affections, and strewn over with tokens of existing love. Our sympathies are divided between the mourned and the mourners; our sorrow is not alone for the dead; the flowers at our feet remind us that there are those behind us somewhere who come here now and then to weep. If we picture Grief standing there with bowed head, and hair unbound, "refusing to be comforted," Pity seems to kneel before us at the same time; and, while she looks up timidly into the pale face of Grief, appears as if entreating of her to remember the mourners, who only survive to weep; while Memory, with downcast eyes and folded arms, seems musing over the flowers which Affection has planted on their graves. In a dimly-lighted, breathless City church-yard, such images are not seen: our affections are there fettered—the imagination is chained down, and endeavours in vain to soar heavenward. If we call up the dead, they seem to sit weeping with bent head and folded wings among the dark shadows of the mouldering monuments on which the sunlight seldom falls.

Against these unhealthy graveyards sentence has been pronounced; they are doomed to be closed. It is useless for selfish and mercenary men to oppose the fiat which has gone forth, for the air of this mighty city has too long been poisoned by men who live by the dead. Let us create good out of this evil, and after these unhealthy churchyards have been closed long enough to destroy the injurious exhalations which have of late numbered so many of the living with the dead, then let the grounds be planted with trees and flowers, and they will become sweet breathing-places, like our squares, and amid the brick walls call up images of the far-away country. The old monuments need not be disturbed. To see the drooping branches of a green tree falling over them, will add to their beauty and solemnity; and in the centre of our cities we can wander among groves rendered sacred by the remains of our forefathers—can in the dim twilight-shadows which the flickering leaves will ever make, hold communion with the spirit of John Bunyan, while we peruse his immortal work in the burying-ground of Bunhill-fields; for by such association would these spots become hallowed. Nor would the records of the dead, who sleep without the walls of the church, be held less sacred, if their names were engraven on marble tablets and placed within the consecrated buildings, around which their dust would repose, beneath beds of blowing flowers and close-leaved evergreens.

PICTURESQUE SKETCHES OF LONDON.—HIGHGATE CEMETERY.

* Pictures of Country Life.

The old grey weather-beaten tombs of the founders of churches would look more venerable overtopped by the tall elm, the sable yew, or the weeping willow, that seems ever to droop sadly above the dead. No busy builder should ever be permitted to rear a wall within these sacred enclosures, or disturb the robin that would pipe his sweet anthem in autumn, or drive away the belted bee, that would come over the high houses from some distant meadow, to make a plaintive murmur in the heart of this vast city as he flew in and out among the flowers that waved above these old households of the dead.

Let us not sow these places with salt, nor strew them with lime, to destroy every trace of what they really are—spots sanc ified by tears and prayers, and the bodies of our brother men ; but, if necessity demands it, remove some of their remains tenderly to other places of sepulture, and make gardens over the graves of those who are left undisturbed—spots, above which the blue sky might be seen, while the sunshine slept below ; amid which we could obtain glimpses of the face of heaven, while musing over the memory of those who h ve long since entered the gates of the "golden city." Let not these o'd burial-grounds be closed with no more reverence than if we were shutting up a common sewer ; let us not speak of them as heathenish, disgusting, and revolting, because they are made so by unfeeling, money-loving men—gnomes, who feed and fatten on the dead—who look on coffi n as they do on cabbages—digging, planting, cutting down, and re-setting the ground, and only studying how to make more money ; but let us remember that the mute and inoffensive dead contribute not unto the evils complained of until they are dislodged with brutal violence—that they cannot defend themselves, for

> They are very cold and meek ;
> Though (sextons) smite them on the cheek,
> And on the mouth—they cannot speak

The inhuman vultures who prey on t em injure the living, and only insult the dead through our sensitiveness. To the dead it matters not :

> They hear not (Smithwark guardians) rave,
> Nor moaning household shelter crave,
> (When carted from each thrice-sold grave).

When our old churches were first built, they stood in wide, open, breezy spaces, at the remote ends of parish boundaries. such was Bartholomew Church, when Smithfield was really a field, and the lofty elm-trees towered high above the ancient gallows which was erected there. We have hemmed in the spots with streets and tall warehouses which our forefathers left free and open b tween the l ving and the dead, until they have become so close and breathless, that even the sparrows forsake their "old ancestral caves," and seek for other roosting-places.

Open, cheap cemeteries, and conveyances thither, will spring up rapidly enough ; Funeral Omnibuses will be started at little more than the present fares. If nothing else will do, let us be rated for burying our dead ; we do not murmur at supporting them while living, nor should we begrudge the slight tax that would be required for interring them in Suburban Cemeteries. There are thousands of acres of land to be sold within five miles of the city of London—if we go to the distance of ten miles it will be all the better for our children's children ; but let no buildings be erected within a measured mile of these Silent Cities of the Dead, but each for ever remain a Great Garden of Graves.

Affection would often visit this Land of the Dead ; the widow would take her children by the hand, and lead them into the country, to show them the little freehold in wh ch their father slept. The poor would become more pious, and shed their troubles thank God that they had at last a tranquil haven in which they could for ever moor their storm-tossed barques : to them Suburban Cemeteries would become spots filled with solemn associations—homes to which they were fast hastening with patient resignation.

To us there is no feeling of loneliness while wandering through a beautiful Cemetery. The dead seem to belong to us ; they are of our company ; they have but taken their berths in the great ship, and are sleeping until we come to join them. We look from these trees, and gaze into the unknown sea of eternity—trusting ourselves to the care of the same Almighty Captain whose "ministering angels" fil the sails. Around the Cemetery we see the wide unwalled country, where we have so often walked and talked with those who now "sleep their long sleep ;" and, while gazing over the landscape, we remember many a scene and love to live again in our thoughts ; ur we stand, as it were, in a great picture-gallery, surrounded with portraits of the dead ; not a single object rises up to shock our feelings ; the open country beyond—the trees around—the flowers that cover the graves by which we stand—cause us to con template Death indeed, in a form far different from that which belongs to the gentle porter, who sits patiently without the gates of heaven, and welcomes all who are prepared to enter

To plant a grove with such flowers as the "poor inhabitant below" loved whilst living, is a pous pleasure ; it is a living link between us and the dead, and keeps alive our affection which belongs not to the world : though a poor thing, it is "our own," for we know that the flowers are kept alive by an invisible hand, that in the still dark night they continue to grow, while we are wrapt in as sound a slumber as that which falls upon the dead—the only difference being that we, perchance, may again awaken. There is no link between us and them in a cold, grey, hard, dead tombstone. the tears which fall upon the flowers are not lost, for we know not but that the perfume may be wafted to heaven.

We believe that the dead will again arise, that in some other state we shall again meet with them, and yet there are those who make their remains a source of profit. Perchance the Angel of Death holds his court beyond the grave, and they may be summoned before him to account for their deeds. We in our boyish days were taught to take off our hats when we entered a churchyard, and to walk amongst the dead as reverentially as we did up the aisle of the church—to look upon the grave as the gate which opened into Heaven, as the only road which leads to the realms of Eternal Happiness.

I have, in the work formerly alluded to, endeavoured to paint an ancient funeral procession, from the pages of Holy Writ, and to show how great was the respect paid to the dead in the early ages. Through what a land of poetry and peril was the dead body of Joseph brought out of Egypt! we marvel that no painter has been bold enough to grapple with so sublime a subject. Amid the plagues that struck consternation into the hearts of the old Egyptians, there stood the coffin ready to be borne away—in the deep darkness which overshadowed the land, it stood black and silent amid the deep gloom. When the Israelites departed they bore it away : the pillar of fire flashed redly upon it by night, and by day it was slowly carried behind the pillar of cloud ; through the Red Sea it was borne—below that high and terrible wall of water did the body of that dead man pass ; then the sleeping billows rolled back, and the c e the haughty Egyptians found a grave. Through storm and battle, and the perils of the wilderness, and the thunder which shook Mount Sinai, was the body of Joseph carried ; and when Moses held up his wearied arm and conquered Amalek. it was still there. On the waves of war it was at last washed to the Promised Land ; it followed the Ark of God when Jordan was divided, and was at length buried in the field of Shechem, in the ground which Jacob had long before purchased of the sons of Hamor. In the whole annals of time, there is no funeral procession that is sublime y and grandeur approach ng this, save when Christ was sold as a slave to the Egyptians. The long march through the God-dried ocean, and over the desert, led by Moses —t man who had spoken to his Maker, and who was a mourner at that solemn funeral—causes the eye to quiver beneath its gloomy and awful grandeur ; we see the dead and the living pass away amid the roar of the ocean, the thunder of the Mount, and the clashing of battle upon battle ; and while we read, we feel as if we stood trembling in the presence of God.

I wi. not break the chain of the reader's thoughts while pondering over this great and grand funeral procession, by pointing to the desecration of the dead in the present day, further than stating that the revolting and impious evil can only be remedied by Suburban Cemeteries; for around such places there reigns a silence in keeping with the solemnity of death—there no jarring sound falls upon the ear, for the fa ling murmur m ke by the leaves is in keeping with the repose of the dead. Flowers planted upon a grave seem like sacred objects ; in our minds they somehow app ar to belong to the dead, as if hallowed by the soil in which they have grown. There are numbers as passages in our old poets abounding with descriptions of flowers which were dedicated to the dead ; and we may, in some future article, return to the subject, and string together a garland of funeral emblems ; for

> Methinks the flowers
> Have spirits far more beautiful than ours — WILLIAMS

The gentle hearts of the old poets clung to the flowers with a fond affection ; in their eyes they were sweet messengers, bearing meanings ant thoughts "too deep for tears," ever hinting of love which dieth not, but liveth on for ever in another state of existence. They traced in the flowers fanciful resemblances of fond passions—likenesses of what they loved and cherished all the more since the original forms which they fancied the flowers resembled were transplanted into the gardens of heaven.

We trust that we have not taken up our pen in v.in, that what we have here written will not soon be forgotten ; and that, instead of crowded Churchyards, many a hill and valley around the metropolis will be converted into a GREAT GARDEN OF GRAVES.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

Notwithstanding the announced Austrian loan of £7,100,000, the English Market opened firmly on Monday, and has not only maintained its gradual improvement, but closes at an advance of ½ per cent. The opening price of Consols was 92½ ⅞ for Money ; on Tuesday a reaction of ¼ occurred ; 92½ ⅝ was quoted on Wednesday ; and 93 on Thursday, an improvement of ½ per cent afterwards being registered The only assignable reason for this advance is that the Market is not so well supplied with Money Stock as it was a few weeks since, which affords a favourable opportunity to the speculative for a rise. Exchequer Bills have not participated in the advance, and India Bonds and Stock have not shown any change of consequence. The Market, at the close of business, was firm, at the following quotations :—Consols, 93¼ ; Ditto, Account, 93⅛ ; Annuities, 20 years, 5 per Cents, 1860, 8 5-16 ; India Bonds, £1000, 7s. pm. ; Ditto, under £1000, 7s. pm. ; Consols for Account, 93½ ; Exchequer Bills, £1000, June, 40 pm. ; £500, June, 40 pm. ; Small, June, 40 pm.

The proposals for a new Austrian loan, alluded to above, are as follows :—The amount £7,100,000, at 4½ per cent. interest, and d in bonds from £10 to £100. The price 85, which, at the present rate of exchange on London, would be equal to 78½, yielding to the purchaser about £5 14s. 3d. per cent. Should any material amount, however, be taken here, an alteration would be caused in the quotation of exchange the price considerably less favourable. The subscription will close on the 4th of October, and the re-sult will be made known on or before the 18th of October. The instalments of ten per cent. each will extend over ten consecutive months, terminating the 18th of July, 1850. Treasury bills and other documents of public debt certificates, will be received in payment, and hence the loan may be regarded to some extent simply as a funding of existing liabilities.

The Foreign Market was heavy on Monday, Mexican stock closing at a trifling reaction ; but it recovered, and has since been firmer. Portuguese bonds, notwithstanding the news received by the committee of bondholders to the effect that the £30,376 dols. 38c. of customs duties were pending collection ; and 90,712 dols. 82c. received, had remitted 38,270 dols. 56c. of the above amount was a remittance to Messrs. Schneiders, and the remainder to the credit of the next dividend. In all the other securities the dealings have been very limited ; prices having scarcely changed. The quotations are—for Danish Bonds, 3 per Cents, Three per Cent., 77 ; Mexican, Five per Cents., 1846, ex Coupons, 27½ ; Ditto, Account, 27⅜ ; Ditto, Small, 27⅜ ; Peruvian Bonds, Four per Cent., 59½ ; Ditto, Deferred, 17½ ; Spanish, Three per Cents., 19⅜ ; Ditto, Passive, 5⅜ ; Dutch, Two-and-a-Half per Cent., 52 Guild ; 54 ; Ditto, Four per Cent., 85⅞.

The Railway Market still declines from sales, although on Wednesday a trifling reaction took place, which continued in the forenoon of Thursday, but it has since subsided, and there can be little doubt that the same security again will be had not be accepted on any terms ; we allude particularly to securities upon which the Government has a claim, and to shares of large companies, now at a heavy discount in the market. At the close of the week there was little doing, the last quotations being—For Bristol and Exeter, 49 ; Caledonian, 14½ ; Caledonian, 15⅜ ; Ditto, New £10 Pref., 10⅞ ; Chester and Holyhead Pref., 11⅛ ; Eastern Counties, 7⅛ ; Ditto, New, Qua. 6 per Cent., 1-32 ; Great North, 7⅞ ; Ditto, 5 per Cent. Pref., 5⅛ ; Great Southern and Western (Ireland), 26⅜ ; Great Western, 69⅛ ; Ditto, 5 Shares, 5⅞ ; Ditto, 2 Shares, 11⅛ ; Ditto, Fifths, 1⅛ ; Ditto, New £21, 7⅛ ; Lancashire and Yorkshire (West-Riding Union), 2⅜ ; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 71⅛ ; Ditto, New £5, Quarter Paid, 2⅜ ; London and North-Western, 103⅛ ; Ditto, New Quarters, 12⅛ ; Ditto, Fifths, 1⅛ ; Ditto, Half-Shares, No. 3, 1⅛ ; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, New £10 Preference, 10½ ; Midland, Ditto, £50 Shares, 18⅛ ; Ditto, Cons. Bristol and Birming., 6 per Cent., 126½ ; North British, 11⅛ ; Ditto, New, 3⅛ ; North Staffordshire, 10½ ; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 11⅜ ; Reading, Guildford, and Reigate, 10½ ; Scottish Central, 19½ ; Shrewsbury, Caus B., 1½ ; South Staffordshire, 4½ ; South-Eastern, 8⅜ ; Ditto, Dover, 10⅜ ; Vale of Neath, 5⅜ ; West Yorkshire, Doncaster, and Goole, 5½ ; York, Newcastle, and Berwick, 18½ ; Ditto, Newcastle Extension, 12½ ; Ditto, G.N.E. Preference, 9⅝ ; York and North Midland, 21½ ; Ditto, Preference, 8⅝ ; Northern of France, 2⅝ div. ; Tours and Nantes, 2½.

On Friday there was a decided improvement in the general features of the Consol Market. The Three per Cents. opened at 93¼ ⅜ ; India Bonds, 7os. to 76s. ; and Exchequer Bills, 37s to 40s premium. Very few transactions took place in the Foreign House Dutch Two-and-a-half per Cents, 54, Portuguese, 28 ; Danish Three per Cents, 77½ ; Spanish Five per Cents, 20 ; and Spanish Five per Cents, 17⅝. Rather more disposition was shown to invest in some of the leading lines of Railway Shares.

THE MARKETS.

FRIDAY.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday) ... the present week's arrival of English wheat constwise has been confined to coasters ... the supply of barley and malt this week have been fair moderate. To-day the stands were by no means well supplied, yet owing to the continuous importations from abroad, the demand for all kinds of wheat of home produce was in a very inactive state, and in some instances, rather less money was secured for the inferior qualities. From abroad we have received 19,750 quarters of wheat. That article commanded very slow attention, and large parcels might now be obtained at 2s per quarter decline. In oating cargoes very few sales took place. We were scantily supplied with English barley, but the supply of foreign was good. Grinding and malting samples were steady, but chilling sorts ruled dull. The show of malt was chilling. That article moved off slowly, at barely previous terms. The same account ruled moved off steadily, all other kinds barely, at late rates. Beans, peas, Indian corn, and flour were very dull.

ARRIVALS—English wheat, 2720 quarters, 660 ... malt, 3750 ; oats, 1210. Irish: Wheat, — barley, —, malt, — ; oats, 900. Foreign: Wheat, 19,750 ; barley, 6790 ; malt, — ; oa., 14,262 ... Flour, 2240 sacks. Malt — qrs.

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 40s to 48s ; ditto, white, 40s to 50s ; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 40s to 43s ; ditto, white, 42s to 48s ; rye, 28s to 30s ; grinding barley, 23s to 25s ; distilling ditto, 26s to 27s ; Scotch feeding ditto, 23s to 24s ; Norfolk and Suffolk ditto, 26s brown ditto, 20s to 24s ; Kingston and Ware, 28s to 30s ; Chevalier, 32s to 40s ; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 18s to 20s ; potato ditto, 21s to 23s ; longdru and Cork, black, 14s to 17s ; ditto, white, 16s to 18s ; tick beans, new, 28s to 32s ; ditto, old, — to —s ; grey peas, ... ditto foreign, 25s to 28s ; maple, 28s to 32s ; haricots, 38s to 40s per quarter. Town-made ... ik, 32s to 36s ; Stockton and Yorkshire, 32s to 34s per sack.

Foreign.—Wheat, Dantzic and Pomeranian, red, — to —s ; white, — to —s ; Rostock, — to —s ; beans, — to —s ; peas, — to —s per quarter. Flour, American, 4s to 24s per barrel ; Baltimore, ... per barrel ; Spanish, ... per sack.

... ...

ADVERTISEMENTS.

WILL SHORTLY CLOSE
THE MISSISSIPPI AND MISSOURI
RIVERS exhibited, by command, to her Majesty the Queen, H.R.H. Prince Albert and Royal Family at Windsor Castle. Never-before show of the Western Backs of the Mississippi River, Fawns, Villages, &c., to New Orleans, being the largest picture ever executed by artist—Also Panorama of the Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, every morning at 11 o'clock, evening at half-past seven.—Admission, lower seats, 2s.; gallery, 1s.

THE ROYAL CHINESE JUNK IS NOW OPEN in the GREAT INDIA DOCKS, next to the Steam Boat Pier, Fenchurch-street, Blackwall.
The Junk is the identical Vessel which Captain Anson, Admiral, in the Centurion, captured from the Chinese, and is now fitted up in the most splendid manner, and is an interesting and novel exhibition of one of the most famous Vessels ever built by the Chinese. Open from 11 o'clock in the morning till 10 at night. Admission, first-class Steward or Cabin, 1s.; second-class Cook or Quarter-Deck Seaman, 6d.; Children under 10 years of age, 3d. The Junk is constantly lighted with Gas, and is open on Sundays, and may be visited by Parties from the Country at any hour by Railway, Omnibus, or Steam-boat. Admission, 1s.—Catalogues to be had only on board, price 6d.

OPEN DAILY for SALOONS, Regent-street.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—Sunrise Views of the Mississippi Machine, Lectures on Chemistry, Exhibition of Electrical Machines, Silver and Galvanic Deposit, The Diving-Bell, Ventriloquism, Representation of Models and Machinery.—Admission, 1s.; Schools, Half-price.

BEARD'S PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS, by the NEW PROCESS, are taken at
No. KING WILLIAM-STREET, CITY,
And 85, PARLIAMENT-STREET, and the ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION, REGENT-STREET.
"The portraits exhibit a marked improvement."—Athenæum, June 23.

DANCING TAUGHT in the most fashionable style by MR. and MRS. GEORGE BARNETT, at No. 11, LISLE-STREET, LEICESTER-SQUARE. Private Lessons at any hour to suit Families and Schools. Assembly Rooms for Dancing, &c. The Rooms having been redecorated, are to be LET for Balls, &c.

LAW.—A Solicitor in old-established practice in the City of London has a vacancy in his office for an ARTICLED CLERK, and wishes to treat with a family of respectability to take under his charge a young Gentleman who may, if required, reside with the principal. The most respectable references given and required. For terms, apply to Messrs. ADAMS, SHARMAN, and FOLKARD, Solicitors, Aldermanbury, London.

COUNTY FIRE OFFICE,
[illegible] Director.

IMPORTANT CAUTION TO FAMILIES and INVALIDS.—Messrs. DU CROS and CO. direct attention to the fact that there is not the slightest truth in a statement published in a cheap Monthly Publication, but that it is an absurd and dangerous trick, to create a temporary circulation, by imposing upon the public.

MR. J. S. LUCET, PROFESSEUR de la LANGUE FRANÇAISE, de BELLE-LETTRES, de DECLAMATION, &c., &c., &c., continue ses leçons de grammaire et de conversation en général, que le Premier Semestre de son COURS DE LITTERATURE FRANÇAISE et DECLAMATION, sur un plan tout-à-fait nouveau, et vraiment intéressant pour tous ceux qui désirent connaître une science aussi belle que leur sera parfaitement agréable, commencera le Jeudi, 1er Octobre, et sera le 20 WALM-LUTHER-PLATZ, 20 (WALM-PLATZ, ou MAUER-STRASSE 20), et aura lieu tous les Mardis et Jeudis à 2 heures. Les Dames se chargeront aussi de l'enseignement à Leurs Elèves. Les conditions de M. LUCET sont très-modérées. Les Dames trouveront chez lui un salon de lecture pour y passer leurs heures de récréation.
N.B. Personnes ne peut être admis à ce cours, [illegible]
Pour de plus amples renseignements, et pour [illegible] qui se rend aussi dans les [illegible]
Le même cours de langue anglaise [illegible]

THE GROS CAILLOU MAISON DE SANTE,
No. 222, Rue St. Dominique, Faubourg St. Germain, Paris.
MAD. THE PEMPTIER, OF NEWYORK AND MR. VALLAS AFFECTIONATELY [illegible]
[illegible] Physician at the Hospital St. Marguerite (formerly Hospital Pasteur), [illegible] Consultations for the establishment, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, from four to six o'clock.
[illegible] Vallas attends at the Establishment on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, during the months of [illegible] special with the treatment of [illegible]
During [illegible] the Physicians and managers of the Establishment, resident in the provinces, and is to be seen, more especially from two to six o'clock daily.

PAPER-HANGINGS and PANELLED DECORATIONS.—By Royal Letters-Patent.—E. T. ARCHER & Co., Cabinet-makers, Inventors, and Manufacturers of Patented Show-Rooms, the walls of which are fitted up with Ornamental Panels adapted for the Drawing-room, Dining-room, Bed-room, Library, &c., and may be marked in pencil [illegible] Patent Embossed Ornamental Compositions by Bell & Co.'s Patent Machines, for the hangings of every class and for every purpose. [illegible] Hand velvet Machine Flocks [illegible]

THE STAUNTON CHESS-MEN.
Registered No. 18, of 5th and 6th of Victoria, cap. 100
We shall be greatly mistaken if, in a short time, these beautiful pieces do not entirely supersede the unsightly, inexpressive ones we have been [illegible] with."—Illustrated London News, Sept. 8, 1849.
The Public are therefore respectfully informed that these new and celebrated Chess Men are the exclusive manufacture of W. LEUCHARS, 39, PICCADILLY, at the full retail prices, as [illegible]
For the Finest African Ivory, with a richly ornamented box [illegible]
Ditto, with a New Avenue on the Game, to [illegible]
Ditto, Ebonized and Gilt [illegible]
Ditto, Large size for Clubs, with a Solid Mahogany [illegible]
Ditto, Very Treble [illegible]
In Wedgewood's Jasper, with the Carton Pierre Box and [illegible]
The New [illegible]
In Box and Boxsy, Ordinary Size, with the Carton Pierre [illegible]
Box and the New Profile [illegible]
N.B. To secure the Public against Fraudulent Imitations, each Set has a Label attached with the Autograph of the Designs and [illegible] for whom the Pieces are named.

NOVELTY for the approaching Season is [illegible]
[illegible] but which, by Inventor's, Messrs NICOLL, are recommended as one of the most useful, warm, comfortable, and genteel [illegible]
[illegible] in good street, and 22, Cornhill, as also the FREBLE [illegible] OF PALETOT, called THE NICOLL, whose names as [illegible] of the famed Paletot (registered 5 and 6 Vict., cap. [illegible] and has the additional advantages of [illegible]
[illegible] as the mild or cold nature of the weather may [illegible] which can be kept and worn for years, and [illegible] perhaps, the best preservative of health in [illegible] has yet been [illegible] by [illegible]
[illegible] LAND and [illegible]

EMIL NICOLL PALETOT (Registered 6 and 7 Victoria, c. 65) WAREHOUSES 114, 116, 120, REGENT-STREET, and 22, CORNHILL, (corner of Sherwin's Morning Coat, which is not [illegible] registered, for the Country, Riding or Walking [illegible] Coats, adapted for the season. Many have seen the world PALETOT, but Messrs NICOLL are the [illegible]

EMIL NICOLL'S Wholesale and Country [illegible] for the London Breadths for [illegible] Yards in CHANGE-ALLEY, CORNHILL, and [illegible]

INDIA, AUSTRALIA, CAPE of GOOD HOPE, and OUTFITTING BRANCH [illegible] at 65 and 66, Cornhill, as heretofore [illegible] Canada, Cornhill, and Outfitting Passengers [illegible] at the lowest shipping rates. Silver and Copper [illegible] or obtain Colonial information," are to the [illegible] arrival of ships: they form [illegible] of charge.
[illegible] at any time within eight miles of Hyde Park or [illegible] Square or Brook Green, Hammersmith, at 1½d for every [illegible] package not exceeding 56lbs. and for [illegible] centage which is not commonly [illegible] as parties [illegible] Messrs. Pickford's Vans and Co.'s [illegible] by the [illegible] Parcels Delivery Company, so that parties [illegible] are [illegible] Cornhill, and Regent-street, [illegible] Branches of each of the above at St. George's-crescent, Liverpool.

NEW BOOKS, &c.

NEW WORK BY THE AUTHOR OF "JANE EYRE."
Nearly ready, in 3 vols., post 8vo,
SHIRLEY; a Tale. By CURRER BELL, Author of "Jane Eyre."
SMITH, ELDER, and Co., Cornhill.

MRS. S. C. HALL'S WEEK at KILLARNEY. Containing the Utility of a Guide-book with the Interest of a Tale; and well-performed Travelling Companion; and enriched with upwards of 20 beautifully-executed Engravings on wood and steel, illustrative of all that is remarkable in that romantic district, and grouping in the tale is of every visitor a permanent record of what he has seen and admired.
London: S. HALL, VIRTUE, and Co., 25, Paternoster-row.

Just published, price 6d.
THE WESLEYAN CONFERENCE, its [illegible] and [illegible] with a View [illegible]
By THOMAS JACKSON, Pr[illegible]
Published by JOHN MASON, 14, City road. Sold, [illegible]

THE CHRISTIAN SCHOLAR.—Thoughts [illegible] the study of the Classics, in Prose and Verse. By the Author of "Thoughts Devotional." Foolscap 8vo, cloth, 5s. 6d.; morocco, or bound by Hayday 10s.
THE BAPTISTERY; or, the Way of Eternal Life. Illustrated in a Series of "The Tabernacle." Third Edition, 8vo, [illegible] Also, 32mo, with 3s. 6d. morocco, 2s.; or [illegible] [illegible] 77, Strand, London.

THE CHRISTIAN TIMES of FRIDAY. SEPT. 28th, contains the Archbishop of [illegible] Dr. Hook" and the Cross Roads.—Westward Movement.—Romanism in the Baltic Provinces.—Nonconformity of Evangelical Alliance.—Episcopal Congress at Wittenberg.—Bible, &c. Gough-square, Fleet-st[illegible]

SEA WEEDS.—Instructions to Find, Preserve, and Classify them, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 2d, monthly.
London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN, 65, Paternoster-row.

WAXEN FLOWERS.—Instructions how to Model them, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 2d, monthly.

REVALENTA, or ERVALENTA, the [illegible] REMEDY for CONSTIPATION Flatulency, Bile, Diarrhœa, Nervousness, Cramps, Spasms, Sickness, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, Rheumatism, Cutaneous Eruptions, Impurities of the Blood, Fevers, Debility, Consumption, Asthma, Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Inflammation of the Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, and Bladder, Nervousness, Hysterics, Dropsy, Sleeplessness, Spasmodic Affections, Hypochondriasis, Low Spirits, Loss of Memory, Blindness, Paralysis, Epilepsy, Tic, Nervous Irritability, Dizziness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Piles, Fistula, Worms, Spleen, Sour Eructations, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Liver, Back, Loins, and Kidneys, Female Complaints, Decline of Life, Infancy, Childhood, Youth, Manhood, Old Age, Sea Sickness, Intoxication, Nervous Irritability, Fever, Gout, Rheumatism, Cramp, Spasms

THE WEST SURREY ELECTION.—HIGH-STREET, GUILDFORD.—(SEE PAGE 222.)

THE "TERRIBLE" WAR-STEAMER.

THIS noble steam-frigate, the largest and most satisfactory paddle-wheel ship in the service, returned to Woolwich on Thursday afternoon, the 20th instant, from her first cruise. A view of her in an unfinished state appeared in our Journal soon after the launch of the vessel. The present Illustration is from a sketch taken soon after she reached Woolwich.

No paddle-wheel steamer that has yet been built has proved herself equal to the Terrible, whether in speed or armament, and, it must be remembered, she was the first steamer built that could take the main-deck armament. During her cruise she has proved herself so much superior to all the man-of-war steamers built before her and contemporary with her, that there are none to compare with her in speed, power, strength, and utility; and with reference to those vessels built subsequently to her date of launching, she can show many superior points.

Whenever the Terrible has shown herself in an English port she has been praised and admired, and among foreigners she has been an object of wonder, respect, and fear. After nearly four years' service, she has returned to be paid off. We doubt not, when she is recommissioned, she will be so much improved that even those who have not been blind or kind to her imperfections, will see reason to be as proud of the ship as of the pendant which she will bear.

On Friday, the 21st instant, the Lords of the Admiralty visited this fine steamer. In the morning, the Right Honourable Sir Francis Baring, Bart., M.P.; Rear-Admiral Deans Dundas, C.B., M.P.; the Honourable Captain Berkeley, C.B., M.P.; Captain Milne; Captain W. A. B. Hamilton, the Second Secretary; Captain Sir Baldwin Walker, K.C.B., the Surveyor of the Navy; and Mr. Watts, his assistant, proceeded from the Admiralty to Woolwich; and, accompanied by Commodore-Superintendent Eden and Mr. Lang (the builder of the Terrible, and master shipwright), Captain Munday, Captain Sir F. Nicolson, Bart., Colonel Colquhoun, &c., embarked in the Monkey, steam tender, and started for Purfleet, where the Terrible, 21, steam frigate, Captain W. Ramsay, brought up on Thursday afternoon to take out her powder, &c. On arriving on board, their Lordships were received with the usual honours, and soon after the Terrible got under weigh, and came up to Woolwich. Their Lordships inspected every portion of the ship, and minutely inquired into her character; and from the evidence adduced there can be very little doubt that the impression on their Lordship's minds was confirmed—that neither the British navy, nor any other naval power in the world, can produce so noble and powerful a paddle-wheel steam man-of-war. In the course of the day the men were exercised at small-arms and great guns, and acquitted themselves to the entire satisfaction of their Lordships.

The immense machinery, of 800-horse power, although in constant work for the last four years, is in excellent order, and, with new tubes to the boilers, would be efficient for at least two years' further sea service.

In coming up the river, the Terrible was as much under command as a yacht and steady and stiff, although it was blowing a gale of wind. We trust that, before she is stripped, opportunity will be afforded to thousands for visiting at least one real British man-of-war steam-frigate.

HER MAJESTY'S WAR-STEAMER "TERRIBLE," SKETCHED FROM WOOLWICH DOCKYARD.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1849.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 393.—VOL. XV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1849. [SIXPENCE.

RUSSIA AND THE PORTE.

A WEEK ago the praises of the moderation displayed by the Emperor of Russia resounded on every hand. He had quelled the Hungarian insurrection; restored peace to Austria; and, as if to give the world a guarantee that he was not the ambitious, dangerous, and aggressive Monarch that he was considered in the west, he had withdrawn his troops immediately after victory, and retired within the limits of his own dominions. He was looked upon as the friend of order, the saviour of a venerable and illustrious Empire, whose existence was essential to the best interests of all Europe, and as a Monarch whose whole desires were conservative of his own rights and those of his neighbours. He held, in consequence, so high and honourable a position, and acquired so much additional weight in the councils of the world, that his greediest ambition might well have been satisfied with his achievements. If this were a mask, he has suddenly cast it off. He now appears in another character. The traditional policy of his Empire aims at the humiliation and ultimate conquest of Turkey. He has taken an opportunity to inflict the first, which has excited the indignation of Europe. It remains to be seen whether he is unscrupulous enough to attempt the second; and whether the nations of western Europe, more especially Great Britain and France, to whom Turkey looks for protection in the hour of need, will or can suffer that harmless Empire to fall a prey to her antagonist.

The pretence chosen by the Emperor of Russia for insulting Turkey is paralleled only in Æsop's well-known fable of the Wolf and the Lamb. Kossuth Bem, Dembinski, and other chiefs of the Hungarian insurrection have taken refuge in Turkey—relying no less upon the hospitality of a nation amongst whom hospitality is a religious duty, than upon the well-known law and custom of all Europe with regard to political refugees. The Emperor of Russia, in his own name and in that of his ally, the Emperor of Austria, demanded from Turkey, in terms from which ordinary courtesy was scrupulously excluded, the immediate surrender of these refugees—the Poles to Russia, and the Hungarians to Austria; declaring that the refusal of the Porte would be construed into a casus belli. The Emperor of Austria was less imperative, and merely declared that the refusal would lead to the discontinuance of diplomatic relations between the two countries. The pretext for this demand on the part of Russia was, that the Polish Generals, and others implicated in the Hungarian war, are Russian subjects; and that, by the treaty of peace between Russia and the Porte, signed at Kutshuk-Kaimarji on the 21st of July, 1774, and by the later treaty of Passarovitch, the mutual expulsion of persons guilty of treason seeking refuge in either country was solemnly stipulated.

The unoffending Porte, which has had so many occasions of knowing that possession of Constantinople is the prize to which the Northern Autocrats have never ceased to aspire since Russia assumed a place in the first rank of the European Commonwealth, and fully aware of the danger of offending such a neighbour, deliberated long and earnestly on the demand. Before giving in its final decision, it took the opinion and counsel of the British and French Ambassadors at Constantinople, upon the following six points:—

"First.—Do the treaties of Kutshuk-Kaimarji and of Passarovitch give the two Powers, Russia and Austria, the right to demand the extradition of the Hungarian refugees?

"Second.—Would the refusal of the Sultan to deliver them up be considered an infraction of those treaties?

"Third.—Could the two Powers in consequence of such refusal declare war against the Porte?

"Fourth.—In the event of the two Powers declaring war, would England and France support Turkey with an armed force?

"Fifth.—Are the refugees claimed by Russia the subjects of that Power?

"Sixth.—In case the refusal of the Porte should only cause a rupture of relations between the Divan and the Ministers of the two demanding Powers, and a state of coolness more or less prolonged of those two Powers towards Turkey, would France and England interfere to re-establish the relations on their former footing?"

The note containing these queries was delivered to the two Ambassadors, Sir Stratford Canning and General Aupick, on the morning of the 16th of September. On the evening of the same day, their collective reply was delivered to the Turkish Minister for Foreign Affairs in the following terms:—

"On the first question—No; the treaties alluded to do not confer the right on Austria and Russia. On the second question—No; the refusal of the Porte would not be any infraction of the treaties. On the third question—It cannot be admitted that such a refusa could be followed by a declaration of war; and such a declaration, if it took place, would be unjustifiable. On the fourth ques tion—The two Ambassadors cannot guarantee the co-operation of the armed forces of England and France, without receiving special instructions. On the fifth question—It is possible that some of the troops destined by Russia may be still subjects of that Power, but, from the neutrality of them, it is incontestable that the refugees whose extradition is demanded are not Russian subjects. On the sixth question.—Yes; France and England will actively interfere with Russia and Austria to re-establish good relations between these two Powers and the Porte."

SCENE IN ROME, FROM A RECENT SKETCH.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

The Porte immediately rendered its reply to the ultimatum of the Russian Envoy, declaring calmly, but emphatically, that it refused to deliver up the refugees. The Russian and Austrian Ambassadors forthwith removed their flags from the doors of their hotels, and diplomatic relations ceased between those two Powers and the Ottoman Porte.

The gravity of the position is apparent. A Cabinet Council was summoned by Lord Palmerston on Tuesday, and sat for three hours, when we may suppose that this important question was anxiously debated. The duty and true interest of Great Britain and France are to throw the whole weight of their joint influence in favour of the Porte. To forsake that power in an emergency like this, would be suicidal policy for each of them. They would fall at once into the rank of second-rate powers, and leave Russia the virtual mistress of the destinies of Europe. It will depend upon the attitude they assume whether Russia will attempt to parallel the audacity of language by the audacity of her deeds, and involve Europe in a war for the possession of Constantinople.

A war made by Russia on such a pretext would be so wholly without justification, so utterly destitute of that moral force which neither great nations nor small individuals can safely despise, that, however much Russia may covet the possession of Turkey, or any part of it, we cannot believe that she will run the risk of a general war, especially at such a period as the present. To the Government of France, such a war would be a godsend in opportunity; and to the people of France, it would be the most popular war upon record. Even in England—overburdened as we are with debt, and indisposed for war as all our great trading and commercial interests must be considered—an armed intervention with France in favour of the Porte would enlist the sympathy and good wishes of most classes of politicians. If we are to retain India—to say nothing of our influence in Egypt and the Mediterranean—Russia cannot be allowed to conquer Turkey. We cannot afford it. The question is, in point of fact, as vital to us as to Turkey; and France on this occasion has interests, if not identical with most certainly as strong as our own. In addition to this fact, which must be well known to so astute a man as the Emperor Nicholas, he will probably consider the effect which an attack upon Turkey would have upon Germany, upon Italy, upon Poland, and upon Hungary. The revolutionary spirit is not so thoroughly laid in any part of Germany as to give no earnest of disquietude for the future. Italy—whether in the Roman States or in Lombardy—is not so quiescent and contented with things as they are, as not to take the first opportunity of changing them. Poland is not yet reconciled to annihilation, and not so utterly devoid of hope and courage as to be unable to lift a hand for freedom when opportunity shall serve; and, lastly, Hungary is not so effectually crippled and beaten as to be unable to rise again and menace with destruction that Empire of Austria which was only saved this time because Russia was not engaged in other wars when her aid was implored. Such a war, though commenced as a war of conquest, would immediately resolve itself into a war of principles, in which all Europe would be forced to take part, and in which Russia would ultimately have to fight single-handed. For these and various other reasons we are inclined to believe that Russia will not carry her first threat into execution; but will content herself, after a little bluster, with the recal of her Ambassador, and the cessation of diplomatic relations with the Porte. Ambassadors are luxuries with which nations may sometimes dispense without any very alarming or even inconvenient consequences, as we have proved to the world in the case of Spain; and Turkey would be none the worse for the absence, for a short time, or for ever, of the usual representative of the Court of St. Petersburg at the Divan of Constantinople. But, while Turkey would be uninjured, the dignity of Russia would be appeased by such a consummation, and the Emperor would extricate himself from a false and perilous position with the least possible amount of damage to his character and his interests.

For the sake of humanity, we trust to see a strict alliance between Great Britain and France upon this subject. The peace of the world may be said to be in their hands. If they will use their friendly offices to prevent further ill-will, and display a firm determination, let the matter take what turn it may, not to suffer any armed attack upon the integrity and independence of their mutual ally, this storm may blow over. Should, however, the Emperor Nicholas, strong in the faith of his invincibility, flushed with conquest, and covetous of the prize which his race regard as their destined seat of empire, scorn the promptings of prudence, and involve Europe in war, the whole force of European justice and morality will be arrayed against him, as well as the armies of all the states of the west. In such a war not even his 700,000 men, and his immense resources, would save him from defeat. Let us hope, however, that his councils are swayed by more wisdom, and that, having made a false step, he will retrace it with as little sacrifice to his own dignity as he can, but with as much haste as is consistent with justice.

A SCENE IN ROME.

(See the Illustration.)

THE position of the French in Rome is, at present, of a very anomalous character.

"It is certain," says the correspondent of the Daily News, "that the conduct of the French in the exercise of the bayonet, which is constantly practised by the light infantry on the Piazzas of the city, must be rather a painful remembrance to those who have lost husbands, brothers, or sons, by French weapons whilst defending their native walls against foreign attack.

"It will, perhaps, be hardly credited that a French General, at the head of between forty and fifty thousand men, should find difficulty in carrying any measure whatsoever, or that he should hesitate in putting into execution, at any rate, the direct and explicit orders which he receives from his own Government. And yet such is the case unmistakably. I can assure you, a week has elapsed since the Rostolan received positive instructions from the President of the French Republic, to publish his letter to Colonel Ney on the affairs of Rome, in the Roman papers. Up to the present moment no such publication has taken place. Such a disobedience to or neglect of orders could arise from two sources—Intimidation or corruption—the fear of offending the combined agents of Austrian, Russian, and Papal diplomacy, or a secret devotion to that party whose weapons are bribery, perjury, and deceit.

"The punishment awarded by the French authorities to those individuals convicted of having prohibited weapons in their possession is by no means severe, and contrasts very favourably with the atrocious sentences pronounced by the Austrians and Spaniards. A small fine and a month or two's imprisonment are usually considered to be a sufficient chastisement; but the restitution of owning pieces, which had begun, has been put a stop to, and sporting, of which the Romans are very fond, is virtually prohibited."

Our Artist at Rome has sketched an extraordinary scene which he recently witnessed in the streets of the Eternal City. A quarrel sprung up between some transteverin, and some French soldiers, in which one of the latter was severely, if not mortally, wounded; though not before he had killed two of the Italians upon the spot with his sabre. The terrible incident, the scene of which was the Piazza Della Verita, may afford some idea of the relative position of the French and Italians at Rome, and of the fierce and revengeful spirit which is continually disturbing the peace of it.

THE SISTERS OF MERCY.—The establishment of the "Sisterhood" has been removed from the parish of Stoke Damerel, to that of St. Andrew's, Plymouth. The two houses at the north west corner of Wyndham-square are occupied temporarily, as it is said the Sisters have purchased or are in treaty for a piece of ground in one of the Devonshire squares, for the erection of a new mansion. The unsuccessful, a capital stock exceeding £14,000 having been laid

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The re-assemblage of the Legislative Assembly this week has restored Paris to somewhat of its wonted political vivacity. The first sitting after the vacation took place on Monday, unaccompanied either within doors or without by any of that feverish excitement which has hitherto characterised all the occasions of meeting of the Chambers since the Revolution of February. Everything passed off as quietly and as business-like as if it were the opening of the Parliament in London.

From the day's proceedings, short as they were, however, we are furnished with a glimpse into the possible cost of the intervention at Rome. Government bills, accompanied by a flood of short explanations from Ministers, were laid on the table to authorize a credit to meet the expenses of the expedition to Rome. The aggregate amounted to 8,703,120f. Of this sum, the Minister of Foreign Affairs demanded 140,000f. for the expenses of extraordinary missions. The Minister of War demanded 6,617,930f., and the Minister of the Marine 1,945,000f., for expenses incurred in their several departments. Besides these measures, the Minister of the Finances presented a bill with respect to patents and the stamps on commercial bills; and also a bill for the payment of the Duchess of Orleans' annuity, as fixed by the law of 1832.

A bill was also laid on the table by Napoleon Bonaparte, which has given rise to a great deal of discussion in the Paris journals. It is as follows:

"Considering that generosity, grandeur, and justice are the best auxiliaries to found and fortify the Republic; considering that reasons of state can no longer be interposed; considering that governments have never been saved by laws of proscription and violence; the undersigned proposes the following decree:—1st. The laws of the 10th of April, 1832, and of the 26th of May, 1848, which exile the family of the Bourbons, are abrogated. 2. The decree of the Constituent Assembly of the 27 h of June, 1849, is revoked. The insurgents of June, transported without trial, shall be set at liberty."

M. Bonaparte, who limited himself with the ultra-Republicans, is said to be actuated, in proposing this extraordinary measure, by a spirit of hostility and resentment towards his cousin, the President, and it is added that he is only the tool of the ex-Royal family. M. Girardin, on the matter. It has acted to enlist the favour of the Legitimists, who count the idea of Henri d'Bourbon being restored to France by an amnesty; to which they say he should only return as King.

The budget for 1850 has been printed. The expenses of the year, those of the sinking fund being maintained, will amount to 1,891,329,077 francs. The receipts are only estimated at 1,270,953,849 francs, being a deficit of about 620 millions.

On Tuesday the National Assembly elected its President, four Vice-Presidents, and six Secretaries. M. Dupin, having obtained 338 votes out of 479 votes, was proclaimed President of the Assembly until the 1st of January, 1850. M. Michel de Bourges, his competitor, obtained 107 votes. The four Vice-Presidents elected were Messrs. Baroche, by 320 votes, Daru by 338, Benoît d'Ary by 312, and Benoan by 271. The six Secretaries elected were Messrs. Armand de Melun, Laboye, Dupin, Heckeren, Berard, and Chapot.

M. Dufaure, Minister of the Interior, demanded on the table a bill relative to the transportation to Algeria of the insurgents of June, sentenced to that penalty by the decree of the 27th of June, 1848, and now confined at Belle Isle. They are there to form special agricultural establishments, separated from the agricultural colonies founded in virtue of the decree of the 19th of September, 1848, and other similar establishments. The transported are to be subjected to the military laws, compelled to work on the establishment, and deprived of their political rights. Ten years after the promulgation of the present law the effects of the transportation are to cease. Three years after landing in Algeria, the individuals who should recommend themselves by their good conduct may obtain the temporary concession of a house and a lot of land; and, after another period of three years, that concession may become definitive. The wives and children of the transported desirous to join them are to be conveyed to Algeria at the public expense. A credit of 3,000,000 of francs is to be opened in the war department for the execution of the present law.

A Council of Ministers was held on Monday at the Elysée. The difference between Turkey and Russia and Austria is stated to have been the chief subject of discussion.

A grand dinner was given on Monday by the President of the Republic to the Ministers, the President of the Assembly, and the members of the Commission de Permanence, on the occasion of the opening of the new session. It was remarked that after dinner M. Molé remained for a long time in conversation with M. Odilon Barrot, and the rumour consequently arose that the two great men are about perfectly to agree for the future. The rumour is that Prussia is what the Parisians facetiously call a canard.

M. Guizot and M. Duchatel are expected in Paris about the end of November; and it is said that the Orleanist aristocracy are capable of being able to form a powerful monarchical party in the Assembly, although they themselves are not members.

M. Pierre Bonaparte has been sent on a temporary mission to Algeria.

On Sunday and Monday night a dramatic piece, entitled "Rome," was produced at the Theatre of the Porte St. Martin. It represented the events which have taken place in Rome since the assassination of Rossi, the flight of the short-lived Republic, and the assassination of M. Rossi formed a leading incident of the piot. The mischief-makers of that tumultuous quarter of Paris projected by the piece to give expression to their revolutionary tendencies; and the feeling was carried to such a point, that, whenever the assassin of the unfortunate minister of Pope Pius IX. made his appearance, he was received with ignominious cries, and even with the hoots which crowned the galleries. Pius IX, whenever brought upon the stage, was received with hisses and hooting; while Garibaldi was enthusiastically applauded. The uproar and excitement which the piece caused led the Government to suppress it, lest any disturbance might arise out of it.

The court-martial at Lyons has pronounced its sentence on the individuals implicated in the Vienne riots. Of the sixteen prisoners, five have been acquitted, and the remainder condemned to imprisonment for two years, one for three, and eighteen months. Four have been sentenced by default, one to ten years', and three to twenty years' imprisonment.

ITALIAN STATES.

PIEDMONT.—The Chamber of Deputies at Turin has passed a bill for raising a loan of 75,000,000 lires, to pay the war contribution to Austria.

Accounts from Genoa to the 27th ult. state that Garibaldi, not having been allowed to land at Tunis, whither he had been sent off by the Piedmontese Government, had been transferred to the Sardinian island of Maddelene, where he was treated with the greatest consideration.

ROME. The irritation caused by the meagerness of the political concessions and amnesty made by the Pope in his recent manifesto, continued unabated at the latest dates from Rome.

The Pope is said to say that are at liberty to speak out, declare that if the manifesto is to be considered at present as the definitive settlement of the Roman question, that question, like all other European ones, will be but adjourned. The French army authority merely sends orders from Naples, while disapproving de facto the measures ordered by the Papal Government.

The persons excluded from the Papal amnesty are as follows:—Members of the Provisional Government, 5; members of the Constituent Assembly, 400; triumvirs and ministers (Mazzini excepted, who is not a human), 12; commanders of different corps, 14; persons amnestied in 1845, and especially excluded by the present amnesty, 6,000; officers under prosecution, 4000; the corps of gendarmes now dissolved, 3000: total, 13,325.

Count Wimpffen, the Civil and Military Governor of all the provinces of the Pontifical states occupied by the Austrian troops, has arrived at Bologna. The Marshal had remained for some time at Pisa for the recovery of his health.

AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY.

There is little or no news from Vienna this week, except that of the surrender of the fortress of Comorn. The negotiations, which had been again renewed, were broken off on 26th ult., when Klapka held an interview with General Nugent, and proposed to surrender on condition of a general amnesty to all parties, civil and military, the recognition of Kossuth's notes, and the reinstatement of the rebel officers in the imperial army with their old ranks. It was declared that unless these terms were granted the garrison would hold out to the last, when, if necessary, blow up the fortress. These terms were refused, and preparations were made for the attack, which, however, would be a final affair. The last intelligence we have is the surrender of the fortress; but no details are given. The announcement was made by telegraph, at Vienna, on the 28th ult.

TURKEY.

Matters look threatening in the East. The latest intelligence from Constantinople is to the 19th ult., and it states that the Ambassadors of Russia and Austria at that capital (M. de Titoff and Count de Starmer) had broken off all diplomatic relations with the Porte on account of the refusal of the Sultan's Government to deliver up Kossuth, Dembinski, and the other Hungarian and Polish refugees in Turkey, to the vengeance of the Czar and the Emperor. Prince Radzivil, the special envoy sent from the Czar for the purpose, had threatened war if the refusal were persisted in; but the Sultan and his Cabinet remained firm. The Prince had, at the same time, the indecency to declare that it was the intention of the Czar to have every one of the Polish and Hungarian fugitives now in Turkey hanged the instant they fall into his hands.

In the council held on the subject, the Sheik-ul-Islaem, or Chief of Religion, declared that to give up these political refugees would be a violation of one of the first principles of the Mussulman religion, which declares that the Governors of Mahomet shall give hospitality and protection to all who are in misfortune, without distinction of creed or country. In the interview which Prince Radzivil had with the Sultan, his Majesty did not sign the ultimatum before the demand of the Czar, and at the overbearing tone in which it was made.

The English and French Ambassadors, Sir Stratford Canning and General Aupick, strongly backed Mr. Downe in the decided line he took upon the subject, while Kossuth, Dembinski, Messieres, Bem, Guyon, Percsel, and some 200 of the principal officers of the Hungarian army, are said to be on their way to Constantinople, from Widdin, with English passports, for the purpose of being sent on to London.

The Sultan had dispatched a messenger to Bucharest with an autograph letter, in answer to that of the Czar, with certain instructions to Fuad Effendi, who was commanded to set off immediate y for St. Petersburgh, and to seek a personal interview with the Emperor. The reply of the Emperor of Russia and Austria may be expected in four or four weeks. Meanwhile, the Turkish Government is preparing for the worst by placing the army at the navy in the most effective condition, so as to be ready for active service at a few hours' notice.

UNITED STATES

Accounts from New York to 1st ult. have arrived this week by the Royal mail steam-ship Niagara. The prominent feature in the intelligence this brought is the unexpected announcement, that, in consequence of an impertinent letter received by the Government at Washington from the French Minister there, M. Poussy, relative to compensation for losses in the Mexican war, estimated at one or two million dollars, and which letter has been approved of by the authorities in Paris, the French Minister at Washington had received his passports from the American Government. Such a fact had created no alarm or sensation amongst the politics and commercial classes.

The prospects for the Cabinet in the next session are by no means brilliant. The conduct of the President in the Cuba expedition had not gained a great many friends to his view. The President's determination with regard to the tariff, expressed to the Pittsburgh manufacturers on his recent visit, had given much satisfaction generally to the mercantile portion of the citizens. He expressed his belief, on that occasion, that "the time was come when articles which already required protection, and that protection such as would ensure permanency: the system."

It was stated that, in the next session of Congress, a new tariff would be introduced, in accordance with the President's views.

The European political news brought out by the Europa had caused much dejection; the hopes entertained of Kossuth, Bem, and Dembinski holding out against Russia and Austria having proved fallacious, and the fall of Venice the last stronghold of revolution—having taken place. A great nation of Union, embraced all the elements of stability, and ready to resist in America the germ of a future European revolution, is amongst the late propositions of the New York press.

The time for receiving proposals for constructing the Panama Railroad, which had been extended, expired on the 25th September. The company and the several tenders are under consideration.

A great deal of interest was attached to the people of South Carolina to a proposal made by a wealthy company in Liverpool for the establishment of a line of steam-ships between that port and Charleston. The project met with much encouragement, particularly from that portion of the community interested in the cotton trade.

The state of the railroad interest throughout the States was beginning to create much alarm and heart-burnings amongst the shareholders. It has revealations stated to have been made with regard to the affairs of those lines, and which, if true, placed the affairs in a worse plight than English shareholders. It seems that, in some instances, 15 and 20 per cent. have been paid for money borrowed to enable directors to divide 6 per cent. amongst the stockholders.

On many lines, however, the profits are so good as to enable the directors to announce a reduced rate of fares, to commence the 15th October.

The Mormon emigration in the direction of the Great Salt Lake was said to be larger than ever. Several hundred waggons passed Council Bluff, by the latest accounts, on their way across the plains. The Mormon votes are now looked upon as of considerable influence. In the Nauvoo district, the Mormons voted for the Locofoco candidates. In Monroe district, in Iowa, they voted to a man for the Whigs. The cholera was almost extinct.

CENTRAL AMERICA.

Accounts to the 20th of August state that great excitement prevailed at Grey Town, in consequence of a treaty, said to have been made by General Mallon, for the purpose of rebuilding the Nicaragua flag. Intercourse from the interior had been stopped by the Nicaraguans.

Chagres had escaped free from the cholera, but it still prevailed among the Americans who were located at Panama, awaiting the means of transit to California. The steamer California arrived at Panama on the 29th ult., in 21 days from San Francisco, bringing 91 passengers and upwards of 500,000 dollars in gold.

CALIFORNIA.

The latest news from California is to the 3rd of August. The accounts confirm the truth of the statements made with regard to the prolific character of the mines, but they tell us also of toil, of sickness, and of suffering.

On the subject of "law and order," it appears that a set of outlaws had for some time, under a pretence of opposition to foreigners, committed many aggressions against those who had repaired to San Francisco. They were at length under the name of "Hounds." A check had, however, been put to their lawless career by the firmness of the authorities. The ringleaders were convicted, and sentenced to hard labour in such penitentiary as the Governor may direct, with fines of from 250 dollars to 1000 dollars each.

A correspondent of the Times at San Francisco, mentions that "Some unusually large specimens of gold have lately been brought to San Francisco from the mines. One large lump, weighing 14lb. troy, was bought for 3500 dollars on account of Barron, Forbes, and Co., of Honolulu, and is said to be intended as a present to her Majesty Queen Victoria. This is an irregular-shaped slab, one side of which is all pure gold, and the other side quartz, and may weigh from 12 to 14 lbs. troy. It is about 9 inches in length, 6½ inches in breadth, 5½ inches. Another specimen was raffled two days ago for 1500 dollars: it weighed 7lb 10oz. troy of pure gold. Its intrinsic value is less than this; but the large lump is, although as coarse as it can be. Both these lumps were dug in the 'Stanislaus diggings,' on the San Joaquin, the section in which the largest lumps are found."

CANADA.

There is nothing of political importance in the accounts from Canada or the British possessions.

Some lingering cases of cholera were still reported, but all alarm regarding its ravages had ceased.

WEST INDIES.

We have accounts this week from the islands by means of an extraordinary packet, made up by the Monday—six days and a half before the mails were due. The advices from Jamaica are to the 7th ult. Their contents are interesting. The new Colonial Parliament assembled for the first time on the 5th of September, when the Country party showed that the general election had been favourable to their views, by their displacing the former Speaker of the House, one of the Government party (Mr. Dallas), and elected in his stead Mr. Merrick, from their own ranks.

The Governor, Sir Charles Grey, delivered a long speech on opening the session, chiefly directed to the finances, state and prospects of the island, which were gloomy enough. He admitted that the position of the colony was one of embarrassment and difficulty, yet he considered it was not desperate; and intimated that he had received no subsequent instructions to authorise him to depart from the line of conduct prescribed for him with respect to certain points in the reduction of official salaries, which led to the late dissolution. The reply to the speech was agreed to by the House the night before the packet left, but had not been presented. It was mild in its language, but firm, declaring the right of the House to manage their own finances, and expressing their determination to maintain that right. An amendment to the Address was offered by one of the Government or "King's House" party, pledging the House to raise the ordinary revenue, but the amendment was carried by 24 to 14.

It was very generally rumoured that another dissolution would take place, for the Country party had expressed their intention to introduce the same measure of retrenchment which emanated from the late House, and which the Council rejected on "principle" alone.

The new Assembly contains sixteen new members, one of them a black man, Mr. Charles A. Price, elected for the parish of St. John.

The island was pretty healthy; the weather in the drier districts was favourable, but in others the want of rain was felt much, and it was feared the general exports would decrease considerably.

At Barbadoes, Dominica, and the neighbouring islands the sugar making is finished, and has turned out exceedingly well, and the prospects for the next year are very good. At Antigua and St. Kitt's they have suffered much from want of rain, and the prospects for the future are anything but cheering.

At Demerara the Governor and Combined Court have, in some measure, settled their differences, as there had been a majority in the Court in favour of the old tariff. This is expected, will lead to a reduction on the part of the Government as to immigration. The want of labour is severely felt, and without immigration, is again sanctioned the colony cannot prosper.

From the foreign islands we learn that at St. Domingo the Haytien Republic declared an empire, and the President, Soloukie, the first Emperor. What means it was confidently asserted that the American Government had completed a treaty of trade with Soloukie that would make the head-quarters of their home squadron, instead of their own port, Pensacola.

INDIA.

Intelligence in anticipation of the Overland Mail, dated Bombay Sept. 1, was received on the 2nd, has come to hand. The Punjaub and India generally was perfectly tranquil.

The cholera had been very prevalent in Bombay, at Poonah, and the Deccan generally.

At the Leads of the Supreme Government continued at Simla. Sir C. Napier was to leave for the Punjaub in October, and Lord Dalhousie in November. Lord Gough was to proceed six month to Calcutta, where it was said the steam frigate, Moozaffer, was to be put in commission for the accommodation of Lady Gough, with the Marchioness of Dalhousie, to Point de Galle or Suez, on their way home. It was generally understood that Sir Charles Napier would resign his appointment, and return to England in March next. Sir William Gomm, it was said, would succeed him.

Lord Falkland was expected in Bombay in the course of last month. Sir William Gomm remained shortly to proceed on a tour of his section through the southern districts.

Lord Keane Derwent Macleay has been sentenced to be transported to Singapore for life, a punishment in comparison with which death is nothing but a mild relief, who has the utmost horror at the idea of crossing the kala pannee (sea). His sentence was read to him by his Judges on the 31st July, in the Auckland Court of Lahore. He is said to have expressed himself now that there had not been carried out the sentence of death pronounced against him by his Judges, and have spared him the misery and degradation of being a prisoner.

The new cylinder for raising the tube of the Britannia Tubular Bridge having been fixed in the appointed place, operations commenced on Monday, raising it at the rate of six feet per day. Its action and structural strength are stated to be of the most improved and perfect character.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT OSBORNE.

The Queen and Prince, accompanied by their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales, the Princess Royal, Prince Alfred, and the Princess Alice, and attended by the Countess of Mount Edgcumbe, Lady in Waiting; the Hon Miss Dawson, Maid of Honour; Sir George Grey, Sir James Clark, the Hon Colonel Gordon, and Mr. Birch, arrived at Osborne about half-past five o'clock on Saturday afternoon, and were received by the Dowager Lady Lyttelton; Major-General Wemyss, Equerry in Waiting; Colonel Berkeley Drummond, Groom in Waiting; and the Master of the Household.

The Queen and Prince, Sir G. Grey, and the members of the Royal household, attended divine service at Osborne on Sunday morning. The Rev. T. Protheroe, chaplain to his Royal Highness at Osborne, officiated.

During the present week the hospitalities of the Court have been confined to the members of the household. The inclemency of the weather has prevented the Queen and the Prince from taking their accustomed early walks and drives.

Sir George Grey, Colonel the Hon. A. Gordon, and Sir James Clark, left Osborne on Monday for London.

The Countess of Mount Edgcumbe has left Osborne for London. The Hon. Miss Kerr arrived at Osborne on Tuesday, to resume her duties as maid of honour. Colonel Seymour has relieved Colonel Gordon as Equerry in Waiting to the Prince.

Her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert are expected shortly to visit her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, at Tunbridge Wells.

The Queen will hold a Privy Council at Osborne this day (Saturday).

His Royal Highness the Duke Alexander of Wirtemberg and the Prince Philip of Wirtemberg arrived at Osborne, on Wednesday, on a visit to her Majesty and the Prince Consort.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge arrived in town on Tuesday from Heaton Hall, the seat of the Earl of Wilton, near Manchester. The Duchess of Cambridge and the Hereditary Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz are still at Heaton, but are expected to arrive at the cottage at Kew this day (Saturday).

Her Serene Highness the Duchess Ida of Saxe-Weimar, accompanied by the Princesses Anne and Amelia, and attended by their suite, arrived in town on Saturday morning last. Their Serene Highnesses immediately proceeded to Bentley Priory, Stanmore, to visit her Majesty the Queen Dowager.

The Marquis of Lansdowne (Lord President of the Council) arrived in town on Thursday from the north.

Lord and Lady Stanley have returned to Knowsley from visiting his Lordship's estates in Ireland.

Lord Dinorben, who has been suffering from severe indisposition, is much better.

Lady Macdonald was safely delivered of a son, at the British Hotel, Edinburgh, on Tuesday.

His Excellency the Marquis de Lisboa has returned to the Brazilian Legation, from Paris.

His Excellency Lord Howard de Walden, the British Minister at the Belgian Court, has arrived in town from Brussels.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert has been pleased to appoint Edwin Saunders, Esq., George-street, Hanover-square, to be surgeon-dentist in ordinary to his Royal Highness, in the room of Mr. Nasmith, deceased.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

OXFORD.

Term commences on the 10th of October. The different Colleges and Halls will meet on the following days:—Magdalen College, Oct. 7; St. Edmund Hall, Oct. 8; Balliol, Exeter, Lincoln, Christ Church, Trinity, Wadham, Pembroke, Worcester, 13; University, Queen's, St. Alban Hall, Oct. 14; Magdalen Hall, Oct. 16; Merton, Oriel, New, Brasenose, Corpus, St. John's, Jesus, St. Mary Hall, New Inn Hall, Oct. 20; All Souls, Oct. 23.

Lord Auckland, Bishop of Lincoln, who is, ex officio, visitor of Lincoln College, has appointed Mr. Richard Heston Ogle, B.A., Exhibitioner of Lincoln, to be a Fellow of the same society, in the room of the Rev. C. J. Meredith, B.D., who has been promoted to the Rectory of Waddington, Lincolnshire. Mr. Ogle is the son of Dr. Ogle, Clinical Professor.

CAMBRIDGE.

RESIGNATION OF THE LUCASIAN PROFESSOR.—The President of Queen's College, Dr. King, has placed in the hands of the Vice Chancellor his resignation of the above office, which he has held since 1839. The professorship was founded by Lucas, encouragement of mathematics) in 1663, by Henry Lucas, M.P. for the University, and endowed with an estate in Bedfordshire, now let on a lease of about £100 per annum. The electors are the Vice Chancellor and all the masters of colleges. Notice has been issued by the Vice Chancellor that Dr. King's successor will be chosen on the 23rd instant.

CONGREGATIONS.—There will be congregations on the following days of the ensuing Michaelmas Term: Wednesday, Oct. 10, at ten; Wednesday, Oct. 17, at eleven; Saturday, Oct. 24, at eleven; Saturday, Nov. 10, at eleven; Wednesday, Nov. 21, at eleven; Wednesday, Dec. 5, at eleven; and Dec. 16 (end of Term), at ten.

The following gentlemen have been elected preachers for the academical year 1849-50:—October—The Rev. the Hulsean Lecturer; November—The Rev. J. J. Blunt, B.D., Margaret Professor of Divinity; December—The Rev. Thevyte T. Smith, Queen's College, Vicar of Wymondham; January—The Rev. F. W. Fuller, Fellow of St. John's College; February—The Rev. the Rev. A. Jeremie, M.A., Trinity College, Sub-dean of Lincoln; March—The Rev Daniel Moore, M.A., St. Catherine Hall, Incumbent of Camden Church, Camberwell; April—The Rev the Hulsean Lecturer; May—The Rev. W. Selwyn, M.A., Trinity College, Vicar of Melbourne.

PREFERMENTS.—Rev. R. G. Chalk to Wilden R., Beds, dio. Ely; £240, with residence; patron, the Duke of Bedford. Rev. H. Haines, B.A., of Exeter College, to Delamere C., Cheshire, dio. Chester; patron, the Crown. Rev. T. H. Chope, B.A., of Worcester College, to the P. C. of Holy Trinity, Tiverton, Lancashire, dio. Chester; £143, without residence; patron, T. R. G. Bradshaw, Esq. Venerable Archdeacon Jennings, D.D., F.R.S., to P. C. of St. James's Chapel, Marylebone; value, £350; patron, the Crown. Rev. W. Greenham, B.A., of Magdalen Hall, to Norley P. C., Cheshire, dio. Chester; patron, R. Wrenbury. Rev. W. H. Boothby to Hawkesbury V. Gloucestershire, dio Gloucester and Bristol, vacant by resignation of Rev. H. Randolph; value £300, with residence; patron, Earl of Liverpool. Rev. O. L. Humphreys, to Llanllwchaiarn, Denbighshire, dio. St. Asaph, £210, with residence; patron, Bishop of St. Asaph. Rev. W. J. Alban, to the Vicarage of Mevagissey, Cornwall, dio. Exeter; £168, with residence; patron, John Benbow, Esq., M.P.; Rev. P. Carpenter, Registrar. Rev. Forbes Smith, B.A., to Acton Pigott R., Salop, dio. Hereford; value £267, with residence; patron, Duke of Cleveland.

ORDINATION.—The Bishop of London held an Ordination on Saturday at Fulham. Mr. Thomas Maxwell and Mr. George Nicho, both of the Church Missionary College, at Islington, were presented to the Right Reverend Prelate by the Rev. William Gibson Humphrey, M.A., his lordship's chaplain, with the customary assurance that he had examined them, and found them meet for the priestly office to which they sought to be admitted. His Lordship then put the questions to the candidates, who were afterwards duly admitted into the priesthood. Mr. Maxwell and Mr. Nicol are colonial gentlemen, natives of Africa.

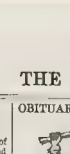
SEE OF NORWICH.—It has been pleased to order a congé d'ire to pass the Great Seal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, empowering the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral Church of Norwich to elect a Bishop of that see, void, as it is said, by the death of Dr. Edward Stanley, late Bishop thereof; and her Majesty has also been pleased to recommend to the said Dean and Chapter the Very Rev. Dr. Samuel Hinds, Dean of the Cathedral Church of Carlisle, to be chosen by the said Dean and Chapter of Norwich Bishop of the said see of Norwich.

QUEEN'S COLLEGE, BIRMINGHAM.—On Tuesday the usual annual meeting (the 23rd) for the distribution of prizes and other business took place at Queen's College. The inaugural address was delivered by the Rev. Derwent Gray, Prebendary of Wells, who has been recently nominated Warden of the College, the first appointment of the kind made since the college was established. The Warnerian prize, a gold medal and £15 in money, was awarded to Mr. Joseph Stead, for an essay on the general anatomy of the brain, with a view to exemplify the wisdom, power, and goodness of God, as revealed in Holy Writ. The second prize, a gold medal and £10, was awarded to Mr. T. Mills. For Anatomy and Surgery, the two medals were awarded to Mr. W. J. Moore. For Materia Medica, Mr. Hill and Mr. Russell obtained the prizes. Chemistry—Mr. Fryer, of Fulford, Gloucestershire, medal and certificate. Practice of Physic—Mr. Freer and Mr. Darwin. Midwifery—Mr. T. Lowe, Birmingham (medal). Botany Mr. T. Wilkinson (medal) and Mr. Spark. Forensic Medicine Mr. T. Lowe. Theology Mr. Banks. Classics and Drawing Mr. Franks.

The Rev. Arthur P. Stanley, Fellow of University College, Oxford, second son of the late Bishop of Oxford, was offered the Deanery of Carlisle, vacant by the promotion of Dr. Hinds to the see of Norwich. In offering him the appointment, Lord John Russell intimated that it was not only in compliment to his own talents, but in respectful memory of the worth of his late father. The rev. gentleman declined the preferment.

INTENSION OF THE MONEY ORDER SYSTEM.—Hitherto money orders could only be granted and paid at post towns. The Postmaster General has now decided on extending the benefits of the money order system to villages. On and from October 1, money orders will be drawn and paid at the following offices:—Blyth, Northumberland; Bridlington Quay, Yorkshire; Brewood, Staffordshire; Budleigh Salterton, Devonshire; Bavenham, Somersetshire; Church Stretton, Shropshire; Castle Donington, Leicestershire; Colesworth, Lincolnshire; Gawsdon, Somersetshire; Pishguard, Pembrokeshire; Framlingham, Suffolk; Halesowen, Shropshire; Holmfirth, Yorkshire; Sydney, Gloucestershire; Mc.bourne, Derbyshire; Newcastle Emlyn, Carmarthenshire; Needham Market, Suffolk; Olney, Buckinghamshire, Old Swan, Lancashire; Portland, Dorsetshire; Rothbury, Northumberland; Soham, Cambridgeshire, Shefford, Bedfordshire; Swanage, Dorsetshire; Wooler, Northumberland; Wanchcomb, Gloucestershire.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.



GEORGE HENRY WARD, ESQ., OF NORTHWOOD PARK, ISLE OF WIGHT.

THE decease of this gentleman, a very considerable landed proprietor, occurred on the 27th ult., after a lingering illness, in his 66th year. He was eldest son of the late George Ward, Esq., of Northwood-park, a member of a great commoner in the city of London, by his wife, Miss Mary Woodfall, brother of Mr. William Ward, formerly M.P. for London, and nephew of the late distinguished writer, Robert Plumer Ward, the author of "Tremaine." Mr G. H. Ward married Mary, daughter of Dr Saunders, but had no issue. His extensive estates, situated in the Isle of Wight and on the borders of Sussex, devolve on his nephew, the Rev George William Ward, the proceedings against whom at Oxford, and his secession from the Church, are doubtless in the memory of our readers.

SIR WILLIAM PATERSON, K.C.H.

LIEUTENANT-GENERAL SIR WILLIAM PATERSON, the son of Lieutenant-General William Paterson, entered the army in 1786, as an ensign in the 57th Foot, and soon afterwards joined the 21st. He rose, during his very gallant career, through the different gradations of rank, becoming a Major-General in 1819, and a Lieutenant-General in 1837. Sir William Paterson saw much arduous and glorious service. He was with the 21st Regiment at the reduction of the French West Indies, under Sir Charles Grey. He was employed in Sicily in 1810, and commanded a brigade at the reduction of Genoa. He subsequently proceeded, with the same brigade, to the Chesapeake, and was present at the battles of Bladensburg and Baltimore.

In the attack on the American lines before New Orleans, while gallantly leading his old corps, the 21st, he was severely wounded in the shoulder and the knee. By the latter wound he was lamed for life, and consequently obliged to resign further active service. On his return to England, the Duke of York appointed him Captain of Windsor Castle, in office in which he has since died. He was knighted, and made a K.C.H., in 1832. In the published memoirs of the 21st, it is said of Sir William Paterson that no officer of his rank ever passed through the ordeal of a mess-room examination in office more highly relieved and respected by all ranks than he did. Sir William died at Brighton on the 26th ult., aged 82.

THE HON SPENCER MILDMAY ST. JOHN.

THIS gentleman, connected with the East India Company's Service from an early age, died at Cawnpore, Bengal, on the 20th August. He was born in 1822, the second son of the present Viscount Bolingbroke, by Maria his wife, daughter of Sir Henry Paulet St. John Mildmay, Bart. He married, on the 1st February, 1842, Dora, only daughter of the late Captain Clutterbuck, of the 59th Regiment, and has left issue. The deceased was great-great-grand-nephew of Henry St. John Viscount Bolingbroke, the famous statesman and orator of the reign of Queen Anne.

RAILWAY INTELLIGENCE.

MEETINGS.

MIDLAND GREAT WESTERN (IRELAND).—Sept. 28: Half-yearly meeting: Dublin: Mr. J. Eunis in the chair. There has been, comparatively, an increase of traffic corresponding with the additional mileage opened from Down to Mullingar. The contract for the locomotive department was satisfactory, and the permanent way is in an efficient condition. The loan of £500,000, at 3½ per cent. per annum for the first ten years, and afterwards 4½ per cent. per annum in discharge of the principal, is regarded as of the greatest benefit to the company. Contracts for the line from Dublin to Athlone have been adopted. The chairman spoke of the great support they had received from the Lord-Lieutenant, and of the probability of Galway being a packet station for the American boats from Halifax. The landowners had come to fair terms. He declared that the board had no intention of issuing preference shares. Every effort had been adopted to get in the arrears. The report was adopted, amid expressions of confidence from the proprietors in the direction.

ULSTER.—Sept. 26: Half-yearly meeting: Belfast: Mr. Allen in the chair. The report, which was merged last week, was received. The chairman said the opening of the Ballymena had not affected their line. The opening of Antrim had diminished their receipts. The dividend of 13s. was declared: the election of directors then proceeded with: and a motion against Sunday trains fell to the ground for want of a seconder.

IRISH SOUTH-EASTERN.—Sept. 28: Half-yearly meeting: Dublin: Mr. J. E. Redmond in the chair.—The Act reducing the capital had received Parliamentary sanction. The undertaking had been formed on the principle between Carlow and Kilkenny; and the liability of each share is reduced from £20 to £12. The amount of assistance due from the Great Southern and Western is called upon. The completion of the line is now dependent on the funds provided. By the cordial co-operation of the Great Southern and Western the line will speedily, it is hoped, be completed; that company being under obligation to furnish £25,000.

The shareholders of the GLASGOW, AIRDRIE, and MONKLANDS have sanctioned the application to Parliament, in the ensuing session, for a dissolution of the company. A committee of inquiry has also been appointed.

The report of the GENERAL TERMINUS and GLASGOW HARBOUR states the total cost of the works, &c. at £81,632. The present value of the surplus land of the company is £200,959; and, deducting the purchase-money, &c., gives for the estimated value of surplus land, over and above cost, the sum of £119,473. A dividend of 4 per cent. per annum is paid for the half-year. The working of the line, &c. appears to give satisfaction.

The STIRLING and DUNFERMLINE will, in all probability, be opened in three months from Dunfermline to Alloa. The portion to Oakley has been ready some time. An action had been commenced in the Scotch Courts against the Edinburgh and Glasgow, for the fulfilment of the lease which they rejected. There are arrears of £23,000, in which the Edinburgh and Northern are implicated.

THE EAST OF FIFE is to be dissolved, and the directors will, accordingly, apply to Parliament next session.

The Line of the EDINBURGH and BATHGATE will be shortly ready. The bill for the complete amalgamation with the Edinburgh and Glasgow is in the parliamentary agents' hands. The delay in opening is attributed to the contractors of the Bathgate and Hamilton contracts. Three fifths of the main line will, for the present, be laid with double rails.

Satisfactory arrangements have been made with the landowners and the harbour trustees of Borrowstones, for the Bo'ness and Kilsyth Railway and Monklands; the sum of £40,000 is to be raised by the issue of new shares at a guaranteed five per cent.

There being an insufficient attendance at the intended half-yearly meeting of the GLASGOW, KILMARNOCK, and ARDROSSAN, the proceedings were transacted. The Earl of Eglinton promised to forward the appointment of a committee of investigation.

The adjourned meeting of the SOUTH WALES was further adjourned from the 2d inst. to Nov. 14, as the committee of investigation were not prepared with their report.

A meeting for the promotion of the SHREWSBURY and HEREFORD took place at Ludlow on the 26th inst. The line would cost about £430,000.

The new cylinder in the hydraulic press at the BRITANNIA BRIDGE was at work on the 1st inst. Its strength and action are highly spoken of.

The new system of railway assurance for passengers, which has been allowed on the LONDON and NORTH-WESTERN, EASTERN COUNTIES, and SOUTH-WESTERN, is to be introduced on to the GREAT WESTERN on the 8th inst.

ERRATUM.—We should have stated last week that the majority of shareholders of the EDINBURGH, PERTH, and DUNDEE was in favour of, and not against, the running of Sunday trains.

A NOTICE has been issued by the emigration commissioners, offering advantages to small capitalists and persons above the labouring class, who may desire to settle in Van Diemen's Land, the supply of unskilled labour being already redundant in that colony. Deposits are to be received in sums of not less than £100, for which are to be granted 100 acres of land, two cabin, or four intermediate, or five steerage passages, together with assistance towards the clearing of the land and the erection of a home of the value in labour and materials of £50, the latter regulation being in accordance with a suggestion made some time back, if we remember rightly, by Mr. Sidney, to mitigate the difficulties of a first settlement. To insure that the emigrants shall be possessed of sufficient means to support themselves until they can live on the produce of their own land, £20 is to be deposited for each, which will be returned on arrival at the colony. It is likewise added—"In the event of a considerable number of emigrants proceeding to the colony together, the Lieutenant-Governor would be instructed to make arrangements for preparing a sufficient quantity of land to enable them to settle in a body, and for constructing their houses near each other. And if such a body were accompanied by their clergyman, a free passage would be provided for him, and assistance would likewise be given them, calculated with reference to their private contributions towards the erection of a place of worship, and of a school. And, further, the privileges in respect to passages would in such a case be extended to the elder members of the community also, provided they were accompanied by younger members of their family who might be able and willing to support them."

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

The Admiralty have this week directed an inquiry to be made as to the number of unemployed seamen in the port of Liverpool, and also what proportion of them have been in her Majesty's service.

SIR JOHN FRANKLIN.

A LETTER was received on Friday week at the John O'Groat Journal office, from Kirkwall, announcing the arrival there of Captain Paterson, of the Jane, of Newcastle, and Captain Lee, of the Prince of Wales, of Hull (both vessels having been wrecked at Davis's Straits), with thirty men, brought by a Danish vessel Captain Paterson had in his possession a sealed bottle with some documents from Sir John Franklin, addressed to the Admiralty, and picked up by the natives. This bottle, or more correctly cylinder, was promptly forwarded to the Admiralty; and, as public curiosity might be expected to be highly excited as to its contents, the Admiralty lost no time in issuing the subjoined notice, by which, unhappily, nothing further is learnt of the missing expedition:—

"SIR JOHN FRANKLIN'S EXPEDITION.—The cylinder picked up and sent to the Admiralty does not contained information as to the 30th June, 1848, from Sir John Franklin's ships, which had been heard of subsequent to that date.

"Admiralty, October 2, 1849."

On Thursday the Admiralty issued the following document:—

"Admiralty, October 4, 1849.

"From communications made this day to the Lords of the Admiralty, by the editor of the Mercantile and Shipping Gazette, evening newspaper, some hopes are entertained that the news brought by Captain Parker, of the Trusteee, arrived at Hull, from Davis's Straits, of Sir John Frank lin's ships having been seen by the natives as late as March last, beset by the ice in Prince Regent's Inlet, is not without foundation. From the same source reports have been received that Sir James Ross's ships are on the south of Prince Regent's Inlet, and that the vessels of both expeditions are safe. This hope is somewhat strengthened by a telegraphic message the Admiralty since received from the Mayor of Hull, where the Trustees arrived last night."

A strange account of the psychological power of clairvoyance, in association with the fate of Sir John Franklin, is related by a correspondent of the Manchester Examiner, who relates that a woman at Bolton, being "cast into a mesmeric state, asserted positively that Sir John Franklin is still alive, and now comparatively well. He has undergone great hardships, but has overcome them, and is in good hope of getting to England in nine months and a half, provided no unforeseen accident occurs. The difference between Bolton and that time where he is and at Bolton is nearly six hours, indicating a difference of longitude of from 85 deg. to 90 deg., and afterwards, when asked, being still in the mesmeric state, to endeavour to point on the map where he is, she put her finger on the north-west side of Hudson's Bay, which is not very far from this ongiude, though not much, being on a very small scale, and very inconveniently bound up in a volume of the 'Penny Cyclopædia,' and required by her to be rested on her head, not held to her eyes, and thus reversed, no very precise indication could be so obtained

"As she is perfectly uninstructed, and unable even to read or write, it seems scarcely possible to suppose that she can know anything of maps whatever; and, further, the indication thus obtained, both by difference of time and her pointing to the map, took the bystanders quite by surprise. They had not the least idea of looking for Sir John in this direction. And yet if his ships have been wrecked or abandoned on the west coast of Boothia or towards Victoria Land, it is possible, though it may appear to us at present unlikely, that he may have tried to return to the eastward inside of Boothia, which, when he departed, was supposed to be an island. And if he has succeeded in overcoming the very great difficulties which must have attended such a route, this is precisely the direction in which he would appear. And, further, if he got this length too late in the season to save the Hudson's Bay Company's autumn ship, his own impression would naturally be that he would be detained till the ensuing spring, which would just make up the nine months specified before he expected to be in England; this period not having been given by the clairvoyante as a prophecy, but as the impression on his mind, with which she professed to have some mysterious means of communication.

"She also professed to go and visit his ships, one of which she said was under water, with very thick timbers, the other above it. And an old letter being also possessed from Sir James Ross, she was sent to find him too. For this purpose she said she had to go much further. He is fast in the ice, and unable to turn his ship round, but intends returning to England when he can. She added that it was many, nearly two, years since she saw him; he had not seen Sir J. Franklin. The difference between his apparent time and that at Bolton was nearly eight hours, corresponding to 110 deg. to 115 deg. west; and when required subsequently to show this place on the map, she pointed to Banker's Land almost at once, a position full of probability.

These are the principal statements elicited, to which the editor of the Manchester Examiner adds his voucher for the accuracy of the reliable authority, as to facts, of the writer, who is an officer of rank in the Royal Navy.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

The report of the committee appointed some time back to consider various improvements suggested in the different branches of the Royal Artillery, has just been published in the form of a general order, as follows:—

An account of the changes and additions in ordnance, ammunition, carriages, platforms, and stores, adopted into the service up to the present date, under the authority of the Master-General and the Board of Ordnance.

1. Empty flannel cartridges intended for store at home and foreign stations are to be packed by a screw press at the Royal Arsenal in oil-cloth, and then in unpainted canvas bales, according to sizes and numbers. The same process for empty cartridges likely to be required for service used, only with a roll of oil-cloth inside the bales. Proposed by Lieutenant-Colonel Hardinge, K.H. Approved by the Master-General and Board.

2. The improvement of adjustment of elevating screws to the button of the cascable of 24pr. and 12pr. brass howitzers, as with the light 6pr. and medium 9prs. for field service.—Proposed by Colonel Dundas, C.B. Approved by the Master-General and Board.—The enlargement of the trunnions of the 10 and 8-inch iron howitzers to 7 18 and 6 20 respectively, for the purpose of giving additional strength and adding weight. To prevent any mistakes in the future issues of these howitzers, the letters R T to be marked over the number which is on the left trunnion, and the carriages to be marked correspondingly.—Proposed by Colonel Dundas, C.B. Approved by the Master-General and Board.

4. The under-mentioned guns, which are not now required for the naval service, to be withdrawn from that service, and appropriated for land defences; viz. Iron guns: 68-pounders of 112 cwt., 56-pounders of 85 cwt., 42-pounders of 84 cwt., 75 cwt., and 68 cwt. Ordered by the Master-General and Board.

5. The service charges of the 8-inch 52 pounder and 24-pounder iron guns to be reduced 2 lb. each when firing spherical case shot; thus, the charges of the 8-inch and 24-pounder guns for spherical case shot will be 8 lb., and for the 24-pounder 6 lb.—Proposed by the Master-General. Approved by the Master-General. N.B.—This arrangement is temporary, pending the adjustment of the charges for iron guns when using spherical case shot, upon which experiments by the select committee are in progress, as sanctioned by the Master-General.

6. A portable forge and a forge waggon, invented and proposed by Mr. Alexander Dodd. Approved by the Master-General and Board.

7. The proof of iron gun carriages to be on stone platforms.—Proposed by Col. Gordon. Approved by the Master-General.

8. Field guns to be used by the Royal Artillery for drill, and by the field batteries, to be fitted with an iron stool, or loop at the bottom of the trail, in which to rest the side arms, and with a leather pocket fixed under the trail to hold the implements, viz. side-arms, vis. sponge, wad hook, and handspike.—Proposed by Col Cruttenden. Approved by the Master-General.

9. New pattern blocks for triangular gyns, viz. the sheaves 6½ inches in diameter in the holes; the fall to be 3½-inch white rope; the sling to be 6-inch white rope; the hooks of the blocks to be in two parts of the best cast rope. These blocks to be used with the 16 feet and 20 feet triangular gyns of the service. When guns heavier than the 8-inch gun of 65 cwt. are to be mounted, two triangular gyns are to be employed in the operation. Approved by the Master-General.

10. For the field batteries—Officers to have sheep-skins and retaining-strap (in lieu of the saddle-cloth and holster-flounces), also a valise. Non-commissioned officers and trumpeters to have sheep-skins and retaining-strap (in lieu of oil-decks and holster-flounces). Drivers to have sheep-skins in lieu of oil-decks. Approved by the Master-General and the Board.

(Signed) J. LACY, Major-General and Director-General.

THE CAPTAINS' APPOINTMENT TO GREENWICH HOSPITAL.—Captain Aaron Tozer having declined the appointment to the establishment of Greenwich Hospital, vice Brandon, deceased, Captain William Cuppage (1830) has now been selected to fill the vacancy.

LIEUT. GRAHAM AND MASTER ELLIOTT.—It is said that, owing to a fatal mistake in pronouncing sentence on the former, a court of law will liberate them on a writ of habeas corpus. The mistake consists in first dismissing them the service, and then sentencing them to imprisonment. By the sentence of dismissal they become civilians, and no longer amenable to martial law, consequently they are illegally imprisoned. Had the Court first sentenced them to twelve months' imprisonment, and after that period to be dismissed the service, they would be still amenable to martial law.

ORDNANCE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.—In consequence of the increased demands on the time of the surgeons of the Royal Artillery, owing to the prevalence of cholera at the out-stations, the Master-General of the Ordnance, a short time since, appointed Messrs. W. A. Parry, A. Briggs, and S. Park, as temporary assistant-surgeons of the Ordnance Medica. Department. The great augmentation, however, which has recently been made in the Ordnance corps requires that a permanent increase of the medical staff should be made

On Monday, a private of the 50th Regiment, apparently not more than twenty-two years of age, who had been convicted of not less than thirty offences at various times during a period of two years' service in the regiment, was drummed out, after being previously flogged, and was then taken to the county gaol, where he will have to undergo forty-two days, by sentence of court-martial.

AUSTRIAN RECRUITS FOR THE WAR IN HUNGARY.

THE WAR IN HUNGARY.

(From our own Correspondent at Scutari.)

The War in Hungary appears to have been so fatal to the Imperial Austrian armies, that the Government is obliged to resort to fresh levies in all parts of its unwilling territory. In some parts, still obedient to the Emperor, the peasantry have refused to be enlisted, asking, "Who is to garner in their harvest and till their fields?" In others—within reach of the troops concentrated to defend Vienna—the conscripts are forcibly forwarded to their dépôts tied two and two together. Nothing can exhibit a more wretched and dejected appearance than these pitiable objects despatched into that insatiable Hungary, by waggon-loads, like our sheep and cattle. Sir John Falstaff's troop would have shone beside some of these batches. Mostly very young—some mere boys—they are of all sizes, and of all complexions of sickliness; indicating either that the districts made to obey have been cruelly exhausted, or that the recruits are suffering from neglect and hunger. They look as if the recruiting sergeant had only caught those who were too sick to run away.

The preceding Sketch I have taken on the Glogguitz Railway. On the right is a wounded Austrian officer going to the baths. The wife is obliged to drag both their children, whilst the stout Styrian wench carries all their household furniture and worldly gear.

CASTLE OF BUDNA AND MONTENEGRO, FROM THE ADRIATIC.

Perhaps the most remarkable people in this part of the world are the Montenegrins, the Circassians of Europe, a Sclavonic people, inhabiting, from very remote times, in perfect independence, the district of the Montenegro, or Black Mountain, which extends between the Austrian and Turkish territories. Their government is a kind of Theocratic Republic, the chief authority being possessed by their Vladika, or Bishop. Always at deadly feud with the Albanians, from whom the lake of Scutari divides them, they are frequently at war with both Austria and Turkey. When on more peaceable terms with these countries, they come down occasionally to trade in Cattaro and Scodra. Of all the lawless inhabitants of Albania, these are the most fierce and lawless. Their Vladika (a sort of Friar Tuck, who is described as "standing six feet three," and whose dwelling has alternately been decorated with the heads of the Ottoman sirdars and the Austrian grenadier) has recently lost some of his popularity, on account of his subserviency to Russia, from whose Government he receives an annual subsidy. An attempt was made upon his life, and the betrothed of his sister was killed in the affray. The conspirators were finally obliged to take refuge in Scutari, and foremost in the accompanying Sketch are portrayed two of the assassins; on the opposite side of the picture is an Albanian woman, and in the centre are two Turkish women.

The second, or middle Sketch, gives a view in this singular country Montenegro, or Montenero, "the black mountain," so called on account of the dark forests which cover its sides. The portion represented is in the district of Budna, on the coast of the Adriatic Sea, which washes the walls of the Castle.

MONTENEGRIN REFUGEES IN SCUTARI.

ST. STEPHAN'S OATH.

(FROM THE GERMAN OF COUNT AUERNSPERG.)

Hark! the bells of Weissenburg ring silvery thro' the morning air;
Now again the peal is silent; they have crown'd a Monarch there.
See! he comes from the cathedral: rich his robes with gold and gem;
In his hand the sword of empire, on his head the diadem.

Angels wrought that crown of splendour (so the pious legend says),
Of the ruby's crimson radiance—of the diamond's starry rays,
But a common smith at Dobschau, working at his daily trade,
Smote with hammer on the anvil, till he forged that battle blade.

The long procession passes forth, to where a rising hill is spread,
With carpets colour'd of the hues the nation loves—green, white, and red;
There the aged Chancellor waiteth, bearing gravely in his hand
The Charter which the new-crown'd Monarch gives that day to state and land

Round him gather'd in a circle stands thy people, Hungary!
Warriors stern and bearded Magnates, all the nation's chivalry;
Bishops with the ring and crosier, Priest and Abbot, all are there,
With the Empire's Standard-bearer—free the banner waves and fair.

Proudly up the hill advancing rides the King, that nation's Lord,
And east and west, and north and south, he waves aloft his battle sword;
Then standing still a minute's space, as statues in a temple stand,
He lifts tow'rds the arch of Heaven before them all his naked hand.

"Hail! my people! Hail, and listen! From my Chancellor's hand receive
The Charter that your Monarch gives you; 'tis a gift of love, believe.
With will unforced and heart in freedom, freedom I on all bestow,
And that law, to which obedient, I, its first of subjects, bow.

"I swear by yon eternal Heaven, that e'en in storm its blessing brings;
I swear it by my own true heart, where e'en with wrath affection springs—
Ne'er to govern like a despot, but by law and rights to rule:
Not always is a Prince a sage—by charters guided, ne'er a fool!

"I swear by Heaven, I'll keep that charter ever sacred, whole and true;
Never by my fancy change it, or interpret it anew;
Never of that stately fabric will I touch a single stone,
Lest, so touch'd, the glorious structure, should be sapp'd and overthrown.

"God forbid I e'er should lead you to the sanguined battle plain,
In conflict that would make our weapons like the savage hand of Cain!
Our shield is bright, and never let a drop of brother's blood be there;
No fountain's source, no falling tears, can ever wash it white and fair.

"I swear to keep unstain'd, unsull'd, the honour of our land and race,
Bright as a warrior keeps his arms, pure as a priest the holy place!
A nation's welfare is the plain where Plenty pours its corn and wine,
Its Honour is the azure dome where stars in golden glory shine.

"I swear to counsel wise and just a willing heart and ear to bend;
I ne'er will check the freeborn word, though poor and weak the counsel lend:
Not always where men most expect them, in the Royal garden's bound,
But on the wild and lonely heath, the fairest roses oft are found.

"Wisely will I use your treasure, none to waste and much to spare,
For the widow's tear bedews it, and the peasant's sweat is there;
How can a King 'mid song and mirth rejoice to see the goblet pass
When he has thrown his brightest pearl, his people's love, into the glass?

"To be the father of that people, now and evermore, I swear;
Nor think my heart too small for those who yet may claim a refuge there:
A father's heart is rich in love; and doubly great and doubly warm,
Whene'er he opens to embrace them, clasping all, a father's arm!"

The gentle summer breeze soon died, that heard the Monarch's oath that day:
And o'er that little grass-clad hill long centuries have roll'd away;
Those iron ranks of bearded men, the bulwarks of a nation's trust,
Are seen no more—long, long ago, they sank to ashes and to dust.

But still at Ofen* they preserve King Stephan's Mantle, Crown, and Sword;
Arm'd sentries o'er the relics keep, within the Castle, watch and ward:
And still, when they a King instal, sword, robe, and crown are worn again:
Alas! that Stephan's spirit, too, no watching could on earth retain!

The people see his Mantle still, and wish his heart beneath its fold;
His Sword is waved, and ah! they sigh, could Stephan's hand that hilt but hold
His Crown yet glitters—but, alas! it does not press a Stephan's brow,
And, when his oath is sworn, they ask—Will it be kept as truly now?

Lewis Filmore.

* This is no longer the case: on the outbreak of the Hungarian insurrection, last year, Kossuth removed the regalia of the Saint and Monarch, the Alfred of the Nation—they were preserved at the seat of the popular Government as national property; and, since the removal thereof, it is not known what has become of them. It is generally supposed they are buried in a secret spot, known only to Kossuth and one or two other persons. The crown was a gift from Pope Sylvester II. to Stephan, in 1001

CURIOSITIES.—VII.

SALT-CELLAR, CHRIST'S COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE.

This interesting specimen of mediæval silversmiths' work is of silver gilt, and, in its general details, is exceedingly well carried out. The bowl for the salt is very shallow, and, in our representation, is, of course, hidden by the cover. The Tudor rose is engraved on the alternate compartments, the roses being bright, whilst the ground on which they are engraved is worked over with a corking tool.

This Salt was left to the College by Margaret Countess of Richmond, mother of King Henry VII., along with some other pieces of plate, of admirable design, still preserved in the College. A cup, in particular, is of the most elaborate, yet delicate, ornamentation possible; the general outline somewhat resembling the Salt we have engraved, but, on the lower rim of the cover, and on the foot of the cup, are rows of Tudor flowers, or strawberry-leaves, of exceedingly fine workmanship, whilst, in spiral lines round the cup and cover, are engraved roses, rose-buds, and leaves, in exquisite character. As specimens of some of the oldest plate in England, these relics of Margaret Countess of Richmond, in Christ's College, Cambridge, are deserving great attention.

MARBLE STATUE OF MACBETH, BY LOUGH.

MARBLE STATUE OF "MACBETH," BY LOUGH.

This noble work forms the sixth of the series of statues from Shakspeare, which Mr. Lough has executed in marble for Sir Matthew White Ridley, and is, with the other five, at the residence of the munificent Baronet, in Carlton-House Terrace. The sculptor has portrayed Macbeth, in the second scene of the second act of the play, immediately after he has committed the murder, when, looking on his hands, he exclaims, "This is a sorry sight."

STATUE OF MRS. SIDDONS IN WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

Garrick and John Kemble have been hitherto the only histrionic celebrities to whom admission has been granted within the Abbey walls; and whatever be the merits of their respective monuments in an artistic point of view, there can be none as to the propriety of selecting them as fitting representatives of dramatic excellence in the national Walhalla. If Congreve, Rowe, and Ben Jonson as writers for the stage found entrance into the sanctuary, consistency required that the artists who gave life and eloquent utterance to their writings should not be excluded. The sculptor, however, who of course undertakes to present his subject in the attitude peculiar to his profession, labours in the actor's case under the difficulty of recalling too vividly the stage and its impressions beneath the solemn roof of a church. This difficulty has not been much evaded in the uncouth alto relievo representing Garrick over Poets' Corner; but Flaxman appears to have felt it much more, and in his statue of John Kemble there is a visible sensation of constraint in the forced and stiff action of the figures rendered now more remarkable by the ease and calm of Sir William Follett's statue, which rises alongside in damaging proximity. In the present instance, of Sarah Siddons, who has been just added to her illustrious brother, in the Abbey, the difficulty has been most successfully overcome.

It is in what was of old the oratory of St. John the Evangelist, but what modern beadledom and cockneydom call the "Nightingale Chapel" (from Roubillac's fantastic group), that this gifted lady's colossal effigy stands. On entering the chapel the visitor catches a glimpse of it, at the extreme end of the sacred recess, through the dark twisted pillars supporting some ancient sepulchral canopy of mediæval art. The effect is at once striking; the light is distributed over the figure to great advantage. The great actress is in her famous dream of somnambulism as Lady Macbeth, and the "damned spot" of unrepented murder is visibly haunting and racking her soul. There is still the native dignity and majestic presence of the Siddons fully preserved; and she seems as much at home in the hallowed aisles of the old Minster as ever she was on the scenic boards.

This able work has issued from the studio of Thomas Campbell (16, Great Marlborough-street), where the artist is now engaged on a colossal bronze figure of the late Lord George Bentinck, to stand in Cavendish-square. He is long known to fame by the great equestrian statue of Earl Hopetown, in Edinburgh; the colossal bronze figure of the Duke of York, also in Modern Athens; that of Earl Grey, which his political friends have erected at Howick; and the recumbent marble portrait of Pauline Borghese, at Chatsworth, an early competition with Canova, in Rome.

A committee of the distinguished lady's friends and admirers, headed by the Marquis of Lansdowne, and of which Mr. Macready was an active member, have carried out the project, to which Lord Titchfield mainly contributed, and the result is highly creditable to all. There is no inscription as yet decided on; were we consulted, we would suggest the short and simple formula, so touching in the early Christian cemeteries of Rome—

SARAH SIDDONS PACEM IMPLORAT.

MARBLE STATUE OF MRS. SIDDONS (BY CAMPBELL), IN WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

ST. CLEMENT DANES
HOLBORN ESTATE
CHARITY ALMSHOUSES.

These Almshouses were formally opened, a short time since, by Richard Twining, Esq., the senior Trustee, and by the other Trustees and Managers of the Charity, in the presence of a large assembly of the parishioners of St. Clement Danes.

They are situate in Garratt-lane, Tooting, and are built in the Tudor style, of red bricks and Airhill stone, from the design of Mr. Robert Hesketh; the builder being Mr. Hicks. The dwellings are forty in number: half of them are occupied by twenty women; and the other twenty by as many men (and their wives, if married); who have either been ratepayers, or are the widows or daughters of ratepayers, of St. Clement Danes parish; each occupant receiving a yearly pension of £30.

The Houses are built so as to form three sides or a quadrangle, having alcoves at the angles with seats, and forming a frontage of about an eighth of a mile. The centre is occupied by an appropriate hall, with open ornamental roof, to be used as a chapel. Each House contains an entrance-passage and parlour, and a bed-room over them, besides a kitchen, with a range and other conveniences attached.

The gardens and buildings cover a space of nearly five acres in extent; and in the centre is a basin and ornamental jet d'eau, supplied by an Artesian well, the water from which is clear and soft enough for every domestic purpose, and rises in abundance to a height sufficient to afford an ample supply to the houses and gardens, which latter are watered by means of hose attachable to standpipes in various parts of the grounds.

There is a separate department for hot and cold baths, and a laundry fitted up with drying-closet and every convenience. A gardener's lodge is erected at the entrance to the grounds.

The buildings and grounds have been thoroughly drained on scientific principles; and, having a stratum of gravel at three or four feet beneath the surface, the health of the inhabitants will be secured; whilst their comfort has been consulted by a simple and efficient mode of warming and ventilating the houses; and, in consideration of many of the inmates dwelling alone, a means of communicating with the matron or master in case of illness is provided to each dwelling.

The comfort, safety, and welfare of the almsfolk have indeed been amply provided for, as well in the erection of the buildings as by the judicious manner in which the managers have drawn up their code of regulations, and by the arrangements which have been made for the visitation and inspection of the Institution, which is the most extensive and complete of its kind in the vicinity of the metropolis.

We agree with a contemporary (the Morning Post) in regarding these edifices as model almshouses, and that, as such, they may be visited hereafter by persons induced to apply their surplus wealth to similar purposes of charity."

Foreign Hops.—The importations of hops which are at present taking place from abroad, from their extent, are of considerable interest and importance. Some small importations of hops from Belgium during the past three or four weeks have been succeeded by two considerably larger arrivals from the United States of America, and which are, it is expected, to be followed by further importations from the United States, to a similar if not greater extent. The three or four importations of hops from Belgium during this season have, within the week, been succeeded by an arrival of 93 bales of this article of merchandise by the vessel Commerce du Grand, from Ghent, the produce of Belgium. Nothing to this extent has before taken place from Belgium; in fact, this arrival comprises considerably more than the whole of the previous importations collectively.

THE ST. CLEMENT DANES HOLBORN ESTATE CHARITY ALMSHOUSES, GARRATT-LANE, TOOTING.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

Sunday, October 7.—Eighteenth Sunday after Trinity.
Monday 8. Sun rises 6h. 14m., sets 5h. 32m.
Tuesday, 9.—St. Denys. Moon's last quarter, 0h. 44m. A.M.
Wednesday, 10.—Oxford and Cambridge Term begins.
Thursday 11.—Old Michaelmas Day
Friday, 12. Sun rises 6h. 20m., sets 5h. 13m.
Saturday, 13. Trans. King Edward the Confessor.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE
FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCT. 13, 1849

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M. A. h. m.	M. A. h. m.	A. M. h. m.	M. A. h. m.	A. M. h. m.	M. A. h. m.	A. M. h. m.
5 10	5 55	6 20	7 30	7 55	8 40	9 25	10 10	10 55	11 35	Tide

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Berbiers."—W. C. W. Labitzky is the name of a popular living composer of dance music in Germany.

"Semitone."—The concertina is the easiest to learn. A good one may be had for from three to five guineas.

"An Admirer."—Mr. Balfe introduced air sung by Mlle Angri was by Ricci.

"Doona."—Mdme. Sontag's reading of Mozart's air "Deh vieni non tardar" is essentially German in the school; that is, the time is prolonged by holding on the note longer than in the Italian style. The two words "vieni, vieni," were sung by her with voce

"A Northman."—The male line of the noble family of Thompson Lord Haversham is extinct; but the female descent still exists in the descendants of the heiress of Haversham, second Lord. The arms are, "Or, on a fesse dancette az. three estoiles arg. on a canton of the second the arm in glory ppr. Crest: An arm erect, vested gu. cuff arg. holding in the hand ppr. five ears of wheat, or. Motto: In lumine tuo." The Thompsons of Trewyan and St. Cores, in Cornwall, claim to be descended collaterally from the Lords Haversham.

"St. Underwilla."—The present Queen of Spain is daughter of the late King Ferdinand VII. She has no child. Don Carlos, who is her Majesty's uncle, claimed the throne as her male. The Queen of Portugal is daughter of the late Emperor Don Pedro. She has been twice married. Her present husband is Ferdinand, Prince of Saxe-Cobury Gotha, first cousin of the Queen.

"Z. P." An attorney and a barrister are both lawyers.

"Lotie." The Duchess of Argyll was married July 31, 1844. The Marquis of Hertford has not yet attained the age of twenty-one.

"Windsor."—The additional name may be taken at a cost of about fifty guineas; apply to G. R. Harrison, Esq., Windsor Herald, College of Arms, Doctors' Commons, London

"Amicus."—The arms of Anderson are, "Arg. a chev. between three crosses flory sa. Crest: A water spaniel passant, or. Motto: Gnavior."

"Inquirer."—The arms of the Marquis of Carmarthenshire are, "Sa. a lion rampant regardant arg. Crest: A demi lion rampant regardant as in the arms."

"Londonensis."—The salary of the Governor-General of India is £25,000.

"Archæologia," Newcastle-on-Tyne.

"H. R." Cambridge.—Simpkin and Marshall, London. We do not know the price.

"R. B."—Lindley's "Elements of Botany" may be had of any bookseller.

"C. C. H." Staines.—See Mr. Knight's "Studies of Shakspeare," for the most recent recent information respecting the portraits of the great poet.

1020 and 1849, suggested as a comparative illustration, would be in very objectionable taste.

"A Constant Reader," Framlingham.—Your design is impracticable.

"Gordon."—The charge is correct; one of the quarter's Numbers being 14.

"Glenford B."—The outline print may be had of Williams and Norgate, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden.

"J. C. M." Chester.—The quotation is from Milton's "Paradise Lost."

"A. G. O."—We cannot spare room for the philological observations.

"E. H. W." Coventry.—Apply to Mr. Wells, geographer, Charing-cross.

"Agricola."—See "The Farmer's Library," published by the Useful Knowledge Society.

"J. L." Birmingham.—The picture, &c., may be had by remitting 2s. to our office.

"H. B." Highgate.—The presidency of Louis Napoleon was fixed at three years.

"Philanthropos," and "P. D." Dalston.—Received.

"D. C. R." Lambeth, Cremorne Gardens were closed on the 19th ult., the day of humiliation in Chelsea

"Inquirer." Brixton.—Our reply respecting the height of St. Paul's is from Mr. Cunningham's "Handbook for London," probably a large work on St. Paul's, or Elmes's "Life of Wren," would decide the matter.

"E. P." Yes.

"A Lover of Freedom," Larkeard.—We doubt whether such a clause would be valid.

"J. H." Devizes Received.

"An Old Subscriber."—The same difference that existed between the late Bishop of Norwich and the present Vicar of Leeds (Dr Cook)

"An Old Subscriber," Chatham.—To serve a term to an architect, &c. The mode of admission to the Institution of Civil Engineers is by ballot. Apply to the secretary, 9, Great George-street, Westminster.

"T. D.," Mallock-bridge.—The Times shall appear shortly.

"X Y Z." To [illegible]er paper on Music, in a late Number of the Quarterly Review, was by Mr. Geo. Hogarth.

"A [illegible]." Inquire for the portraits at a music-seller's.

"Female Artiste." We see no impropriety in doing what you name.

"Edward," Dublin.—We cannot inform you.

"J. H." Rural, is checked for his suggestion, though we cannot render it available, the authority being too slight.

"Spes." The Holy Alliance was a league, ratified Sept. 26, 1815, between the Emperors of Russia and Austria and the King of Prussia, by which they mutually bound themselves, among other things, to be governed by Christian principles in all their political transactions.

"W. S."—The Queen does not use Royal Arms as Sovereign, and does not impale Prince Albert's. There is no work which gives the origin of the different coats of arms, and the reasons of their assumption.

"Bon Jour." The Baronetcy of Webb was created April 2, 1644, and still exists, being now enjoyed by Sir Henry Webb Bart

"Inquis Artis."—Apply at the Heralds' Office. The fee depends on the trouble.

"L. G." To print and vote and so are borne by so very many persons, that it would be impossible to enumerate them in our paper.

"Blason."—The mark of cadency is coloured according to the Herald's option.

"Gulielmus."—The seal submitted bears the arms of the Canford Webbs, who were the senior line

"Augusta."—The existing Dukes who owe their letters to King Charles II. are Richmond, Grafton, Beaufort, and St Albans.

"Heraldicus Hibernicus."—The proper marshalling is 1st and 4th, quarterly Smith and Reg.; 2d and 3d, Cook. The arms of M'Inlyre are, "Quarterly 1st and 4th, or an eagle displayed gu. armed and langued az.; 2d, arg. a galley, her sails furled az., flags gu.; 3d, arg. a sinister hand couped, fesswise gu. holding across crosslet fitchée sa. Crest, a dexter hand holding a dagger in pale, both ppr. Motto, "Fer Ardua." The arms of Lathgow are, "Arg. a demi otter sa. issuing out of a loch in base ppr.

"Inquisitor."—The arms of the Protector Somerset, of the reign of Edw. VI., were the same as those now borne by the ducal head of the house of Seymour, viz. "Quarterly 1st and 4th or, on a pile gu. between six fleurs-de-lis az. three lions of England (being the coat of augmentation granted by King Henry VIII. on his marriage with Lady Jane Seymour); 2d and 3d, gu. two wings conjoined in base, the ree quasi demembrata, or."

"Seymour."—We know of no work that contains pedigrees of the Webbs and M'Donalls of Ireland

"J. E."—The lozenges are governed by the metals and colours of the paternal arms, and have no reference to the quarterings.

"J. G." Mansfield.—The Duc de Bordeaux is son of the late Duc de Berry, who was son of Charles X., King of France. The duke's mother, Caroline-Ferdinande-Louise, Duchess of Berry, is daughter of Francis I., late King of the Two Sicilies.

"An Inquiring Subscriber."—The arms of Clark, of Somersalshire are, "Per chev. or and gu. three lions' heads erased counterchanged." The arms of Bryant, "As. on a cross or, a cinquefoil between four lozenges gu."

"C. J. F."—Messrs. Hardman, Birmingham," is sufficient address.

"W. F. H."—Whitelegg.—The railway company will be liable.

"J. C."—Plattner's is the most recently published treatise on the "Blowpipe."

Humboldt's "Aspects of Nature."—In the memoir of Baron Humboldt, in our Journal of September 22, we spoke of the "Aspects of Nature" as an entirely new production. This, we are informed by a Correspondent, is a mistake, the first edition of the book having appeared in German nearly fifty years ago, and the French translation, under the title of "Tableaux de la Nature," from the second German edition, bears the date 1828. Soon after the appearance of his "Kosmos" in an English dress, Humboldt expressed an earnest desire that Mrs. Sabine might be induced to translate the "Aspects;" and Baron Humboldt has, we understand, re-composed part, and thoroughly revised the whole work.

BOOKS, &c. RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

Captain Warner's Narrative.——Brand's Popular Antiquities ——Sophocles the Oxford Translation——The Lord of the Manor. 2 vols.——England and Hungary. By J. Toulmin Smith.
Music.—Midnight.——The Hellenic National Song.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1849.

It now appears to be beyond doubt that the potato crop in Ireland has once again been extensively smitten with the fatal blight. The accounts from the remoter districts are unfortunately too similar in their details of the present extent and rapid progress of the calamity, to leave room for the hope that, during the approaching winter, the distress of the Irish people will not largely tax the few remaining resources of Irish property, and the benevolence of this country, to alleviate it. The gleam of sunshine that burst upon the prospects of Ireland a few months ago has dis appeared; and once again all seems to be gloom and darkness. The desperate reliance of the people upon the potato, and the unhappy relationship subsisting between deeply embarrassed landlords and an ignorant and dispirited tenantry, by the operation of which the cheapest and lowest kind of food was all that remained, after payment of rate and taxes, for the cultivator of the soil, led, in spite of repeated warnings, to a large cultivation of the potato during the present year. The blight first appeared partially about the middle of August, and was mentioned in this Journal on the 25th of that month. About three weeks ago it began to spread with more rapidity, and the latest accounts represent that no reliance can now be placed upon the potato as an article of food during the winter; and that the people are night and day employed in digging the crop, to save as much as possible from the impending ruin. The markets, in consequence, are glutted with potatoes, which are sold in many instances at barely nominal prices.

In the meantime, the class immediately removed above pauperism continues its dishonest warfare against the proprietors of the soil. Despair has no morality or sense of justice; and the tenant, with the opportunity of scraping together sufficient means to carry him across the Atlantic, and establish him there, is not particular whether he defrauds his landlord of his rent, or the Union of the rates due for the maintenance of his destitute neighbours. All that the tenants seem to care about is, to get money to leave the country, no matter at whose expense, or by what means, honest or dishonest. To cut and remove the crops upon the Sunday, and thereby set the landlord at defiance in his claim for arrears of rent, is the common practice. Violent collisions with the constabulary and military are the constant result; and these collisions being attended not unfrequently with loss of life, mutual exasperation, and the great increase of agrarian and other outrages, are becoming of daily occurrence. While details of this kind are received from almost all parts of the country, with the sole exception of the north and north-west, the Emigration agents at Cork and elsewhere report the amount of this season's emigration to exceed everything previously known. What increases the evil, is the fact that the class of persons who emigrate form the very life-blood of the nation. It is composed principally of men in the vigour of their days, and with a certain amount of means at their command; of men who have the energy to convert the forests and wildernesses of America into profitable farms, and who might, under more favourable circumstances, convert the bogs of their own country into gardens of fertility.

The professional agitators, to whom Ireland owes so many of her miseries, have taken advantage of these circumstances—and the repeal party, in its two sections of the old and young Irelanders, are severally at work again. Mr. Duffy represents the one class, Mr. John O'Connell the other. The first-named seems to have a much clearer understanding than the last of the fact, that in the purely agricultural country of Ireland the malady is a social far more than a political one; and that the main thing to be striven for is a fairer adjustment of the relationship between landlord and tenant, by means of which men of capital, energy, and skill may be induced to undertake the cultivation of the naturally fertile, but long mismanaged soil. Mr. Duffy will probably be of service in this respect, unless he should neutralize his efforts by any hopeless, insane, and wicked striving for a separation from this country. Mr. John O'Connell, in a manifesto to the people of Ireland, has formally announced the revival of the Repeal Association, and has set before his countrymen, in a singularly perverse and ill-toned document, the objects to be sought. The first is to arouse the Ministry and Parliament to the danger threatening the people from the renewed failure of the potato crop—a matter in which Mr. O'Connell's aid was not needed, and to which no one in this country will be indifferent. The second is to check the progress of Ribbonism—a task in the accomplishment of which we wish his influence, and that of other agitators, was great enough to be successful. The third is to contradict the assertion that the Irish Roman Catholics are contented with the Protestant establishment. The fourth is what he calls the "estoppel of the horrid eviction system," on which point a great misunderstanding exists; and not even Mr. O'Connell, we venture to assert, would or could stop that system if he were absolute master of the fate of Ireland. A landlord who has a property encumbered by a tenantry who have neither skill, capital, nor energy to cultivate the land, and who pay no rent, must evict. There is no alternative for him; and though, before the establishment of the Poor-Law, these evictions were dreadful in their operation, amounting often to a sentence of death, no such consequences need result at present. The evicted pauper has the Union to go to, where he finds far more comfortable quarters than he ever had in his own mud hovel, and where the landlord that evicts pays his due proportion of the rate that maintains him. To attempt "the estoppel" of this system is sheer folly, however well it may sound in the ears of the untinking; and Mr. O'Connell only displays his own ignorance by insisting so forcibly upon it. His fifth object is "Tenant-right—plain, unmistakable, simple, equitable tenant-right;" and, if he and other patriots would confine themselves to this point, and never cease their efforts until they obtained it, they would entitle themselves in reality to the appellation of true friends of Ireland, and to the gratitude of their countrymen. His sixth object is the amendment of the Poor-Law, if amendment be possible—a point on which he does not seem to have made up his mind. His seventh is the Repeal of the Union. Mr. O'Connell will find no sympathy among Irishmen in this revival of an exploded and discredited delusion: Repeal is defunct, and not even Daniel O'Connell, if he were alive and vigorous, could galvanize its rotten corpse into the semblance of vita.ity.

But the claims of a perishing people for the means of subsistence will soon drown the small shriek of the merely political agitators; and the statesmen of this country will have earnestly to consider the old and continually renewed question, "What is to be done with Ireland?" We may be certain of this, that there will be no disposition to evade it amongst the leaders of any party; and that, if perfect wisdom do not sway their councils, there will be no lack of an earnest desire to do the best, and to lay the foundation of those social reforms which, by the blessing of Providence, and the operation of time, may raise Ireland from her destitute and degraded state, and turn her present calamities into the seeds of future blessings.

Mr. C. Eastland Michele, who for many years past has conducted one of the daily journals of the metropolis, has been appointed by Lord Palmerston to the important post of British Consul at St. Petersburg. The appointment has given general satisfaction to the large literary and political circle to whom the high personal character and attainments of Mr. Michele were known. He will carry with him to his new sphere of usefulness the respect and good wishes of all who were witnesses of his efforts to maintain for the last seventeen years, the independence, as well as the ability of the metropolitan press; and the compliment to literature, which Lord Palmerston has bestowed by the selection, will, we have no doubt, be fully appreciated by the large class who think an occasional recognition of the claims of literature to public employment, a graceful as well as a politic proceeding on the part of those who have the bestowal of the national patronage.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

ELECTION OF LORD MAYOR.

On Saturday last (Michaelmas day), pursuant to annual custom, the election of a fit and proper person to fill the important office of Lord Mayor of the city of London for the ensuing year took place at the Guildhall. As a preliminary, the civic dignitaries present and elect, attended Divine service at the church of St. Lawrence, Jewry, and thence proceeded to the Guildhall, where the election took place. Although no opposition was expected, the attendance on the part of the livery was considerable.

Shortly after one o'clock, the Lord Mayor, Recorder, and Aldermen, Common Council, and the various civic officers, entered the hall.

The business of the day was opened by an address from the Recorder. The list of Aldermen was then read over, and the choice of the livery fell upon Aldermen Farncomb and Musgrove.

The Court of Aldermen having retired to select a Lord Mayor from the two names sent up to them, returned after a short absence, and the Recorder announced that the choice of the citizens had fallen on Alderman Farncomb. (Cheers.)

The Lord Mayor elect having returned thanks for the honour done him in elevating him to the civic chair, the following resolution was unanimously agreed to:—"That the thanks of the Aldermen, Common Council, and livery of the city of London, in common hall assembled, are due, and be hereby given, to Sir James Duke, for the upright, firm, and judicious manner in which he has discharged his magisterial duties; for his support of the public charities; for his prominent and able efforts to alleviate the effects of the epidemic which is now happily passing away; and for his munificent and princely hospitality. And this common hall further desire to express their hope, that the confidence which has recently been reposed in Sir James Duke by his unanimous election to represent the City in Parliament will not only be justified by his sincere desire to support the rights of his fellow-citizens, and their trade and commerce, but that he will use his best endeavours to promote liberal and enlightened principles of government."

The Lord Mayor suitably acknowledged the compliment; and Mr. Anderton proposed a vote of thanks to the outgoing Sheriffs, remarking on the gratifying fact that during their term of office no execution had taken place in the city of London.

The vote having been carried unanimously, and been duly acknowledged, the proceedings terminated.

SUNDAY LABOUR AT THE POST-OFFICE.

On Wednesday a public meeting of merchants, bankers, traders, and other influential inhabitants and men of business, was held at the Hall of Commerce, Threadneedle-street, for the purpose of memorialising her Majesty's Government against the proposed desecration of the Sabbath at the General Post-office. The meeting was a full one. The chair was taken by the Lord Mayor. His Lordship, in opening the proceedings, said that he had great pleasure in presiding over an occasion on which all parties and classes of the people were alike interested; and he read a letter which he had received from Lord John Russell, dated "Woburn Abbey, Tuesday," in which it was stated that there was no intention of opening the Post-Office on Sundays, and that the real nature of the proposed change had already appeared in the newspapers. He believed Lord John Russell would never countenance Sabbath desecration; still he (the Lord Mayor) entertained a lurking suspicion in his own mind that if the change had not already appeared in the newspapers, it would lead to more extensive alterations. (Cheers.) He had had an interview that morning with Mr Rowland Hill, who explained his views at length, and said that the change would only employ twenty-five hands for a portion only of the Sabbath day, and that it would relieve some thousands of hands from being employed on that day in the country post-offices. He (the Lord Mayor) feared that this was only the getting in of the narrow end of the wedge, and he therefore hoped that the citizens would follow up their present opposition energetically, and that they would never cease until they had achieved their Christian-like object. (Cheers.)

Resolutions deprecating the proposed change were unanimously carried, and the following memorial to the Lords of the Treasury agreed to:—

TO THE LORDS COMMISSIONERS OF HER MAJESTY'S TREASURY.

The Memorial of the undersigned Merchants, Bankers, Traders, and others, of the City of London, humbly sheweth—

That your memorialists have heard with the deepest regret that it is intended by the authorities at the General Post-office to commence, very shortly, the regular delivery of mails from the country at large, and the transmission of mails into the country, on the Sunday, as on other days of the week. That your memorialists feel convinced that such a measure will inevitably lead to a Sunday delivery and transmission of letters in the metropolis. That your memorialists do not anticipate any appeal based on mere convenience will induce the adoption of a measure so repugnant to the feelings of the community at large, and which has been deared by all classes, while it is deprecated by all. And your memorialists shall ever pray.

Mr. J. Labouchere, in the course of his speech, read the following statement, to show what were the existing arrangements in the General Post-office with regard to Sunday labour, and to compare them with those which would exist if the proposed alteration were effected:—

MORNING DUTY

NOW.—A portion of the bags containing mails from the outports, in number 30, come into the General Post-office on Sunday morning at various hours; these are all opened at present for the purpose of taking out the letters for Government offices, a practice first established in time of war, and which is kept up for the convenience of all parties through the Post-Office correspondence.

BY THE PROPOSED ARRANGEMENT.—600 bags will arrive early on the Sunday morning, 742 persons will, in their turns, have to attend on that day in order to open, sort, and despatch the country letters. Mr. Hill proposes for this additional duty 20 men only, a force wholly insufficient even to perform the first details of the duty

AFTERNOON AND EVENING

NOW.—13 bags arrive on Sundays at two P.M., and the same operation of selecting official letters is performed as in the morning, by certain persons of whom two are clerks.

BY THE PROPOSED ARRANGEMENT.—In addition to this duty on Sunday afternoon, an evening duty will be performed from five to eight P.M., when the country letters which arrive in the metropolis on Sunday from all parts of Ireland and the principal towns in the north of England, will, in addition to those that remain over from the morning, have to be sorted, the number amounting to 600 bags or 742 persons to the various posts in the kingdom—involving the attendance in their turns of Sunday duties of the above-mentioned 742 persons

The other speakers were Mr. Masterman, M.P., Mr. Roberts, Mr. Ritchie, Sir E. Buxton, M.P., and Mr. Labouchere, M.P. During the proceedings, the Lord Mayor being obliged to attend a Court of Common Council, the chair was taken by Mr. Masterman.

GENERAL AMNESTY FOR POLITICAL OFFENDERS.

On Wednesday evening a large meeting was held at the South London Chartist Hall, Blackfriars-road, to adopt a memorial to the Queen to grant a general amnesty to all political offenders. Messrs. M'Grath, Baker, Clark, and other Chartist leaders, were present. Mr. Miller presided, and having briefly explained the object of the meeting, the following resolution was agreed to:

That, when circumstances render the punishment of political offenders necessary, a broad distinction ought to be made in favour of persons convicted of crimes against persons and property, and, seeing that in the case of the political prisoners confined in the House of Correction, Westminster, and such other gaols in these Sessions, such distinction has not been made, this meeting is of opinion that the severity of the treatment, and the cases of hardship which they have endured, has amply satisfied the requirement of the law; and this meeting emphatically declares itself in favour of the release of all persons who are at present suffering imprisonment for political offences.

A respectful memorial to her Majesty was then adopted.

Several speakers addressed the meeting, and the language adopted by all parties was of the most moderate description.

The meeting, it was decided, should be entrusted for presentation to the Home-office to Mr. Alderman Humphery; and the following letters were read, approving of the object of the meeting:

Eastbourne, Sussex, Sept. 29, 1849.

Sir,—Your note of the 27th inst. has just reached me. It will give me much pleasure to promote the prayer of the memorial, and I shall write to Mr. Cobden to-day that I shall be in London on Friday, and shall be ready to accompany him to the Home-office. Mr. Hume is in Norfolk; but I expect to meet him on Wednesday at Norwich.

I am, &c., JOSHUA WALMSLEY

103, Westbourne-terrace, Friday morning.

Sir,—I have just received your note, on my return to town, and beg to say, in reply, that I shall be happy to see you here to-morrow morning, about eleven o'clock, if convenient to yourself.

And am, Sir, &c., RICHARD COBDEN

Bushey Hall, Great Yarmouth, 25th Sept., 1849

Sir,—Considering, as I do, that an amnesty should be proclaimed by her Majesty's government, for political offences at home and abroad, I should willingly forward the object of the petition you have sent me. I shall not be in town before the 15th of October at the soonest, I shall, however, hear from Mr. Cobden, and act accordingly

I am, &c., JOSEPH HUME.

Banquet at the Mansion-House.—On Tuesday the Lord Mayor had the honour of entertaining at dinner, in the Egyptian Hall, the livery of the Spectacle-makers' Company, Admiral Dundas, M.P., chairman, and the directors of the Kennet and Avon Canal Company. Amongst the guests present were Lord Carrington, M.P., Sir G. Carroll, Mr. Cubitt, M.P., Mr. Barry Baldwin, M.P.; Mr. Pearson, M.P.; Mr. Sheriff Lawrence, Mr. Sheriff Nicoll, M. D. Hill, Esq., F. Salmon, Esq., &c. Covers were laid for 250.

Charing-Cross Hospital.—On Monday the winter session at this institution commenced; when H. H. Lewis, Esq., A.M., delivered, according to custom, an introductory lecture, in which he took a rapid glance of the history of medicine. Having found it first among the Eastern hierarchy, he traced it from the Greeks to the Romans, whence it seemed to have been lost during what are commonly called the dark ages. To the Saracens, he said, we were indebted for its revival; they discovered its most valuable recipes; they gave it a written pharmacopœia; and the condition of the science from their times down to the present had been one of continued progress. The lecturer next touched upon the present state of medical legislation:—He trusted soon to see the absurd privileges of the Apothecaries' Company abolished, and the profession, in all its branches, removed from all contact with trade. He thought that might be managed by allowing general practitioners moderate fees for attendance—a course which would not at all interfere with the fees now received by the leaders of the profession. The result of the present vicious system was to make the English the most drug-taking people in the universe. (Hear, hear.)

Westminster Hospital.—The school of medicine now opened at this hospital was inaugurated on Monday in a lecture by Dr. Hamilton Roe, on "The Value, Scope, and Results of Medical and Surgical Studies." The building in which the former school of medicine was held was pulled down by the Westminster improvement Commissioners; the Governors of the Westminster Hospital have, therefore, constructed a new building for the purpose behind the hospital

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S HOSPITAL.—On Monday, the first day of the winter session, a large party, comprising the élite of the profession, sat down to dinner in the hall of the college. The fare provided, according to custom, invited the heads of the medical profession. Among others were Mr. Stanley, President of the College of Surgeons; Dr. Copland, Professor Owen, Mr. Lawrence, Dr. Mayo, Dr. Burton, &c. At seven o'clock the party retired to the theatre, which was crowded with the old pupils of the hospital and the students, to hear introductory address by Dr. Farre. In the course of which he paid a high compliment to Dr. Britton, the author of a paper in the Medical Gazette, stating forth most important discoveries in regard to cholera; subsequently, in the great hall, Dr. Britton could be found by the curious, and his opinion seemed to be that Dr. Britton's facts were of the greatest interest and importance, and that he deserved the highest credit for having brought them forward in so able a manner, unencumbered with crude speculations or unfounded theories.

CITY OF LONDON GENERAL PENSION SOCIETY.—On Monday, four additional pensioners, two men and two females, were elected, which raises the total number of aged persons now receiving the society's bounty to [illegible] men are paid 27s. and the women 15s. per month each; and it is a singular fact that not a single death occurred among the pensioners during the past year, though the ages vary from 70 to 90.

EXPELLED WESLEYAN MINISTERS.—At a public meeting of Methodists of the First London Circuit, held in the British School-room, Cowper street, City-road, on Tuesday evening, to hear addresses from Messrs. Everett, Dunn, and Griffiths, relating to their expulsion from the Wesleyan Conference, resolutions were agreed to:—1st, to the effect, that the meeting entirely disapproved of the conduct of the Conference towards the expelled ministers; and 2d, that inasmuch as it is highly injurious to the interests of spiritual religion in our societies, and most ultimately prove fatal to, not exist nee as a church, to have a continuance of these constantly recurring periods of excitement and agitation, produced by the undue exercise of ministerial authority, and by the continued and systematic encroachment of Conference upon the liberties of the people, this meeting declares that, in its opinion, these evils can only be removed by a revision of the whole methodistic church polity, and by the introduction into it of elements more popular in their character and more in accordance with the principles of the New Testament.

THE CHOLERA IN LAMBETH.—A meeting was held on Wednesday evening, at the Horse Tavern, Kennington, for the purpose of providing the poor with comfortable dwellings, and making such sanitary regulations as may prevent the further progress of cholera. R. Hawes, Esq., M.P., who presided, said, it was intended to bring under the consideration of the meeting the following distinct subjects—the removal of nuisances, the supply of water, the erection of baths and washhouses, and last, but not least, the erection of dwellings for the labouring classes of this borough. Mr. Newman then proposed the following resolution:—"That meeting confesses with reverential humility that the direful pil gue of cholera which still afflicts the land has been sent by the Almighty on account of the people's sins and of their hardness of heart in not mercy to diminish its ravages, which have been almost exclusively confined to the labouring classes, by that, among other means, of the human agency of houses to house visiting, now in operation under the superintendence of the parochial authorities as an awful warning against the sin of neglecting the physical sufferings and social wants of the poor; and this meeting expresses its deep gratitude to an all-wise and merciful Providence that the present visitation is not more severe, and that the selfish regarding their Christian duties to their humbler and weaker fellow-creatures; since, by atonement and by retribution, they may be relieved from the sins of the past; being convinced of the sufficiency of resources and consequently of the guilt of leaving 'undone' those sacred obligations towards their poorer brethren which the Holy Scriptures have enjoined on them to perform." The Rev. W. Leask seconded the motion, and it was unanimously carried. The meeting was subsequently addressed by W. J. Bates, Esq., Sir Charles Aldis, D. Perrin, Esq., Mr. W. Wentzell, Mr. Edwards, and Mr. Inclesson and resolutions embodying Mr. Hawes's four propositions were unanimously agreed to.

THE GUARDIANS OF ST. PANCRAS AND THE BOARD OF HEALTH.—On Tuesday a fully attended meeting of the Board of Directors and Guardians of the Poor of St. Pancras took place at the Workhouse, Camden-Town, for the purpose of considering a communication from the solicitors to the Board of Health, intimating that they had received instructions from the General Board of Health to take legal proceedings against the Board of Guardians for contumacious disobedience of the Nuisance Act. Mr. M'Cubbey, the clerk to the board, read the communication in question, which also demanded the names of the members of the board, for the purposes of prosecution. The clerk stated that he had also received a summons from the Board of Health to appear personally at Gwydyr House that day, to be examined by the board. He also read a letter which the directors ordered to be forwarded to the Board of Health on the 18th ult., showing, by a reference to facts, that the directors had not been regardless or lax in their endeavours to remove disease or prevent its spread. The letter concluded by expressing the regret of the directors that an imperative order should have been addressed to them by the Board of Health, and that it was a misapprehension of the case, and in disregard of the anxious attention and watchfulness they have evinced. They were ready to act up to the order when convinced of the necessity of such a step, but to oppose reality of informing themselves, they conscientiously reposed confidence in the matter. Mr. Fowler said, although it might be a very great question of law whether the Board of Health and the power to enforce their orders, still he thought in cases where the Legislature had adopted was such as would justify them in the eyes of the public. (Hear.) Whilst, therefore, they could not allow the absence of their clerk, whose presence was indispensably necessary, he thought they should act in a different manner to forwarding to the Board of Health the names and addresses of the Board of Directors and Guardians. Mr. Fowler moved a resolution to the effect, "That the clerk forward the names of the members of the board to the Board of Health, the same time calling their attention to the letter of the 18th of September, and stating other steps which the directors had taken for the check of cholera since that period." The motion was unanimously agreed to, and it was directed to be forwarded forthwith, so as to arrive at Gwydyr House by half-past one o'clock, in lieu of the clerk, who had been summoned.

CITY OF LONDON COMMITTEE OF HEALTH.—On Tuesday the Committee of Health assembled in Guildhall, Mr. Pilcky in the chair. A report from Mr. Simon, the officer of health for the City of London, was presented and read to the committee, from which it appeared that the system of household visitation had been carried out, and had been productive of the most beneficial results as a means of prevention in threatened choleraic attacks. The report recommended it as the routine of domiciliary visits should be preserved in for some time to come, and attributed the comparative exemption from the ravages of the disease which the City had experienced to the activity, zeal, and benevolence of the visitors.

CITY COMMISSION OF SEWERS.—On Tuesday the commissioners assembled in the Guildhall; Mr. Deputy Peacock in the chair. Reports from the inspectors and from the committee were read, in which were detailed the sanitary measures adopted in some of the City their cts; and after a conversation the latter was sent back to the committee from which it emanated for reconsideration. Mr. Simon presented a report on the state of health of the City, in which, after referring to the abatement of the epidemic and the measures to be adopted for effecting a permanent improvement in the state of the City, the sanitary improvements are called for, and in which examination is necessary. After a brief conversation, the report was referred to the Board of Health. Adjourned.

METROPOLITAN SEWERS.—A special Court of Sewers was held on Wednesday by adjournment at their office, Great-street, Soho, at ten o'clock; Sir John Forbes in the chair. The following gentlemen were present:—Mr. Chadwick, Dr. Southwood Smith, the Rev. Mr. Stone, the Rev. Mr. Murray, the Rev. Mr. Cowie, Mr. Hawes, Alderman Lawrence, Sir H. De la Beche, Mr. Austin, Mr. Bidwell, Mr. Roberts, and Mr. Lambert (clerk). The secretary having read the minutes of the last meeting, stated that up to the 20th of August 61 plans had been sent in, with reference to 51 of which certain statements had been made. Since last date, 40 plans had been sent in, and 34 entirely new plans had been sent in, and also 23 additional or supplemental ones, making a total of 118, and, including the supplemental plans, 148.—The Rev. Mr. Dowling said, in the absence of counsel, he must on the part of the public object to the jurisdiction of the Commission to lay down rules for the guidance of the competing engineers on several points of great importance; viz. the commercial value of sewage manure, the mode of the disposal, whether in a diluted or a concentrated state. On the conclusion arrived at with respect to these points depend the main features of all plans, whether there shall be several outfalls or only one—whether the house drainage and surface drainage shall be united or separated, whereas the preliminary enquiries on those points are not completed, and the court has had no opportunity of supplying the competing parties with the requisite data, the adversary of the plans will only lead to further confusion and delay. It seems to me an essential point to be ascertained, as a preliminary, how much additional water supply is required, and how much can be given, having fully considered that we cannot expect an economic system of house drainage where we shall issue the supply in a more abundant way supplied with water. That, upon calling on the public at large to give its plans, some rule should have been laid down for the remuneration of the successful competitors. The assumption is that the best plan only succeeds, and will lead to no practical result or benefit to the metropolis, but will rather aggravate the complaint against the Commission; and believing that the Court has been convened, and the inhabitants called on to be assessed, at

WATERING-PLACES OF ENGLAND.—SCARBOROUGH FROM THE PIER-HEAD.—(SEE PRECEDING PAGE.)

It must be satisfactory to them that all the recent experience should have so fully confirmed the correctness of the recommendations and instructions in their various notifications and instructions, founded on the evidence industriously collected from all available and trustworthy sources. It has been seen that as to the cure of the disease the medical profession are as far off now as ever; but the undoubted fact has been established, that with early and prompt measures, and especially a good house-to-house ventilation, prevention may almost entirely be reckoned upon.

It is superfluous point to the necessity and advantage of the appointment of the Board; it having been so fully exemplified by universal appeals for assistance and advice from all parts of the country. The deputations and personal applications, the mass of letters of complaint of nuisances and inquiry from the first moment of their appointment, appear to have been overwhelming; so much so that, while giving the excellent advice to the public of avoiding over-exertion, late hours, and excitement, to take meals at regular intervals, and preserve a quiet, even frame of mind, they have had little chance of practising what they have so ably advocated; and so, worn out with exertions, Mr. Chadwick, and Dr. Smith (the secretary), and several others on the establishment, have, as recently noticed by our contemporaries, been suffering severely in health, in consequence

It may be useful to mention that the Report of the General Board of Health up to July, 1849, presented to both Houses of Parliament by command of her Majesty, and lately published, contains, besides a statement of the proceedings of the Board in a "new and untrodden field of legislation," a series of regulations and precautionary and remedial measures, which cannot be too extensively circulated. The Report is, for this purpose, printed in a cheap form, and may be had by order of any bookseller.

SITTING OF THE BOARD OF HEALTH, GWYDYR HOUSE WHITEHALL.

RETURN OF THE COURT FROM THE HIGHLANDS.

ARRIVAL OF HER MAJESTY AT CUPAR ANGUS.

We briefly announced in our last impression the arrival of her Majesty the Queen, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, and the youthful Princes and Princesses at Howick Hall, the seat of Earl Grey, in Northumberland, where her Majesty passed one night en route for the south. Additional particulars o the Royal progress to Osborne, with Illustrations of the Cupar Angus Station o the Scottish Midland Railway, where her Majesty "took the rail," and the reception given to our beloved Sovereign in the interesting localities of Berwick-upon-Tweed, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and the ancient city of York are now supplied.

ARRIVAL AT CUPAR ANGUS.

The Roya party left Balmoral at half-past eight o'clock on Thursday morning, for the Cupar Angus station, distant about 49 miles, where her Majesty arrived at a quarter before three o'clock. The directors of the Scottish Midland Railway, with Viscount Duncan, who is chairman of the Board, at their head, had come to Cupar at an early hour to receive the Royal party. The station at this place is comparatively a small one, and, on receipt of her Majesty's commands, it was found necessary to add a little to the accommodation it afforded, by fitting up a temporary refreshment-room for the use of the Queen. All this was done very cleverly; and before her Majesty arrived, all the arrangements were completed, the station very prettily decorated externally and internally, and its vicinity graced with a large number of spectators.

The Royal train, with the saloon carriage belonging to the London and North-Western Railway Company, had been brought down during the morning.

The Duke of Athol arrived at the station shortly before two o'clock, and remained with Lord Duncan and several other influential residents in the neighbourhood until the arrival of the Queen, which took place precisely at a quarter before three o'clock.

After partaking of a hasty luncheon, the Queen, having thanked the directors for their attention, entered the saloon carriage, and the train proceeded south, passing through Perth and Stirling, and reaching the Greenhill station (the point of junction between the Scottish Central and Edinburgh and Glasgow lines) about fifteen minutes past five o'clock.

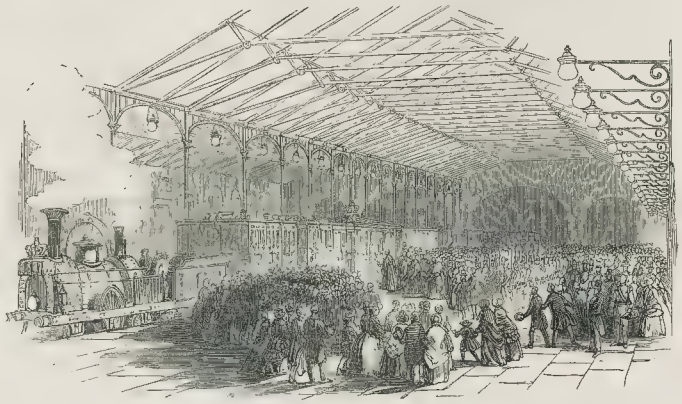
ARRIVAL IN EDINBURGH.

At five minutes to six o'clock the Royal train entered the station at Waverley Bridge, amidst the enthusiastic cheering of the spectators, and was stopped exactly in front of the Lord Provost and magistrates. Colonel Anson, Equerry to his Royal Highness Prince Albert, immediately afterwards alighted from a carriage in the Royal train, and introduced the Lord Provost to her Majesty and her illustrious Consort, when the Queen said to his Lordship—"I am very glad to see you in the city of Edinburgh;" to which the Lord Provost replied, that in the name of the inhabitants, he had to offer her Majesty their most hearty welcome to her city of Edinburgh. He was sorry that her Majesty's stay would be so short, but again, in the name of the citizens of Edinburgh, he heartily wished her Majesty a most prosperous journey. His Royal Highness Prince Albert also said, "We are sorry that our stay is so short in your beautiful city."

The Earl of Morton, General Riddell, and Sir James Forrest next had the honour of presentation to her Majesty and the Prince.

ARRIVAL AT BERWICK-UPON-TWEED.

The preparations for welcoming the Queen at Berwick were upon a complete scale.



ARRIVAL OF THE ROYAL TRAIN AT BERWICK-UPON-TWEED.

The lateness of her Majesty's arrival—the train not entering the station unt ten minutes to eight o'clock—prevented the Royal party from enjoying the beautiful scenery of the locality; but the reception given to the Queen was most enthusiastic, and proved to demonstration the loyal affection entertained for her Majesty by the honest burghers of this ancient town.

At Berwick, the train, which had been under the management of the North British Railway Company from Edinburgh, was taken charge of by the directors and officials of the York, Newcastle, and Berwick line, under whose conduct it proceeded south, crossing the High Level-bridge at a moderate speed, and then travelling rapidly towards Little Mill station, about thirty miles south of Berwick and one mile and a half from Howick Hall, the seat of Earl Grey.

ARRIVAL AT HOWICK.

Her Majesty arrived at Howick precisely at nine o'clock, and was received in the entrance hall by the Earl and Countess Grey, whom the Queen cordially greeted. Dinner was served almost immediately upon the Queen's arrival: Sir George and Lady Grey were the only guests, in addition to the members of the Royal suite and the family circle. After dinner her Majesty received, through Sir George Grey, an address from the corporation of the ancient borough of Alnwick. Her Majesty retired early, and was out walking in the grounds with the Prince next morning before nine o'clock. The Earl Grey accompanied her Majesty, who, before leaving, planted an oak sapling. The Queen took leave of the Countess Grey at eleven o'clock, and immediately left for the railway station. The Earl Grey, with his two brothers (Colonel Grey, and Captain Grey, R.N.), accompanied the cortège on horseback; and the Royal carriage was followed by a very large number of the tenantry of the noble Earl, mounted.

The Queen having taken leave of Earl Grey at half-past eleven o'clock, the train was set in motion, and ran on at a very rapid speed towards Newcastle.

ARRIVAL AT NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE.

The arrangements for the reception of her Majesty at Newcastle were upon a scale of much grandeur; and it may be doubted whether the Queen, in all her experience of Royal progresses, has ever witnessed anything at all approaching the scene which she beheld when the train drew up on the summit of the High Level bridge. At a moderate estimate there could not have been less than 60,000 spectators immediately within view of the Royal carriage. In the centre of the bridge, a platform of considerable dimensions, capable of accommodating 500 ladies and gentlemen, was erected at the west side, to which parties were admitted by ticket and immediately above where the Royal carriage stopped was a triumphal arch profusely decorated with flowers and evergreens, and ornamented at the top with a large crown, having inscribed underneath, in conspicuous gilt letters, "Welcome on both sides of the Tyne."

The Mayors and Corporations of Newcastle and Gateshead here presented addresses to her Majesty, which were graciously received by the Queen, and, after a few moments' delay, during which her Majesty and the Prince Consort surveyed, with the greatest possible interest, the magnificent scene around and below them, the train proceeded, amid the cheers of the spectators, through Gateshead towards Darlington.

Before the Royal train left Newcastle, her Majesty was presented, by the railway directors, with a beautifully illustrated map of the railway, executed by Mr. Andrew Reid. It was printed in gold, on enamel paper, mounted on a rich white watered silk, elegantly bound in purple morocco, with antique boards, indented in the centre, beneath which are the Royal arms executed on crimson velvet.

Her Majesty arrived at Darlington at a quarter before two o'clock. Lord Harry Vane, M.P., was here in attendance; so l, when the train drew up within

(Continued on page 236.)

PRESENTATION OF THE ADDRESSES TO THE QUEEN, ON THE HIGH LEVEL BRIDGE NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE.

THE THEATRES.

SADLER'S WELLS.

This theatre has this season been in want of a tragic heroine for juvenile parts, and on Monday Miss Aldridge made her début in that capacity, as Desdemona, in Shakspeare's tragedy of "Othello." For the revival of the tragedy under any circumstances we were grateful, as it enabled us to make an acquaintance with Mr Phelps's Othello, which was the first of his assumptions that impressed the public with a sense of his merit, and which, perhaps, still remains the best of his impersonations. On the present occasion, he has manifestly laid himself out for a serious effort, and has played with unusual elaboration and care. In this actor's conception, Othello is a pathetic sufferer, almost womanish in his tenderness, and commanding a most profound and intense sympathy. Throughout, too, he has distinguished the difference between the jealousy of a general tone of sustained emotion calculated to thrill the heart of an audience, and, like fine music, to "create," as it were, "a soul under the ribs of death," a character itself, moreover, less becoming interesting lately from circumstances with which the fame of a recent candidate for the first place on the London stage has been identified. His was an Othello in the grandiloquent style of acting, most often seen and earliest deserving of high praise, and executing the most vehement applause. The Othello of Mr Phelps is the reverse of all this. It is natural, touching, productive of a positive state of feeling, and leaves the mind filled with pity and tender reflection. Mr Phelps's conception, indeed, on the most elementary of such matters, entitles it to the suffrages of the intellectual. He was not so well supported by the Desdemona, who, though pleasing in person and address, is exceedingly crude, and was sometimes guilty of exaggerations heretofore upon the meticulous. She has, probably, good materiel in her, but it requires much cultivation. The Iago of Mr. Marston was of more than average excellence; and Mr Dickenson, in the part of Cassio, presented a new example of his natural capacity for juvenile tragedy. It was, indeed, far from a finished piece of acting, and the drinking scene was vulgarised by an unseemly gesture; but, on the whole, the young Venetian gallant was fairly impersonated. Emilia, which, by modern actresses, has come to be esteemed the great female character of the tragedy, fell to the lot of Miss Glyn, who enacted it with her accustomed force and discrimination. The audience were long and incessant in their plaudits, and the artistes named were called before the curtain at the close of the performance. The house was excessively crowded, and the gallery somewhat noisy.

PRINCESS'S.

The English adaptation of Mozart's immortal "Don Giovanni," which inaugurated the opening of the season last Monday, was not remarkable for the individual excellence of any singer in the cast; but there was such an evident disposition on the part of every artiste to render justice to the sublimities of which such signs of marked choral and orchestral amelioration, that the entire performance afforded us infinitely more satisfaction than exacting and difficultly-pleased amateurs could have anticipated. This lesson has, most assuredly, never before presented any lyric work with such attention in the ensemble; and if he will follow up his present success in the same spirit, his establishment may become the favored temple for English opera. Mr. Loder remains the musical director and conductor, and the management has acted wisely in extending his powers. The attempt to familarise the public with the masterpieces of Mozart, is entitled to the support of every lover of art; the taste and judgment of the musical mind be further answered by talent; to the exquisite inner working of such a score as that of "Don Giovanni." If even there were indifferent vocalists, the instrumental accompaniments to can always be listened to with intense delight. On this occasion the cast was not singly admired to, but there were restorations of portions omitted in the Italian version. The tenor air of Don Ottavio, "Della sua pace," which was sung by Mr. Allen, as well as the whole of the recitative, is also a species of those changes we have not comprehended on the part of the Italian singers, for it is a lovely melody. The original finale of Mozart, to the last act, by the way, is a piece we should like to have seen and heard here done in the country, but at the first representation of the opera at the King's Theatre, under Mr. Ayrton's management.

In one respect there was a drawback of no mean import in the cast, for the Don Giovanni was sung by a tenor instead of a baritone, for which it is written True there are precedents for this proceeding: Garcia, the father of Malibran and Viardot, was a popular tenor Don Giovanni, and it was pourtrayed by Braham as also mantle the Spanish libertine In all these instances, as in that of Mr. Harrison, transposition has been inevitable, a course always to be regretted Mdlle. Rau was the Donna Anna; Mdme. Rainforth, Elvira; Mdme. Pyne, Zerlina; and a doublante Zerlina; Mr Herman, a German basso, was the Commendatore; and Mr. Weiss, Leporello; and Mr. Corri, Masetto. On the whole, the representatives of the female parts were the most happily combined Miss Pyne is assuredly a valuable addition as a stage singer; her voice and style have been carefully trained, and, with due attention to intonation, she has enough flexibility to make an effective prima donna in these days of dearth. She was most hearty received, and her success is unquestionable.

Three new operas are announced to be in preparation: one by Mr. Loder, founded on Monk Lewis's romance of the "Bleeding Nun;" one by Signor Schira, to Sir W. Scott's "Knollwood," and one by Mr. Balfe, entitled the "King of Hearts," based on the comedy of "Charles the Second." In addition to the singers we have enumerated above, Mdme. Anna Thilon and Miss Poole are engaged, besides a new tenor, Mr. F. Winn, a pupil of Mr. Lindley, W.Lams), and Mdme Macfarren as a contralto, with Borrani and Burdini as bassos. Halévy's "Val d'Andorre," one of the most charming operas ever written, a choice of which appeared to us on the occasion of its first production at the Opéra Comique, is also to be brought out. With this company, and with such novelty, the campaign bids fair to be interesting.

A new extravaganza, under the title of "The First Night," followed. The interest turns on Mr. Wigan's representation of a Frenchman, who, being in decayed circumstances, is reduced to the necessity of procuring his daughter an engagement as a comedian. The revolution of plot and counter-plot soon secrets leads peculiar piquancy to the dialogue and situation. It was completely successful.

HAYMARKET.

This theatre opened on Monday, with Mr. Knowles's excellent comedy of "The Love Chase"—Mrs. Nisbett as the heroine, and Miss Jane Mordaunt as Lydia. Mrs Clifford was the Widow Green, and Mr Tilbury Sir William Pondlove. The house was exceedingly crowded, and the audience had a very customary. The demonstration of the public for old favorites is always a cheerful incident in the re-opening of a theatre; and we hope, at the present, that it may be prophetic of a revived taste for the best dramatic production, and the highest style of an histrionic art.

On Wednesday, the first appointment Mr. Bourcicault's comedy of "London Assurance," with Mrs. Nisbett as Lady Sparkler. The family likeness of this character with the Constance of Mr. Knowles's comedy (just noticed), makes the revival of these pieces on successive evenings rather questionable. But, such is Mrs. Nisbett's overflow of animal spirits in both characters, and so musical her laugh, that the repetition of the same effects, slightly modified, is a peculiar pleasure in itself

On Wednesday, Mr. James Wallack made his appearance as Benedict, in "Much ado about Nothing." Mrs Nisbett being as Beatrice. This duet deserves recording as the very best. that is now procurable, besides recalling the palmy days of the stage, when the ideal of such creations was approached by artists whose names are now historical. Mr. Wallack remains the identical what Mr. Charles Kemble was when the Benedicts, Cassios, and Mercutios were worthy objects of critical study.

SURREY.

The plan of management apparently adopted at this theatre, of preferring the new to the old, is being consistently carried out On Tuesday, Mr. Justice Talfourd's tragedy of "Glencoe" was revived. The selection of this drama shows the refined taste of Mr. Creswick, since the audience are certainly not the only the poetic beauties with which the play is thickly studded. It is highly gratifying to be able to add, that not only was the play capitally acted, but that every line was listened to attentively by a crowded auditory, who, by their plaudits in the right places, showed that they fully understood and appreciated what was excellent. As Halbert Macdonald, Mr. Creswick well set forth the moodiness and passion of the mountaineer. He brought skilfully out the poetic elements in the character, and illustrated its heroic bearing with his spirituble pathos. Mr. Mead was vigorous in Glenlyon; and Madame Ponisi, as Ellen Campbell, was the high-souled maiden, capable of murdering her dearest interests at the call of honour. The subordinate parts were respectably filled; particularly Melan, by Mr. Emery, and John McDonald, by Mr. Bruce Norton. The final tableau was admirably arranged, and the curtain fell amidst great applause. The success of "Glencoe" is a decided triumph for the poetic drama.

LYCEUM.

On Monday, this elegant theatre re-opened, according to announcement, with two Olympic pieces—"The Sentinel" and "The Garrick Fever." These were accompanied by Mr. Planché's two-act vaudeville of "The Follies of a Night." In which Mr. Charles Mathews supported Pierre Pallet, and Madame Vestris the Duchess de Chartres, with their accustomed vivacity and elegance. Miss Julia Grover made her first appearance on the stage as Mdlle. Dacal, and, though the part was small, shewed capacity.

MARYLEBONE.

On Monday, Mr Oxenford's version of the French tragedy of "Virginia" was re-acted, with Mrs. Mowatt in the heroine, and M.. Davenport for the Roman father, as during the last season. The piece, though cold, is rendered effective by the excellent acting of these proficient artists.

ASTLEY'S.

Ast ley's, on Monday, presented its audience with a gorgeous spectacle, constructed by Mr. Fitzball, from the opera of the "Prophet." Mr. W. West be ng the hero, and the whole succeeding to managerial satisfaction, as one of the most attractive pieces of the season. The grouping is throughout admirable, and the tableaux of the most striking description.

A BERT SMITH.—The Daily News Constantinople correspondent says: "We have been enlivened for some days past by the presence of Albert Smith. A local paper, in mentioning his arrival, describes him as a celebrated Punch-man and economist and arcades ambo, author, amongst other works, of the 'Wealth of Nations' and the 'History of Greece.'" (Cont.)

MUSIC.

The grand evening concert, given on Thursday night in the town-hall, at Birmingham, in aid of the funds of the Midland Counties Lying-in Hospital, was under the patronage of upwards of 200 of the nobility, gentry, clergy, members, and municipal authorities The singers engaged were Mdme. Sontag, the Misses A. and M. Williams, Signori Calzolari, Belletti, Labiache, F. Lablache, and Mr. Hobbs, of the theatre royal, and orchestra under the direction of Mr. A. Mellon, the Royal Italian Opera. The pieces selected for Madame Sontag were Haydn's "With verdure clad," Rode's variations, Donizetti's polacca "O luce di quest' anima," Dessauer's "Ouvrez," Bellini's "Ah! non giunge," and the English Lesson duo of Benedetti, with Lablache. Madame Sontag has presented the General Hospital, in aid of the funds of which the late festival was given, with £50 The seventieth anniversary of the governors took place last Friday. It appears that the total average income (taken from the returns of six years) was £5614, and the outlay £5577. The proceeds of the festivals are averaged at £1404; so that the expenditure for the year ending Midsummer, 1849, £5946; and the necessity of increased exertion has been enforced at the meeting. The next of the late festival have not yet been printed.

Mdlle. Alboni's tour in the provinces with Mr. Beale's party ended last Monday, with a morning concert at the Town Hall, Brighton. She was supported by Signori Bartolini and Polonini, Herr Menges, and Mr Benedict. She has left England for Brussels, where she intends to remain for some time, having purchased a house in that capital

Miss Lucombe, Mr. Reeves, and Mr. Whitworth are about to make a tour in the provinces, with Mr. Lavenu as conductor.

PATENT AIR-SYPHON VENTILATOR.

THE advantage of every step in science by which our knowledge is increased, even to the extent of one additional fact, is the almost certainty that it may be turned to useful account. Dr. Chowne has just illustrated the truth of this position, by proposing a new mode of ventilation, based on his finding (as stated in the specification of a patent enrolled by him), that, "If a bent tube of hollow passage be fixed with the legs upwards, the legs being of unequal lengths, whether it be in the open air, or with the shorter leg communicating with a room or other place, that the air circulates up the longer leg, and that it enters and moves down the shorter leg, and that this action is not prevented by making the shorter leg hot, whilst the larger leg remains cold; and no artificial heat is necessary to the longer leg of the Air Syphon, to cause this action to take place" Thus, by using the chimney of an ordinary room, for example (into which air has free access), as the longer leg, and by conducting a tube or channel constituting the short leg of the Air Syphon, from any part (as near the ceiling, for instance), into the lower part of the chimney, at the suitable place, a stream of air will proceed from the apartment down the shorter leg, and away up the longer one.

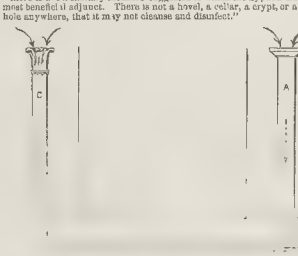
The formation of a necessary channel to relieve the impure air of a room, and to convey it down to its point of entrance into the longer leg, appears to be compatible with the preservation of architectural ornament.

In assembly-rooms, even where fire is not used, which require over-heated and close, to whatever part of the room rent-forms extend, the means of ventilation can also be conducted, either by channels (as light zinc tube) suspended under the forms, or by making the forms themselves hollow channels. In either case this channel being made continuous, and finally passing through an opening in a chimney-board, or by some similar arrangement, into the fireplace, and tube passing from these to the upper parts of the room, the warm air would constantly descend through them to the continuous channel, and be into the larger leg of the Syphon

The Air Syphon Ventilator admits also of being extemporaneously and temporarily set up in a sick-room, so as to cause a constant renewal of air from the upper portion of the apartment. where it is so at to hang about the curtain furniture of the chamber, and to impregnate it with the exhalations which are so often the result and generators of disease.

A peculiar fact is, that this mode of ventilation affords facilities hitherto not known for carrying away the heat and other products of combustion from gas-burners, and other lamps, of which the products are offensive. Again, wherever the Air-Syphon Ventilator is in operation, it is certain, that, should an accidental escape of gas take place, it will not only accumulate, but descend from the upper part of the room, by means of the shorter leg of the Syphon

The applications of this important discovery will doubtless be very numerous. Not only in the chamber and rubber amenous works may it be employed, but in ships, so that the lowest holds, where disease is generated in the close berths of the seamen, may be rendered as fresh as the upper decks. In short, there is not a sanitary measure suggested to which the Syphon may not form a most beneficial adjunct. There is not a bowel, a cellar, a crypt, or a black, close hole anywhere, that it may not cleanse and disinfect."



PATENT AIR-SYPHON VENTILATOR.

In these Illustrations we give the air-syphon ventilator in two of its portable shapes, because they enable us to present the whole apparatus exposed to sight. 1. A portable ventilator which might be set on the mantel-piece. A, the column; and base p, the tube of communication with the chimney. The chimney extremity of the tube enters through the valve of the register. When the ventilator is used without a fire, as for example in the summer, it will be better (although not necessary), that the space left in the opening of the valve of the register, between the tube and the margins of the opening, should be closed by a piece of sheet tin, cut so as to fit and cover the space.

Our second Illustration shows the double adaptation of the principle to ventilation, and conveying away the heat from gas or other lamps. In drawing-rooms, Large works of apartments, by simply perforating an ornamental pillar, and carrying a piece of tubing under the floor to the nearest chimney; by this contrivance, at almost uniform temperature may be maintained the whole evening, as by open doors or fires.

In a drawing-room, the ventilator may be concealed by enlarging a vase or other ornament standing on the corner of the mantel-piece to be perforated, and a tube carried from the bottom and continued into the chimney.

COUNTRY NEWS.

PARLIAMENTARY AND FINANCIAL REFORM.

On Wednesday last the Council of the National Parliamentary and Financial Reform Association held their first great meeting since the close of the Norwich and St. Andrew's Hall. The assemblage was very great indeed, and the enthusiasm was a most enthusiastic one

The following resolutions were unanimously carried:

"1. That, whilst this conference is deeply convinced that a great reduction of the national expenditure, and a more equitable adjustment of the burthen of taxation, are imperatively and urgently demanded, and almost universally demanded, it cannot, on any reasonable hope of permanently securing these important objects until such a measure of electoral reform has been obtained as shall give the people a direct control over the taxes which they are required to pay.

"2. That the conference most cordially approves of the principles on which the National Reform Association is based, and declares its unqualified confidence in its president and council; it therefore urges all who desire parliamentary or financial reform to give to that association their immediate and earnest co-operation, and recommends that the Norwich Reform Association shall be immediately merged in the national movement, and that local committees for extending its operations be formed without delay throughout the district of the London

"3. That this conference strongly urges the importance of a decided effort being made to secure the return, at the next election, of candidates favourable to the above objects; and more particularly directs attention to the two divisions of the county, which ought to be energetically contested, in the confident assurance that ultimate success will crown persevering efforts on behalf of such principles That this conference, therefore, earnestly recommends all Reformers to do their utmost to encourage and extend the threefold movement both in East and West Norfolk, with a view to sustain a decided policy at the next election.

"4. That this conference rejoices in the hope that a hearty union between the middle and working classes has at length been attained, and strenuously enforces on all who desire the prosperity of our public affairs, to concentrate all their energies in the constitution of such a tribunal in Parliament as shall deal out full and impartial justice to all classes of her Majesty's subjects."

THE BURY ST. EDMUNDS AND WEST SUFFOLK, AND THE NORWICH AND WEST NORFOLK ARCHÆOLOGICAL ASSOCIATIONS held an united meeting on the 27th ult., at the town of Thetford (situate in the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk), a place of much interest at the present day, but rich in the remains of both domestic and conventual buildings. It could show a priory in 592, an abbey in Richard the First's reign; a society of Cluniac monks, and a house of Black Canons. Sir Henry S elman says that Thetford was known to Antonine Pedestrian as a place; and Camden tells us that when the other three towns of Norfolk (Norwich, Lynn, and Yarmouth) were yet in their infancy. Many coins of Severus, Gallus, and other Roman Emperors, were slowly at the meeting, found up in the neighbourhood; but the most interesting objects of antiquity were the three barrows in the neighbourhood.

THE NEWSPAPER STAMP DUTIES.—A meeting, convened by circular, to take into consideration the propriety of forming a local committee to co-operate with the Newspaper Stamp Abolition Committee, and otherwise aid in the movement of the repeal of the advertisement, stamp, and paper duties, was held at Birmingham on Tuesday last. Councillor Baldwin made some remarks illustrative of the obnoxious and injurious character and tendency of those imposts with which the press is clogged. The following resolutions were adopted:—"That, in the opinion of this meeting, the taxes at present existing on the means of diffusing knowledge, consisting of the duty on paper and advertisements, and the penny stamp on newspapers, are highly injurious to the public interest, inasmuch as they tend to prevent the dissemination of information and intelligence amongst the people. That it is the opinion of this meeting that the repeal of the paper, stamp, and advertisement duties would be productive of great benefit, by conducing to a more extended and unembarrassed trade, and by opening a channel to more general and educational means hitherto unemployed by the mass of the working classes. That an association, to be called 'The Birmingham Association for the Abolition of Taxes on Knowledge,' be formed; and that a committee be appointed to organise means, and take the necessary steps to carry out the objects of the foregoing resolutions; and that the following gentlemen constitute the said committee Messrs. Baldwin, W. B Smith, Hobbs, Osborne, Murphy, Holland, Sturge, Baker, Hopwood, and Scholefield." It is understood to be the intention of the association to get petitions sent from every newspaper and printing-office in Birmingham, signed, as far as practicable, by masters and men, and all the educational institutions, as well as the Sunday and free schools of the town. Other towns will probably follow the example thus set by Birmingham.

THAMES POACHING.—On the 26th ult., James Purdue the elder and George Hone were brought before the Chertsey bench, upon warrants, for poaching in the river Thames Mr. H. Farnell appeared in support of the charge, and the defendants by Mr. Viner of London. It appeared from the evidence, that the defendants, assisted by two others on the night of the 24th July last, walked a net between two punts on the river Thames, at Weybridge, contrary to the rules and Act of Parliament made for the preservation of the fish of the river, the same so adopted being most destructive. The bench considered the case fully proved, and fined the defendants in 30s. each and costs.

EDINBURGH.—APPOINTMENT OF A FAST-DAY.—At the monthly meeting of the Court of Presbytery, last week, a resolution, moved by Dr. Clark, to appoint Thursday, October 18, as a day of humiliation on account of the prevalence of cholera, was agreed to. It was expected that the Free and United Presbyterian Churches would make choice of the same day for the same purpose.

THE HOP DUTY.—The following letter is the reply of the Chancellor of the Exchequer to the memorials of the hop-planters and others, presented to the right honourable Baronet by the deputation on Friday week, and which we noticed in our publication last week. The memorial, a copy of which was received by Thomas Law Hodges, Esq., M.P., at his residence, Hemsted Park, Kent, by post, on last Tuesday morning: "Downing-street, Oct. 1, 1849.—Sir,—Since I had the honour of seeing you in Downing-street, on Friday, with the deputation from the hop-planters and others, from the counties of Kent, Sussex, Hereford, and Worcester, the statements made by gentlemen who formed part of that deputation, and their request for a postponement of the collection of hop duty of 1848, have been carefully considered by her Majesty's Government. We have learnt with great regret that apprehensions are entertained of the prevalence of distress during the ensuing winter in the hop-growing districts and other parts of the country; but we think that the diminished price of food and other necessaries will especially contribute towards the comfort of all classes, especially of the labourers and of their families With regard to the further postponement of that part of the hop duty of 1848, the payment of which was due in May last, and has already been delayed till the middle of this month, it is my duty to inform you that her Majesty's Government do not feel themselves justified in acceding to any further postponement; and the necessary orders will be given for its collection at the appointed time. I lose no time in making this communication to you, as it is for the interest of all parties that the decision on the point should be immediately known With regard to the instalment due in November, I am not disposed to allow further time for its payment. I have the honour to be, sir, your obedient servant, CHARLES WOOD."

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.—The imports from the United States, for the twelve months ending 30th ult., into Liverpool, were as follows: 26,000 tierces beef, 37,000 barrels pork, 224,000 casks bacon, 15,000 tierces, 50,000 barrels lard, 100,000 boxes cheese, 8600 firkins butter—a value of one million sterling for Liverpool alone.

A terrific north-east gale has prevailed along the northern coast; as many as fifteen vessels were stranded on Monday night, between Dartlepool and Tynemouth. Three of the London and Newcastle steam-boats are known to have been lost—indeed the most disastrous intelligence may be anticipated.

THE STORM AT WHITBY.—The storm which commenced at the close of last week continued during this coast with but little cessation until the day morning, the wind coming from the N.E. About four P.M. on Monday, a brig, coal laden, the John Goole, of the Wheatsheaf Wharf Coal Company, London, was being towed into the harbour by the Mary and Jane steam-boat, when she grounded, and was driven on the West Sands. The crew were saved by the life-boat. On Tuesday morning they commenced throwing out her cargo, and, with a little repairs, it is expected she will be got off.

IRELAND.

REPRESENTATION OF CORK CITY.—The death, by cholera, on Monday last, of Sir David Callaghan, M.P., has created a vacancy in that parliamentary seat. Mr. Alexander M'Carthy, formerly M.P. for Cork on Whig-repeal principles, it is supposed, will again be returned for the vacant seat.

The rent-question is the topic of the time in Ireland now. There are three views upon this subject, which may be stated thus: 1. One party desire to exact all the rents it can; 2. Others think that all rents should be reduced; 3 Others desire to decamp with all the rent due from them. Lord Stanley has reduced his rents twenty per cent., and his conduct to his tenantry in Tipperary is the theme of praise from several journals, not fond of saying kind things of the noble Lord Mr. Osborne, M.P., has also been making himself very popular with his tenantry

The Ballinasloe agricultural show, and the dinner which succeeded it, took place on Saturday last. The show, though a good one, was not well attended, and the proceedings evinced the greatest apathy. The dinner was well attended.

EVICTIONS.—A parliamentary paper, just published, shows that the total number of persons evicted in Ireland under the Act of last session (11 & 12 Vict. cap. 91) during the quarter ending 29th Sept., out of a gross total population of 8,175,124: 2884 evictions were effected in Connaught, 1944 in Leinster, 6077 in Munster, and 2244 in Ulster.

The Medway, Royal mail steam-ship, Captain Symons, which arrived on Monday afternoon at Southampton, from the West Indies, has made the quickest voyage on record since the establishment of that line of communication. The run from St. Thomas, a distance of nearly 3700 miles, including the detention at Fayal, having only occupied a little over 13 days. The cause of the celerity of this voyage is the excellent working of the Medway's machinery and new boilers, which have been recently supplied, added to favourable winds from S.W., with fine weather

OUR MAGAZINE COLUMN FOR OCTOBER.

WAYSIDE TREE.

BENEATH the wayside tree
A pale one sat and sang her tale:
"The gorse upon the common blooms, the clover on the lea:
That love should bud and fail!

"I had a lover true,
But now he's gone far, far away,
And the new things have grown old, and from the old things have sprung new,
Since last he came this way!"

"Let the new things grow old,
From old things let new spring again—
True love is neither new nor old, come over—far, behold!
I love thee now as then!"

If a frame was no more young,
Wrinkled his brow, his hair grown grey;
Yet round him not less tenderly her arms the pale one flung:
And life for both in once more was fair.—Fraser's Magazine.

DEATH OF THE GOLD MINER.

The poor dog appeared to watch me with intense interest as, one by one, I tried the different signs of life; but when he saw the hand fall heavily from my lip, he sat up on his haunches, which now lasted for several minutes. The end was a sad and a touching one. The poor old miner for such his dress and the scattered implements of the craft bespoke him—forgotten by all the world save by his dog, lay in all the seeming calm of sleep. A cup of water stood near him, and a little wooden crucifix lay on the bed, where probably it had fallen from his fingers. Everything around betokened great poverty. The few articles of furniture seemed as if they had been fashioned by himself, being of the rudest workmanship: his lamp was a clay gourd, and his one chair had been a stump, hollowed out with a hatchet. The most striking feature of all was a number of printed paragraphs, cut from old newspapers and magazines, and nailed against the planking of the hut; and these seemed to convey a little history of the old miner—so far, at least, as the bent and object of his life were implied. They were all, without exception, exaggerated and high flown accounts of newly-discovered "placers" (rich mines of gold); some, in the dark plains of the Ukraine; some, in the deep forests of Mexico; some, in the interior of Africa, and on the far-away shores of the Pacific promised a rich harvest, visions of wealth rolling in vast abundance, great oceans of gain before the parched and thirsting lips of toil and famine! Little thought they who, half in the wantonness of fancy, coloured these descriptions, that they were sowing in many a rugged man's mind such feverish passions they were engendering; what lures to vile men on and on, through youth, and manhood, and age, with one terrible fascination to enslave them! The Confessions of Con. Cregan

HOW TO CHOOSE A BOUQUET.

We may accept as a rule that no bouquet will be strikingly excellent in which red flowers do not predominate; and in this it resembles the chief productions of the greatest historical painters. It may be called the key-note of their most successful efforts in colouring. The next step of importance is green, and colours, mingled with green for shade, are beautiful objects; but bouquets of yellow flowers, such as marigolds or cachoulizas, alone would be incredibly glaring. It is the same with white, and scarlet curtains and crimson velvet dresses are rich and pleasing, but either of the other primary colours by themselves—yellow or light blue—would soon be endured. Nature seems to point out the importance of red as an importer of warmth and cheerfulness—for God intends it to be "a happy world after all"—by the almost numberless varieties of its tints that are observable. Of 4200 flowers known to gardeners, it will be seen from the following list that they decrease in number nearly in proportion as they depart from the primary and most live y colours:—White, 1.94, red, 923; yellow, 961; blue, 594; violet, 338; green, 154; orange, 68; brown, 81. Total, 4200.—The Cottage Gardener.

WHAT PEPYS DID WHILE LONDON WAS REBUILDING

Pepys busied himself during this period with much pleasure, playgoing, and feasting. We find him, one day, to king Lucy, his cook-maid, for leaving the door open; the next, taking his wife and his two servants to a boiling-grease, where the young girls ran a race, and constantly attending the theatre, until a rumour reaches his ears that his conduct is noticed, when he makes a resolution to go no more to the play until Whitsunday. He seemed, as his years increased, to become more gay, fonder of lively company, negligful of his wife, and of his actresses, on whom he lavished money, which, expended at home, would have appeared to him lavish and wanton extravagance. The idea of keeping a carriage now entered his mind, and is anxiously considered, but is almost denied to be seen in it. "Why," he says, "should I?" Revolving this thought, he went to church, chiefly, as he confesses, to enjoy the sight of the pretty girls of the schools, and to hear the organ play. Always fond of show, and taking pleasure in the spectacle of anything eccentric, he was particularly delighted at seeing "Lady Newcastle going with her coach, all in velvet, whom I never saw before, as I have heard her often described; for all the town talk is now-a-days of her extravagancies—with her velvet cap, her hair about her ears, many black patches, because of pimples about her mouth, and a black fustian cape. She seemed to me a very comely woman; but I hope to see more of her on May day." He was in this, however, disappointed; for on May-day the Park was so thronged with carriages pressing after that of Lady Newcastle, adorned with silver, instead of gold, with white hangings, and every thing about it silver black, or white, that he was unable to approach. However, the sight of Nell Gwynne, standing at the door of her lodgings in Drury-lane, made up, in some measure, for the disappointment.—Tait's Edinburgh Magazine

THE CEDAR AND CHINAR OF CASHMERE.

The vegetation of Kashmir is as remarkable for its richness as for its variety. From the Himalayan cedar to the delicate blossom, all kinds of green things flourish. This tree merits notice. It attains a great height, and a circumference of sometimes thirty feet. Its botanical elevation varies between seven and twelve thousand feet above the level of the sea. "When young it closely resembles," says Thornton, "the real cedar, but never sends forth spreading branches. And one resembles that of the cedar, and is preceded by a shoot of a bright yellow colour, so that the tree when in full blossom appears covered with a rich mantle of gold. These catkins are loaded with a golden dust, which the wind shakes from the branches in such profusion that the ground for a considerable distance about the tree becomes as it were sheeted with gold." This timber is so durable that some wooden bridges over the Jhelum, which were assumed four hundred years after their erection, were found little decayed, notwithstanding the exposure to the ace dents of the atmosphere, of time, and of constant traffic. The chunar (Platanus orientalis), although it is in no region of the earth found in such perfection and luxuriance as in this delightful valley, is also looked upon as an exotic, but its importation must have been in a period long past. The tasteful caprice of the Mogul Emperors enacted a regulation that a grove of chunars and poplars should adorn every village; and, accordingly, throughout the whole breadth of the valley this arrangement is to be observed. A heavy penalty protects them from destruction; but in Kashmir, as in all other countries, arbitrary power places itself above the law, and the Sikhs, during their short dominion, destroyed many of these ancient and picturesque trees, whose wood is much admired for its tenacious grain.—Horticultural Magazine.

RUSSIA

Russia has often been an object of interest to the nations of Europe. From the times in which the first Muscovite Ambassadors sported their huge beards in the very early days of the capitals of less primitive countries, to the present day, Russia and the Russians have called up a curious confusion of thoughts—a medley of astonishment and anxiety. The writers of romances in England, Germany, and France owe them a vast debt of gratitude, for the secret history of their rise and progress furnishes the European nations in full at strik ng incidents and thrilling scenes of the highest dramatic interest. Their treatment of Poland, and their victories over the French, have caused them to be execrated or lauded by the same generation. Their power has become manifest in more than one way. Rising from worse than barbarism, they have broken the power of Sweden and of Poland; feigning upon the contentions, and profiting by the weakness of Western Europe, their empire has at all times presented the same firm and impassable aspect to the "Gentiles" who lived without the pale of its dominion. the secrets of its intestine broils have been well kept, and mystery has kept pace with its resources; and the very despotism which lists essence and its strength has succeeded in reconciling the minds of the enslaved by making them tyrants in their turn.—Fraser's Magazine.

"LIBERTY, FRATERNITY, AND EQUALITY," IN THE MARRIED STATE.

Liberty,—a single man can do as he likes without consulting anybody; a married man can do as he likes only when his wife shares the inclination, which, as no two people ever look at anything in exactly the same point of view, appears a somewhat stringent restriction: Fraternity, a single man may choose his friends as he feels inclined, male or female, as it may have pleased Providence to create them; a married man dare not, unless he has a taste for dreamate misery, and possesses eyes when are nail-proof, cultivate a female friend, and somehow one feels, if one were married, one should not exactly wish to have a set of men always dangling about one's house (Eqn liy—a single man. If he has received a gentleman's education, wears a good coat, and has wit enough to keep himself warm, anybody's equal; a man of mind must bear all his wife's burdens as well as his own, and doesn't get asked for the browns, because the Smiths have told them her great-grandfather was transported for stealing a pewter pot. Now let us look at the per contra side. A single man soon gets tired of his unlimited liberty: there's no fun in having your own way if you've no one to contradict you; a little opposition becomes a positive luxury, and this you're sure to obtain by matrimony: then, as to fraternity, friends are become acquaintances, certainly, just as maids is preferable to a jackass but they're not much comfort to one, after all: my most intimate friend was in Ceylon, and writes to me once in five years about hunting elephants: now your wife is part of your goods and chattels, belongs to you as completely as your boot-jack, and when in hours of indolence you wish to sit with your soul in slippers, she, if she is worth her salt, is ready to pull off the psychological boots that are pinching your mind, and prevent the dolce far niente from becoming meaningless and insipid. Lastly, there is no such equality in the world as between husband and wife when they are really united to each other, appreciate their relative positions justly, and endeavour to make practice and principle coincide.—Sharpe's London Magazine.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

" Percie."—Your Problem marked 132 can be solved in one move less than was intended, and that numbered 104 has a commonplace solution by White giving check with his Q at her 8 5th, and subsequently mating at K 6th with the Bishop. Some of the others, however, betoken much originality of conception, and this only requires duly cultivating to elevate your compositions to a very high rank

" M. B".—We are sorry to say it is too palpable a mate for our columns

" F. C." Edinburgh.—They will be, if they are not now, procurable of any Chessman-dealer in your city.

" Q".—The question was answered in our last week's notices to Chess-correspondents.

" G. C. C".—As you surmise they are much too simple for us. A few months' study of D'Orville, Bolton, and the other masters in problem-making, will wonderfully improve your powers of composition.

" Father Mathew."—You can demand another Queen for a Pawn reaching his 8th square, even when the original Queen is on the board.

" A Schoy".—Stalemate is a drawn game.

" Beltary".—They are very clever, and, as we rarely see the magazine, are very welcome, also

" *Ecbee".—The "*Staunton Chess-men" are manufactured by Jaques, of Hattongarden, by whom the trade can be supplied.

" S. B.".—Hull.—They shall have prompt attention.

" H. E. B".—A capital game. Well played on both sides.

" J. E. R".—Stuttgart.—It shall be very massively examined, but, if found without defect, we much fear, from the number of moves required to effect the mate, it will be "caviare to the multitude" Problems in three, four, or five moves are much better calculated to hit the public taste than those in eight or nine

" J. P".—The price of the "Chess-player's Handbook" is 5*s.; published by Bohn, York-street, Covent-garden.*

" C. H., Hull" and "C. W. R".—Quite right. Eugene No. 486 is solveable in two moves

" Dudu".—They shall be examined.

" *B. B".—You will find there is another obvious mode of giving the mate in your Problem, by—*1. B to Kt 3d; 2. Kt to Q R 4th (ch); 3. K to Q 4th (ch); and 4. Kt mates.

" H. E. B".—Many thanks It shall appear when we are less pressed for room.

" G. S. J." Southampton.—Always acceptable

" R. D." Denmark hill.—The Peckham Chess-Club is held in the Lecture-room, Hill-street, Peckham. Apply for particulars to the hon. secretary, Mr. C. H. Woodward

" Giuseppe".—In playing a gambit, the first player gives up a Pawn to gain an attack. The Pawn is of his adversary, which captures that Pawn, is called the "Gambit Pawn."

Solutions by "Brutus," "M. E. B," "F. C," "M. P," "Simon," "F. B. S," "D. De L," "Mrs. Maddocks" "J. L. B," "Rhos," "Dream," "G. A. F," "Dudu," "Bellary," "Cher-gru," "S. U," are correct. Those by "H. W," "Father Mathew," "J. P," "Desj," "G. B," are wrong.

 "O. J." and "Y. Y." conjointly would be glad to play a game or two at Chess by correspondence with any two gentlemen of Lincolnshire, consulting. Address "Y. Y," Post office, Lincoln

An Amateur wishing for a game by correspondence, may hear of a competitor by addressing "W. L," Post office, 103, Cheapside.

Any moderate Chess-player desirous of a game by correspondence, may hear of a competitor by addressing "S. R.," Post-office, 185, Strand.

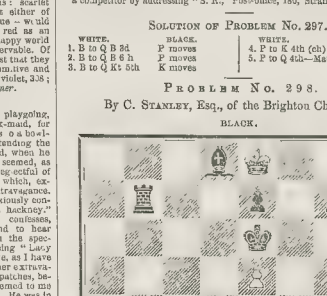
SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 297.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. B to Q B 3d	P moves	4. P to K 4th (ch)	K moves
2. B to Q B 6 h	P moves	5. P to Q 4th—Mate
3. B to Q Kt 5th	K moves

PROBLEM No. 298.

By C. STANLEY, Esq., of the Brighton Chess-club.

BLACK.



WHITE.

White to play first, and mate in three moves.

MATCH BY CORRESPONDENCE

BETWEEN THE CHESS CLUBS OF LONDON AND AMSTERDAM.

WHITE (Amsterdam). BLACK (London).

44. Kt to Q 3d.

London to play.

BLINDFOLD CHESS.

In a late Number we gave the games played by Mr Harrwitz, without seeing the Chess-board, against some of the leading players both at Glasgow and Edinburgh. We have now the pleasure of presenting some which were more recently contested with the elite of the Newcastle Chess Club.

The first two of the present games were played at Newcastle simultaneously, against four amateurs, two consulting at each board. They commenced shortly after six o'clock in the evening, and terminated about half past twelve—Mr. Harrwitz being the winner in both. At the termination of game No. II Mr. Harrwitz exhibited symptoms of fatigue and exhaustion from the long sitting, and proposed that the unfinished game should be relinquished as a drawn battle. Consistent of success, his opponents declined his offer, and the result was that they were finally defeated

These games are said to have created a great degree of interest among the chess-players of Newcastle, and we believe will amply repay the labour of those who may be induced to examine them.

CHESS-BOARD NO. I.

(French Opening.)

WHITE (Mr. Harrwitz).	BLACK (Messrs. Robson & Humble).	WHITE (Mr. Harrwitz)	BLACK (Messrs. Robson & Humble).
1. P to K 4th	P to K 3d	22. B takes Kt (ch)	K takes B
2. P to Q 4th	P to Q 4th	23. Q to K Kt 4th	Q R to K sq
3. P takes P	P takes P	24. Q B to K B 2d	P to K B 3d
4. P to Q B 4th	B to Q R 5th (ch)	25. Q to K B 5th (ch)	K to Kt sq.
5. Q Kt to B 3d	K Kt to B 3d	26. Kt to Kt 6th	R to K sq
6. K Kt to B 3d	Castles	27. Q to Q 3d	K B takes P
7. K B to K 2d	Q B to K 3d	28. K talk s R	R takes R
8. P takes P	Kt takes P	29. Q to K B 4th	B to K R 7th (ch)
9. Q to Q B 2d	Q Kt to Q 2d	30. K to R 2d	R to K 7th
10. Castles	Q Kt to K 2d	31. P to Q R 4th	B to Q 3d (d)
11. K to K sq.	Q Kt to K Kt 3d	32. K to Kt sq (e)	Q B takes Q Kt P
12. P to K 5th	K B to Q 3d		(f)
13. Q Kt takes Kt	P takes Kt	33. Q to Q 3d	R to Q Kt 7th
14. P to K B 4th	P to Q B 3d	34. Q to Q B 3d	K B to Q R 6th
15. P to K 5th	K R to K sq	35. R to K sq (g)	Q to K B 2d
16. Q R to K sq	Q to Q B 3d	36. Q takes Q B P	R to R 2d
17. P to Q Kt 3d	P to Q Kt 3d	37. R to K 8th (h)	R to Kt 8th (ch)
18. Q to K B 2d	R to K 2d	38. K to R 2d	K B to Q 3d (ch)
19. P to K R 4th	Kt to K B sq (a)	39. P to Kt 3d	R to K 8 5th (ch)
20. P to K R 5th	P to K R 3d	40. K take s R	Q B to Q 4th (ch)
21. Q to K Kt 3d (b)	K to R 2d (c)	41. K to Kt sq	Black resi.ts.

(a) This seems an unwise disposition of the piece.

(b) P to K Kt 4th would have been a good play.

(c) Badly played

(d) If they had taken the Q Kt P with the B, by moving his Q to K R 3d, must have gained a Rook, for if two Pawns, and if they were to take the Kt P with their B, and the latter played Q to K Kt 6th (ch), they would have come off first out of an other

(e) At this stage, the game having lasted several hours Mr. H. proposed to make it a drawn game; but the adversaries declined

(f) A fatal error of which White promptly avails himself

(g) We cannot have preferred R to Q R sq, and th n if Black had played Q to her 3d, as their best move) Q to K 3d. It is not easy to see now, in that case, the drawn result; be saved

(h) The proper move, as Mr. H. wattle have seen, was to take with the bevel before him, appears to be Q to her B 8th, and then (upon Black's playing Q to K Kt sq) R to K 8th, or Q to K B 8th, forces the victory.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The Duchess of Leinster received an autograph letter from her Majesty in the course of last week, in which the Queen was graciously pleased to express her feelings of strong gratification at the reception she met with in Ireland; and, further, her Majesty spoke in a very kind and complimentary manner of the impression left on her mind by what she had seen of Ireland and the Irish.

The letter-carriers have agreed to memorialise the Post-office authorities for the purpose of putting a stop to the present system of sending coin and enclosures of value through the post. They repudiate, as a class, although a body pone, wholesale strictures upon their honesty, founded upon the losses of which parties sending money in letters complain.

Earl Bathurst has presented a further donation of £100 for the new church at Cirencester, which his Lordship's contributions in the whole for this beautiful fabric £500, besides the handsome piece of ground on which it is erected.

A grand concert was to have been given in the garden of the Chalet, a place of public amusement in the Champs Elysées, Paris, on Sunday last; but, as it was announced that it was to be given by the democratic associations, the prefect of police chose to put a stop to it, on the ground that it was dangerous. Such is the life by of a Republic!

The Earl of Airlie, who has just succeeded to his title and estates, states had a fall from his horse on Saturday last, on the race course at Montrose, by which his Lordship received some severe bruises. His Lordship is going on favourably.

The Senate of Hamburgh has presented to Dr. Patrick Colquhoun the gold medal, as the author of a work on the Roman Law, with paranolis from the Mosaic, Mohammedan, Canon, Foreign, and English Law, and of publications on German policy and classical literature.

From the annual report of the Infant School in St. Mary-le-Strand, and the Precinct of the Savoy, just published, we perceive that the expenses in the past year have left only 11s. 6d. in the hands of the treasurer.

The body of a girl, aged eleven years, who died on the 28th of June last, still remains unburied in a house at Hampstead, the father denying the right of his neighbours to interfere unless they can prove the corpse a nuisance.

The address from the Archbishop, from the clergy of the province of Canterbury, requesting his grace to authorise the observance of a day of humiliation and prayer throughout the province, on account of the prevalence of cholera in this country, was forwarded to Lambeth on Monday. The address is signed by upwards of 400 clergymen.

Her Majesty the Queen Dowager, with her usual munificence, sent the sum of £200 on learning the destitute state in which the six children of the late Lieutenant M'Lennie, of Greenwich Hospital, had been left by the deaths of both their parents, from cholera. Admiral Sir Charles Adam, K.C.B., and all the officers of the institution, have been also most prompt in endeavouring to ameliorate the condition of these orphans, and Miss Burdett Coutts has manifested her kindly feelings in a very liberal manner in the case of distress.

On Sunday night, about half-past ten o'clock, an explosion of gas took place in the house occupied by Mr. Lang, the extensive gunsmith, No. 7, Haymarket. A person in Mr Laing's house had occasion to go into the area of the premises with a lighted candle, when the explosion took place instantaneously, and with such force as to drive the person holding the candle into the kitchen. Fire-engines were speedily in attendance, but their services were not required.

A letter from San Francisco (California) says this place has the most disagreeable climate on earth; foggy, damp, cold, windy, dusty—all in the day, and sometimes all these; so that while a poor devil treks with cold, he is at the same time perspiring with heat and choaking with dust; it is a horrid place, but like it to become, in a few years, the greatest city in the Pacific.

The Hebrew communes in Hungary are doing all they can to soften the heart of their oppressors, and have sent deputies to implore the at the foot of the throne for a remission of the burdens laid upon them. As an instance of the exactions by which the communes are to suffer, the Arad communes, that were ruined by General Schlick to the amount of 30,000 florins (£3,000), are obliged to pay 10,000 in silver and 800 in gold; in addition to which they are required to provide a hundred thousand rounds of cartridges, within six weeks' time, at the rate of eight grains: for every day that yields nothing a fine of 300 florins, by way of penalty.

The Medway, West India steam-packet, brought on freight, this week, 92 bags of dollars; gold coin and gold dust, value 609,914 dollars, silver bars, value 298,866 dollars; specie, value 557 ounces, and precious stones, value £450 sterling; total value of specie and quillon about £.92,676 sterling

The Austrian Correspondent makes the following report of the naval strength of the empire:—Four frigates, six corvettes, two brigs, four galeottes, and nine steamers, two of which are of 300-horse power, and one of 100. Two more of lesser power are still in docks.

It is said that Lieutenant Colonel Gold, of her Majesty's 4th (King's Own) regiment, now stationed at Portsmouth, will probably come into possession of the enormous wealth left by Mr Charles Ballen, the late banker of Liverpool. The property is said to amount to between five and six millions sterling.

Mr. Serjeant Grove Grady, of the Home Circuit, will be the first Recorder of Gravesend, under the grant of Quarter Sessions, which is now completed.

Two persons of the Hebrew persuasion, named Hyam Lipschitz and Marcus Levins, were on Saturday committed by the Portsmouth bench of magistrates for trial, at the Hampshire Assizes, charged with extensive forgeries on the Russian Bank of Poland, at Warsaw.

On Wednesday week, Lord Denman was taking an airing in Kyam Dale, Derbyshire, in a small hand-carriage, which through some accident was capsized, and his Lordship sustained some injury by a contusion of the head, which bled profusely. His Lordship, however, did not sustain much bodily damage.

The Lieutenant-Governorship of Carisbrooke Castle is abolished, in consequence of the death of Sir W. Paterson.

The following is the amount of duties paid into the Exchequer during the last four years by the fire insurance companies in England: 1845, £972,038; 1846, £985,444; 1847, £1,003,353; and 1849, £1,005,573. The total amount of Irish duties for the year 1846 was £5,284.

The basso-relievo, by Carew, illustrative of the death of Nelson, was put up on Saturday on the south side of the pedestal of the column of Trafalgar-square

The introduction of the camel into the western prairies of America, as a means of transport for mails and for military purposes, is attracting some attention at present.

A wonderful pedestrian feat was performed a few days ago by a gentleman of Darlington, upwards of eighty years of age, who takes great delight in open air exercises; he walked from Darlington to Newcastle in one day, a distance of upwards of thirty-three miles.

The Earl de Linden, accompanied by Lord Robert Pelham Clinton and a party of gentlemen, has sailed in the Ottawa yacht from the Isle of Wight for the Mediterranean. His Lordship and friends have gone direct to the Tagus. They will subsequently visit the principal ports in the west of Spain, and subsequently go to Athens, Symrna, Constantinople, Alexandria, &c.

A pickpocket at Leeds a few days ago succeeded in abstracting from the pocket of an inspector in plain clothes a paper containing a pair of handcuffs.

In the United States it is estimated that cholera has carried off during its ravages in the southern states full 15,000 slaves. This best means their value, and a great demand, consequently, for them exists in Maryland and Virginia.

The Legislature of Virginia (United States) has abolished imprisonment for debt throughout the state, except in cases where property had been concealed or illegally disposed of.

Conventions on every subject are the order of the day at present in the United States. One was held on the 15th ult., at Nashville, Tennessee, to examine into the claims of the descendants of a Virginian citizen to estates in Suffolk, England, held by a Mr. Jennings, who died in 1779, and which are now estimated at £5,000,000 sterling! A large number of claimants appeared from Tennessee, Mississippi Virginia, and Indiana.

The Killeray estate, on the banks of Windermere, a beautiful little demesne, whose beauties have been rendered doubly famous by the reputation of the proprietor, Professor Wilson, was put up to auction a few days ago, at the Royal hotel, Bowness. A sale was declared to be at £8000, but as the bidding did not reach this amount, no sale was effected.

Tuesday's Gazette contains directions from the General Board of Health for the discontinuance of interments in the undermentioned burial-grounds:—St. Andrew, Hertford; and St. Olave, Silver street.

While the Royal party were at Balmoral, recently, a son of Lord Portsmouth met with an awful accident. One of the party was shooting at a hare, and part of the shot, after striking a rock, darted off in a slanting direction, and entered the eye of the young gentleman. The small bullet still remains in the globe of the eye. The wound through which it entered was sealed up; and, although there has been comparatively little pain or uneasiness produced, the vision of that eye is completely lost. It has not considered necessary to perform any operation as, from appearances, it is considered that the foreign body will gradually work its way outwards, and be discharged.

The Vienna correspondent of the Daily News says, "We understand that M. Lebenbauer, an official in the Austrian ministry of the interior, has been appointed ambassador to provide the Times and the Debats with leading articles on the subject of Austrian questions."

On Tuesday there was published a return of the names, places of business and objects of all assurance companies compulsorily registered, from the session of the 4th and 5 Victoria, cap. 110, up to the day. The list includes 300 new assurance companies for the protection of life and property, with the receipts, expenditure, assets, and liabilities of each company specified in detail.

On the 21st ult., at noon, the Segesser Hotel, situate on the summit of the Rigi, in Switzerland, so well known to Swiss tourists, was burnt to the ground in the space of two hours. Some of the English residents at the hotel lost large sums of money by the disaster. The conflagration of this hotel, the great resort for those who ascended the Rigi to behold the glorious spectacle of the rising sun—will be a serious inconvenience to travellers in that part of Switzerland.

PRESENTATION OF THE ADDRESS TO HER MAJESTY, AT THE YORK STATION.

RETURN OF THE COURT FROM THE HIGHLANDS.

(Continued from page 233.)

the station, his Lordship introduced the Chief Bailiff of the borough, who presented an address, which the Queen was graciously pleased to accept.

ARRIVAL AT YORK.

Her Majesty arrived at York at twenty minutes before three o'clock. The train was here driven into the arrival platform, and the saloon carriage having been brought opposite the retreshment room, Her Majesty's presence in the ancient city was welcomed by his Grace the Lord Archbishop of York and the members of the Corporation. The Lord Mayor, who, as Chairman of the Board of Directors of the York, Newcastle, and Berwick Railway, had been in attendance upon the Queen throughout her journey from the latter place, had taken the precaution to travel with his robes of office, and having donned the scarlet cloak and gold chain during the progress of the train, his Lordship was in readiness to take his place at the head of the deputation on the arrival of the Queen. On the train stopping, the Lord Mayor advanced and presented to her Majesty an eloquent address from the Corporation of the city of York, which was very graciously received. Her Majesty remained at York more than half an hour, during which time she partook of luncheon. On taking her departure the Queen walked round to the train, a distance of some three hundred yards, a very beautiful velvet carpet being laid along the platform. The Royal progress to the saloon carriage was greeted by the assembled multitude with vehement cheering, which the Queen and the Prince acknowledged. From York to Normanton her Majesty passed over the York and North Midland Railway; but the Lord Mayor of York being also chairman of the company, her Majesty was still attended by his Lordship. The Royal party arrived at Normanton before four o'clock. This station being the commencement of the Midland Railway, her Majesty was here received by Mr. Ellis, M.P., chairman of the board of directors; Mr. Bell, the secretary, and other officials of that company.

ARRIVAL AT DERBY.

The run of sixty miles from Normanton to Derby was very admirably performed—under conduct of Mr. Kirtley, the chief of the locomotive department—in less then two hours. Here her Majesty was met by the Mayor, Recorder, and corporate officials of the borough, with Earl Cathcart, and the High Sheriff of the county (Mr. Jedediah Strutt, of Belper), at their head. The Royal train having been brought to a stand, the Recorder advanced and presented to her Majesty a loyal address. The Queen, having received the address, bowed her acknowledgments, and, alighting from the train, entered the High Sheriff's carriage, and proceeded direct to the Midland Hotel, where her Majesty passed the night. The town was very brilliantly illuminated during the evening in honour of her Majesty's visit; and, although the rain fell heavily at intervals, the streets presented an animated appearance up to a late hour.

DEPARTURE OF HER MAJESTY FOR THE SOUTH.

The Queen left Derby at eight o'clock on Saturday morning, en route for the Isle of Wight. Her Majesty was accompanied by the directors of the Midland Railway as far as the Hampton station, where the train arrived at twenty-six minutes after nine o'clock. Here the Royal party were received by Mr. Ledsam, the deputy-chairman of the London and North-western Railway, with the officials of that company, under whose conduct the Royal party proceeded to Birmingham, where the train arrived at forty-six minutes past nine. The Mayor and Corporation of this important town were in attendance, and when the train drew up, the Mayor advanced, and presented an address, which her Majesty was pleased to accept. The Corporation were accompanied by Mr. Newdegate, M.P. for

THE DEPARTURE FROM THE YORK STATION.

THE ROYAL TRAIN LEAVING THE CHELTENHAM STATION.

South Warwickshire, and by Mr. Muntz and Mr. Scholefield, the members for Birmingham, all of whom were presented to her Majesty by Sir George Grey, under the shadow of a huge umbrella, amid some laughter and many expressions of regret at the inauspicious weather.

On leaving Birmingham, the directors and officials of the Midland Railway resumed the conduct of the Royal train over the Bristol and Birmingham line, which her Majesty traversed as far as Gloucester. The weather now took a favourable change, and the sun breaking through the clouds, her Majesty and the Prince enjoyed the opportunity of viewing the delightful scenery in this part of the country; the Malvern hills skirting the prospect on one side, and the beautiful undulations of the Mendip ridge presenting themselves for many miles on the opposite side of the railway.

At Bromsgrove, the Worcestershire Yeomanry Cavalry (the Queen's Own), under the command of Colonel the Honourable Robert Clive, with Lord Lyttelton and Lord Ward at the head of their respective companies, were out. The train stopped here for a few moments, and Lady Harriet Clive, who was in attendance, with Miss Clive, had the honour to be presented to her Majesty. Her Majesty greeted Lady Harriet very cordially, rising from her seat, and shaking hands with her ladyship and Miss Clive. Lady Harriet had the honour of presenting the Queen with a superb basket of black grapes and a bouquet of flowers, from Hewell, the family seat, which her Majesty was pleased to accept.

ARRIVAL AT CHELTENHAM.

Cheltenham was the next important station through which the Royal party passed; and here the whole population of the place appeared to be on the railway, the embankments for more than a mile being densely crowded with spectators. There was no stoppage at this place, but, through the kindness of her Majesty, the train was allowed to proceed at a very moderate speed for some distance.

ARRIVAL AT GLOUCESTER.

Her Majesty arrived at Gloucester at half-past eleven o'clock. Here the break of gauge rendered it necessary for her Majesty to alight from the carriage she had previously occupied, and enter the saloon of the Great Western Company, which had arrived two hours previously, under charge of Mr. Saunders, the secretary, and Mr. Seymour Clarke, the manager of the company. Viscount Barrington, M.P., deputy-chairman of the company, was also in attendance to receive the Queen. On the Royal train entering the station, the Mayor and Corporation advanced to welcome the Queen, amid the enthusiastic acclamations of the spectators, the bells of all the churches in the city ringing merry peals, and salvos of artillery being fired from an adjoining battery. The address of the city Corporation, as well as one from the clergy, having been presented, the Queen graciously accepted them; and, having thanked Mr. Ellis, the chairman of the Midland Railway, for the admirable manner in which the journey from Derby had been performed, her Majesty was conducted to the opposite side of the platform, where the Great Western special train was stationed. The run of thirty-seven miles to Swindon, through the Stroud Valley, one of the most beautiful localities in Gloucestershire, was accomplished in forty-seven minutes. At Swindon the train stopped, and her Majesty alighted to partake of luncheon, which was provided for the Royal party in a private room. The inhabitants of Old and New Swindon, and of the neighbouring towns, turned out en masse to greet the Sovereign, and a band, composed of persons employed in the company's works, played the National Anthem in good style. Her Majesty and suite remained at Swindon nearly three-quarters of an hour, and then re-entered the train, which immediately started for Reading, where it arrived at 10 minutes past two o'clock. At Reading the train passed on to the Basingstoke branch, and arrived at the latter place at fifteen minutes before three o'clock. Viscount Barrington and the officials of the Great Western Company now resigned the charge of her Majesty to Mr. Chaplin, M.P., the chairman of the South-Western Company, who, with Mr. Stovin, the manager, was here in attendance with another special train; and the Royal party having again taken their seats in "narrow-gauge carriages," were rapidly conveyed to Gosport, where her Majesty arrived at a few minutes after four o'clock.

In closing this account of her Majesty's progress from Scotland, it is due to the directors of the various railways over which her Majesty passed, in a journey of nearly six hundred miles, to state that nothing could possibly exceed the admirable manner in which all the arrangements for the Royal conference were made and carried out. No delay whatever took place; and throughout the journey, with the single exception of the necessary stoppages to replenish the boiler, there was not a single halt made which was not set down in the proper bed order of travel. It is very gratifying to be enabled to add, that both her Majesty and her Royal Consort acknowledged, in the most cordial terms, the arrangements made for their accommodation.

THE CHANGE OF GAUGE AT GLOUCESTER.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Our acknowledgments are due to the following parties for the Sketches of the preceding Illustrations:—The scenes at Cooper Abbey are from a painting (sketch) by Mr. George Lindsay, of that place. For the view of the Royal reception at Berwick we are indebted to the courtesy of Captain Mills, of the [illegible] 53d Foot, which regiment now forms the garrison at that place. The [illegible] engraving is from a sketch oddly enough furnished by Messrs. Nind and W Lambert, of Greystreet. The pair of York views are by our own artists; and the scenes at Cheltenham and Gloucester are from sketches by Mr. George Bonner, of Cheltenham.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Cricketing and aquatics have run out their seasons, and the racing campaign is rapidly drawing to a close, to be succeeded by coursing, hunting, and steeplechasing—all exciting past times, but, judging from the "signs of the times," not likely to be so attractive as formerly. The distress amongst the landed interest has already led to the breaking-up of several hunting establishments; and the discussion in Parliament towards the close of the session will, beyond a doubt, have a serious influence on the racing "across the country," which, apart from its assumed cruelty, has of late years developed some very questionable features. The racing fixtures for the three weeks that remain of the season comprise the Second October and Houghton Meetings; Perth, on Thursday next; Newmarket, on Friday, and two or three others of "no account" pretension in the blank week between the two Newmarket meetings. The Cesarewitch will be the main source of attraction to the gathering next week; it will come off on Tuesday, and will bring out a large field of horses, but not of so high a class as the value of the prize ought to have ensured. It is too true, indeed, that in almost all the great handicaps good horses are so loaded with weight as to give them no earthly chance: it is for this reason that many lovers of the sport have conceived a strong prejudice against a class of handicap, as tending in another way to encourage a system of "ringing," and to injure legitimate racing. The Coursing Meetings next week are Cockermouth, on Monday; and the Border, on Tuesday. The Steeple-chase season commences at Worcester, on the 2nd of November.

TATTERSALL'S

MONDAY The transactions this after noon were confined to a few horses, and were, with one or two exceptions, in small sums; and with no other noticeable effect than a decline in Vatican, who, in racing vernacular, is kad "flaby."

4 to 1 agst Vatican	20 to 1 agst Amazonian	25 to 1 agst Carthagena at 1
8 to 1 — Gladiator	25 to 1 — Ascot	25 to 1 — Bonadrake
12 to 1 — Sir Isaac (t)	25 to 1 — Firebrace (t)	30 to 1 — Old Dan Tucker
20 to 1 — Elsaway	25 to 1 — Lady Evelyn (t)	66 to 1 — Tin Plaggie (t)
	25 to 1 — Lady Emmeline
15 to 1 agst Blueboy	30 to 1 agst Malt-an (t)	25 to 1 agst Jos-ph's
15 to 1 — Woolwich	30 to 1 — Crucible	35 to 1 — Sponge (t)
	30 to 1 agst The Moon
	1 to 1 agst The Knight of	20 to 1 agst Sir Callum (t)	25 to 1 agst Bolingbroke
	Avon (t)	20 to 1 — The Italian

THURSDAY.—The Cesarewitch monopolised the attention of the subscribers this afternoon, and if the betting was not heavy it was remarkable for the advance of Ratty to 7 to 1, and of Miss Ann to 100 to 6; both were in great force. Vatican and Fire-eater were the only animals who did not suffer from this movement. Scarcely anything was done on the Cambridgeshire or Derby.

4 to 1 agst Vatican	20 to 1 agst Amazonian	33 to 1 agst Carthagena
7 to 1 — H lt (t)	25 to 1 — Ascot	33 to 1 — Bonadrake
12 to 1 — Sir Isaac (t)	25 to 1 — Firebrace (t)	50 to 1 — Old Dan Tucker
20 to 1 — Elsaway	25 to 1 — Lady Evelyn (t)	66 to 1 — Tin Plaggie (t)
	25 to 1 — Lady Emmeline
15 to 1 agst Blueboy	30 to 1 agst Malt-n (t)	25 to 1 agst Jos-ph's
15 to 1 — Woolwich	30 to 1 — Crucible	35 to 1 — Sponge (t)
	30 to 1 agst The Moon
	15 to 1 agst The Knight of	20 to 1 agst Sir Callum (t)	25 to 1 agst Bolingbroke
	Avon (t)	20 to 1 — The Italian

A duel has taken place near Lausanne, in Switzerland, between Sergeant Bolchot, the Socialist representative from Paris, and a Spanish officer of the regiment of Isabella Segunda. It appears that, when on board a steamboat between Nyon and Lausanne, Sergeant Bolchot spoke in disrespectful terms of the young Queen of Spain and Donna Maria of Portugal. Count Morcelo, of the above-mentioned regiment, contradicted, in strong terms, who was stated by Bolchot. The latter resented what he had said, and added, "I hope the two Spaniards will shake hands directly." Upon this Count Morcelo struck Bolchot on the face, and challenged him to fight. The Count instantly demanded satisfaction for his language. A meeting was arranged for the same day, at two o'clock in the afternoon, on the shore of the lake. The Count was attended by an officer of Dragoons and a Colonel in the service of the King of Wurtemburg. Sergeant Bolchot had as seconds M. Felix Pyat and Dr. Perrin, of Montmorot. They fought with pistols at a distance of twenty paces. No injury was done at the first shots. On the second fire the Count was severely wounded in the shoulder and neck, and at the same moment Sergeant Bolchot received a ball in the left side of the chest. He was also severely wounded that it became necessary to carry him from the ground on a mattress.

THE PERILS OF TRAVEL IN SPAIN.—The correspondent of the Daily News at Madrid mentions that the mail-coach which left that city on Monday, the diligence from Bayonne was stopped opposite the Buencarral churchyard by three men on her-back, and dressed in the uniform of carabineers. One of them ordered the driver to turn the coach down the Street of St. Bernardo, and, after admonishing two or three blows to the coachman, as they said, for not having obeyed with alacrity, they ordered the twenty-three passengers to throw themselves mouth downwards upon the ground, in the middle of the road, and exposed to a bleak wind from the Guadarama mountains, and a tremendous shower of rain. The rogues then deliberately, during four hours, ransacked the diligence, and searched the passengers one by one. A fat banker had her whole fortune about her in bank notes and broad pieces, and lost all. Some snuff in a attached to the coachman, for it was by his unaccountable delays that the diligence arrived six hours later than ordinary.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

The English and Foreign Markets were the scenes of considerable excitement on Mon ay, caused by the news of a cessation of diplomatic intercourse between Russia and Turkey. Consols opened at a decline of ¼ per cent on the closing price of Saturday, quoting 92¾ ⅞ for money, then receding to 92½, but afterwards rallied to 92¾ ⅞. The apprehensions of war did not, however, subside on Tuesday. Consols declining again from 92¾ ⅞ for money, to 92½; the last price being 93¼. On Wednesday, 91½ to 92 was the opening price; but as early as the day advanced, coupled with an improvement of ¼ per cent in the French funds, left prices at 92¾ ⅞ for money, and 93¼ for June. At the opening of the market on Thursday, there was more firmness in prices, 92⅞ for money being the quotation. This was not, however, maintained, Consols receding to 92¾ some improvement afterwards occurring. The Unfunded Debt is a slightly advancing, as is usually the case during a period, as is usually the case during a period, as is usually the case during a period

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor Mr. W. BATTY. Second Week of Pinhalo's Wonderful Spectacle of THE PROPHET, which has achieved a triumph and is announced for the pe. He pres to be the theatre.—On MONDAY, OCT 8, will be presented, Elton, Pinhalo's pe eminently successful New Grand Equestrian Spectacle of THE PROPHET, which in its New Scenery Costumes Appointments, and in which Mr. W. Batty will say star to be excelled by batty's previous ENES OF THE AGES, supported by the honourable Artistes of the Astley Establishment. Juvenile and favourite Horse Hop-o'-my-Thumb, Mr. Batty. Manager, Mr. Wes

LAST WEEK BUT TWO.

THE MISSISSIPPI AND MISSOURI RIVERS exhibition, by panorama, [illegible] HER PRESIDENT, Mr. Millard, and Hon. Rep. [illegible] Washington, &c., to New Orleans, being the largest picture ever exhibited in this country, and occupying more than half a mile in length. Doors open at half-past six o'clock; admission, lower seats, 2s., gallery, 1s.

THE ROYAL CHINESE JUNK IS NOW OPEN in the EAST INDIA DOCKS, fronting the Stepney Road Pier and Railway [illegible] surrounded by [illegible] Admission 1s. Children and schools half-price. Open from 10 till 5 o'clock. Omnibuses from all parts of the metropolis.

THE ROYAL CHINESE JUNK.—Among the most famous Paradise in China, the Lady, a beautiful Chinese woman, and Divine-Bell [illegible] Metropolis. Admission to Models and Machinery 1s.—Admission, to Schools, Half-price.

KING'S COLLEGE, LONDON.—GEOLOGICAL MINERALOGY.—Professor TENNANT, F.G.S., will commence his COURSE of LECTURES on the above Sciences, on TUESDAY, OCTOBER 16, at Nine o'clock A.M., and continue them on MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, and FRIDAYS, at the same hour. Fee for the course of [illegible] Fee for the Museum, 1l. 1s. Further particulars on application at the College.

October 3, 1849. E. W. JELF, D.D., Principal.

GREAT EALING SCHOOL, Middlesex.—Conducted by the Rev. JOHN NICHOLAS, of Wadham College, Oxford.—The HALF-YEAR will COMMENCE on the 16th OCTOBER. Prospectuses may be had at Messrs. HATCHARD'S, and both 187, Piccadilly; and of Messrs. WHITTAKER and Co., Classical Booksellers, Ave Maria-lane, City.

TO GOVERNESSES.—The Friends of a YOUNG LADY are desirous of placing her in a LADIES' SCHOOL or PARLOUR BOARDER. Apply by letter, stating terms, &c., addressed L. O., to the care of Mr. PAGE, Bookseller, Broadstreet, Ilminster.

CLERK, or TRAVELLER.—A YOUNG MAN, highly respectable, WANTS a SITUATION, at Home or Abroad, either in or out of doors. Understands the routine of office, &c. Knows Town well, also most of the South and West of England. Address, Mr. Robertson, &c. &c.—Apply to G. C., Bond Post-office, Lowestoft.

NEWMARKET RACES.—In addition to the [illegible] SPECIAL TRAINS will start as follows on the Eastern Counties Railway, from the Shoreditch Station, at 8 A.M. leaving at Audley-end, Bishop's Stortford, Harlow, Broxbourne, and Hertford, at 8.30 A.M. on the 16th October, a Special Train from London, at 7, A.M. Fare there and back first class, 10s.; second class, 7s.; returning the same day only. Tickets to be had at the Shoreditch Station, and at the Bishopsgate Station at 9.45 P.M. Private carriages and horses will not be conveyed by the Special Trains.

COUNTY FIRE OFFICE, 50, Regent-street, and 2 Royal Exchange-buildings. [illegible] Established 1807.

It is respectfully notified to London building parties that this office the removals of which [illegible] to Mathon [illegible] time should be paid on or [illegible] 24th of October the policies will [illegible] head offices, and in the hands of the several Agents

By order of the Board, [illegible] Managing Director.

BEARD'S PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS, by the NEW PROCESS, are taken at 85 KING WILLIAM-STREET, CITY. 34, PARLIAMENT-STREET, and the ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION, REGENT-STREET. The portraits exhibit a marked superiority over [illegible] June 24.

"The entire collection [illegible] compared to the finest examples." Times, June 25.

PUBLIC NOTICE.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.—KING AND SHEATH.

W. SHEATH, having already advertised a [illegible] of partnership, [illegible] to sell off the stock at a [illegible] Reduction from the 4th of [illegible] next, [illegible] the attention of Ladies in town and country to the under-named list, which he features invoice. Wool de Soie, 6s. 9d. per skein. Several thousand pounds worth of [illegible] offered at any other house.

Checked and striped Glacés [illegible], from 5s. 6d. to 18s. 6d. the full Dress
Rich Lama and Satin Striped Brocades, at 25s. the full Dress
The Richest Quality in Rep and Damascus Brocades, 47s. 6d. the full Dress
Very rich Bands and Cross-over Bodices, 1s. 6d. the full Dress—usually sold at four guineas Magnificent Lyons Shades, at 7s. the dress, worth at least [illegible] guineas.
Black and Coloured Lyons and printed Cloths, for Dresses and Mantles, will be found worthy of notice.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.—FURTHER REDUCTION.
LADIES will find the LAST STOCKS some very REMARKABLY BARGAINS.
In readiness for the Fairs, Balls, Soirés, Fêtes, &c.
Real Black Lace Flounces, Barbes, Insertions, and Laces, of every width.
Valenciennes, Machlin, and Lille Lace
Black Lace Dresses, from 2l. to 65s.
The set of two, half-a-yard wide.
Lace Shades, 10s. to 40s.
The same make for [illegible] and equally cheap.
Patterns post-free.
Address—W. W. SHEATH, 91, Regent-street, London.

MOURNING SILKS.
Black Glacés, Poplins, and Bonnets, at 4s. 6d. to 10s. 6d. per yard.
Rich French Mantle-Silks, for the Season, in the New Royals, Reps, Ottomans, and Damasses, at 2s. 6d. the full dress.
Superior Black and Coloured French Mantles,
at 12s. 6d. the full dress.
4000 yards of Paris and Lyons Brocade, for Cloaks, Bernouses, and Dressing-gowns, all at a [illegible] per yard—usually sold elsewhere under 1s. 9d.
Aqueous, Coburgs, Orleans, Persian Cords, &c. at equally cheap.
Patterns [illegible] to any part of the Kingdom
W. W. SHEATH, 91, Regent-street, London.

AUTUMN FASHIONS.—SEWELL and COX have just received the [illegible] MANTLES and CLOAKS, [illegible] dies to see some of the best at their house [illegible] Velvet, Twenty-one Shillings.
AUTUMN SILKS.—3000 to 4000 yards of [illegible] Glacé Silks every [illegible] which has lately been sold at four guineas per dress, [illegible] 28s. 6d. the full dress.
The very best [illegible] Glacés, Checks, and Striped Silks, [illegible] 2s. 6d. per yard.
A variety of [illegible] materials for dresses, purchased during the [illegible] 3d the double width; worth 6s. Patterns can be forwarded post free [illegible] Cross, with double skirts and sacks, purchased of a manufacturer [illegible] from 6s. 6d. to 21s. worth a guinea and a half.
[illegible] long stock of M. A. Dupont's beautiful long Barege Shawls, [illegible] part of England, Ireland, or Scotland free, on receipt of a post-office order for [illegible] completed at once.—GEORGE SEWELL and COX, 44, 45, and 46, Old [illegible]-street, and 45, 46, and 47, Fetter-street, Strand.

JOY'S PATENT.
A FINE ADD OF HAIR can [illegible] produced in a few minutes, [illegible] dressed, in a treatise appended.
MILTON'S HAIR LUBRICANT, an elegant, [illegible] and odoriferous preparation, [illegible] to [illegible] Persons [illegible] Use soft fine hair will [illegible] Bare [illegible] and [illegible] and will [illegible] grow luxuriantly [illegible] the [illegible] most [illegible] MILTON'S HAIR LUBRICANT, supplies [illegible] colour [illegible] and [illegible] will restore the hair [illegible] Baldness [illegible] to a [illegible] moustache and [illegible] beard, one [illegible]
Sold [illegible] Street; Edwards, St. Paul's churchyard; [illegible] and [illegible] Bond-street.

THE TOILET of BEAUTY [illegible] ROWLANDS' [illegible] which GOWLAND'S LOTION is [illegible] by the most [illegible] Ladies of the Court [illegible] Princess. "Robert Shaw, London, [illegible] Yours truly, [illegible]

NEW BOOKS, &c.

Superbly [illegible], handsomely bound in purple cloth, gilt edges, price One Pound, LONGFELLOW'S OUTRE-MER: a Pilgrimage beyond the Sea. With a Portrait of the Author and a Vignette engraved on steel. Vol. I. of Chefs d'Œuvre of English Poetry of the [illegible] Century. [illegible] POETICAL WORKS, Vol. I.

Just published, 8vo, price 5s.
INSANITY TESTED by SCIENCE, and shown to be a Disease rarely connected with permanent Organic Lesion of the Brain after [illegible], on that account, far more susceptible of a cure than any hitherto known.
By [illegible]
London: SAMUEL HOBDELL, 39, Fleet-street

SEA WEEDS.—Instructions to Find, Preserve, and Classify them, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 2d, monthly. London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN.

WAXEN FLOWERS.—Instructions how to [illegible] in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 2d, monthly. Part [illegible] price 2s. [illegible]

REVALENTA, or ERVALENTA, the [illegible] NATURAL REMEDY for CONSTIPATION Piles and Procidentia, Incontinence of Water, Spasms, and all kinds of urinary weakness [illegible] Diabetes, Gout, Rheumatism, Acidity of the Stomach, Sickness, Sick [illegible] Nervousness, Hypochondria, Hysterics, Palpitation, Nervousness, Cramps, Spasms, Asthma, Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Inflammation, Debility, and Low Spirits, even in the most distressing cases, after all other means have failed, by the use of this pure farinaceous food, which restores the natural power of digestion, and with it the whole system to perfect health, without the use of medicine, or any other aid. Price 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 5s., 10s., and 22s. per pound. Barry, Du Barry, and Co., 77, Regent-street, London. Sold by Fortnum and Mason, Piccadilly; Hedges and Butler, 155, New Bond-street; Duncan, Flockhart, and Co., Edinburgh; and Grocers and Chemists.

WASHING WITHOUT RUBBING the CLOTHES.—Mr. Twelvetree's Expeditious Method of Washing Without Hard Labour, in the FAMILY FRIEND, No. 7, price 2d. London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN.

MRS. WARREN'S SUPERB DESIGNS in FANCY WORK, in the FAMILY FRIEND, price 2d, monthly. London: HOULSTON and STONEMAN.

THE FIRST TEN NUMBERS of the FAMILY FRIEND, containing THREE HUNDRED and TWENTY Pages, Beautifully Printed and Wrappered, price 1s. each, or in 8 Parts, 6d. each. London: HOULSTON & STONEMAN; and all Booksellers.

Recently published, price 1s. 6d.
THE ART of MODELLING WAXEN FLOWERS, Fruit, &c. By G. W. FRANCIS, F.L.S. This Work contains many hints and instructions not to be found in similar Books, and is illustrated with numerous Wood Engravings of Models, Patterns, Parts of Flowers, &c. &c.—SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co., Stationers' Court, 12, passage-firm, St. of D. FRANCIS 21, Mile-end-road, and all Booksellers.

NEW EDITION, 24/00
Now ready, Part I. One Shilling, or post-free, 1s. 6d.
THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON SPELLING-BOOK.
This work is rendered peculiarly attractive by the EASY ARRANGEMENT of the SPELLING, which smoothes the difficulties of learning to read. The PLEASING MANNER in which the Letters are introduced, and the [illegible] LESSONS, which unites the learner to acquire of his own accord, and [illegible] ILLUSTRATED by UPWARDS OF ONE HUNDRED and SEVENTY BEAUTIFUL WOOD-CUTS of objects and scenes described, [illegible] for the most alluring introduction to learning ever published. (144 Pages.)
Now Complete, Cloth Gilt, price 4s. extra.
Published at the Office of THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand, London. A Liberal Allowance to the Trade and to Schools. Supplied for Exportation. Orders to be made to the Office for application, terms may be known.

THE PETIT COURRIER DES DAMES; or Journal of French Fashions.—S. and J. FULLER continue to receive, on the day of publication, this French Fashion, which arrives from Paris and is issued to the subscribers every Saturday, at 3s. per quarter, free by post to any part of the country as far as Aix, the "JOURNAL DES DEMOISELLES," on the 15th of the month at 2s. 6d. per quarter.

NEW SONG.—"YES! I HAVE DARED TO LOVE THEE!" by the Author of "Will you love me then as now?" "Dearest, don't [illegible] love you more." "The Secret," &c. price 2s. net. [illegible] This song will be the greatest favourite of the set. The melody and words are of the most pleasing and effective description, [illegible] recommended to [illegible] as a song also very theatrical accompaniment.—DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

PIANOFORTE OFFICES, 167, Fatternoster-row, and New Oxford-street.—Just published, a Set of Waltzes, by Regis Aubert.
ITALIAN OPERAS, 2s. each, Full Music Size; Post-free, 30 Stamps each.—Costa, Linda di Chamounix, Les Huguenots, Lucia, Lucrezia Borgia, Maria di Rohan, Norma, Puritani, Sonnambula, Otello, Il Barbiere, Il Don Pasquale, Il Crociato, Ernani, Nabucco, Il Giuramento, Lombardi, Attila, Due Foscari, Giovanna d'Arco, Masnadieri, Corsaro, Luisa Miller, Rigoletto, Trovatore, Traviata, Vespri Siciliani, Ballo in Maschera, Poliuto, Roberto Devereux, Don Pasquale, Don Sebastiano, Favorita, Lucia di Lammermoor, Lucrezia Borgia, Parisina, Torquato Tasso, Pia de' Tolomei, Maria di Rudenz, Belisario, Betly, Gemma di Vergy, Linda di Chamounix

FETE AT COLEORTON HALL TO CELEBRATE THE MAJORITY OF SIR GEORGE H. BEAUMONT, BART.—(SEE PAGE 238.)

(Continued from page 238.)

Esq., citizen and spectacle maker, entertained the masters, wardens, and livery of their respective companies, at a breakfast given at the Carpenters' Hall, London-wall; after which the Sheriffs, with the Under-Sheriffs, and their respective companies, went in procession, preceded by the watermen of the companies, bearing their banners and streamers, and attended by the splendid band of the Coldstream Guards, to Guildhall, where the procession was joined by the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, Sir James Duke, M.P., in the state carriage, and several Aldermen in their respective equipages. Our Illustration represents the civic procession passing through Cheapside. The party then proceeded to Blackfriars-bridge, and embarked in the city state barges for Westminster. Arrived at Westminster Hall, they were met by the Recorder, attended by the High Constable of Westminster, and conducted into the Court of Exchequer, where they took up their positions, the Lord Mayor and the Recorder, the Sheriffs on either side, and the Aldermen, according to their rank, within the bar.

The Curaitor Baron, George Bankes, Esq., M.P., then entered the court in his scarlet robes, and having taken his seat on the bench, the Recorder introduced the new Sheriffs to him in an address giving the family history of those gentlemen.

The Curaitor Baron having made a suitable reply, the Recorder read the warrant of attorney of the new Sheriffs, Alderman Lawrence and D. Nicoll, Esq., to receive all writs and processes; which, having been handed in and read by the Queen's Remembrancer, on the motion of the Recorder, was ordered to be filed and entered.

The warrant of the late Sheriffs, Alderman Finnis and E. Goodhart, Esq., to appear and account to her Majesty's Exchequer, as also of their Under-Sheriffs, and their appearance on that day for that purpose, having been entered,

The Recorder moved that such appearance personally should be recorded.

The Curaitor Baron said: Let the appearance be recorded.

The Usher then read the proclamation calling on the citizens o. London, as tenants and occupiers of certain land and premises called the Moor, in the county of Salop, to appear and do service, under pains and penalties, when Alderman Musgrove, as the senior alderman below the chair, in the terms of such service, cut a bundle of sticks with a hatchet, and another with a bill-hook.

A similar proclamation being made in respect of certain premises called the Forge, in St. Clement Danes, in the county of Middlesex, Alderman Musgrove proceeded to count six horse-shoes and sixty-one hob-nails; and, having pronounced them sufficient, the ceremony was said to be complete.

The Recorder, in the name of the Sheriffs, invited the learned Curaitor Baron to the banquet at Carpenters' Hall, who expressed his intention of attending

The Court then broke up, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs returning in state to Guildhall and afterwards to Carpenter's Hall, in the order in which the procession had arrived.

THE DINNER.

The inaugural dinner took place in the evening, in the ancient hall of the Carpenters' Company, London Wall; Mr. Sheriff Lawrence in the chair. Covers were laid for about 160, and among those present were, the Right Hon. Sir James Duke, M.P., Lord Mayor; J. Masterman, Esq., M.P.; Sir John Key, J. Williams, Esq., M.P.; George Bankes, Esq., the Curaitor Baron; Alderman Farncomb, the Lord Mayor elect; ex-Sheriffs Finnis and Goodhart and the Under-Sheriffs; Charles Pearson, Esq., &c.

The banquet-hall had not been used for an entertainment of this description for the last three centuries, and on the present occasion was tastefully decorated with flags and banners bearing appropriate mottoes and devices.

On the removal of the cloth, the customary loyal, national, and complimentary toasts were given from the chair, and cordially honoured; and the festive party did not separate till a late hour.

PROCESSION OF THE SHERIFFS TO WESTMINSTER, ON MONDAY LAST.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1849.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 394.—VOL. XV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1849. [SIXPENCE.

BRITISH ADVENTURE.

"NON ANGLI SED ANGELI"—"They are not Angles, but Angels"—was the well-known exclamation of the Roman, on beholding for the first time the beautiful youth of the Anglo-Saxons, who appeared as captives in the then metropolis of the world. "Angli et Angeli"—"They are Englishmen and angels;" or, to use the primitive meaning of the word, "They are Englishmen and messengers"—might be the exclamation of any one who at this age of the world reflected upon the vast enterprise and unconquerable energy of the Anglo-Saxon race. The British people are in a far greater degree than any other the messengers of civilisation. They have already done more by themselves and by their progeny for the extension of geographical and scientific knowledge, and the general progress of humanity, than any other people under the sun. With the exception of a few researches into the records and monuments of the ancient civilisations of the East, and the voyages of La Perouse, which have been undertaken by Frenchmen, and a slight exception in favour of a few Dutchmen and Germans, the history of maritime and overland discovery for the last seventy years is a history of the exploits and self-devotion of Britons. A glance at the interesting Anglo-Saxon map which has recently been published will suffice to show how largely the world is indebted to us and to our children of America for the efforts we have made to extend its knowledge of the physical structure of the earth. In the Arctic and in the Antarctic circles, in the Tropics, and amid the countless islands of the Pacific, we have left our beneficent marks. Whether impelled by the desire of gain, by the spirit of adventure, by the love of knowledge, or by all these combined, the grand result is the same. Our physical, moral, and intellectual presence is felt in every region of the globe. If in some of these regions it was conquest, and no motive more exalted, which led us to establish our dominion amongst tribes and nations alien to us in language, religion, and manners, the most bitter enemies of British power will scarcely hazard the denial of the fact, that, even when we conquer, the general tendency of our dominion is to civilise and refine.

Yet, though much has been done, much remains to do. The interior of the vast African continent is still a sealed book, which many future Mungo Parks, Bruces, Denhams, Clappertons, and Landers will be desirous to open for the satisfaction and instruction of the world. The interior of that more recently discovered and even more interesting continent of Australia, destined, we cannot doubt, to become, in the fulness of time, the seat of an empire far more magnificent than Great Britain herself, has yet to be explored. New Guinea, Borneo, Celebes, and a thousand smaller islands in the same prolific and splendid ocean, teeming with wealth, and requiring only the authority of an enterprising and industrious race to spur to exertion the indolent or savage men who now inhabit them, are yet in their first infancy as regards us and the wants of the world. We have already acquired a footing in the largest of these islands—the largest and finest island in the world. By individual or by national effort it will yet be turned to account at no distant date for the extension of our geographical and ethnological knowledge, and for the increase of our own wealth and that of the countries with which we shall trade. In all these seas there are yet discoveries to be made which will long continue to tax the willing energies of many future adventurers, who will rise up, as occasion calls, to vindicate the ancient renown of our race, and render themselves famous by their title to the gratitude of all civilised nations. The islands and continents of the Southern Pole are yet but half discovered. They extend from Palmer's Land, in the western, to Victoria, in the eastern hemisphere; and, though commercially less important, they are scientifically as full of interest as the richer and more favoured territories of the Tropics. We may confidently expect to hear from time to time of the progress of the work begun in those inhospitable quarters, and of the acquisition of stores of knowledge derived from experiments and observations, of incalculable value to the geographer, to the astronomer, to the natural philosopher, and, perhaps, even to the trader.

But of all the Expeditions which private enterprise or public policy has fitted out for the exploration of the still unknown regions of the globe, the several expeditions for the discovery of the north-west passage are looked upon by the people of this country, and by the world in general, with the greatest interest and anxiety. The failure of one expedition is but the incentive to fit out another; and the greater the danger, the greater is the eagerness of enterprising and resolute men, from the most able and experienced Commander to the hardest-working common sailor, to share it, upon the chance of the imperishable renown which success will afford them. Captains Parry, Ross, Back, Franklin, and their brave companions, who have been engaged at intervals for the last thirty years and upwards in the endeavour to solve this deeply interesting problem, and to determine the configuration of the Great North American Continent and of that other great Arctic continent of which Greenland is almost all that is known to us, have carried with them on their departure the cordial good-wishes of their countrymen for their success. Their return in safety, after the manifold privations and hardships of such a voyage, has invariably been greeted with fervent enthusiasm; and the long absence of Sir John Franklin, the last gallant explorer of those seas, has excited in the public mind an affectionate and deep interest, amounting at last to a painful solicitude for his fate and that of the brave men who share his perils and his glory. The connubial anxieties of Lady Franklin, and her efforts to incite by promised reward the exertions of the masters of whaling vessels to sail in search of the missing heroes, touched a strong chord in the national heart; and the humblest and least-educated reader of the public events of our day, as recorded in the newspapers, indulged in the hope, that, sooner or later, and whether successful or unsuccessful in the great object of his voyage, Sir John Franklin would return to receive the thanks of his countrymen and the renewed affection of his friends and family. There is at last some ground to believe that this hope is not unfounded, and that Sir John Franklin and his hardy mariners are safe in Prince Regent's Inlet, and in communication with a congenial spirit and a congenial crew, in the persons of Sir James Clark Ross and his companions. Every arrival from those seas will be anxiously looked for, till the cheering news brought by the Captain of the Truelove be confirmed. The very name of the vessel is of good omen for Lady Franklin, and, through her, for the whole people who are interested in the safety of her husband. We can but express a hope, which we are confident will be shared by millions, that still more positive intelligence will speedily be received; and that all reason for future apprehension with regard to the Erebus and Terror will be removed from her mind and that of the country.

THE HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE AT VERSAILLES.—M. BÉRENGER, PRESIDENT; M. BAROCHE, PROCUREUR-GENERAL, &c.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

These Polar Expeditions prove, even more completely than any others undertaken by our countrymen, the indomitable energy, the daring love of adventure, and the enthusiasm for discovery which so pre-eminently distinguish the Anglo-Saxon race, and which have raised it to so high a position in the councils of the world. It has been alleged as a reason why no more money should be lavished upon North Polar adventure, and why no more valuable lives should be imperilled or sacrificed, that the North-West Passage, even if effected, will be of no use. We shall know positively, and by actual proof and experiment, what we are now convinced of by process of reasoning; but there, it is said, the advantage will end. A passage that is not always practicable, and that is only to be effected at large cost and enormous risk, is of no positive usefulness. We might as well be without it, for all the advantage that we can derive from it. All this is true in one sense: but, nevertheless, as far as the particular argument is concerned, the scientific value outweighs the commercial, in the estimation of British genius; and Expedition succeeds Expedition, and will continue to do so, until the object is accomplished. We think it is well that it should be so, and that even in the calculation of profit and loss we have no right to conclude that no good will result from the enterprise of our countrymen. Who, in these days, shall be hardy enough to set bounds to the limits of scientific discovery? Who knows what interesting problems of magnetism and electricity may yet be solved by intelligent and accurate observers in the Arctic Circle? and what now mysterious or utterly incomprehensible phenomena of nature may not be explicable hereafter, in consequence of experiments to be made in those regions? Who shall set bounds to our powers of locomotion, and say that hereafter we may not be able to force a passage even through the ice-fields of the 75th degree of North latitude? All that has been already done teaches humility to the true lovers of science; while, at the same time, it encourages them to make all their present knowledge the fulcrum of future achievements more splendid and more useful. If we are not destined to gather any harvest from their exertions, our posterity may; and when we reflect how much our ancestors have done for us in this respect, and what an inheritance of scientific knowledge they have bequeathed to us, we may, without being presumptuous or over-sanguine, hope that our age also may, in various ways, as yet unknown, bequeath to our posterity an inheritance still larger. Even the North Polar Expedition may do this; and while the country welcomes back with gratitude every unsuccessful adventurer from those interesting but dangerous seas, it will continue to freight with its best wishes the ship of every new hero who shall make a new trial.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE AT VERSAILLES.

THE trial of the prisoners accused of participation in "the affair of the 13th of June" was appointed to take place on the 10th inst., before the High Court sitting at Versailles M. Berenger (the President of the High Court of Justice), M. Baroche (the Procureur-General), and the other members of the court, left Paris on Tuesday, for Versailles. In the evening, the accused were removed from the Conciergerie, at Paris, to Versailles, under the care of a large party of gendarmerie and a regiment of cavalry. They occupied five carriages, called gondoles.

The prisoners, on leaving the Prefecture, cried "Vive la République!" and attempted to get up "Le Chant du Départ;" but, finding that it did not take with the crowd assembled, they remained silent.

The court commenced its proceedings on Wednesday. The acte d'accusation is a document equal in length to nearly forty columns of a pretty large French newspaper.

The document commences by giving a list of the parties accused. They are 67 in number, of whom 37 are absent, and therefore to be tried par contumace, and 29 only are present, and to be tried in regular form. With respect to the remaining one (Theophile Kersanale), the acte d'accusation does not indicate whether he is to be present or not. Among the accused are 31 members of the Legislative Assembly, of whom 10 are in prison and 21 have fled, and are therefore set down among the absent.

The names of the members of the Legislature who are in flight are the following:

MM. Ledru Rollin, Victor Considérant, Bolchet, Rattier, Bayer, Pilleger, Avril, Martin Bernard, Kœnig, Rougeot, Menand, Landolphe, Hofer, Kopp, Auster, Reiland, Cantagrel, Hertzmann, Jannot, Laurlen, Felix Pyat.

The following members are in prison, and will take their trial: -MM. Commissaire, Suchet, Maigne, Fargin-Fayolle, Pithes, Daniel Lamazière, Boeh, Vautier Deville Gambon.

The document gives a short summary of the charges brought against each individual. The whole of the accused are divided into four categories viz.; first, the Democratic Socialism Committee Commission of the Twenty-five; second, the committee of the press; third, the representatives; and, fourth, artillerymen and others National Guard manifestation.

We have, upon the preceding page, portrayed M. Berenger, the President, M. Baroche, the Procureur-General, and other members of the Court, proceeding in due form to their solemn duties. In addition to the individual interest of this scene, it is treasurable as an illustration of the full costume of a French Court of Justice; the scene altogether having an almost theatrical character.

The Queen, before leaving Balmoral, was graciously pleased to transmit to Mr. Wilson, editor of the North of Scotland Gazette, a donation of £20 for "the Aberdeen Ragged Kirk."

THE PEACE CONGRESS.—The following letter has been addressed to Lord Palmerston by the Peace Congress Committee of London, relative to the dispute now pending between the British and Portuguese Government, on the subject of the forcible release of Mr. Summers at Macao:—"Peace Congress Committee, 18, New Broad-street, Sept. 20, 1849.—My Lord: We have learned, with deep regret, that a misunderstanding has arise between the British and Portuguese Governments, in consequence of the death of a Portuguese soldier, killed at Macao by a party of English marines, who were engaged in forcibly releasing a British subject from confinement. Whilst this transaction justly demands the most searching investigation, we beg to express our earnest hope that it will not be permitted for one moment to disturb the friendly relations of the two countries, and that, should any obstacle arise to prevent its amicable adjustment, to the entire satisfaction of both parties, by ordinary diplomatic negotiation, your Lordship will at once refer your high influence to secure the settlement of the dispute by friendly negotiation.—Signed on behalf of the Peace Congress Committee of London.—To the Right Hon. Lord Palmerston."

ATTEMPTED PARRICIDE.—We noticed in our Postscript last week a desperate attempt made, on Thursday evening week, by a young man named Henry Bathurst Monkhouse, to murder his father, Mr. John Farmer Monkhouse, residing on the Mall, Chiswick, by shooting him in the throat with a pistol. The accused is the second son of Mr. Monkhouse, and was sent to sea as a midshipman at an early age; but, having forfeited his father's good opinion, for the last six or seven years has been engaged as a common seaman in the merchant service. He only landed at Liverpool from his last voyage on the 30th ult., and on Tuesday week he went down to Chiswick to see his friends; but, having been upbraided severely by his father for some previous misconduct, he left the place in anger, and, on Thursday evening, about seven o'clock, he drove up to the house in a cab, had his father called out, and, on the old man presenting himself at the hall-door, discharged a loaded pistol, which took effect in the throat, inflicting a wound that it is feared will prove mortal. He made his escape, but was arrested a few hours subsequently, in a public-house at Ealing. These particulars were proved in evidence at the Hammersmith Police-court, on Friday week, when he was remanded to Wednesday last, from which day he was again remanded to next Wednesday, as his father was not in a fit state to appear against him in court. The accused is entitled to the reversion, at his father's death, of one-fourth of the sum of £8722 4s. 4d. Consols.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

The domestic affairs of la grande nation present rather a dull aspect this week.

The chief interest in Paris turns upon the discussions of the Legislative Assembly, which, however, afford little calling for notice, with the exception of the formal avowal made by the President of the Council and the Minister for Foreign Affairs, on the committee to which the consideration of the sums demanded by the Government to defray the expense of the expedition to Rome has been referred. These Ministers communicated several documents, and declared that the President's letter, as a whole, formed the basis of their policy, and though they would not express their concurrence with the contents of the manifesto, or motu proprio of the Pope, they yet accepted it provisionally, but reserving the right of demanding ulterior concessions. The Ministers, moreover, declared that the motu proprio, and especially the part of amnesty it contained, had given rise to discontent to all classes of the Roman population; so much so that the French army could no. for the present be withdrawn from Rome.

The Roman policy of the French Government has thus assumed a tangible shape, instead of being the uncertain, flitting will-o'-the-wisp it has hitherto appeared to be. M. Thiers, who was selected reporter by the committee, approves of that expedition, as also of the Pope's manifesto, and will support the Government demands

On Tuesday, M. Pelletier submitted a scheme to the Assembly for the purpose of extinguishing poverty, which was so extravagant and absurd, that, after a long debate, it was rejected by a majority of 428, 5 only voting in its favour.

The health of M. de Falloux is worse, the disease having been increased by the state of the weather. The physicians urge upon their patient absolute rest, so that there is no expectation that he will be well enough to take part in the discussion on the Roman question, next week.

Rumours were in circulation in Paris, during the week, that riots had broken out at Naples, and that the King had been assassinated; but, after the most diligent inquiries, they could not be traced to rest on any foundation.

Letters from Marseilles, dated the 6th, state that 18 of the members of the late Roman Constituent Assembly had arrived in that city.

A letter from Troyes states that the present vintage is so abundant in the department of the Aube, that several of the proprietors have thrown on the highroad and in their farm-yards the wine of last year's growth, in order to use the empty casks.

The trees of liberty planted in Paris after the revolution of February, which have since died, or are considered likely to live, have been rooted up by order of the Prefect of Police. This operation attracted a great concourse of people, and here and there some attempts were made to impede it.

PRUSSIA.

Advices from Berlin of the 9th inst. state that the second part of the 105th section of the Constitution (considered the most important portion) had been carried by 237 to 63.

ITALIAN STATES.

ROME.—We learn from Rome that several French soldiers had been assassinated in the public streets; in consequence of which, General Rostolan issued a decree demanding the delivering up of all kinds of arms within twenty four hours, and intimating that all persons in whose houses such weapons should be found hereafter would be tried before a Council of War.

On the 1st, the police department was to be given up to the Pontifical Government, and a rumour was current that Rome was to receive a mixed French, Austrian, Neapolitan, and Spanish garrison. All the deputies, on the French police having told them it could not protect them beyond that period, quitted the city. Sixty left Rome together, and were accompanied by a part of the population outside the gates, who cheered them as they left. They embarked in different vessels, and some proceeded to Genoa, and others to Toulon.

PIEDMONT.—The Sardinian Government has concluded two loans, one with Baron Rothschild, for 32,000,000f. at 82, and another with capitalists of the country for 9,000,000f., at 83. Great preparations were making for the funeral of Charles Albert, whose remains were expected from Genoa on the 12th. It is said that he has begueathed to the nation his picture gallery and his collection of arms, which are truly magnificent. The funeral oration of the Prince was delivered at Genoa by M. Terence Mamiani, at the request of the Municipality.

AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY.

The Vienna papers publish a letter from a lady, named De Maderspach—whose son had served in the Hungarian army of Görgey, but having been taken prisoner has been sent as an army in Italy—in which she details the atrocious cruelties to which she had been subjected in her native village of Rinkberg, by a Captain of the Lichtenstein Light Horse (Austrian) named Grün. This affected lady says:—

"I was torn from the arms of my husband, from the circle of my children, from the hallowed altar of my home, charged with no offence, allowed no hearing arranged before no Judge. A woman, with a daughter, was, in my own native town, before the people accustomed to treat me with respect, dragged into a square of soldiers, and there scourged with rods. Lo'k, I cannot write it! Before the eyes of my husband I had Himself robbed of all other weapons, he shot himself with a pocket pistol. A cry of horror filled the air. I was dragged before Lieut. Kaiserfeld. The grapeshot rose, and killed those who precipitated these horrors, but their lives were saved by the interference of the military. My children was taken prisoner with the army of Görgey, and sent as a common soldier into Italy, and so is the case with all of my children. I am plunged in misery, and of my wealth. You know not my husband. I tell you that no nobler, more elevated, more adorable character does or ever will exist. The very remembrance of him is painful to me. He was one of the gross bridges in him the world has sustained a great loss. My misfortune is boundless, and unceasing are the tortures I suffer. Grief will soon kill me. My grief will soon kill me. I perceive that I can dwell on nothing but my sorrow. One only wish still animates me to bestow my son. They have transported him to Grätz. If you have friends there, think of my poor boy of eighteen. F. VON MADERSPACH.

The terms of the capitulation of Comorn are Amnesty for the whole of the garrison, with the exception of the ringleaders and officers, who will be given 6d. with passports for a foreign land. The men, on quitting the fortress, to get their pay for eight days. The Kossuthian notes to be bought up by the Government. The exchange is to be 250 Austrian florins for 100 florins. It is said to have been settled at first, but afterwards inserted, in consideration of the vast collection of stores shut up in the fortress, and the improvements and additions to the fortifications that have been, from time to time, made by the insurgents—the sum of which would have cost the State a great outlay of capital. It is supposed the citadel has already been formally surrendered to the Austrians.

The insurgents in the fortress numbered in all 20,000 men.

The rumour of Görgey's assassination has not been corroborated. Six of the prisoners who had been taken at Vilagos, and been condemned to suffer death by the court, had been executed accordingly. Four of them were Hungarian Generals—Aulich, Kiss, Poltenberg, and Vecsey.

The latest accounts from Vienna are to the 5th, and they state that the subscriptions to the new Austrian loan have exceeded the amount (60,000,000f. to 72,000,000f.) fixed by the Minister of Finances. On the closing of the list they amounted to 62,000,000f. without counting those made abroad, which are calculated at about 20,000, 00f., Amsterdam alone has subscribed from 10,000,000f. to 15,000,000f. The amounts taken by the houses of Rothschild and Sinna are now stated to be 5,000,000f each.

The Chevalier Jochtam, the Saxon Secretary of State, had arrived in Vienna, bearer of certain bonds to the amount of 60,000,000f., which he has remitted to the Austrian Government as security for the exactness of the payments at the periods fixed by the treaty of peace.

TURKEY.

From Constantinople the advices are to the 29th ult. The answer of Russia to the Sultan's note had, of course, reached the Porte, sufficient time not having elapsed for the accomplishment of that object. Great anxiety was felt respecting it, which, it was calculated, would arrive about the 11th or 12th inst. The state of affairs between the two countries, therefore, remained unchanged. The general belief in all the capitals of Europe appears to be that nothing of a warlike character is likely to issue from the disagreement; and, therefore, that little apprehension on the nature of Russian views, in the event of the Council of the Nation at Constantinople, the Cabinet, having been out-voted on the question of the extradition of the Poles and Hungarians, had proposed to those poor refugees to save themselves by becoming Mussulmans; and Bem, with some twenty others out of the 5000 who are at Widden, alone embraced the offer. Bem, whose chivalrous courage can only be equalled by his hatred of Russia, has taken this dreadful step not from fear, but in the hope that he may thereby be better wreak his vengeance in case of war between Turkey and Russia.

UNITED STATES.

There have been two arrivals from the States this week, and from them we learn that some misunderstanding was reported to have arisen between the English and American governments, and in consequence a rather severe correspondence had taken place between the cabinet at Washington and the British ambassador, on a subject upon which a contest was apprehended some time ago on the claims of the Mosquito territory.

The "affair" between the principal republics of the Old and New World, which we noticed last week, has been shorn of its dimensions in the public mind, by its being now regarded only as a mere personal quarrel between the French ambassador and the American authorities.

In the domestic affairs of the Union there was nothing of interest stirring. The arrivals of emigrants from Germany and Ireland are reported to be immense. At some periods as many as 800 Germans had arrived in one month from the Havre and Bremen ports alone. Serious complaints had been made of the treatment experienced during their passage, and the authorities had several cases under investigation. Societies were being formed to assist emigrants on their arrival in several localities.

The hostile feeling exhibited by the Indians had caused the Oregon mission to be abandoned.

The Astor Place rioters, who had taken part in the "Macready" affair, were undergoing their trial in New York. The Herald says: "We are very sorry to hear that an immense majority of the jurors are partizans, that no jury can be found in this city to convict these persons, no matter how clear, or positive, or emphatic the evidence may be. The prevalence of such a sentiment in a civilized community, indicates more than anything else, the state of society, in the progress of intellect, or in the condition of the race."

CANADA.

The advices from this turbulent quarter are characteristic. A sanguinary rencontre took place between the Tory and Reform parties in Kingston on the 15th ult. The Reformers had a public meeting on that day, for the purpose of sending a congratulatory address to Lord Elgin. The Tories attended in full force, and finally succeeded in completely breaking it up, and forcing the President to vacate the chair. Both parties were armed and in the course of the fight seven or eight persons were severely wounded, two of them so badly that they were not expected to survive. The Tories having taken possession of the room, passed a resolution condemning Lord Elgin and the ministry, which gave a renewed impetus to the riot and brawl. The military were called out, and, after considerable difficulty, succeeded in restoring order.

It is estimated that the property burned and destroyed in Toronto and Montreal since the riots in March last exceed £40,000 sterling, and the loss in trade, emigration of settlers, &c., little short of a million additional.

The latest accounts (to the 24th of September) announce that the disturbances at Bytown still continued, and that there had been large arrivals of men from the country, who were fully armed and ready to act in any outbreak. The troops, however, prevented any serious damage being done. It is said that Lord Elgin has in his possession documents tending to implicate several leading reformers in charge of sedition, in regard to the annexation of Canada to the United States.

A destructive fire occurred in Quebec on the 22d ult., consuming, before it was arrested, twenty-five buildings. The loss is estimated at £25,000, which was mostly covered by insurance, £12 000 to £15,000 of which is in the Quebec Office, and £1300 in the Phœnix Office. The fire is said to have been the work of an incendiary.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

The merchant-ship Dowson, from the Cape of Good Hope, arrived, during the week, bringing two days' later news from that colony. The convicts in the Pelorus had all then reached the Cape; but the Essex, with troops from Cork, which arrived on the 3rd of August, reported having spoken a vessel three weeks previously with convicts for the Cape.

The hostility to the reception of the convicts still continued in full vitality.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

Their Lordships met on Tuesday last, pursuant to the prorogation at the close of the session, with the view of further proroguing Parliament until the 20th of November next.

Soon after two o'clock, the Lord Chancellor, the Earl of Carlisle, and Lord Campbell took their seats, in front of the Throne, in their robes, as her Majesty's commissioner, when the Deputy-Usher of the Black Rod (Mr. Pulman) was directed to summon the Commons to the bar, to hear the Royal Commission read.

Mr. Wm. Ley, the Second Clerk at the table of the House of Commons, with one honourable member (Mr. A. Raphael), and several officials of the Lower House, accordingly appeared at the bar, when, the Royal Commission having been read,

The LORD CHANCELLOR, in the name of her Majesty, and on her behalf, declared the Parliament further prorogued from that day until Tuesday, the 20th proximo.

The Commons, represented as before stated, then retired, and the Commissioners left the House

The only particular circumstance attendant upon the ceremonial was the first appearance of the Lord Chancellor in the House since his severe indisposition.

No other Peer was present except the Lords Commissioners.

DECORATION OF THE HOUSE OF LORDS.—Since the Parliamentary session has closed the remaining stained glass windows have been comp eted, and Mr. Dyce at one end of the House, and Mr. Maclise at the other, are fast proceeding with their frescoes. The effect produced on that of Mr. Dyce, the subject being "The committal of Prince Henry by Judge Gascoigne," in consequence of the artificial light thrown upon it, by which the artist works, affords a strong proof of the great advantage these works of art would derive from a stronger light being thrown upon them than that which the common illumination of the House affords. This observation applies even more particularly to the bar "end" of the House, where the recesses are deeper than behind the "throne."

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

GERTRUDE LADY BULLER

GERTRUDE LADY BULLER, relict of Vice-Admiral Sir Edward Buller, Bart., of Trecaut park, Cornwall, M.P., died, at Torquay, on the 3rd instant. Her Ladyship was the fifth daughter of Colonel Paul Van Cortlandt, the representative of a very influential family, which, originally noble in Holland, was established in North America by the Right Hon. Oliver Stephen Van Cortlandt, who accompanied, as Secretary to Government, in 1673, the first Dutch Governor sent out by the States General to the colony of New York.

Lady Buller was one of a large family, her parents having had no less than twenty-four children. Her sisters were—1. Mary Dickenson, wife of John M. Anderson, Esq.; 2. Elizabeth, wife of William Taylor, Esq., Lord Chief Justice of Jamaica, and mother of the present Colonel Philip Taylor; 3. Margaret Pennington Hughes, wife of Colonel Paul Van Cortlandt, of Kincraig; 4 Margaret Hughes, wife of C. Buller, Esq., of Binfield-park, Berks; 5 Charlotte, wife of General Sir John Fraser; and 6 Sophia Sawyer, wife of Sir William Howe Mulcaster, G.B.

Lady Buller had issue by Sir Edward one son, John St. Aubin, who died young, and one daughter, Anna Maria, who married, in 1824, Lieutenant-Colonel James Drummond Buller Fullerton-Elphinstone, and has a number of children.

GEORGE EDWARD ANSON, ESQ.

THE death of this lamented gentleman occurred most suddenly. On Monday morning he rose at his accustomed early hour, apparently in the enjoyment of his usual health, but at one o'clock he was seized with a fit, and never afterwards exhibited the slightest symptom of consciousness. Medical assistance was rendered within half-an-hour after, but, when he breathed his last. He had attended the Queen and Prince Albert throughout their Irish visit; was in the Royal suite at Balmoral; and accompanied her Majesty as far as Derby on her return to Osborne From Derby, Mr. Anson repaired to Needwood, in Staffordshire, to join Mrs. Anson; and it was there his death took place.

The deceased was born, 14th May, 1813, the second son of the Very Rev. Frederick Anson, D.D., Dean of Chester, by Mary-Anne his wife, only daughter of the late Rev. Richard Levett, of Milford, in Staffordshire. Dean Anson was younger brother of Thomas Viscount Anson, uncle of the present Earl of Lichfield, and grand nephew of the famous circumnavigator, Admiral Lord Anson.

Mr G. E. Anson was long connected with the Court, and held the confidential appointment of Keeper of her Majesty's Privy Purse. He was also Treasurer of the Honourable Corporation of the Governors and Assistants of the Corporate for the Duchy of Cornwall. He married, 20th October, 1837, the Hon. Georgiana Mary Harbord, eldest daughter of Edward, third Lord Suffield.

COMMANDER JOHN WHIPPLE.

This gallant and distinguished officer, whose death is just announced, entered the Navy in 1793, on board the Crescent, 36, with Captain Thomas Duckworth and Arthur Phillip, then stationed in the East Indies. On the ever-memorable 1st June, 1794, Mr. Whipple fought in the Gibraltar, 80; and in his admiral brother Anson of the Nile, he gained his Commander's rank, for his conduct as First Lieutenant of the Alexander, 74. From 1806 to 1810 he was employed in the Sea Fencibles in Ireland; and in 1824 was admitted to the out pension of Greenwich Hospital.

One of Commander Whipple's daughters, Matilda, married, in 1841, G. K. Bell, Esq., of the Bombay Artillery; and another, Mary, wedded, in 1845, Lieutenant Samuel Brooking Dolling, R.N.

For these details we are mainly indebted to O'Byrne's admirable "Naval Biography."

NEW DRAINAGE ACT.—An act was passed in the last session (which requires to be noticed more generally) to facilitate the advance of private money for drainage of lands in Great Britain and Ireland (12 and 13 Victoria, cap. 100). The preamble recites the large sums advanced for the drainage of land in England and Ireland; that from the uncertainty of the titles, and the terms of the loans, and that it is expedient that the same should be advanced by private persons. A good deal has been said of late respecting drainage, and the act states "that it is desirable that works of drainage should continue to be encouraged, in order to the more extensive and increased employment of the labouring and industrious of the districts where it is required, and to supply the demand for agricultural labour, especially at that season of the year when other sources are suspended." The object of the act is to enable owners of lands to borrow at advance money, to be applied to works of drainage under the sanction of the Enclosure Commissioners in England, and of the Commissioners of Public Works in Ireland. The money borrowed by any one is to be charged on the inheritance of the land. The commissioners are authorised to issue "rentcharges" on the property for twenty-two years. As between the several persons interested in any land charged with a rentcharge under this act, the persons respectively are bound to keep down and discharge the payments thereof as if the same were interest payable upon a mortgage in fee on such lands. The commissioners have a general power of inspection and examination, to ascertain the proper application of the funds raised for works of drainage.

THE TORTURE IN SWITZERLAND.—A few days ago, M. F——, examining magistrate of Zug, in Switzerland, had to investigate a charge of robbery against a servant girl named Wilhelmine Stadlin, and, as she was clearly made out against her, he called on her to avow her guilt. She repeatedly refused; whereupon he ordered that she should be subjected to torture. Accordingly her two thumbs were fastened in a vice, and this being attached to a cord which passed through a ring in the ceiling, she was lifted from the ground. The examining magistrate then called on her to confess her guilt; but as she again refused, he caused her to receive two heavy blows from a stick. This, however, had no effect; but, after twelve minutes' torture, she cried for mercy, and avowed herself guilty. A report of this affair was made to the Grand Council of the canton; but as that was done was to pass a severe reprimand on the magistrate, to warn him not again to exceed the law, to quash the investigatory, and order it to be recommenced before another magistrate MIRACULOUS ESCAPE.—One evening last week, a young woman, named Rose, residing in Yarmouth, having had an altercation with her father, and fearing his displeasure, jumped out of her bedroom window into a flagged pavement yard beneath. The room was three stories from the ground; notwithstanding which the girl alighted on her feet, sustaining no material injury.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT.

His Royal Highness the Duke Alexander of Wirtemberg, and the Prince Philip of Wirtemberg, who arrived at Osborne on Thursday week, on a visit to her Majesty, returned to London on Monday.

On Tuesday intelligence of the sudden death of Mr. George Edward Anson reached Osborne. The event has caused deep affliction to her Majesty the Queen and his Royal Highness the Prince Albert to whom Mr. Anson had been for nearly ten years a confidential and attached servant.

The Queen held a Council at Osborne on Saturday last, which was attended by his Royal Highness the Prince Albert, the Marquis of Lansdowne (President), Lord John Russell, Lord Grey, Lord Carlisle, Lord Campbell, the George Grey, Lord Palmerston, and Sir David Dundas. The Hon. W. Bathurst was the Clerk of the Council. The Bishop of Hong-Kong did homage and kissed hands on his appointment. At the Council, Parliament was ordered to be further prorogued from Tuesday, the 9th of October, until Tuesday, the 20th of November.

THE QUEEN DOWAGER.—We have authority to state that the report of Queen Adelaide's improved health is totally unfounded: we regret to add that her Majesty is suffering from severe illness.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent came to town on Tuesday from Tunbridge Wells. On Wednesday her Royal Highness paid a visit to her Majesty the Queen Dowager, at the Priory, near Hammersmith.

The Duke of Wellington arrived in town on Monday from Walmer Castle, en route for Strathfieldsaye.

The Prince and Princess Metternich have left town en route for Brussels, where they contemplate making a lengthened sojourn. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge and the Duke of Wellington paid farewell visits to the Prince and Princess on Monday.

Her Royal Highness the Grand Duchess Dowager Stephanie of Baden is daily expected to arrive at Mivart's Hotel, from the Continent.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Douglas have arrived at the Clarendon Hotel, from Paris.

Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence was honoured by the company of their Royal Highnesses the Duke of Cambridge and Prince George at dinner on Monday last, at his Lordship's residence at St. James's Palace. The Earl of Cardigan, Viscount Chelsea, Lord Clarence Paget, General Thornton, and a distinguished circle, were among the most illustrious guests.

Lord Brougham arrived at his mansion, in Grafton-street, on Saturday evening. His Lordship leaves in a few days for his château at Cannes, in the south of France. Lord Brougham remains at Cannes all winter.

His Excellency the Swedish Minister and Baroness Rehausen have returned within the last few days to the Swedish Legation, from Brighton.

His Excellency Mr. Abbott Lawrence, the newly appointed American Minister, has arrived at the Clarendon, from Boston, U. S.

Sir James and Lady Anne Mackenzie have been receiving constant succession of visitors since the commencement of the shooting season, at their beautiful and romantic residence, Loch Luichart Lodge, Ross-shire. The sport in Sir James's deer forest has been very good, many magnificent stags having fallen to the unerring rifles of Sir James and his friends.

ROYAL MARRIAGE.—The matrimonial alliance between the Crown Prince of Sweden and the Princess Louise, eldest daughter of his Royal Highness Prince Frederick of the Netherlands, is definitively fixed to take place early in the ensuing year

IRELAND.

ESTABLISHMENT OF A NEW UNIVERSITY.—A long communication has been addressed by Prince Albert to his Excellency the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, having reference to the establishment of a second University in Dublin. It appears from this letter that the prime pals of the three Queen's Colleges were anxious to have the power conferred separately on those institutions of granting degrees in the several faculties of law, physic, and arts—a view which his Royal Highness combats on the ground that the granting of such powers would only ha[ve] the effect of converting those colleges into "common nuisances and [illegible] The Prince, however, advocates the propri[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

THE "SAYED PACHA" STEAM YACHT.

THE "SAYED PACHA" STEAM YACHT.

This splendid craft, now on her passage under steam to Egypt, was built at Greenock, by Messrs. Caird and Co., to the order and under the direction of Messrs. Galloway, of Alexandria and London. She is for the private use of his Highness Sayed Pacha, Grand Admiral of the Egyptian fleet, eldest surviving son of the renowned Mohamed Ali, and heir presumptive to the Viceroyalty o Egypt.

This remarkable vessel measures 156 feet in length, by 17 feet beam, and draws 2½ feet of water, with forty hours' coals on board. The engines, on the oscillating principle, are of 80 horse nominal power, but have worked up to 120 horse-power. She has feathering paddles; and the speed attained in still water is nearly seventeen miles an hour. The smoothness with which she passed through the water excited general approbation; and on her passage from the Clyde to Milford, she met with very bad weather, and proved herself an excellent sea-boat. Going down the Nile, twenty-five miles an hour will be her probable speed.

The accommodation and general convenience is great. The principal saloon for his Highness occupies the after-part of the vessel, and measures nearly 60 feet in length; possessing a very pretty companion, or round-house, with stained glass windows, and a beautiful metal staircase, leading into the cabin, which is fitted up with mahogany Venetian blinds and plate-glass windows of a large size: the whole enclosed with strong port doors, with bull's-eyes to be opened or closed at pleasure.

Forward of the machinery is another fine cabin, of 24 feet in length by 17 feet in width, for his Highness's officers and friends, fitted up in a handsome and suitable manner. Forward of this cabin is another of good dimensions, for the accommodation of the crew.

The exterior decoration and painting are very tasteful and beautiful, being ornamented with Egyptian figures gilt, and a variety of elegant gilt scroll-work from stem to stern; altogether forming a splendid specimen of a Royal Steam Yacht, and doing infinite credit to all parties concerned. Amongst other novelties, beside the usual steam-whistle, there is a powerful trumpet, attached to the steam chest, with graduated taps, to produce a musical effect and to vary the sounds with which old Nile is now being afflicted, thus realising the oft-repeated remark that everything will be done by steam.

She has elegant brass stanchions fitted on the bulwarks, from stem to stern, for supporting a beautiful awning, with fringe dropping from it.

The fittings and decorations were done under the immediate superintendence of Mr. R. H. Galloway, of Alexandria.

There is no doubt that she will give great satisfaction to H.R.H. Sayed Pacha, whose patronage of British science, art, and manufactures is an indisputable proof of his enlightened ideas, and his fitness to follow in the steps of his wonderful father, the late Mohamed Ali.

The objects in the View above given of the bank of the Nile show those met with by the steamer, in ascending the river, opposite the celebrated Mosque of Abou Mondour, which will be recollected by all those who have once seen it. On the right hand of the spectator is the old gate of Rosetta, now in ruins, with a three-gun battery, now in ruins and the remarkably large cypress: on the left are the "sand-hills."

SMITHFIELD HORSE MARKET.

The Court of Common Council sat for upwards of four hours on Wednesday, discussing the propriety of the removal of Smithfield Market; and the result of their deliberations will be found elsewhere.

In this place we give a companion Illustration to the three scenes pictured in our Journal for July 21.

The present Engraving shows the Horse Market on Friday, respecting the nuisance of which, one of the witnesses examined by the Select Committee of the House of Commons states that on the Horse-market Day (Friday), "it is not safe to be within a mile or two of the place."

"Have there been a great many accidents connected with the Horse Market?—Yes; there is a boy suffering from a broken arm next door to me just now."

Another witness describes what is called Smithfield races, the horses and donkeys and everything of that description continually galloping the whole afternoon. "On the Friday afternoon, after the sale of the sheep and beasts is over, there is a market for the sale of horses, donkeys, carts, barrows, and every description of goods or chattels that are available for the use of costermongers, little greengrocers, or chapmen, or anything of that description, and a galloping of donkeys, and those poor old horses; a great many of them that go on Friday afternoon are bought up by the knackers—poor old horses worn out. They come in great numbers, and just where we are situated it is more dangerous that it would be perhaps if it were in any other locality; there is a part of the road paved with granite, and a portion of the road just above me macadamised, and there is a hill, consequently the children or persons passing to and fro, or crossing that portion of the road, which is narrow, are inclined to feel safe, or in one moment when they are on the macadamised part of the road it is all quiet, and they come upon the pavement, and then it is dangerous, for those fellows are galloping their donkeys and the horses." This witness adds:—"Smithfield races is the market held for the sale of horses on the Friday afternoon, after the beasts and sheep are sold; it is a continuation of the same market on the Friday for the sale of horses and old harness, barrows, costermongers' carts, and other matters."

The knackers' carts are described as a great nuisance.

"Sir C. Douglas: Have those nuisances been on the increase during the last twenty years that you have been there; are they worse than they were twenty years ago? I think they are with reference to the horses and asses on Fridays.

"Chairman: From the greater number of people going there?—Yes; the greater number of persons connected with the market, and those people who go with the horses and asses are a terrible description of people."

Another witness states there to be "a great deal of cruelty in the horse market that you cannot bring home to the perpetrators, because as they run up and down with them, one gives them a cut, and another gives them a cut, so that you never can get one man doing sufficient to convict him; but there are a great many horses there which fall, owing to the slipperiness of the stones." This witness has seen three or four horses down there at the same time: some of them have to be killed, they are not able to get up again; they crick their backs and break their legs. The animals driven through the streets are footsore and lame, with the blood oozing out between the hoof and the frstock; and standing with the blood quite in a pool, on account of their hoofs being so bad."

The horses here are sold to knackers, and some are fair horses for hacks, such as light cart horses, and those used in the light carts about London.

Knackers attend this market, and the majority of horses sold are diseased to a certain extent—such as spavined, lame, and blind; now the danger of diseased horses is incalculable, not only in the market itself, but also in the sheds where they are stabled the night previous to market day.

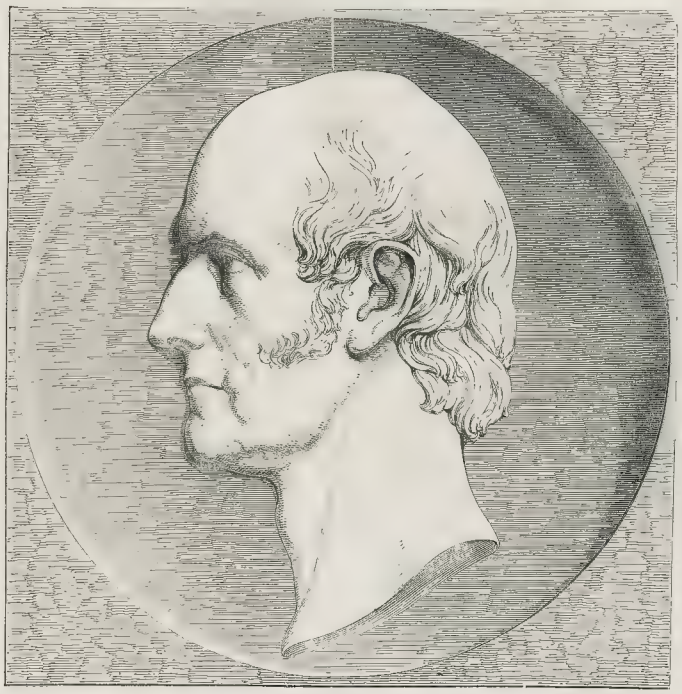
Mr. Fisk, a young artist, a nephew of Mr. Fisk, a clergyman, of St. John's Wood, was sketching lately in the neighbourhood of Balmoral, and went to the church on a very fine Sunday morning. At the end of the service the rain came down in torrents, and neither umbrella nor shelter was at hand. The Queen had to approach her carriage through a mass of waters. Mr. Fisk, with great propriety, took the plaid from his shoulders, and spread it on the ground. The Queen walked thereon, and thus reached her carriage.

THE HORSE-MARKET AT SMITHFIELD.

MEDALLION PORTRAIT OF THE LATE MR. VERNON.

For this medallic portrait, the late Mr. Vernon sat to Mr. Behnes, the sculptor, who modelled, about the same time, a bust of the lamented gentleman; and both were allowed by him to be characteristic likenesses.

Shortly after the decease of Mr. Vernon, a subscription was opened with the view of raising some memorial of his munificence in presenting to the country his fine Collection of Pictures, now housed in the National Gallery. The Medallion was submitted for this purpose to the Committee of Subscribers; but after much discussion, it was resolved to commission Mr. Behnes to execute a marble bust and pedestal of Mr. Vernon, to be presented to the National Gallery as a fitting tribute to the memory of one who has so generously contributed to enrich the Collection, and more especially to foster and elevate the English School of Painting.



MEDALLION PORTRAIT OF THE LATE ROBERT VERNON, ESQ., BY BEHNES.

GREAT EXHIBITION OF THE WORKS OF INDUSTRY OF ALL NATIONS.—This proposal, for which the world is indebted to his Royal Highness Prince Albert, seems even thus early to have assumed the aspect of a certainty. It was no sooner promulgated as an idea only to be discussed privately, than the manufacturers of the United Kingdom seemed at once to adopt it as a reality with enthusiastic cordiality. The institutions which have successfully assisted in preparing the public mind to welcome this great exhibition, and therefore deserving honourable mention, are the Society of Arts of London, the Royal Dublin Society, the Royal Manchester Institution, and the Corn-Law League, besides those which have been formed for the especial purpose of establishing temporary exhibitions, as at Liverpool, Glasgow, Norwich, &c., and last, but certainly not least, Birmingham. On the 30th June last his Royal Highness summoned Mr. T. Cubitt, Mr. H. Cole, Mr. F. Fuller, and Mr. J. S. Russell, members of the Society of Arts, to Buckingham Palace, to discuss his Royal Highness's proposal. The Prince proposed that the exhibition should consist of raw materials of all kinds, mineralogical, agricultural, &c.; of machinery and mechanical inventions; of the results of these, namely, manufactures; and, lastly, of sculpture and plastic art generally; and that the exhibition should be open to all nations. That portion of Hyde-park between the Kensington Drive and Rotten-row, which consists of about thirty acres of level ground, was considered to be an eligible site for the exhibition. A second meeting of three of these gentlemen, at which the President of the Board of Trade was also present, was held by the Prince's command at Osborne on the 14th July, when some of the general arrangements for giving effect to the plan were discussed. It was proposed that a Royal Commission should be appointed to arrange and conduct the exhibition, to determine the nature of the prizes to be given away, and to take the responsibility of awarding the prizes. It was settled that the best way of raising the funds for the prizes, the building, &c., would be by public voluntary subscriptions, and that the Society of Arts, as an institution incorporated by Royal charter, presented a useful machinery for organising the means for raising such funds. It was proposed that one prize should be awarded as high as £5000, and it was thought that perhaps the Queen might be induced to give away some of the prizes; but this subject and all its details will have to be investigated, and nothing, we believe, can be considered as determined on this point, except that an amount of £20,000 will certainly be given away in prizes. We have understood that the Prince held a third meeting on the morning of his departure for Ireland, when his Royal Highness instructed his secretary to prepare commissions, empowering Mr. Cole, Mr. F. Fuller, and Mr. J. S. Russell "to travel through the manufacturing districts of the country, in order to collect the opinions of the leading manufacturers, and further evidence, in order that his Royal Highness may bring the results of such inquiry before her Majesty's Government." Mr. Digby Wyatt attended as secretary to the deputation. Many of our readers will have seen in their local papers notices of the visits of the deputation. Among other places, we believe they have visited Manchester and its neighbourhood, the Potteries, Sheffield, Birmingham, Bradford, Leeds, Glasgow, Paisley, Perth, Edinburgh, Carlisle, Belfast, Dublin, &c.; at each place initiating the formation of a local committee, and obtaining the signatures of the principal manufacturing firms to a declaration expressive of their desire to be promoters of the exhibition, both by personal assistance and by subscriptions.—Abridged from the Journal of Design.

A new candidate for the Tracy peerage has made his appearance in the person of Lieut. Benjamin Wheatley Tracy, R.N., whose professional rank is dated 1829. It appears that the life of the defeated claimant, who lately died, was insured for upwards of £14,000, which sum has gone towards the liquidation of the costs incurred in prosecuting his suit. The estates attached to the ancient Irish peerage of Tracy are worth upwards of £40,000 per annum. The property is principally situate in Gloucestershire.

BRIGHTON COLLEGE.

THIS College was opened in January, 1847, in a building at Brighton, hired temporarily, and with forty or fifty pupils. The education which the establishment offers is not materially different from that of the public grammar-schools; a more systematic attention to mathematics and modern languages in subordination to classical training being perhaps the chief distinction in the instruction; while the discipline chiefly differs in the absence of flogging and fagging. It is conducted on the principles of the Church of England, and has been uniformly and cordially supported by the Bishop of Chichester, who is patron. The Principal is the Rev. Arthur Maclean, of Trinity College, Cambridge; the Vice-Principal and Mathematical Lecturer is the Rev. Henry Cotterill, who was formerly Fellow of St. John's, Cambridge, and Senior Wrangler; and the Classical Lecturer is Mr. George Long, formerly Professor in University College, and Lecturer on Roman Law in the Middle Temple, a gentleman well known for his classical and varied attainments. These gentlemen are supported by a sufficient number of classical, mathematical, and foreign masters.

The funds for erecting the necessary buildings are being raised by means of transferable shares, entitling the holders to presentations: this is, therefore, what is usually called a proprietary college; but the projectors had the foresight to guard as far as possible against the evils of that system, by placing the internal government, with the appointment and removal of the masters, in the hands of the Principal; all other matters being under the control of a council, chosen by the proprietors, and presided over by the Earl of Chichester.

A college, such as this, with the advantages it possesses in respect to situation and staff, offering a sound religious education at a moderate expense to the upper classes of society, will, doubtless, be extensively supported. The College is intended for 600 pupils. At present there are about 170, of whom somewhat less than one-third are sons of gentlemen residing in Brighton. The ages of the scholars vary from nine to nineteen or twenty; those about fifteen being placed in the senior department. There are three scholarships of £30 a year each, tenable for three years at Oxford or Cambridge. Behind and around the building, of which a lithographic view, by Mr. Hawkins, has lately been published by Mr. George Bell, of 186, Fleet-street, are several acres of playground.

The College building, which is designed by Mr. G. Gilbert Scott, assumes, roughly speaking, the form of three sides of a quadrangle. The principal range, facing south, contains in the centre the main entrance, with the hall and staircase, and above, the library; while on each side are ranged spacious and lofty class-rooms, and private rooms for the masters, approached by spacious corridors. This portion of the building is all that has yet been erected. Towards the west of this main range will be built the great schoolroom, which will be about 100 feet by 35 feet, and will be raised upon arches, so as to afford a covered play-ground below. To the east will be the Principal's residence, and the chapel; the latter being approached by a cloister, which will also extend along the principal range of building.

The building is in the style of the fourteenth century. The material is flint, with dressings of Caen stone. The whole, as will be seen by our View, is designed with a certain amount of that picturesque irregularity of outline which characterizes our old collegiate buildings, and which enables the observer readily to distinguish the different parts by their external forms and positions. The first stone was laid in June 22, 1848. The building is well situated on the East Cliff, standing back from the town, and facing the sea.

STOCK EXCHANGE HOAXES.—When it was known in 1715 that the best families in the north of England had assembled in arms to change the dynasty, no pains were spared by the jobbers to procure correct and to disseminate false intelligence; and it was with mingled feelings of alarm and pity that the inhabitants of a small town between Perth and the seaport of Montrose—where James embarked after his unhappy expedition—saw a carriage and six travelling with all the rapidity which the road would allow. It was known that the rebel army was dispersed; that its chiefs were scattered, and that the unfortunate Stuart was wandering through the country, with life and liberty alike endangered. It excited, therefore, no surprise in the village when the carriage was surrounded, and the apparent prize conveyed with great ostentation towards London. Letters soon reached the city that the fugitive Stuart was taken; and the letters were confirmed by the story related, which quickly reached London. The funds of course rose, and the inventors of the trick laughed in their sleeves as they divided the profit. The first political hoax on record occurred in the reign of Anne. Down the Queen's-road, riding at a furious rate, ordering turnpikes to be thrown open, and loudly proclaiming the sudden death of the Queen, rode a well-dressed man, sparing neither spur nor steed. From west to east, and from north to south, the news spread. Like wildfire it passed through the desolate fields where palaces now abound, till it reached the city. The train bands deserted from their exercise, furled their colours, and returned home with their arms reversed. The funds fell with a suddenness which marked the importance of the intelligence, and it was remarked that while the Christian jobbers stood aloof, almost paralysed with the information, Manasseh Lopez and the Jew interest bought eagerly at the reduced price. There is no positive information to fix the deception upon any one in particular, but suspicion was pointed at those who gained by the fraud so publicly perpetrated. Chronicles and Characters of the Stock Exchange, just published.

ABOLITION OF FARMING PAUPER CHILDREN.—The Commissioners of Poor-laws some time since, with a view to the abolition of the system of farming pauper children in the North Surrey district, caused instructions to be sent to the unions of Wandsworth and Clapham, Croydon, Kingston, Richmond, and Lewisham, recommending that they should form a joint board of management to concert measures for the erection and maintenance of a large district school, to which the children of all these unions might be sent. In consequence of this recommendation, a board was formed, and measures were taken for the erection of a school at Penge Common, Battersea. The building, which is to cost £15,000, and to be capable of accommodating 600 children, will, it is said, be opened in August next.

CAUTION TO CREDITORS OF BANKRUPTS.—There is a section in the new Bankruptcy Act (the 270th), by which it is declared that, if any creditor of a bankrupt shall obtain any sum of money, or any goods, chattels, or security for money, from any person as an inducement for forbearing to oppose, or consenting to the allowance of, a certificate of such bankrupt, or to forbear to petition for the recal of the same, every such creditor so offending shall forfeit and lose for every such offence the treble value or amount of such money, goods, chattels, or security so obtained, as the case may be. The assignees are to proceed against the parties. Creditors obtaining from bankrupts securities for a like purpose are, by another provision, precluded from recovering; but the above-mentioned section reaches all parties, and may be regarded as a caution to creditors.

BRIGHTON COLLEGE.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, October 14.—Nineteenth Sunday after Trinity.
MONDAY, 15.—Napoleon arrived at St. Helena, 1815.
TUESDAY, 16.—New moon 5h. 3m. P.M. Houses of Parliament burned, 1834.
WEDNESDAY, 17.—Etheldreda. Sun rises 6h. 28m., sets 5h. 2m.
THURSDAY, 18.—St. Luke the Evangelist.
FRIDAY, 19.—Length of day 10h. 7m.
SATURDAY, 20.—Battle of Navarino, 1827.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING OCTOBER 20

Monday		Tuesday		Wednesday		Thursday		Friday		Saturday
M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.
h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.
0 25	0 5	1		1		2	2	3	2	3	3
5	4	5	5	6	6	7	7	8	8	9	9
10	9	11	10	11	11	11	11	11	11	11	11
30	29	30	30	31	31	32	32	33	33	34	34

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. W. BATTY. Third Week of Fitzhall's wonderfully successful New Grand Spectacle of THE PROPHET, which is nightly rose ved with increased enthusiasm by delighted audiences, and announced by the public press to be the most gorgeous hippo-drama to which ever yet stood at the Royal Astley. ON MONDAY, OCT. 15, the Performances will commence with Fitzhall's New and Magnificent Spectacle of THE PROPHET, with entire New Scenery, Gorgeous Costume and Appointments, and in which Mr. W. West will appear. On his first visit to Europe. The whole to conclude with the laughable Farce of THE WHALER OF LONDON. Characters from Revenge, Four Shakespearian Readings, &c.

EXETER HALL WEDNESDAY CONCERTS.—The THIRD CONCERT will be held on the evening of WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 7th.—Vocal Performers: Miss Rebecca Isaacs, Miss Rainforth, Miss Eyles, Miss Huddart, Miss O'Connor, and Mrs. Alexander Newton; Mr. Lockey, Signor Bartolini, Mr. Land, Mr. George Tedder, and Herr Pfeiffer. Grand Pianoforte, Miss Ellen Dey. Solo Violin, Mr. Saltonn (his second and last appearance at these Concerts). Sax-Horns, Mr. Distin and Sons (their last appearance previous to their provincial tour). The Programme will commence with a Selection from Barnett's Opera, "The Mountain Sylph," in which Herr Pfeiffer will sing, in English, the celebrated Romance "See what love has built for cast away," and "Farewell to the Mountain," and in the Trio "The Magic Wove Scarf," in the course of the evening. Mrs. Alexander Newton will repeat (by desire) Meyerbeer's Air "Gli Angeli d'Inferno," from "Il Rinaldo Magico"—Tickets, 5s. and 2s., Reserved Seats, 3s; Stalls, 2s; may be had of Mr STAMMERS, 4, Exeter-hall; of Mr. STEELE, 375, Strand, adjoining Exeter-hall (west); and of all Musicsellers.

Open Daily, from Eleven till Five, and every Evening, EXCEPT SATURDAY, from Seven; the Hall past Ten.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—ROME [illegible] Lady at [illegible] past four, and every [illegible] Lecture [illegible] by Mr. [illegible] ANCIENT and MODERN ROME, ELECTRO MAGNETISM, LIVER and LIVING-BELL.—The CHROMATROPE.—MODELS and MACHINES EXPLAINED.—Admission, 1s. Schools, Half-price.

WHITTINGTON CLUB and METROPOLITAN ATHENÆUM, 189 Strand.—Detail of PROGRAMMES of this Institution, containing every information relative to it, may be had on application to the Secretary.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"L. E." Worcester.—We cannot search for the date.
"A Lover of Humanity" should apply to the Royal Humane Society.
"A. B.," Bonchurch.—We should say that an excursion ought to be able-bodied, as the duties lie mostly out of doors.
"A. M." Moorgate-street.—Unconditional surrender must be placing at mercy, &c.
"Tom" may get from London to Paris in twelve hours, by railway and steamer.
"An Irish Subscriber."—Apply to the Royal Patriotic Society of Scotland.
"Essex." The games, "Music hath charms to soothe," &c., occurs in Congreve's "Mourning Bride."
"R. C. S.," Essex.—The late "Mr." Anton Rée.
"Georgey," Sheffield, is thanked; but public meetings are not, generally, effective scenes as illustration.
"Curiosity" with Jenny Lind was born in 1820. See No. 180 of our Journal, with the first portrait of Mdlle. Lind engraved in this country.
"W. H. B.," Cheltenham.—There is no chance in Montreal of the nice you state.
"W. T.," Somerset, must excuse our declining to recommend an Australasian emigration agent.
"[illegible]."—The number of British killed and wounded at Waterloo was stated in a report, dated October 21, 1815, at about 10,000. We cannot spare time to ascertain the other numbers.
"B. E. A.," Cantab.—Mr. Aspbee's poem of the "Ocean Flower" is preceded by a clever account of the Island of Madeira, the best guide we know. (Longman.)
"Peregrinus," Dublin.—We cannot aid you.
"W. K."—The same.
"G. F. B.," Alnaby.—Our former correspondent having proved the destructiveness of the insertion of lime and salammoniac to the wire-worm, the mode of application must be left to "G. F. B's" experience.
"[illegible]."—Congregationalists are a sect of Protestant dissenters who maintain that every congregation for religious worship is independent of every other.
"Querist" is thanked, but we have not room. Shall it be returned?
"B. W." The piece of which you have sent an impression is an astrological medal, with Hebrew characters, and of no value.
"Nemo vam non paratus." The subject suggested is "non paratus," seeing that it is copyright, and unattainable.
"A Constant Subscriber," Richmond.—The latter phrase is preferable.
"X. Y. Z."—See Curtis on the "Ear."
"T. D." Droitwich.—The worm and the insect belong to the third, or "articulated," division of the animal kingdom.
"M. B." Pau, to be legally borne, must emanate from, or be authorized by, the Heralds' College. They are granted by the Earl-Marshal, through the medium of the Kings of Arms. A petitioner seeking to have arms registered to his family can suggest the bearings he would prefer, and, if they do not interfere with any one else at the College and accord them to him. We do not think there is any grant to the name of Lord. Sir Thomas Byard does not appear in M. O'Byrne's admirable "Naval Biography," which is applied to hang off 1, or to those whose names are contained in the "Navy List" for January, 1845.
"A Subscriber long on Naval Parity"—Lord Fitzhardinge.
"Leo." In the case put, A. B. has no right to use in any way the armorial bearings of D. F. (her sister's husband). D. F. cannot quarter the arms of his wife. If the lady be an heiress, or co-heiress, he should bear her arms on an escutcheon of pretence; if she be not, he would then impale them. The descendants of D. F. and C. D. (if C. D. be an heiress or co-heiress) would be entitled to quarter C. D.'s arms with the arms of D. F. The descendants of A. B. have no right to the arms of D. F.
"A Constant Reader."—The point involves a legal nicety, and our correspondent had better apply to a solicitor
"Kingsmill" informs "Arturus" that the direct lineal descendant in the male line of Sir Thomas Lucy, the owner of Charlcot Park on the banks of the Stour, Shakespeare's Sir Thomas Lucy, succeeded to the Charlcote estate at the decease of his cousin, George Lucy, Esq., in 1786, and assumed, in consequence, by sign manual, 9th February, 1787, the surname and arms of Lucy only. He (grandson of [illegible]) is the present possessor of that fine estate, which has a peculiar interest to all admirers of the bard of Avon.
"X. Y. Z." Illegitimacy is no barrier.
"A." —1. It is the duty of the Sheriff to form the grand jury of gentlemen selected by [illegible] out of the county. As to the jury lists, see the 6 Geo. IV., c. 50. 2. The Sheriff is not bound to make out the selection according to precedence; indeed, it is according to law, that the names should be chosen indifferently, regard being only had to their qualifications. 3. The rank of a Lord-Lieutenant would have nothing to do with the matter beyond the option of the Sheriff. 4. We believe the Sheriff has precedence, as Bucklersbury says that he is "of first rank in the county, and superior in rank to any nobleman therein during his office Blackstone classifies speaks of the Lord-Lieutenant being on a par with the Custos Rotulorum, who is on officer decidedly beneath the Sheriff. The wife's precedence in this case is but doubtful, and according to courtesy, as the Sheriff's rank is only official.
"E. H.," Ipswich, may obtain a good Daguerreotype portrait at any of Beard's establishments. Photographic is another word for the Daguerreotype, and is derived from two Greek words expressing the process—to draw by light.
"Byra."—See any edition of Milton's prose works.
"S. P."—The impression sent us from the coinage of the Isle of Man.
"[illegible]."—A sovereign of William I., if fine, is worth 8*s.*
"[illegible]."—Messrs. Wheatstone and Cooke were the first persons who [illegible] patent [illegible] Mr. Cooke was employed by the Manchester and Liverpool Railway Company to attend to the subject before a joint partnership was formed. Their relative position in connexion with the invention has been stated in [illegible]. Mr. Cooke is entitled to stand alone for having [illegible] and carried out the electric telegraph; and Professor Wheatstone [illegible] the scientific man whose profound and successful researches had already prepared the public to receive it as a project capable of practical application. (See "Penny Cyclopædia," art. "Telegraph.")
"A. B. S.," Deanrow, must have read "Macbeth" with little attention, or he would not question the two daggers in the hands of Mr. Lough's statue.
"Dover-Road."—We think the letter of the act, on question.
"[illegible]."—The most complete "Life of Byron." We cannot settle the cab [illegible].
"[illegible]."—Declined.
"[illegible]."—It is our intention to illustrate [illegible].
"[illegible] Subscriber."—We do not interfere on curd al spakes.
"[illegible]."—Brook—Bankers, as soon as traders, formerly sold their signs.
"[illegible]."—Birmingham.—Address Mr. Mu[illegible].
"[illegible]."—A Mark Reader" had better apply to the p[illegible].
"W. H." The "Handbook of Carving," 1[illegible].
"An Essex." The rose is common to mid Britain, in appearance as you state.
"Essex" may find it worth while to apply to the Secretary, Queen Anne's Bounty-office, 3, Dean's-yard, Westminster.
"J. R." Bradford.—Sir John Franklin's Expedition sailed from Greenhithe, May, 19, 1845. (See No. 160 of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, which contains a portrait of the gallant commander, with views of the Erebus and Terror, and notices of the former ship.
"A Subscriber," Kent.—The arms of Duke are, "Per fesse arg. and az. three chaplets counterchanged." Crest "A demi griffin or, holding a chaplet as."
"J. H.," Newcastle-upon-Tyne.—Short-hand.
"Bruce," Edinburgh.—Lord Brougham completed his 71*st year on Sept.* 19, 1849.
"Moreton."—Is the Gresham the Life Assurance Office referred to? The address is 37, Old Jewry
"An Old Subscriber," Brompton.—The tenants of the Holborn Union Almshouses must be parishioners of St. Clement Danes, Strand.
"An Old Subscriber and Admirer."—The Conway Tubular Bridge is engraved in No. 307 of our Journal.
"J. Q.," Leicester.—We cannot insert your letter. You have strangely underrated the quality of the tyne.—Short-hand.
"Nottingham."—The bill declaring Gretna-Green marriages illegal has not yet been passed
"E. R." St. James's-place.—We cannot undertake to recommend medical advisers.
"L. G.," Woburn-place.—Declined.
"C. A. L." Union Hall.—We cannot inform you.
"X. Y." Canterbury.—Taylor's "Bee-keeper's Manual," published by Groombridge and Co
"T. W." Athlone, and "H. M.," Jersey, are thanked but we have not room for the subjects
"C. T." Market Deeping.—We have no information beyond the notice in question.
"A Constant Reader" and "E. H. R.," Guernsey.—Offensive is a colloquial sense of the word obnoxious. It is thus given by Ashe in his "Dictionary," but not by Johnson
"M. E. P." should offer his five-guinea-piece (Geo. II.), 1748, to Mr. Webster, coin-dealer, 17, Great Russell-street, Covent-Garden.
"Forces-sur-Mer."—We are not in possession of the address.
"E. N."—We cannot inform you.
"D. O. T.," Aylesbury, and "Stephen W.," City.—See the "Guide to the Ball-room," to be had, by order, of any bookseller.
"Narcissa."—Such a book as you require is published by Orr and Co., Strand.
"W. O. A." Kilarney. Declined.
"P. B. G." The picture of Paris at the Colosseum was first exhibited last year at the Colosseum. It was preceded by a night view of London.
"A Glasgow Reader."—We had rather not give any opinion on the subject.
"P. J. S." Liverpool.—Mr. Simd's illustrated paper on the "Potato Disease" appeared in No. 246 of our Journal, to be had for 1*s.*
"An Old Subscriber."—We cannot advise you.
"A Subscriber."—The Countess de Rost (Madame Sontag) was born at Coblentz, January 3, 1809. (See a Memoir lately published by Mitchell, Old Bond-street.)
"A Constant Subscriber."] Address your letter to the Hon. Mr. Ashley, Marlborough House, Pall Mall
"Narcissa."—We have not sufficient experience in such matters.
"S. F. E." Guardon.—We have not room to print your long letter, enforcing the cleansing of chimneys on a great and to sanatory improvement. Our correspondent states that the chimney-sides recommended by Dr. Arnott should be made in a sloping direction, so that the heated air may not enter the chimney at right angles, crossing and interfering with the draught, but rising with the smoke, and assisting its ascent.

DECLINED. "F. C. D." "A Prussian Lady," "A Native of Suffolk," "H. E. D.," "F. W. L." or "W. E. C."

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1849.

THE belief continues to gain ground that the Emperor of Russia will bide his time, and be contented with a compromise of the difficulty which he himself raised against the Ottoman Empire. The belief is mainly supported by the removal of all doubt of the cordial unanimity subsisting between the Governments of Great Britain and France to support Turkey, even to the last extremity, in refusing the Russian demand. A note has been addressed by the British Government to our Ambassador at St. Petersburg, of which copies have been forwarded to our Ambassadors in Vienna, Constantinople, and Paris, in which the determination of the British Government to support the Sultan in all exigences that might compromise his dignity as an independent Sovereign, is temperately but decidedly expressed. Lord Palmerston has likewise forwarded instructions to Sir Stratford Canning, and placed at his Excellency's disposal the British fleet in the Mediterranean. The Turkish Government has also received positive assurances of the support of the French Government, should any attack be made upon its independence; and, on its own part, has taken all proper precautions to place its excellent army and fine fleet in immediate working order, as if prepared for the worst.

There can, we should hope, be little doubt, under such circumstances as these, that the affair will blow over. Possibly, too, the refugees themselves may aid Turkey to escape honourably and peaceably from the dilemma, and prevent all future ground of animosity between their powerful foe and their generous but weak protector, by transferring themselves to the safer retreats of Leicester-square and Regent-street. Had Great Britain and France assumed a less decided attitude, the case might, perhaps, have been different; and it is a subject for sincere rejoicing, that both Governments have so well understood their own interests, and the interests of European civilisation, as to unite so cordially when their union was so essential. It is to be hoped their good understanding will long continue, as a firm barrier against the aggression of any state, however ambitious or however powerful.

DURING the visitation of the plague of Cholera, now happily fast subsiding, the want of an adequate supply of wholesome water was generally recognised in London as a great predisposing cause of the malady in every district in which it appeared. At such a time the public safety required that in the poorest districts the supply should have been more than usually abundant. Yet, under these circumstances, what was the course adopted by the richest and most powerful of the various water monopolies? Mr. Daw, Clerk to the City Commission of Sewers, having been instructed by the Commission to enquire of the managers of the New River Company why a second daily supply of water, which had been afforded to various courts and alleys occupied by poor people during the first six months of the present year, had been withdrawn in July, August, and September—the months of the plague—received from the New River Office a report from Mr. Milne, the Civil Engineer to the New River Board, from which we make the following extracts :—

These courts are generally supplied by a water-post or common cock, for the use of the inhabitants; but the cocks being removed, or, where they exist, being constantly open, drain away the working power of the mains, and prevent the supply of the higher tenants in the neighbourhood. The quantity discharged being, on an average, 500 gallons at each cock per day, one-half of which passes down into the drains, and, it would appear, is required for no other purpose.

The landlords of the houses in these courts are in general opulent, and should not postpone the erection of the tanks, so much required by their tenants.

The great objection to again giving, for a temporary period, the twice-a-day supply is that it interferes much with the certainty of supplying other tenants, and may tend to promote a further delay on the part of many landlords to execute works so necessary for the supply of closets, and for carrying out the contemplated sanitary measures.

It thus appears, from the words of their own officer, that, at a time when they should have increased the supply of water to the poor, they diminished it by one-half—heedless of the public health, but quite alive to the necessity of keeping on good terms with their richer customers. There nee is no greater proof than this of the danger of trusting a private trading company with such powers, for their own profit. Were there no other evidence upon which to condemn this monopoly to extinction, the letter of their own engineer would be amply sufficient as a justification.

There is, however, another point in the document, in which, while endeavouring to exonerate the Company from blame, Mr. Milne transfers a portion of it to other parties—the opulent landlords of houses properly in these crowded and filthy courts. As traders, the New River Company may be perfectly justified in what they did; but the quarrel of the public with them is that they exist as traders, and monopolize powers which are too extensive and too precious to become matters of trade, with any safety to the lives and health of the people. Now, though we agree with Mr. Milne that these opulent landlords ought to erect tanks, or other receptacles for containing the water supplied, we do not see in that circumstance any justification of the New River Company. By their own admission, they cannot supply sufficient water to all their tenants, even although a pestilence is raging, which might be diminished if water were more abundant. That is their condemnation, and they cannot put it aside by making a charge against the owners of house property for being worse than themselves. Upon the latter point, the aid of the Legislature has been, and will be again, sought; not merely to induce, but to compel house proprietors to erect suitable receptacles for containing water, under the penalty of being deprived of all legal remedy for the recovery of rent from any tenant whose tenement shall be deficient in this respect. Such a law is imperatively required in London. In other towns and cities, the result is obtained without the infliction of any injustice upon house proprietors, and with the greatest advantage to rich and poor: to the rich, as preserving the general health of the district; and to the poor, more especially, as being the first victims to all epidemic diseases. How different from London, for instance, is the condition of the populous town of Nottingham, both as regards the water supply and the arrangements made by landlords for the comfort of their tenants. Notwithstanding the density of its population, this town suffered very little from the plague of Cholera—so little as to amount, in the words of one of the speakers at a recent meeting of the Town Council, to "a comparative exemption." Amongst the chief causes of this happy state of things in Nottingham, was the abundant supply of pure water to every part of the town—a supply rendered abundant to the poorest of the poor, without any encroachment upon the supplies of the rich. The following extract from the Report of the Sanitary Committee of the town, read at the meeting alluded to, will show what Nottingham has, and what London has not—but what it must have, in spite of all the powerful monopolies that at present combine to prevent it :—

Since the year 1832 (say the Committee) this town has enjoyed the blessing of an almost unlimited supply of wholesome filtered water, obtained from the river Trent, together with a supply obtained from copious springs in the neighbourhood. It is forced by day and night at high pressure along all our streets, and is capable of rising to the upper stories of almost all the houses in the place without considerable waste throughout the year. The quantity taken by nearly nine-tenths of the dwelling-houses amounts to about 450,000 000 gallons per annum. This is equal for the population supplied to 18 or 20 gallons per head per day, or from 600 to 700 gallons per week for each family. The challenge of the poor are supplied at a cost to the owner averaging about 8*s. per annum for each house, or not quite* 1*d. per week.* This is generally paid by the landlord, and, of course, received back again in the rent. There has been, usually, only one common tap in each court; often, however, two or more such taps are placed in larger courts and minor thoroughfares, to which all the inhabitants have in practice free access. The remaining small portion of the dwellings are supplied from other sources, at a somewhat higher rate of charge, and in almost equally liberal quantity. This admirable supply of water in Nottingham is of inestimable value, by promoting the cleanliness, health, and comfort of the people

Although the Cholera is rapidly subsiding, it will not be wise on the part of the people of London to repose in security upon the belief that it is extinguished beyond the chance of revival in the heats of next July. The water grievance must not be lost sight of, because the immediate danger may have passed away; and, from the temper of the public upon the subject, and the growth of the evil with every increase of the streets and the population, there is, at length, something like a certainty that the demand for a total change in the water-economy of London will not cease until the first city in the world, for wealth and intelligence, shall also be the first in its arrangements for the health, cleanliness, and comfort of its population.

THE REVENUE.

The official returns of the revenue for the quarter ending Wednesday last, the 10th inst., have been published, and they show an increase of £28,.384 on the quarter, as compared with the corresponding quarter of last year. The items are as follow :

INCREASE.
Excise	.. ..	..£185,003
Stamps	.. ..	24,860
Property Tax	.. ..	21 1.6
Post-Office	.. ..	3 000
Miscellaneous	.. ..	7.959
Increase on ordinary revenue	.. ..	..£441.903
Repayments of Advances	.. ..	53,594
Total increase	.. .. ..	£495,497
DECREASE.
Customs	.. ..	..£154,211
Taxes	.. ..	12,599
Decrease on ordinary revenue	.. ..	166,810
Imprest and other moneys	.. ..	48,303
		£214,113
Net increase on the quarter	.. ..	£281,384

There is also an increase on the year up to Wednesday last, compared with that which ended on the 10th October, 1848, but it is not equa. in amount to the increase on the quarter, being £49,322,956 the revenue for the year ending Oct. 10, 1848, having been £49,222,656, while that of the year just closed is £49,480,267.

SUNDAY LABOUR IN THE POST-OFFICE.—DEPUTATION TO LORD J. RUSSELL.—A large deputation (consisting of the Bishop of London, the Lord Mayor, Mr. Masterman, Mr. Bevan, Mr. Cotton, Mr. Powles, and about thirty clergymen and gentlemen) waited on Lord John Russell by appointment on Thursday morning, to present the memorial agreed to at the recent meeting of merchants, bankers, and others, against the increase of Sunday labour in the Post-Office. The reply of his Lordship, after a long interview, was, that he feared the matter would not be correctly understood until it was actually in work. He had no objection to allow a little time to elapse before the alteration was put in force, but he could not hold out the slightest hope of any change in the proposed arrangement.

THE CHARTIST PRISONERS.—At the interview which took place between Mr. Cobden (who was accompanied by Sir Joshua Walmsley, M.P., and Mr. Wheelhouse, late M.P. for Coventry), and Sir George Grey, on the occasion of his presenting the memorial agreed to at the recent meeting held in the City-road, the right hon. baronet listened with attention to the observations of the gentlemen who supported the prayer. A letter from Mr. Cobden, stating the result of the interview, has been received by the deputation appointed to wait upon Mr. Cobden and Sir Joshua Walmsley, of which the following is a copy :—

163, Westbourne terrace, 2d Oct., 1849.

SIR,—Sir Joshua Walmsley and I have to-day had an interview with Sir G. Grey, to present the memorial which you placed in my hands in favour of the Chartist prisoners. His manner was very courteous, and I thought favourable to the object of our visit. I should add that Mr. Wheelhouse (late M.P. for Coventry) was good enough to accompany us, to testify, as a visiting magistrate, to the excellent conduct of the prisoners in Tothill-fields Prison; and I am, &c., your obedient servant,

R. Stallwood, Esq. (Signed) RICHARD COBDEN.

THE EQUINOCTIAL GALES.—These gales continued during the close of last week and beginning of the present, along the eastern and northern coasts, with much severity. Near Costhum, Yorkshire, where the John Saltcoats was totally lost, with all hands, another vessel met with a similar fate on Sunday morning; every soul perished with her. From the numbers of the wrecks she was seen to have had a collier, and to have had a crew of ten hands. At daybreak, on Saturday, a sloop was discovered by some of the Coast fishermen wrecked on the Gunfleet Sands, and it is to be feared that all hands and some passengers were with it on board. On the coast of Sunday, intelligence was communicated at Newcastle of the total loss of the Hero steamer, which left Shields in the early part of the week for Stettin. On the 27th ult., when off the coast of Norway, she was struck by a tremendous sea, which completely dashed her engines, as well as sweeping everything off her deck. Shortly afterwards she foundered. The crew were saved by the brig Symmetry.

THE WHALE.—A bed of "right whales" has been found near the South Scroby, Yarmouth, and is supposed to be nearly two miles long. The "diggings" in that neighbourhood have already been extensive, and several boats have landed their cargoes, which have been sold at the remarkably low price of ten a penny. The fish are delicately flavoured; and though at present small, still, in a few weeks, they will doubtless become fattened.

FIRE.—Between four and five o'clock on Wednesday morning a fire was discovered at the weavers of Mr. Anderson Humphrey, at Sankside. Timely information was given to the police. Several engines and firemen being in quick attendance, a fire was found to be extending itself among the straw and rubbish in the out-offices, where an enormous stock was deposited. The firemen were successful in soon allaying the fear of the neighbourhood, and, fortunately, their having been quickly called to the spot no doubt prevented a most awful loss of property.

POSTSCRIPT.

HER MAJESTY'S VISIT TO THE QUEEN DOWAGER, AT BENTLEY PRIORY, STANMORE.

Her Majesty, and his Royal Highness Prince Albert and suite, left Osborne Palace yesterday (Friday) morning at nine o'clock, and embarked in the Fairy Royal yacht for Gosport, whence they proceeded by special train on the South Western Railway to town, where they arrived at one o'clock the same day. The Royal carriages were in waiting at the Nine Elms station to convey the illustrious party to Bentley Priory, Stanmore, on a visit to her Majesty the Queen Dowager, when the Queen partook of luncheon, at which her Serene Highness the Duchess Bernard of Saxe-Meiningen and the Princesses, and Earl Howe, had the honour of meeting the Sovereign. Her Majesty and Prince Albert, and suite, were expected to return to Buckingham Palace in the afternoon, from the Priory.

Sir George Hayter has been lying ill for the last week, with a severe attack of the prevailing epidemic, at Neuilly, near Paris.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

(Before Mr. Commissioner SHEPHERD.)

A FLAW IN THE NEW ACT.—The new Bankruptcy Act came into operation on Friday (yesterday) morning, and several petitions were filed in accordance with it. In the course of the morning his Honor observed that there was a most important omission in one of the clauses, which directed that the bankrupt should be examined on his declaration (in lieu of an oath), but did not give any power of commitment in the event of his refusing to make the declaration. All that the Commissioner could do was to refuse the certificate. Mr. Cook said that the taking the declaration was precedent to any proceeding by the bankrupt, and that he was bound to take it. His Honor said it was very true that the refusal to comply with the Act of Parliament was an indictable offence.

POST-OFFICE "FINAL INSTRUCTIONS."—The following "final instructions" relative to Sunday duties were issued by the Post-Office on yesterday (Friday):—"On and from to-morrow (Saturday) evening a London bag must be made up in every provincial post-office, and which is only to contain letters which pass through London for places beyond it, and the postage on which has been pre-paid by stamps. Newspapers, books, parliamentary proceedings, and all kinds of documents which pass through the post for less than full letter postage rates, will be detained in the provincial post-offices until the London bag is despatched on Sunday. Foreign and colonial letters, whether pre-paid by money, or sent unpaid, as well as letters for the government offices, will be forwarded in the London bag night London bag. On and from Sunday evening next a bag will be made up in London for every provincial post town. A measure is in contemplation for the relief of rural post-office messengers, which is to let them return home within an hour or so after they have delivered all their letters on Sunday morning, instead of compelling them to remain at the extreme end of their delivery until Monday morning, as they have been used to do. All the other regulations will be carried into effect as heretofore, but the original resolution was carried. In the name of the Governor of the Queen's Bench Prison, a complaint was made of the knackers' yards in that neighbourhood, as well as of the drainage. The second matter was chiefly detailed to the state of the sewerage in Southwark and Lambeth, while the third set forth the well-known grounds of complaint respecting the supply of water. The fourth pledged the Association to the rejection of objects calculated to promote the public health; and after agreeing to address a memorial to the Board of Health, the meeting, which was very numerously attended, broke up.

VISCOUNT BRACKLEY, M.P.—We regret to state that accounts received at the Earl of Ellesmere's, in Belgrave-square, from Worsley Hall, do not hold out the slightest prospect of the above young nobleman's (heir to the immense Bridgewater property) recovery.

YORK, NEWCASTLE, AND BERWICK RAILWAY.—A special general meeting of the proprietors of the York, Newcastle, and Berwick Railway, resident in London, was held yesterday (Friday) afternoon, when Sir John Easthope and Mr. Alderman Sidney were elected delegates to attend the special meeting of the company, to be held in York on the 25th inst., for the appointment of the future directors of the concern.

Mr. Inspector Field, who for the last ten years (in conjunction with Inspector Field) has had the management of the metropolitan detective police, is appointed superintendent of the M division, vacant by the resignation of Superintendent Evans, who has completed his term of service, and retires on a full pension. Mr. Field is the officer who was actively engaged in endeavouring to capture the Mannings.

FIRE IN EDINBURGH.—The extensive flour-mills in Glanville-place, Stockbridge, belonging to the incorporation of bakers, have been much damaged by fire this week.

Mrs. Heald (Lola Montes), says the Sémaphore, passed through Marseilles a few days ago, with her young husband. They intended to proceed to Spain by land, in order to avoid the quarantine, which passengers from Marseilles have had to undergo in the Spanish harbours, they took the railroad on their way to Perpignan.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

From Paris, yesterday (Friday), we learn that the whole of the first day's proceedings in the state trials at Versailles was taken up with reading the indictment. Huber, who refused to accept the services of counsel, occupied the court with his reasons for defending himself personally.

The reports of disturbances having broken out in Naples, and that the King had been killed, were set at rest on Thursday by the Minister of Foreign Affairs, who stated that the Government had received no intelligence whatever from Naples, or any part of Italy, to warrant the slightest reliance upon the rumours in question.

ITALY.

The Tuscan loan has been concluded with a Dutch house for 25 million livres, at 5½.

An amnesty, it is said, is about to be granted by the Grand Duke, that will include Guerazzi, but from the benefit of which, Montanelli, Mazzoni, and Marchetti are to be excluded.

The people of Florence entertain a great dislike to the Austrian soldiers, the consequences of which is, that they are continually coming to blows, and many and severe are the wounds inflicted on both sides.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE SHELL JACKET.—A rumour is current that her Majesty has signified her wish that this most unpopular innovation in military costume should be cast aside, and a blue frock-coat again substituted.

The Enrolled Pensioners will not be called out again for exercise during the present year

THE DETERMINATION OF LATITUDE AT SEA.—The Lords of the Admiralty have returned their thanks a second time to Mr. J. T. Towson, of Deptford, for his ingenuity and labour bestowed in facilitating the practice of navigation by means of inspection tables. The tables now laid before their Lordships are "inspection tables for the reduction of Extra-meridianal Altitudes;" their object being to determine latitude by an altitude of the sun, when taken either before or after the meridian passage. In climates where cloudy weather prevails the mariner is often deprived of an opportunity of taking a meridianal altitude; and, consequently, when the navigator is possessed only of ordinary nautical skill, the ship is often exposed to the danger of entering the British Channel without the navigator being possessed of the knowledge of the true latitude. By means, however, of Mr. Towson's tables, navigators who can only determine latitude by meridianal altitudes, may by inspection determine his latitude from altitudes taken before or after noon. This great service to the seafaring community deserves some more substantial reward than "thanks!"

ROYAL NAVAL SCHOOL, NEW CROSS.—This institution has recently received the munificent sum of £4043 2s. 6d., from the trustees under the will of the late Dr. Bell, viz. the Earl of Leven and Melville, the Bishop of Gloucester, Lord Kenyon, and Walter Cook, Esq., who have been unanimously elected vice-patrons. The late Captain Simpson, of Greenwich Hospital, has bequeathed £50 to this school.

PARIAN BRACELETS.—Mr. Timmis, of Burslem, has just produced an elegant bracelet, consisting of beautifully modelled Parian flowers, laid upon an engraved gilt plate; the peculiar advantage of which is that the Parian may be cleaned with a brush and water, and made as white and semi-transparent as when new.

NEW CONSULAR DUTIES.—By an act passed in the late session, for further regulating the marriage of British subjects resident in foreign countries (12 & 13 Victoria, cap 68), new duties are imposed on Consuls. It is enacted by the 13th section that every British Consul-General or Consul already appointed, or hereafter to be appointed, to reside in any foreign country or place, shall be directed or authorised by the Secretary of State to solemnise and register marriages, and any other person directed in the absence of the Consul. To act was passed to facilitate marriages abroad, as the Foreign Marriage Act of 4th George IV., cap 91, was found to be too limited in its application.

It is curious to remark, that when King James I. of England, some years after his accession, visited Scotland, the journey from London to Edinburgh occupied a whole month. Queen Victoria has just now travelled from Balmoral, in Aberdeenshire, to Osborne House, in three days.

RAILWAY INTELLIGENCE.

MEETINGS.

MIDLAND GREAT WESTERN (Ireland).—Oct. 3: Special Meeting: Dublin: Mr. Boyd in the chair.—The resolution sanctioning the loan of £500,000, to be offered from the Government at 3½ per cent., for constructing the line from Athlone to Galway—the terms of which we have previously given in detail—was approved of. Strict economy in the erection of the stations and other buildings was promised by the board.

YORK AND NORTH MIDLAND.—Oct. 9: Meeting of Shareholders: York: Mr. Allis in the chair.—The object of the meeting was to preconcert measures for retaining the present York Mayor of York (Mr. Meek) in the chairmanship of the company. The Committee of Investigation considered the Lord Mayor ineligible, as being a director of the Great Northern. A deputation is to wait on the Committee of Investigation, to press upon them the inadvisability of their issuing stamped proxies to the shareholders in support of their objection, in which a certain body of the shareholders do not coincide.

EDINBURGH AND BATHGATE.—Oct. 5: Adjourned meeting: Edinburgh: Mr. J. Stewart in the chair.—The Board laid on the table the estimate for circulating a statement of the company's affairs, in relation to the Edinburgh and Glasgow, was declared. There was a majority in favour of 64 votes, as the shares held by the Edinburgh and Glasgow were not allowed to be used. Every information required is to be laid before the shareholders.

YORK, NEWCASTLE, AND BERWICK.—The Committee of Investigation have presented their fourth report. Preliminary meetings are to be held in London and other large towns, to take into consideration the new board of directors on the 25th inst. The recommendations of the committee are as follow:—That board meetings be held weekly. That an amount at the rate of £200 per annum for each director be allowed—each director being paid strictly according to the number of his attendances. Working committees should be discontinued; but an allowance of £200 may be set aside for members of committees for special purposes. Each director belonging to a deputation formally sanctioned should receive three guineas per day for personal expenses, besides his railway fare. Eight may be the number sufficient for the board. One, or three managing directors should be appointed: if one, a salary of £1000 to £1500 per annum is advisable; if three, an income of £700 per annum each. These officers are dismissable at the end of the year, though their period of office may be three years, when they may be re-elected. Directors should be chosen from various districts, without bias in any way likely to interfere with the interest of the company, or belonging to any other railway directorates, or interested in any working or other contract with the company. The secretary to receive £600 per annum, in lieu of about £1600, with house-rent free. An accountant, at £300 to £400 per annum, to be appointed. Two auditors, at £50 per annum, who shall go into a duly qualified accountant to assist their examination. The capital account to be closed, and a half-yearly supplemental statement of any necessary addition to capital to be furnished. Security to be taken from all officers entrusted with monies of the company. Changes to be considered in the traffic department. The new board to direct a monthly statement of receipts in the engineering and locomotive department. All these topics are submitted for the consideration and advice of the general body of shareholders, who have finally now the opportunity of managing affairs according to the expressed will of the majority, to be declared at the general meeting, on the 25th inst.

THE EDINBURGH, DUNDEE, AND PERTH relinquish all opposition to the trade between Dundee and the west of Scotland; while, on the other hand, the SCOTTISH CENTRAL cease to carry coal to Perth along their line. Both companies have raised their passenger fares to Edinburgh.

The Railway Commissioners are considering what the various communications from the railway companies of the United Kingdom for a generally increased rate of fares. The question has been talked of for some time, in the form of a special application to Parliament in the next session.

The directors of the LIMERICK, ENNIS, and KILLALOE have determined on winding up the affairs of the company. The Act was obtained in 1846, authorising capital of £400,000 for constructing 37 miles

Surveys of the line from WATERFORD and LIMERICK are reported to be progressing. A proposal has been made to construct the line from TIPPERARY to Carrick-on-Suir, provided the river Suir is rendered navigable for vessels of 200 and 300 tons burden.

After the necessary inspection on the 6th, the WINDSOR EXTENSION of the GREAT WESTERN from Slough was opened on the 8th. There were eleven trains to and fro throughout the day.

The SOUTH-YORKSHIRE has been inspected by the Government officer, and is ready for public traffic.

The works of the BUCKINGHAMSHIRE progress so, that the only obstruction between Brackley and Saldon Hill will be cut through by the middle of October. The contractor has orders to hold himself prepared for the Bicester and Oxford stations.

The WHITEHAVEN and FURNESS, which is open to Ravenglass, has fair and expectant. Gangs of workmen are employed at that line on the section so that the most difficult portion may be completed and in use by the public early in the ensuing year.

The arrangement effected between the ABERDEEN and the SCOTTISH NORTH-EASTERN, the latter company are to pay 20 per cent. of the gross receipts for traffic sent by the former to and from Perth and places beyond. The Aberdeen retain the entire control of their traffic at Perth, and have nothing to do with working the Midland line. The arrangement is terminable at twelve months' notice.

LAMAR SILVER LEAD MINING COMPANY.—The annual meeting of this company was held at Salvator House, Bishopsgate-street, on Thursday last, T. M. Gibbons, Esq., in the chair. The report stated that the position of the mine was now such as to set at rest all doubts of its being otherwise than highly remunerative for several years to come. The working of the last twelve months had produced 471 tons 13cwt. 3qrs. 10lbs. of lead ore, realising £17 622 12s. 11d., leaving £3686 3s. 8d., to which had to be added the balance from the last report (£815 14s. 5d.,) and profit from the Smelting Company (£5890), making £7381 18s. 2d.; £5760 of which had been paid in dividends, and £576 carried to the reserve fund, leaving a balance in hand of £1045 18s. 2d., after the payment of every liability to the mine. A similar account was made up to the close of August; but at the end or September the Company had in hand £1695 18s. 2d., and a reserve fund of £2999 13s. 3d. With regard to the smelting establishment, at the end of June last the whole of the original capital subscribed had been paid off, together with a bonus of 30 per cent.; leaving a net profit from the concern of £10,558 17s. The report was adopted, and an expression of opinion given that it would be desirable to raise additional capital, to extend the workings of the Smelting Company.

TINCROFT MINING COMPANY.—At the conclusion of the meeting of the Tamar Company, on Thursday, Mr Stainsby laid before the proprietors of this company, who were present, a statement of their affairs, from which it appeared that the accounts to the end of July last showed an available balance to the credit of the company, after providing for every liability, of £2421 8s. A dividend had been declared, which would absorb £2100, leaving a balance in hand of £421 8s. The ground was opened and explored, and estimated at the value of £67,030, while a wide margin was left for something better.

ROYAL MAIL STEAM-PACKET COMPANY.—The half-yearly meeting of this company was held at the London Tavern, on Tuesday last, T. Farrer, Esq., in the chair. The report stated that the disbursements for the half-year, compared with those of the corresponding half of last year, showed an increase of £3209 19s. 4d., and the receipts a decrease of £1,000 18s. 8d., leaving the surplus of £1406 3s. 2d. less than in the first half of last year, which was a less decrease than might have been expected, looking at the depressed state of the West India colonies, one of the competition which the company had to encounter. The directors recommended the payment of a dividend of £2 per share, exclusive of income tax for the half-year. The accounts showed that the receipts for the half-year had been £213,129 17s., and the expenditure £145,083 3s., leaving a surplus of £66,046 14s. The report was adopted, and thanks voted to the directors.

WEIGHING OF FOREIGN FLOUR.—An order has recently been issued by the revenue authorities, stating that, being of opinion that the landing account of barrels or bags of foreign flour may be taken by weighing one-tenth part only of each entry in those cases in which the packages are of the same description and size, the remainder of the packages being delivered by tally, and the total weight of the importation being computed according to the average ascertained from the packages weighed, the proper officers are to govern themselves accordingly in future, taking care that a vigilant supervision be maintained so as to prevent the possibility of articles other than flour, and subject to higher duty, being passed as flour.

CONTINUANCE OF TURNPIKES.—In the late session two acts relating to turnpikes were passed. By the first (12 & 13 Vict. cap. 46), the union of turnpike trusts was effected for the better and more economical management of the same, which it could be done without injury to the provisions of the trusts. The second statute (cap 87) provides for the continuance of eighteen acts of parliament relating to turnpikes until the 1st October, with certain provisions respecting turnpike-roads in England. The trustees are authorised to raise additional mortgages in possession of any toll gate or bar to let to farm the tolls in like manner as the trustees or commissioners of any turnpike-road, and for that purpose to exercise all the like powers as such trustees or commissioners.

THE CITY COMMITTEE OF HEALTH.—On Tuesday, at a meeting of the Committee of Health for the city of London assembled at the Guildhall, a motion that the medical visitation, which had been prosecuted so vigorously upon the recommendation of the medical officer of the City, should terminate on Friday (yesterday), was agreed to. In the course of the proceedings, a document signed by the medical gentlemen of the three City unions who had co-operated with Mr. Simon, was read by him, in which they stated that the sanitary recommendations to that the system of house to house visitation has been attended with marked success, and that by its instrumentality many valuable lives had been saved, and a large pecuniary economy thereby effected. With regard to the manner in which the visitation has been received by all parties visited, we rejoice to inform you that the poor have manifested unusual gratitude, and have fully appreciated the advantages of the system. In conclusion, we would suggest to your committee that it would, in our judgment, be most conducive to the sanitary improvement of the City, that some modified system of medical inspection should be persevered in, at least till all those conditions are remedied which have been found by experience to favour the extension of epidemic, endemic, and contagious diseases."

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

On Sunday evening some thieves got possession of the communion service be onging to the Church of All Saints, Paddington, and at present no clue has been obtained by the police to the valuable property. The plate was kept in a chest in the house of the clerk, Mr. Miller, from which it was abstracted while the family were absent at evening service.

On Monday last, a memorial and remonstrance of the holders of Spanish bonds was agreed to at a general meeting of the bondholders, held at the London Tavern.

Richard Daniel, furnace-man, at Ystalyfera, was severely hurt while cutting off the end of a hand-bar, in a smith's shop there, last week The bar bounded, rad-hot, from the anvil, and struck into his thigh. The unfortunate man applied both his hands to the smoking bar, in trying to withdraw it, by which he burnt them in a shocking manner.

Mr. Joseph Peart, farmer, of Fine House, near Shotley Bridge, Newcastle, cut and set up six stooks of wheat in half a day. He is eighty-nine years of age.

Snow fell during the forenoon and afternoon of Wednesday week at Halifax.

On Saturday, information was received by the metropolitan police that Masterman's Branch Bank, Liverpool, had been plundered of £4770, in gold and notes—some of the Bank of England, and some foreign.

On Monday night a fire took place at the Chartered Gas-works, Oldstreet, St. Luke's. The flames originated from an escape of gas in what is termed the purifying-house, a building not more than 97 yards square. It was happily confined to that portion of the works where it began Additional gold and lead mines are reported as having been discovered, the former in Arkansas territory, the latter in Iowa (United States). A great number of persons have left for the mines.

On Monday morning, at half past ten o'clock, Mr. Richard Bagshaw, the wealthy newspaper agent, of No. 31, Bryden-street, Covent-garden, committed suicide. He was discovered in his bed-room with a rope tightly fastened round his neck, and suspended to the bed-post. Life was quite extinct. Mr. Bagshaw has always enjoyed a good state of health, but latterly he had shown evident symptoms of a disordered intellect, and appeared to labour under a delusive dread of poverty.

Lord Elcho is suffering from the effects of an accident. His Lordship has a tame fox, and on passing its kennel one day last week with a dog, the two animals began to fight. His Lordship seized the dog, and, placing his foot on the chain by which the fox was secured, the animal turned round and gave his lordship a severe bite above the heel.

Two convicts escaped from the convict dépôt at Spike Island (Cork) on Friday morning week. They were named William Watson and John Byrne.

Owing to the heavy gales on Wednesday and Thursday week, extensive encroachments were made by the sea on the coast at the Esplanade and lower part of Waterloo Crescent, Devon. On Thursday morning, it being then nearly high water, the waves rolled in most boisterously, and at every surge carried away tons of the beach along shore.

The importation of ice from the United States of America has not yet been discontinued for the season. A vessel just arrived in the docks from Boston has brought 365 tons weight of the article as a portion of her cargo.

The first importation of the fine description of grapes annually imported, and known as the Black Hamburgh Grape, has just taken place from the port of Rotterdam by the steam-ship Apollo, which vessel has brought 134 baskets as a portion of her cargo.

Mr. Wilson, who held the office of cashier at the Waterloo station of the South-Western Railway, died suddenly a few days ago, and it is said his accounts show that he is a debtor to the company to some extent, but it is also reported that the directors hold the usual security for Mr. Wilson's intromissions.

A ticket-clerk, lately engaged at the St. David's station of the South Devon Railway, has absconded, being a defaulter, though not to a considerable amount. He has been traced to Dorchester, and is supposed to have sailed from some neighbouring sea-port to Australia

At the meeting of the Royal Cornwall Polytechnic Society, at Falmouth, last week, a first bronze medal was awarded to Mr. G. Fox, of Kingsbridge, for a plan, illustrated by diagrams, for forming and adjusting suitable lives which are so arranged as to show the daily and hourly fluctuations in the weight of a suspended hive

An exclusive iron-works at Consett, near Newcastle, are better employed than for some time past. A few days ago, the company lighted one of the furnaces which has been for some time blown out, and are preparing to light another

A letter from a lady, who is a resident at Ningpo, states that the March mail from England was lost in the Torrington, on her passage from Shanghai to Ningpo. The ship went down at her anchors, and the mail-bags in her, and the crew and passengers were saved. The writer of the letter is dead drowned away.

The Earl of Arundel having procured for the Board of Ordnance a rifle of a peculiar construction, used in Prussia, and required for the public service, orders have been given for its delivery duty free.

Lord J. Russell has presented a donation of £100 to the association for the relief of those who have suffered from cholera in the metropolis.

Last week, as Mr. Furnisky, head constable of Thorpe, was conveying the prisoners to the castle, committed to take their trial by the Howden bench of magistrates for highway robbery, when near Selby, the fellows, who were handcuffed together in a cart, fell upon him and overpowered him, took from him the key of their handcuffs, released themselves, and then fettered him, leg and arm together; taking also his money (18s.), they made off and got clear away. The place being a very retired spot, the constable remained for three hours before he was released.

A late California mail brought to New York upwards of eleven thousand letters, and papers "in proportion." Among the letters were several small, neatly sewed linen bags, carefully sealed, and directed as letters, weighing from two to sixteen ounces. It is hardly necessary to say that these contained samples of the article found in the valley of the Sacramento.

Fifteen landing-waiters are to be dispensed with in the Liverpool Custom-house forthwith.

Two or three years since the charge for ferryage across the River Mersey at Liverpool was 3d. The Bridgewater Canal Company are now carrying passengers for the same sum from Liverpool to Manchester, and once and a distance of upwards of 40 miles

The post-office in the Island of Portland was opened on Monday, the 1st inst., for the issue and payment of money orders. This is a great boon to the labourers employed on the government works as well as to the inhabitants in general, they being obliged heretofore to go to Weymouth, a distance of nearly five miles, for an order.

The keeper of the lighthouse on the western pier at Kingstown, Dublin, was drowned on Sunday night by the sea washing over the wall. He was single.

No less than 100 families from Iveragh and Dingle, county Kerry, passed during the last fortnight through Killarney en route for America. They appeared to be of the better class of farmers, and were comfortably prepared, so far as clothing and luggage indicated, for emigrating

His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury has contributed £100 to the Lambeth Anti-cholera and Dwellings Improvement Committee. We earnestly trust that so excellent an example will be speedily followed by the resident clergy and gentry.

The oldest man in France, M. Jean Baptiste Robillard, died on October 1st, at Fontenay, near Paris, at the age of 113 years, 4 months, and 2 days. He was born in June, 1736. Robillard retained the use of all his faculties till the last moment

A captain in the 8th Regiment of Hussars, stationed at Castres, in France, threw himself a few days since from a window of a third story. A peasant, who was passing with a donkey at the moment the officer fell, was slightly crushed to death by his weight; and his spurs touching the animal, it went off at full speed, knocking down and killing a child in its course. The fall of the officer had been somewhat broken by coming in contract with the unfortunate peasant, but he died in a few hours after in hospital.

A meeting, convened according to law by Mr. Nathan Wetherell, Assistant-Enclosure Commissioner, was held on Friday, the 5th inst., at the Crown Inn, in the parish of Sa tford, Somerset, to take into consideration the expediency of enclosing the commonable land known as Salford Mead ow, at which the majority of landowners interested consented to the enclosure.

The vacancy occasioned by the lamented decease of Mr. Charles Aston Key, as consulting surgeon to the London Orphan Asylum, has just been filled up by the election of Mr. T. B. Carding, of the London Hospital.

Her Majesty in Council has appointed the Rev. John Pilkington Norris, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, to be one of her Majesty's Inspectors of Schools.

The final question of divorce between Pierce Butler and his wife Frances Anne (Fanny Kemble) Butler is at length settled by a final decree of the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia. Mr. Butler is to allow his wife the lady 1600 dollars a year, and the children are to pass a part of their time with their mother.

A specimen of the Egyptian locust was captured near Handsworth Church, Warwickshire, on Saturday last. Another specimen, taken near Smethwick, a few days since, is still alive, and feeds upon various kinds of leaves and plants.

A natural curiosity has been shown at the workshops of Mr. Miller, piano manufacturer, in Grainger street. It is the nest and skeleton of a bird embedded in a piece of beech wood. The timber is apparently quite sound all around the cavity, and there is no indication of any aperture into it; but the timber being sawn up, the nest with the bird sitting upon it was found. The nest seems to be built partly with mud, and the bird resembles a titmouse. The only way of accounting for it is that at the lopping of a branch a cavity was formed, and that the outside was subsequently grown over, but how the bird was enclosed seems difficult to imagine.

A Polar bear, killed at Labrador, or rather its skin stuffed, has lately been brought to Halifax, Nova Scotia, on board the Lord Exmouth. It is as white as snow, 16 feet in length, and its hide are argein prop rtion. It still retains weighed 16 cwt. It was first discovered swimming in the water, and having been pursued to the shore, it was pierced with many bullets before it died.

PICTURES OF THE POLAR REGIONS.

WINTER QUARTERS.

The accredited intelligence of the missing Expedition of Sir John Franklin received last week, and fully detailed in our Journal, naturally invests the phenomena of the Arctic Regions with immediate interest. Our Artists have, therefore, grouped the accompanying series of pictures of the perils to which our adventurous countrymen have from time to time been exposed in their attempts "to penetrate the icy fastnesses of the North, and to circumnavigate America."

These representations have been copied from the Journals of the recent Voyages; so that they may be received as faithful illustrations of the peculiar and striking features which modify, in a singular manner, the whole aspect of nature within the Arctic Circle; at the same time that they will enable the reader to follow through such icy regions the paths of the daring navigator.

The adventurous spirit of Englishmen in this vast field of discovery will be found characterised in the records of their enterprises during the last three centuries and a half. Since John Cabot and his three sons left Bristol, in 1497, no fewer than sixty expeditions have been fitted out from England to solve the great geographical problem.

We now proceed to the details of the scenes we have pictured.

WINTER QUARTERS.

The approach of winter in the Arctic Circle is attended with many interesting changes. Snow begins to fall as early as August, and the whole ground is covered to the depth of two or three feet before the month of October. Along the shores and bays, the fresh water poured from the rivulets, or drained from the thawing of former collections of snow, becomes quickly converted into solid ice. As the cold augments, the air deposits its moisture in the form of a fog, which freezes into a fine gossamer netting, or spicular icicles, dispersed through the atmosphere, and extremely minute, that might seem to pierce and excoriate the skin. The hoar-frost settles profusely, in fantastic clusters, on every prominence. The whole surface of the sea steams like a lime-kiln, an appearance called frost smoke caused, as in other instances of the production of vapour, by the waters being still relatively warmer than the incumbent air. At length, the dispersion of the mist, and consequent clearness of the atmosphere, announce that the upper stratum of the sea itself has cooled to the same standard; a sheet of ice spreads quickly over the smooth expanse, and often gains the thickness of an inch in a single night. The darkness of a prolonged winter now broods impenetrably over the frozen continent unless the moon chance at times to obtrude her faint rays, which only discover the horrors and wide desolation of the scene. The wretched settlers covered with a load of bear-skins, remain crowded and immured in their hut, every chink of which they carefully stop against the piercing cold; and cowering about the stove or the lamp, they seek to doze away the tedious night. Their slender stock of provisions, though kept in the same apartment, is often frozen so hard as to require to be cut by a hatchet. The whole of the inside of their hut becomes inel with a thick crust of ice; and if they happen for an instant to open a window, the moisture of the confined air is immediately precipitated in the form of a shower of snow. As the frost continues to penetrate deeper, the rocks are heard at a distance to split with loud explosions. The sleep of death seems to wrap the scene in utter and oblivious ruin.

Sir Edward Parry has thus beautifully described this effect:—"The sound of voices, which, during the cold weather, could be heard at a much greater distance than usual, served now and then to break the silence which reigned around us: a silence far different from that peaceable composure which characterises the landscape of a cultivated country; it was the death-like stillness of the most dreary desolation, and the total absence of animated existence."

During the winter at Melville Island, people were heard conversing at the distance of a mile. This was, no doubt, owing partly to the density of the frigid atmosphere, but chiefly to the absence of all obstruction in a scene of universal calm and darkness.

CUTTING OUT OF THE ICE.

PICTURES OF THE POLAR REGIONS.

ICEBERGS, AURORA BOREALIS, &c.

Melville Island was discovered on Sept. 4, 1819. Here Parry and his companions pushed forward, but soon found their course arrested by an impenetrable barrier of ice. They waited a fortnight, in hopes of overcoming it; and, about the 20th, their situation became truly alarming. The young ice began rapidly to form on the surface of the waters, retarded only by winds and swells; so that the commanding officer was convinced that, in the event of a single hour's calm, he would be frozen up in the midst of the sea. No option was, therefore, left but to return, and to choose between two apparently good harbours, which had been recently passed on Melville Island. Not without difficulty, he reached this place on the 24th, and decided in favour of the more western haven, as affording the fullest security: but it was necessary to cut his way two miles through a large floe (a small expanse of salt-water ice) with which it was encumbered. To effect this arduous operation of the seamen marked with boarding-pikes two parallel lines, at the distance of somewhat more than the breadth of the larger ship. They sawed, in the first place, along the path tracked out, and then by cross sawing, detached large pieces, which were separated diagonally, in order to be floated out; and sometimes boat sails were fastened to them, to take advantage of a favourable breeze. On the 26th, the ships were established in five fathoms water, at about a cable's length from the beach. For some time the ice was daily cleared round them; but this was soon found to be an endless and useless labour, and they were allowed to be regularly frozen in for the winter.

CUTTING OUT OF THE ICE,

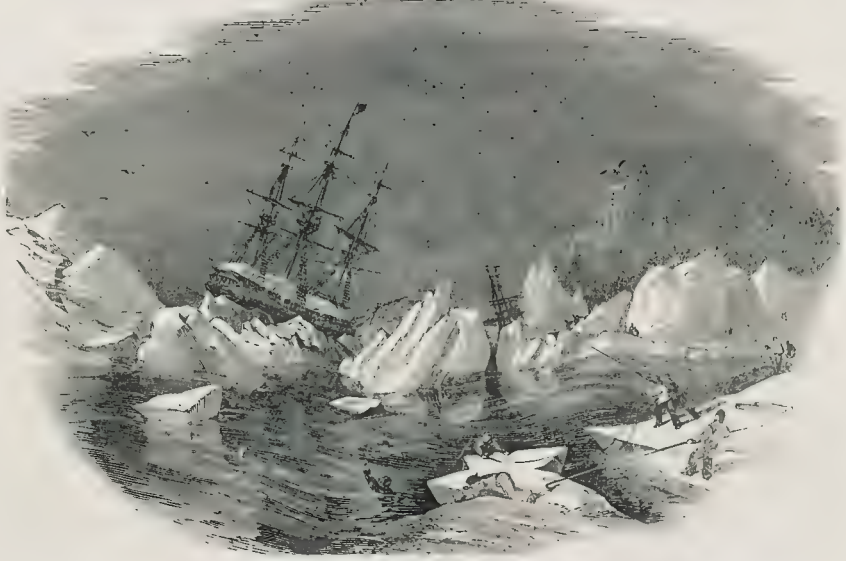
The illustration shows the general but silness of "Cutting-out," the reader will doubtless recollect that the Enterprise, and the Investigator, and the North Star, sent in search of Sir John Franklin's Expedition, were well supplied with ice-saws, boarding-pikes, and other implements for cutting and breaking up the ice. (See Nos. 316 and 372 of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.)

The usual winter protection for the vessels is covering in the deck, as shown in the first Illustration. Sometimes a house is erected on the shore, with blocks of ice, which soon becomes a solid concrete mass, which, being a slow conductor, checks the access of cold, while it admits a sufficient portion of light.

The commander of the Expedition of 1819, finding himself and his ships shut in for a long and dreary winter, devoted his attention, with a mixture of firmness and kindness, to mitigate those evils which, even in lower latitudes, had often rendered an abode in the Arctic regions so fatal. It was necessary to be very economical of fuel, the small quantity of grass and turf which could be collected being too wet to be of any use. By placing the apparatus for baking in a central position, and by several other arrangements, the cabin was maintained in a very comfortable temperature; but still, around its extremities and the bed-places, steam, vapour, and even the breath, settled, first as moisture, and then as ice. To remove these annoyances became, accordingly, a part of their daily employment. To keep the men's minds in a lively and cheerful state, plays were performed, Lieutenant Beechey being nominated stage-manager, and the other gentlemen coming forward as amateur performers. The Arctic management and the



BREAKING UP OF THE ICE.

North Georgian Theatre were very popular. The officers had another source of amusement in the North Georgian Gazette, of which Captain Sabine became editor, and all were invited to contribute to this chronicle of the frozen region. Even those who hesitated to appear as writers, enlivened the circle by good-humoured criticisms:

> Thus nasa'd the time
> Till through the lofty chambers of the south
> Loud cou the joyous sun.

It was on the 4th of November that this great orb ought to have taken his leave; but a deep haze prevented them from bidding a formal farewell and from ascertaining the period at which refraction would leave the sun below the horizon: yet he was reported to be seen from the mast-head on the 11th. Amid various occupations and amusements, the shortest day came on almost unexcited, and the seamen then watched with pleasure the full light gradually strengthening at noon On January 28, none of the fixed stars could be seen at this hour by the naked eye; and on February 1 and 2, the sun was looked for, but the sky was wrapped in mist; however, he was perceived from the maintop. Throughout the winter, the officers at the period of twilight, had taken a regular walk of two or three hours: not proceeding, however, further than a mile, lest they should be overtaken by snow-drift. There was a want of objects to diversify this promenade. A monotonous surface of dazzling white covered land and sea; the view of the ships, the smoke ascending from them, the sound of human voices, which through the calm and cold air was carried to an extraordinary distance, alone gave any animation to this wintry scene. To his scene of gloom, at length succeeds—

THE BREAKING-UP OF THE ICE.

On March 16, the general attention was turned to the means of extrication from the ice. By May 17 the seamen had so far cut it from around the ships as to allow them to float; but in the sea it was still immoveable. By the middle of June there were channels in which boats could pass; yet throughout this month and the following the great covering of ice by the surrounding seas remained entire, and kept the ships in harbour. On the 2nd of August, however, the whole mass, by one of those sudden movements to which it is liable, broke up, and floated out.

The phenomena of the season are thus described:—When the sun reappears above the horizon, his languid beams rather betray the wide waste than brighten its prospect. By degrees, however, the power of the sun's rays is more decided. In the month of May the famished inmates venture to leave their hut in quest of fish on the margin of the sea. As the sun acquires elevation, his power is greatly increased. The snow gradually passes away, the ice dissolves apace, and vast fragments of it, detached from the cliffs, and undermined beneath, precipitate themselves on the shores with the crash of thunder. The ocean is now unbound, and its icy dress breaks up with tremendous rapture. The enormous fields of ice thus set afloat are, by the violence of winds and currents, again discovered and dispersed. Sometimes, impelled in opposite directions, they impinge and strike with a mutual shock, like the crash of worlds sufficient, if opposed, to reduce to atoms, in a moment, the proudest monuments of human power. It is impossible to picture a situation more awful than that of a vessel, who see their frail bark thus fatally enclosed, expecting immediate and inevitable destruction.

Captain Back, in his attempt to reach Repulse Bay, in the ship Terror, in 1837, experienced several of these ice-storms The Captain describes the crashing, grinding, and rushing noise of the floating masses of ice, which met in the west of the sky, and soon the breeze brought down the whole western body with irresistible force, suddenly assailing the floe pieces, grinding and ploughing up the edges. There were frequent pauses, during which could be heard only a heavy crash of thunder; but, suddenly, on it came again, with a deafening roar, destroying everything in its furious course. Wherever our eyes were turned they were met by rising masses of ice roll up in the most portentous forms: on the port, in particular, not one more than thirty paces away, had reared itself at least thirty feet on our inner floe-piece, which, strong as it was, gave way under the accumulated weight, and a mass of several tons being thus upturned, and added to the original bulk, the whole then bore down slowly upon our quarter. The ship herself was high out of the water on the ice, but this overlapped her like a tower. The ship, unable to right herself, began to complain, and the scene became more dismal more dark and threatening. Active preparations were made for a wreck, but circumstances were now even more discouraging than on former occasions. The large pieces of ice around, any one of which would have held for months its provisions, &c., now no longer existed, but were ground together and crushed and broken ice, presenting a multitude of angular and irregular surfaces, but none fit to trust a boat on, still less a human being: at the same time, every piece being in motion, it would have been impossible to reached the land. Knowing this, and feeling acutely for the many beings entrusted to my charge, it may be conceived with what intense anxiety I listened to the crashing and grinding around. The stewards of the ship, tried and shaken as it had been, could hardly be expected to withstand the overwhelming power opposed to it, and what the result of that night might have been it is impossible to say, and painful to contemplate, but for the special providence mercifully averted the crisis, by suddenly, and at the moment of greatest peril, arresting the tumult. In less time than it could be spoken, there was the stillness of death, and we were safe. The watch was called, I threw myself—not to rest—but that none that night laid his head on his pillow without offering up a devout thanksgiving for the mercy which had been vouchsafed him. This was happily, the last attack of this kind."

ICEBERGS, AURORA BOREALIS, &c.

"I lasting fields of ice, twenty or thirty miles in diameter, are frequent in the Arctic Ocean: sometimes they extend 100 miles, so closely packed together that no opening is left between them sufficient to admit the prow of a boat. Ice, in its fest, is not seen, as there is, at least, two-thirds of the mass below water Sometimes, these fields, many thousand millions of tons in weight, acquire a rotatory motion of great velocity, dashing against one another with a tremendous collision. Packed ice always has a tendency to drift southwards, even in the calmest weather; and in their progress the ice-fields are rent in pieces by the swell of the sea. It is computed that 20,000 square miles of drift ice are annually brought by the current along the coast of Greenland to Cape Farewell. In stormy weather, the fields and streams of ice are covered with haze and spray, from constant tremendous concussions, yet our seamen, undismayed by the appalling danger, boldly steer their ships amidst this hideous and discordant tumult.

"Huge icebergs and masses detached from the glaciers, which extend from the Arctic land into the sea, especially in Baffin's Bay, are drifted southwards 2000 miles from their origin, to melt in the Atlantic. They vary from a few yards to miles in circumference, and rise hundreds of feet above the surface. Seven hundred such masses have been seen at once in this sea. When there is a swell, the loose ice dashing against them, raises the spray to their very summits; and, as they waste away, they occasionally lose equilibrium, and roll over, causing a swell which breaks up the neighbouring field-ice; the commotion spreads far and wide, and no sprout succeeds to the thunder."

The phenomenon of the Aurora Borealis, one of the various striking appearances which enliven the Polar winter, is thus described in the ably-written volume entitled "Discovery and Adventure in the Polar Seas and Regions":—

"The northern world, when the sun departs, is by no means involved in that monotonous gloom which such a privation might seem to indicate. After the solar beams have fairly quitted the scene, and the twilight has died out in the heavens become a gay scene, through which the most brilliant meteors are perpetually playing. These singular streams of light, called commonly the Aurora Borealis, keep up their unceasing coruscations, and were never perfectly witnessed in full splendour by Captains Parry and Lyon during their Arctic residence. The light had a tendency to form an irregular arch, which, in calm weather, was often very distinct, though its upper boundary was seldom well defined; but, whenever the air became agitated, showers of rays spread in every direction, with the rapidity of lightning. Sometimes long streaks of light were spread out with tremendous velocity from the magnetic zenith, now to and from a fixed point, somewhat like a riband held in the hand and shaken with an undulatory motion. No rule, however, could be traced in the movement of these lighter parcels of the merry dancers,' which flew about perpetually towards every quarter; becoming in stormy weather more rapid in their motions, and soaring at the wildness of the blast. They gave an indescribable air of magic to the whole scene, and made it more wonderful that, by the twilight I think, they should be viewed as 'the spirits of his fathers running through the land of souls.'

"Several questions have been agitated with respect to the Aurora. It has been said to be accompanied with a hissing and crackling noise; and, indeed, Captain Lyon observes, that the sudden glare and rapid bursts of those wondrous showers of fire make it difficult to fancy their movements wholly without sound; yet nothing was ever positively heard. Captain Parry complains that he could not expose his ears to the cold long enough completely to ascertain the point; but his colleague declares that he stood for hours on the ice listening, and at a distance from any sounding body, till he became thoroughly satisfied that none proceeded from the Aurora. It has also been questioned whether this meteor ever completely hid the stars; and it was generally decided, on this point, that it dimmed the lustre of those heavenly bodies, as if a thin gauze veil had been drawn over them, an effect which was augmented when several luminous portions were spread over each other. In a clear atmosphere these lights shone with a brightness which gave the impression that they were nearer than the clouds; but whenever these last overspread the sky, the Aurora was hid by them, and must, therefore, have been more distant. To Captain Parry it appeared to assume hints of yellow and blue; but to Captain Lyon it colour always resembled that of the Milky Way, or of very vivid sheet-lightning. The present writer saw this phenomenon once, and only once, in its utmost brilliancy, and exhibiting all the appearances described by northern observers Its impressions agree perfectly with those of Captain Lyon."

In the gratifying intelligence which appeared in our last Number, respecting the Arctic Explorers, in quoting the Admiralty message, we stated that the communications were made to the Lords of the Admiralty by the Editor of the Mercantile and Shipping Gazette, instead of the Shipping and Mercantile Gazette, which is the correct title of the paper.

RESCUE OF SIR JOHN FRANKLIN.—A copy of the following letter has been addressed to the First Lord of the Admiralty:—

T. RIGHT HON SIR F BARING, BART., FIRST LORD OF THE ADMIRALTY.

SIR,—I trust your Lordship will excuse the liberty I have taken in addressing you but, in the year 1844, I was to send an experiment on the Danube river. A mere shell was exploded under the ice which was then four feet in thickness. The effect I produced was that the [illegible] masses of ice were forced in all directions, as in other words, rendered the space where the explosion had taken place impassable to navigation. It occurred to me to inferring your Lordship of this circumstance in the rescue of Sir John Franklin and his crew, and I submit to you the same [illegible] I beg to suggest that a number of shells, filled with cylinders of gunpowder or gun-cotton, carrying in power to suit the various thicknesses of the [illegible] all to be forced the ice, the charges inserted, and fired by means of safe [illegible] It was obvious that, by the compression of the ice by the water, and the brittle nature of the ice that the above means might be employed in making a road infinitely better than the several for the present adventurers to return to their friends. I beg to tender my services to your lordship, should the above means be deemed advisable, to join any expedition for the above purpose. Judge from the above experiment, I have no hesitation in saying that from ten to fifteen miles per day could be effected, and this with trifling amount of labour

I have the honour to be your Lordship's most obedient servant.

G. SHEPHERD, C.E.

26, Fleet-street, October 6.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

PROPOSED AUSTRIAN LOAN.

A public meeting was held on Monday, at the London Tavern, for the purpose of giving expression of opinion against the practice of raising loans for the purposes of war, and more particularly to deprecate the taking up of any portion of the new Austrian Loan of £7,000,000.

G. W. Alexander, Esq., at one o'clock, took the chair.

The room was crowded to excess; and on the platform were Mr. Cobden, M.P., Mr. J. Williams, M.P., Lord Dudley Stuart, M.P., Rev. J. Burnet, Messrs. Gulpin, Scobell, Briggs, &c., and a large number of leading Liberals.

The Chairman observed, in opening the proceedings, that the time had passed away when nations could obtain loans for the purpose of war. All the nations of Europe were more or less indebted; and prudent persons would therefore be cautio is how they lent their money hereafter. (Hear, hear.) So far as he could learn, but a very small portion of the Austrian loan had been taken, although it had been stated at Vienna that the whole of it was taken there, and that it was at a premium of 2½. It turned out, however, that only one million and a half had been taken, and that by the house of Hope and Co., of Amsterdam. Other accounts said that the two millions were subscribed for; but he believed the whole statement to be incorrect. (Cheers.) That meeting was not called solely for the purpose of opposition to the Austrian loan, but to do as much as far as possible, to all loans for war purposes, and thus put a check to the cruelties and oppression too often practised by Kings and rulers over their subjects. (Cheers.)

Mr. Cobden, who was received with much cheering, moved the following resolution:—"That the Government of Austria having proposed to raise a loan in foreign countries, capitalists and men of business are thereby invited to investigate the financial position of the said Government, and the probability of its repaying the loan thus proposed to be contracted; and that it is the opinion of this meeting that no valid security is tendered, or can be offered, in the present state of the Austrian finances, which can induce prudent men in taking any part of the said loan." On no former occasion had he ever stood before the public upon such strong grounds of justice, humanity, and sound political economy as he did at that moment. (Cheers.) He went with Adam Smith in his principles of free-trade; but he also went with him in thinking that we had no right to saddle posterity with debts which we had no means of paying ourselves, and which must be equally beyond theirs. (Hear.) Debts he denounced as unjust, and wasteful, and needless. He believed money for Austrian purposes, he did not mean to say that Parliament should be applied to to prevent people from lending money to that or any other country, if they so thought fit. He only meant to denounce the lending of this Austrian loan as being unjust in principle; and, if taken, injurious to mankind. He proposed to show to his own countrymen that it was wrong in principle to lend their money for the purpose of being thrown into the gaping jaws of a bankrupt Government. (Cheers.) When a Government like that of Austria, which had been three times bankrupt, came forward in the character of a borrower of money, the least it could do was to give, through its agents, Messrs. Hope and Co., a detailed bond fide account and creditor statement of its financial position. No such statement had been given by Austria; and in its absence they were bound to rumar to the best authority at command. He would now read to them an extract from a work, written in 1840. It was entitled "Austria and its Future," and was known to be from the pen of Baron Andrian, who was last year accredited as ambassador to this country from the central German states. After giving some detailed statement of all the various shufflings, manœuvrings, borrowings, loans, lotteries—every possible device by which the Austrian Government had been endeavouring to maintain its finances for the last 25 years—the writer went on to say, that "From 1815 down to 1840, a period of 25 years of profound peace, Austria, or the Austrian Government, has not only de hted its debt in nominal value, but quadrupled it in fact. Fifteen millions of florins was the debt in 1815, and in 1840 it was 60,000,000. In 1843 another volume had been added to the work, and there the author said, "There has been no one word to disprove my statements respecting Austrian finance; there is rather to add millions have been added to the national debt." (Hear, hear.) Thus, from 1815 to 1847, the Austrian Government, during a period of profound peace, no foreign war during the whole time on its hands, had gone on every year spending more than its income, and was constantly adding to its debt, which, in 1847, was found to be 300,000 to 400,000 men—the produce of all that wasteful expenditure—the Austrian empire shared the revolutionary epidemic which swept over Europe, and the Government fell like a pack of cards, in spite of its army, and from that time to this, Austria had been in a state of anarchy and disorder. He was almost afraid to mention what well-informed people had told him was the amount of the floating debt of Austria, but he might state that twenty millions sterling was within the amount; and it was to enable them to redeem a part or that debt that the Austrian authorities had now the audacity—for he could not call it by any other name—to come before Europe with a proposal to Jews, and ask honest Dutchmen, honest Englishmen, painstaking Swiss and Frenchmen—for every nation was included—to throw their hard-won earnings into the bottomless pit of Austrian waste and extravagance. (Cheers.) Austria would probably be driven to a fourth act of bankruptcy. The seven millions which were now asked for on rather humiliating sms was only the beginning of the borrowing. And, in answer to those who say like a drop in the ocean. And those who lend first would be swallowed up and sacrificed in the first instance, to enable the borrower to offer greater inducements to those who may be-lines to come forward otherwise. He did not state this for the information and warning of Messrs. Hope and Co., of Amsterdam, or of bankers and agents elsewhere, because the loan system may be very profitable to them, while it was ruinous to the lenders. He warned his countrymen from placing their ten pounds in a raffle where there were no prizes. They had assembled in the hope of converting bankers and agents and brokers in London or elsewhere. They did not expect to convert them; they did not expect to see one of them on the platform; but they expected all the operatives of the press which were under the influence of these parties, and they were not a few, to oppose them. They did not expect these organs to answer their arguments, or to say a word in refutation of them; but they had the opportunity of being able to obey the bidding of their superiors, and abuse them well. (Cheers.) If those small capitalists of whom he was speaking—the unwary, the unconscious, the uninformed would but exercise the opportunity of bringing the public to bear the opinion of the great capitalists themselves as to the quality of the loan. The terms were such as to allow £9 ils. per cent. of interest. He would advise some county Dutchman to go and see Messrs. Hope and Co., and say, "Here is one me £5 14s. of interest; that is nearly twice as much as I can get, in the ordinary way, in Amsterdam. I shall be content with £4 per cent., and I shall take £1000 of your paltry Austrian loan for the present." He would tell you will endorse my bond as an antee for the repayment." (Cheers.) "No, no, no!" would be the answer; Dutchmen were not to be done in that way, you may depend upon it. (Laughter.) Then he would say, "Well, then, I will sell my bond to him a few days previously, "I do not think £300,000 will be taken in all England; certainly not a shilling will be taken to hold." The scrip may be taken in the hope of transferring it at a premium to persons not so well aware as the London bankers were of the worthlessness of the security. Now, what was known that every word he had uttered was strictly within the bounds of moderation and the bounds of truth when every man in Lombard-street could endorse all he had said—was it not humiliating and disgusting that the leading organs of the press of this country should lend their influence, not to throw a shield over the unwary and innocent, but to serve the purpose of those who were cunning enough and able enough to protect themselves? (Cheers.) For his own part, when he took up a public question, and found that, instead of his arguments and facts being refuted, he was personally attacked, he regarded that circumstance as the triumph of his cause. (Cheers.) These parties, however, were not the only parties that looked with great disfavour upon this meeting. He hesitated not to say that there was not a Government in Europe that did not frown upon its assembling. He did not say that their own Government liked it. (Cheers.) He judged of that because he found the organs of the press which were understood more especially to represent official feeling—he had found, he said, those organs of the press which were peculiarly under the influence of the Government—one in particular, which was, par excellence, established to advocate the principles enunciated by Adam Smith (Mr. Cobden was understood to refer to the Economist), were the most violent to assail the movement. He considered the present meeting to be the germ of a great movement that would lay bare the pretensions of those states that came before the world for loans, show the bankrupt state of their exchequers, and hold up to execration the objects for which the money was sought to be obtained. (Cheers.) He considered the present loan as much Russian as Austrian, and the Russian Government was nothing more nor less than a gigantic conspiracy. (Cheers.) They had heard of the two millions that Russia had subscribed towards the Austrian loan of the intention of the Emperor to subscribe to the loan for the Pope—of large advances which he was to make to the Duke of Tuscany; these paragraphs were put in the newspapers by men employed to throw dust into the eyes of the people. Russia spent last year more than her income; and this year the deficit would be enormous. It was not on mere economical grounds that he came to oppose the loan. What was this money wanted for? Austria, with her barbarous consort, had been engaged in a cruel and remorseless war, and that same Austria came now unrolling forth her blood-stained hand, and asking honest Dutchmen, honest Englishmen, honest Frenchmen, to furnish the price of her devastation and slaughter. It was the order of Divine Providence that war was self-destroying, and that, if countries were left to themselves, war would terminate. The system of foreign loans, however, by which belligerent powers were enabled to recruit their armies, was calculated to perpetuate the horrors of war. Persons who lent money under such circumstances were devoid of any of the excuses under which men try to justify resistance to the sword; they could not plead patriotism or self defence, not even anger, nor even the lust of military glory. They sat down coolly and calculated the chances of the game—the chances of loss or gain to themselves, without reference to the cause of humanity which was at stake. They had not even the pleasure the savage pleasure—which the Pagans of the middle ages had when they paid for seats to witness the bloody encounters of gladiators in the arena. (Cheers.) He wished it might be borne in mind by capitalists everywhere that the present were times when it behoved persons to remember that property had its duties as well as its rights. (Great cheering.) He would exhort the friends of peace and the friends of disarmament throughout the civilised world to exert themselves to spread abroad a sound morality on the question of war loans, and to teach the capitalists of the world that they who forgot their duties were running the risk of endangering their rights. (Great cheering.)

Lord Dudley Stuart seconded the motion, observing that the loan was illegal, for it had not been sanctioned by the Diet; and there was, therefore, every reason to believe that it would be repudiated whenever the Austrian Government found it inconvenient to pay the interest.

The resolution was carried with cheers, as was also the following, viz.:—"That in the opinion of this meeting loans for the purposes, and for the maintenance of standing armaments, are unsound in principle, and injurious to the interests of nations."

On the motion of a vote of thanks to the chairman, Mr. Cobden availed himself of the opportunity to make another speech. It was said that the Emperor of Russia had danced in his shirt when he heard that the Hungarians had been subdued. (Roars of laughter.) Why, he ought to have been ashamed of himself, not for dancing in his shirt—(Laughter)—but for cowardice in having subjected Hungary to such fearful odds. The demand which had been made on Turkey to give up the refugees was only in accordance with the cowardly principle which had been acted upon throughout the world. It was not more than two years ago that Bem and Dembinski were in this country. Would the Emperor of Russia have dared to demand them of us—(Loud cheers)—to have sent an autograph letter to the Queen, demanding that Bem should be given up to be hanged? No; he would sooner have thought of hanging himself. (Great cheering.) Some persons accounted for the Emperor's conduct on the ground that he was eccentric—that eccentricity in the throne was a misfortune. Caligula was an eccentric despot. Nebuchadnezzar was eccentric when he issued his proclamations, but he did not think that in those proclamations there was anything more absurd than had appeared in the proclamations issued by the Czar since the termination of the Hungarian campaign. Some men could not understand an argument if it did not involve an appeal to brute force; and he did not know but that there might be some principle in the plea, when he took the liberty of reminding the Czar that, should he, like a mad bull, continue to pursue a headlong course, he may run his head against something harder than his own skull. (Hear, hear, and laughter.) Therefore, Russia should attack England, let England hermetically seal up the Russian ports. There need be no fighting. The English fleet could seal up the ports for six months in the year, and the first week after the shutting up of the ports, Russia would be bankrupt. At six weeks, and the Russian nobles, finding no sale for their wool, and hemp, and flax, which was all mortgaged before sent out, for they were all living in anticipation of their means, as landlords did elsewhere before they had barbarically sacked their prey for six weeks, the nobles would very soon dispose of the Czar's eccentricity, in order that they might sell their flax, their hemp, and their tallow. He laughed heartily at the idea of Russia going to war with England, more heartily still at her going to war with England and France. He heartily joined with Lord Dudley Stuart in the hope that Lord Palmerston had represented to Russia that the unanimous feeling of the people of Western Europe was that of indignation against the course the Czar was pursuing. Though he spoke thus, he did not mean in the least to detract from the peace doctrines which he had enunciated. The meekest member of the Society of Friends, if he saw a ruffian beating a child in the streets, would not hesitate to express his opinion, at all events. (Laughter.)

The motion having been carried,

The Chairman returned thanks, and the meeting separated.

INCREASE OF SUNDAY LABOUR IN THE POST-OFFICE.

The proposed innovation has called up quite an agitation on a small scale against it.

On Monday several meetings on the subject were held in the metropolis. One of the most important was that of the inhabitants of Westminster, Marylebone, &c., held at the Crown and Anchor Tavern, at one o'clock, to memorialise the Board of the Treasury against the intended change. The chair was occupied by Lord Ashley. The meeting was well attended, and several ladies occupied the front seats. After prayer on the platform by the Bishop of London, Dr. Croley, Sir John Paul, Bart., General Mitnes, &c.—The Bishop of London opened the meeting with prayer, and also proposed the first resolution, which requested the Lords of the Treasury to rescind the orders of the Post-office authorities, and expressed regret that the first act of the Government, after the recent severe visitation of the cholera, should be an attempt to desecrate the Sabbath day. He congratulated the meeting upon the spirit in which they met, and he congratulated himself that he lived amongst a Christian people, and in the metropolis of the Protestant world. (Cheers.) A deputation of clerks in the Post-office had waited upon the Bishop of London, and had heard their statement, he addressed a remonstrance, couched in the strongest terms, to the First Lord of the Treasury, and he had received an answer which was courteous, as every letter coming from that Lord always was, but it was in mos. unsatisfactory. He took his stand upon the religious principle involved in the question; but beyond that he might say that he considered it unjust to the clerks in the Post-office to deprive them of the Sabbath, which they were led to believe they would enjoy when they took their appointments. The resolution was carried unanimously. Other resolutions, in conformity with the objects of the meeting, were also carried.

A meeting of the parishioners of St. James's, Westminster, at Willis's-rooms, presided over by the Bishop of London, was held on the same day, to petition the Lords of the Treasury against the adoption of the new regulations at the Post-office.

On the same evening the members and teachers of the Sunday School Union assembled in Exeter Hall, and unanimously agreed to petition against the proposed alteration. The great room was crowded, and on the platform were a number of clergymen of all denominations. The chair was taken by Alderman Thomas Challis, and the meeting was opened by a hymn, in which all present joined, and a prayer by the Rev William Leask, of Kennington.

A memorial was also agreed to on the subject at St. Mary's, Lambeth, by a numerous meeting held in the Vestry-hall, Church-street, the rector (the Rev. C. B. Dalton) in the chair.

On Tuesday, memorials to the Lords of the Treasury against the proposed change were agreed to at public meetings held in the Town-hall, Southwark; in the Inquest-room, St. Dunstan's, Fleet-street, in the National school room, St. Pancras, &

In the country, meetings having the same object in view have been held in Leeds and others of the leading towns.

COURT OF COMMON COUNCIL.—SMITHFIELD MARKET.

A Special Court was held on Wednesday, to consider the question of the removal of this market.

A report from the committee appointed to watch the proceedings of the select committee of the House of Commons appointed to consider the question of the removal of Smithfield Market was read, and after some discussion was ordered to be entered upon the journals

A petition signed by a large number of salesmen, graziers, butchers, and others transacting business at Smithfield, praying for the enlargement of the market, was read. The petitioners asserted that the select committee had urged no objection to the enlargement of Smithfield, but had left the matter to such other site which could be chosen; they denied the allegations which had been made as to the unhealthy influence of the traffic, upheld the site as the most convenient which could be obtained, and protested against the report which could be made by the select committee of the House of Commons, was disqualified from giving an unbiassed opinion, in consequence of it's being a trustee of the Islington Market.

Messrs. Scobell, Wood, Johnstone, Ackroyd, Lewis, and other parishioners, as also Mr. Pocklington, as a "money taker," attended at the bar to answer such questions as might be put to them. The purport of the answers was, that Smithfield was the most convenient site which could be obtained for all purposes; that the graziers were unanimous in their wish that it should be allowed to continue; that advantage would arise from fixing an earlier hour for closing the market; and that enlargement was all that was required, to remove every well-found objection.

The petitioners were then ordered to withdraw, and

Mr. Deputy Hicks submitted the motion of which notice had been given:—"That it be referred to the Improvement Committee to consider and report on the best means of giving further accommodation for Smithfield Market, provided it should appear to the committee to be necessary or desirable." The complaints which had been urged in former periods against the inconvenience and convenience of the market, had nothing whatever to do with the question now to be disposed of. Upon no subject was the public so ill informed. The most unfounded statements to the prejudice of the old market had been circulated and been implicitly believed. The evidence taken was altogether one-sided. The point of enlargement was the only one which could fairly be entertained.

Mr. Holl seconded the motion.

Mr. H Taylor moved the amendment of which notice had been given:—"That it be referred to a committee to inquire and report to the Court the area of the several markets now held in the city of London, viz., Smithfield, Newgate, and Leadenhall Markets; and that the committee do likewise inquire and report whether, in their opinion, any addition of space or other increased accommodation is required in either of those markets, together with an estimate of the expense of making such additions or alterations; and that the committee do further inquire and report whether it is expedient to make application to Parliament for a bill or bills for any purpose of the same that may be required for the purpose, either by a reasonable modification of or increase of tolls, or otherwise for the requisite powers to effect those objects." Smithfield was not the only market that called for inquiry; Newgate Market was equally pressing. All the markets ought to be put on the same footing as that of Billingsgate, and he was sure that Parliament would not hesitate to give the necessary powers. The question was not one which interested the city of London alone, it was a matter of national interest.

Mr. Deputy Hicks's motion, and Mr. H Taylor's amendment were then put, and the latter was carried by a large majority.

It was also agreed that the committee should be a special ward committee.

The members were then nominated, all the Aldermen who are members of Parliament and several others being included.

---

* Mrs. Somerville's "Physical Geography."

PARLIAMENTARY AND FINANCIAL REFORM.

District meetings continue to be held throughout the metropolis for the purpose of advancing this movement.

On Tuesday evening, at a meeting at King's-cross, presided over by Mr. J. Williams, M.P., the following "resolution" was agreed to: "That it is the opinion of this meeting that parliamentary reform has become and is felt to be a matter of paramount importance, and that this meeting pledges itself, by regular union, to promote and support the great efforts now making by the Council of the Parliamentary and Financial Reform Association to obtain the extension of the suffrage to every male occupier of a tenement, who may be rated or claim to be rated to the relief of the poor." The report of the committee, stated that "a few weeks only had elapsed since this branch association was formed, when the committee did not hesitate, even upon such limited experience to [illegible] in no district is reform more needed, or the means whereby it may be [illegible] than in the King's-cross district."

On Wednesday evening the district association of West Marylebone and Paddington held a meeting, at which Lord Dudley Stuart, M.P.; Mr. J. Williams, M.P., &c., were present. Speeches of the usual character were delivered, and the following resolutions were agreed to:—

1. That, while at this meeting it is duly conceived that a great reduction of the national expenditure, and a more equitable adjustment of the burden of taxation, are [illegible] necessary, and almost universally [illegible] to be [illegible] this meeting is of opinion that, unless the [illegible] shall give to the people a full control over the taxes which they [illegible] to pay, and the means of [illegible] those who spend parliaments and [illegible] to give to the National Parliamentary and Financial Reform Association their most earnest co-operation.

2. That this meeting rejoices in the hope that a hearty union between the middle and working classes has at length been attained, and strenuously endorses on all those who complain of any grievance in the national affairs, to concentrate all their energies in the constitution of such a tribunal in Parliament as shall deal out full and impartial justice to all classes of her Majesty's subjects.

MICHAELMAS TERM.—The Lord Chancellor has appointed Friday, the 2nd of November, at his residence in Park-lane, for the reception of the Lord Mayor elect, in order to signify her Majesty's approbation of his Lordship. On the same day (the first of Michaelmas Term) the Lord Chancellor will receive the Judges, Queen's Counsel, &c., in Park-lane, and will afterwards proceed to his court, at Westminster, where the noble and learned Lord will sit on that day. During the remainder of the Term the Lord Chancellor will sit in Lincoln's-inn.

METROPOLITAN SEWERS COMMISSION.—The Metropolitan Commission of Sewers issued at the commencement of the present year has been determined by writ of supersedeas, and a new commission has been directed to the following persons: Viscount Eversley; Major-General Sir John Burgoyne, K.C.B.; Sir H. De La Beche, F.R.S.; Robert Stephenson, Esq., M.P.; Samuel Morton Peto, Esq.; M.P., Lieutenant-Colonel Alderson (Royal Engineers); Philip Hardwick, Esq.; Captain Vetch (Royal Engineers); J. M. Rendel, Esq.; Captain Denison (Royal Engineers); Thomas Hawes, Esq.; Captain R. H. Dawes, and Edward Lawes, Esq., barrister-at-law.

SUNDAY POST-OFFICE DUTY IN THE PROVINCES.—An order has been issued from the General Post-office to the effect that no letters shall be received in the provinces for the day under the head on Sundays. This will prevent provincial towns having any undue advantage over the metropolis. Complaints have been made, that, by the new regulations for expediting letters through the country, time to count the operation Sunday next, a letter written in London on Sunday morning would not reach Liverpool before Monday afternoon; while a letter written in Portsmouth on Sunday morning would, by being sent to London the day mail, and forwarded from thence in the evening, reach Liverpool on Monday morning. By the discontinuance of the London Sunday day-bag at Portsmouth, therefore, and at other places, letter writers in the provinces cannot possibly have any advantage over those in London.

POISONING BY ARSENIC.—On Wednesday evening, at a very full meeting of distinguished members of the medical profession, convened by the Pharmaceutical society, at their rooms, in Bloomsbury-square, for the purpose of taking into consideration the present system of selling poisons, with the crime and loss of life resulting from it, and also to take into consideration the means as for remedying the evil, some facts of a very interesting nature were stated. Mr. Jacob Bell said, that the subject appeared to him to divide itself into two questions—first, whether it was possible to do anything at all to prevent the evil; and, secondly, whether the remedial measures, if any, should be applied to the sale of arsenic only, without including other poisons. At present there was no law to prevent persons from selling poisons, and no means of bringing them to Justice until some fatal result had taken place from the poisons they had sold. A restriction upon the sale of poisons in small quantities would be a very great protection to the public, especially where arsenic was used, for a very large portion of the arsenic at present employed in criminal attempts was sold by small shopkeepers, in obscure and out-of-the-way places in the country districts. It would make such persons much more cautious, even if they were made to a certain extent responsible by law. But it was doubtful whether it would be useful to restrict the sale of arsenic at all on small quantities, when there were other poisons which no chemical skill could detect after death had been caused by them. If arsenic were prohibited, ought they not also to prohibit opium, henbane, hemlock, &c., and would not the efficacy of such a prohibition rest upon more grounds than the assertion that it was the only poison that could be detected? With those who had these poisons to sell than in the restrictions of the law? It was highly essential that some law, which would no interfere with the legitimate use of arsenic, which it would certainly do if a retail trade, already regulated and [illegible] apart, arose the difficulty of passing such a law as should not operate injuriously to the chemist and druggist. The Pharmaceutical Society therefore sought the aid of its members, and the profession in general, to collect facts and facts coming under their own knowledge, in order that some law which would meet the exigences of the case might be framed.—Dr. Tunstall said there was no doubt that arsenic was indiscriminately sold for the ostensible purpose of destroying vermin, but this was particularly the case in Lincolnshire, where many of the secret poisonings had taken place. Arsenic was not requisite for the destruction of vermin; but there were other uses for which it was sought. It was used to preserve birds, to prevent them from becoming rigid; it was used as an outward application for disease in sheep, for killing wire-worms, and for steeping wheat to prevent smut. In Manchester, it was used for experiments in dyeing at the manufactories; in Leominster, it was used to destroy insects, &c. Now, the disease in sheep was better treated by arsenious acid than by crude arsenic, and it might be that the use of the poison exercised a deleterious effect upon the persons consumed in London and elsewhere. Sheep frequently died after the arsenical dressings, and he might presume that they were slaughtered when the effects of the poison were still in the frame. Mr. Taylor, who had examined such sheep, said that the tissues were infected with arsenic, and Mr. Herapath said the same. Mr. Taylor said that arsenic applied to an ulcerated surface was absorbed, and had a poisonous effect in the case of a man who used it as a depilatory: death took place shortly afterwards. Again, a man was tried in Chester, in 1844, for the death of a woman to whom he had applied an arsenical plaster. Mr. Brett, of Liverpool, detected arsenic in the stomach, liver, and spleen of a sheep dressed with arsenic; and, indeed, it was a remarkable fact that arsenic, however administered, produced inflammation of the stomach. It was a fact well worthy the attention of the profession to endeavour to ascertain the effect of these arsenical dressings on sheep. He had been informed that a solution of copper answered them nearly as well, and no doubt it would be used when the cause of the death of sheep was traced to arsenic. The suicides which had taken place in a given time showed that the sale of arsenic afforded a fatal facility. Of the suicides in 1840, no less than 53 per cent were from arsenic. A gentleman in Lincolnshire, writing to him as to the comparative sale of poisons, stated that he sold a quantity of arsenic, from fifty to one hundred gallons of laudanum, yearly; and strychnia, morphia, strychnine, bichloride of mercury, &c. A gentleman from Manchester informed him that the sale of Godfrey's cordial was carried on by the small grocers to a great extent, and that there was a demand for arsenic for the oxide used, prussiate of potash, and other poisons. In Leominster there was a great demand for corrosive sublimate. If the sale of poisons were restricted to adults, and other stringent laws enacted, the suicides would, no doubt, frequently exasperated by living females be driven to the rope, the razor, and the river, and a great source of unavailing regret would be removed from those who had the sale of those destructive agents. One effect of a license would be, that a druggist would be taken a from those who were so ignorant as to mistake laudanum for tincture of rhubarb, and oxalic acid for common salts, and who sent out from their shops all sorts of poisons in unlabelled bottles. The effect of the present system, and the want of some restriction, was shown by the fact that the population of Surrey exceeded considerably that of Manchester, and yet, from the free use of opium in the latter place, the deaths were 1600 more in seven years than in Surrey. The present system should be put an end to, and it would be destroyed if medical men would work together in the grand design of protecting their own and the interests of the public. (Cheers.) Dr. Ure, Dr. Simpson, Mr. Waugh, Mr. Hooper, Mr. Edwards, and other gentlemen, also addressed the meeting; and a committee, consisting of the most influential members of the profession, was appointed for the purpose of collecting evidence with which to go to Parliament for an alteration in the present system.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS.—Births registered in London during the week ending Saturday, October 6, 1152. Deaths during the same period, 1290. The number of deaths again exhibits an important decrease on the previous week. Since the commencement of September, when the total deaths were 1700, mortality has steadily declined, and is now, happily, not much in excess of the rate that usually prevails in the last quarter of the year. Cholera has fallen more rapidly than it increased, for during last week the deaths registered were 362, and the fourth week of its decline which differs not much from the number returned about eight weeks after it attained its greatest fatality. Diarrhœa and fever also decrease, but more slowly. It will be observed, however, that the deaths from these two forms of disease last week, namely, 146, are hardly the numerous than those of part of the years 1846 and 1847, when the periodical increase was unusually great. In St. Giles's, only one death from cholera was registered last week; in East London, West London, and city of London, the deaths were 12, those in the previous week from cholera having been 26; in Lambeth, the deaths in two weeks have fallen from 50 to 24. It appears in Pentonville, in some other district is the recent improvement is not remarkable. Other epidemics, with the exception of typhus, are near the average. With references to small-pox, Mr. Ho.. states that he has registered only two deaths in the hospital for this disease (in Camden Town sub-district) in three months. Within this period, the house has been nearly empty, at one time there was but a single patient, and all the cases were of a mild form. A man of sixty-two years died in August of "exhaustion" (according to the coroner's verdict.)

METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS.—The mean height of the barometer in the week was 29.471; the mean temperature was 51 deg 2 min. less than the average of the same week in seven years by about two degrees. The temperature was considerably lower than in previous weeks; and on some days rain fell heavily.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"M. P."—"Rugby Boy," and others.—The new REGISTERED Chess-men are sold in a box, each box having a label at the bottom outside, with the price of the set and the signature "H. Staunton" on it; and the public are particularly cautioned not to purchase any sets of Chess-men which may be offered as the new pattern, without seeing that the above label is attached.

"G. T."—Club-players have been so long accustomed to the ponderous and gigantic Chess-men now in use, that many will not readily change them. The advantages of the new pieces are, however, so palpable, that they must ultimately prevail over habit and prejudice too. Inquire of any dealer in Chess-men. The manufacturers only supply the trade.

"Bellamy."—A much more obvious solution of the German Problem suggests itself in—1. B to Q Kt 5th (ch), and then Q takes Kt (ch), mating next move. We shall be glad of a few more examples from the same periodical: many of those sent are unusually clever. Have you yet discovered the key to the following: White: K at his Kt 5th, R at K 2d, B's at Q B 7th and Q R 2d, P's at K B 3d and Q 3d; Black: K at his sq, B at K 2d—White mates in 3 moves.

"R. R."—The Berlin Chess Magazine may be subscribed for through the well-known foreign booksellers, Williams and Norgate, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden.

"M. K."—"Paris.—A moiety of the desired volumes was sent to the London publisher of La Régence some days since. The remainder shall be forwarded to the party named.

"H. R."Chester.—We never heard of such a rule, and are quite certain it never was adopted by any authority on the game.

"Φιλος," Bridport.—It is unpracticable, since the Black Kt may be interposed, and thus protracts the mate.

"Φιλος," Oxford.—1. An easy mate in three moves, by first moving the King to Q B 6th. 2. The King's gambit are not considered to be safe openings; but the Scotch gambit may be securely played.

"Juvenis."—See the notice below to "Edipus." "Tyro," &c. "THE TEXT-BOOK" is published at the office of the Chess-Player's Chronicle, 27, King William-street, Charing-cross.

"B. B."—The emendation is an improvement; and both pantuns now appear to us correct.

"W. C."—On referring to our last Number, you will find we have acknowledged that the Enigma in question (486) can be solved in two moves, as you suggest.

"H. C. E. C." Guernsey.—The key-move to Enigma No. 484 is—1. B to K 3d.

"F. D. M."—It is self-evident, from the utterly helpless position of the sable King.

"Brutus."—It is neither just nor gentlemanly for a player to move a Kt to three or four squares, calculating consequence, as it were, on each, before he puts down the Piece.

"Rev. J. T."—In playing without seeing the Chess-board the player is not literally blindfold, but he is unaccustomed to the mode given the moves.

"Oxford" Hall—and "Tyro."—The new treatise on Chess, by Mr. Staunton, which is given with the Registered Chess-men, can now be obtained, price 3s., of any bookseller, and as the very book for a learner, containing the laws of the game adopted by the chief clubs, an explanation of all the technical terms in use among players, and concise instructions as to the best methods of beginning and terminating a contest, printed in colours and illustrated by above fifty Diagrams.

"M. P.," Hull.—A very handsome Chess-board of the description you submit has been designed by Lenchars, of Piccadilly, to accompany the new men, and will be ready, we are told, in a few days.

"F. G. R." maybe his correspondent is Chess ("W. L.") to wrute again, the latter's address having been mislaid

"A. L." Holkham. At all times acceptable.

Solutions by "F. C." "J. T. M." "G. L." "F. R. S." "Semper Eadem," "F. G. R." "Mr. Pips," "J. L. C." "A. H. N." "Carlocs," "Dereum," "Alisa," "Rev. J. T." "Rev. R. O. M.," "M. S. R." are correct. Those by "H. C. E. C." "R. R." "Brutus," "Langshank," and "J. C. B." are wrong.

 The answers to many Correspondents are unavoidably deferred, from want of space.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM No. 298.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Kt to Q B 8th	P to K Kt 8th	2. B to K Kt 2d.	Anything
	Queens (best)	3. Kt or B mates.

PROBLEM No. 299.

By E. A. M. M., of Mhow, in India.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

BLINDFOLD CHESS.

The following is the companion game to that we gave last week, the two having been played at the same time by Mr. Harrwitz without sight of the Chess-boards.

BOARD No. II.
(Allgaier Gambit)

WHITE (Mr. Harrwitz).	BLACK (Major Barnes & Mr. G. Blackett.)	WHITE (Mr. Harrwitz).	BLACK (Major Barnes & Mr. G. Blackett.)
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	17. P to K B 5th	Kt to Q B 2d
2. P to K B 4th	P takes P	18. Q to K B sq	K to K sq
3. K Kt to B 3d	P to K Kt 4th	19. Q R to K B sq	K B to B sq
4. P to K R 4th	P to K Kt 5th	20. P to K 6th	B to Q 3d
5. Kt to K 5th	P to K R 4th (a)	21. B to K B 4th	B takes P
6. K B to Q B 4th	K R to B 2d	22. Q takes B	Q Kt to R 3d
7. P to Q 4th	P to K B 6th	23. R to K sq (c)	Q to K R 2d
8. P takes P	P to Q 3d (b)	24. R to K 3d (d)	K to B sq
9. Kt takes K R P	R takes Kt	25. R to K sq	Kt to K sq
10. B takes K (ch)	K takes B	26. P to K B 6th	Q Kt to Q B 2d
11. Q B to K Kt 5th	B to K 2d	27. P to K B 7th	B takes K P
12. P to K B 4th	K Kt to B 3d	28. P takes Kt (discovers ch)	K takes P
13. Q Kt to B 3d	P to Q R 3d	29. R takes B (ch)	Kt takes R
14. Q to Q 3d	Q to K R sq	30. R takes Kt (ch)	K to Q sq
15. P to K 5th	Kt to K sq	31. Q to Q B 8th (ch)	K to Q B 2d
16. Castles on Q side	P to Q 4th

White announced mate in five moves

(a) Q to K 3d is a move of defence at this point deserving more attention than it has hitherto received.

(b) P to K 3d is the acknowledged move here.

(c) White sustains his advanced Pawns with remarkable judgment.

(d) Hardly as much to the purpose as R to K B sq; but having a meaning, nevertheless in the protection it affords to the Q P in the event of Black's attacking that quarter with his Q's Kt.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 487.—By Mr. H. B. B., of Lynn.

White: K at Q R 7th, Rs at Q B 2d and Q Kt 4th, Kt at Q R 8th, P at Q B 7th.

Black: K at Q R 6th, R at K Kt sq, P at Q R 5th.

White to play, and mate in five moves.

No. 488.—By "CHECK IN THE EAST."

White: K at Q Kt 6th, Q at her R 4th, Bs at K Kt 5th and 8th, Kt at Q B 4th; Ps at K Kt 4th, a B 3d, and Q 2d.

Black: K at Q 5th, Q at her 4th, Rs at K 2d and Q Kt 8th, Bs at K 8th and Q Kt 6th, Kts at K K 4th and K 3d; Ps at Q 6th, Q B 4th, and Q B 7th.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

No. 489 By PERCIE.

White: K at K Kt 4th, R at K R sq, Kts at K Kt 3d and K 4th.

Black: K at his K 7th, P at K Kt 4th.

White, playing first, mates in three moves.

No. 490.—By Mr. A. HODSON.

White: K at his Q 3d, Q at her R 6th, R at Q 4th, Kt at Q B 3d, Ps at K R 3d and K Kt 4th

Black: K at his B 5th, Q at K 4th, Bs at K Kt 4th and 7th, Kt at K 3d.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

FINE SOLAR HALO.

A CORRESPONDENT has favoured us with the following from Picton, Nova Scotia: Lat. 45° 34′ 30″ North; Lon. 62° 42′ West: August 23, 1849:—

The circle marked a was visible at noon; those marked b and c were visible at 3h. 30m. P.M.: the arcs marked a and c, and that portion of the circle marked f, extending to g on each side, and to e on the other, became visible shortly afterwards. The altitude of the sun, as determined by a six-inch theodolite, was 29½°, and that of the circles a and b was 51½°, at their contact above the sun. The azimuth of the sun was 63° 20′ W. The proper on of the diameters of the circles b to a was as 3 to 2; the diameter of the circle c was of the same value as that of a; these of d and e of the same as that of b; and the diameter of circle f was the double of that of b.

The parts of the circles at their intersections a and b, and a and c, and the arcs d and e, were prismatically coloured.

No mock sun was visible, but the circles seemed to be somewhat flattened as their points of intersection. At 3h. 45m. P.M. the circles b, c, d, and e had nearly disappeared, and at this time the circle f became perfect; and at 4h. P.M. the circle a was alone seen, which continued visible till sunset.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

OXFORD.

APPOINTMENT OF A VICE-CHANCELLOR.—On Monday last, at twelve o'clock, the Vice-Chancellor, attended by the Proctors and officers of the University, and accompanied by a number of the Heads of Houses, proceeded to the Convocation House, where the Vice-Chancellor resigned his seat in a Latin speech. The Senior Proctor then read in convocation the letters of nomination, which re-nominated the Rev. Frederick Charles Plumtre, Master of University College, and being unanimously approved by the house, he was sworn and installed into office, being the second year of his holding it. The Vice-Chancellor appointed four Pro Vice-Chancellors to exercise his power in case of his illness or necessary absence from the University: viz. the Rev. Dr. Wynter, President of St. John's College; the Rev. Dr. Symons, Warden of Wadham College; the Rev. Dr. Tarde, Rector of Exeter College; the Rev. Dr. Cotton, Provost of Worcester College. The three former were re-appointed; the latter in the room of Dr. Radford, Rector of Lincoln College.

MICHAELMAS TERM.—Wednesday being the first day of Michaelmas Term, a Congregation was holden for granting Graces and conferring Degrees. The Latin sermon, previous to the commencement of term, was preached by the Rev. D. P. Chase, Vice-Principal of St. Mary Hall, on Tuesday, at St. Mary's Church. The members of several colleges and halls assemble as under:—Oct. 13, Balliol, Exeter, Lincoln, Trinity, Wadham, Pembroke, Worcester, and Christ Church; Oct. 14, University, Queen's, and St. Alban's Hall; Oct. 19, Magdalen Hall; Oct. 20, Merton, Oriel, New, Brazenose, Corpus, St. John's, Jesus, St. Mary, and New Inn Halls; Oct. 23, All Souls. Congregations will be holden for the purpose of granting graces and conferring degrees on the following days in the ensuing term, viz.: Oct. 25; Nov. 2, 15, 22, and 29; Dec. 6 and 17.

CAMBRIDGE.

DIVINITY.—The Norrisian Professor of Divinity has given notice, that his lectures in Michaelmas Term will commence on Thursday, Oct. 18, at one o'clock, and be continued at the same hour on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays throughout the term.

MEDICINE.—The medical examinations for the present term will commence on Monday, Nov. 5, at ten o'clock, in the schools under the library. Candidates for the examination are to send their names to the Regius Professor of Physic on or before Monday, Oct. 29.

MECHANICS.—The Jacksonian Professor, on Tuesday, October 23, at one o'clock, will commence a course of twenty-four lectures at the room in the Botanic Garden. The lectures will be delivered every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. The first part of the course will include the subjects of mechanism and the steam-engine. The second part of the course (to begin Nov. 20) will include statics and dynamics.

PREFERMENT.—Rev. J. P. Carey, to Rotherstorpe Rectory, Northampton, diocese Peterborough; £112; patron, Rev. W. L. Samwell.

The Dean and Chapter of Christchurch have presented the Rev. Samuel Buckland, M.A., of their society, to the Perpetual Curacy of Great Torrington, Devon, value £103 per annum.

VACANCY.—The Rectory of Hotfield, Kent, has become vacant by the death of the Rev. J. Mossop, M.A. It is worth £250 per annum, and is in the gift of the Earl of Thanet.

THE BISHOPRIC OF LLANDAFF.—We regret to say that the Right Rev. Prelate is not progressing towards convalescence in so satisfactory a manner as his friends could desire. His Lordship is in a very weak state.

RESIGNATION OF THE BISHOP OF MADRAS.—The Right Rev. Dr. G. J. Spencer, one of our oldest colonial Bishops, has intimated his intention of no longer presiding over the diocese of Madras, in consequence of his impaired health. The Venerable Archdeacon Dealtry, who for some years held the Archdeaconry of Calcutta, has been appointed to the successor of Dr. Spencer and will proceed to his distant diocese in the course of a few weeks.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.—At the monthly (October) meeting of the members of this society, the Bishop of London in the chair, the sum of £1000 was voted towards the restoration of the cathedral at Toronto; and grants of a liberal character were made to several of the colonial dioceses; also sixty-five grants of books and tracts were made to leading libraries and schools at home. Donations to the amount of £3764 9s. (inclusive of £3251 4s. 8d.) to the Jubilee Fund, and legacies to the amount of £1600, were announced, and twenty-eight gentlemen were elected members of the society.

MEANWOOD CHURCH.

THE population of the parish of Leeds was returned in the last census at upwards of a hundred and fifty-two thousand; being more than double that of our metropolitan parish of Bethnal-green, in which ten modern churches are completed or in progress. The Vicar of Leeds, therefore, in seeking to divest himself of some of the pastoral anxieties of so overwhelming a charge, has acted in a highly commendable spirit, and the manner in which his object has been promoted in the present case, is most exemplary and munificent.

The village of Meanwood is seated in a rich valley, near Leeds, and not far from the interesting ruins of Kirkstall Abbey. The locality furnishes an excellent stone for building (known under the general designation of Bramley Fall, and of which the magnificent railway propylæum of Euston-square affords a good example); and the population is partly composed of the hardy and industrious class, who derive from the toil of the quarry their principal means of subsistence.

Meanwood Park was the residence of Sir John Beckett, Bart., the eminent and respected banker at Leeds; and his daughters Mary and Elizabeth (sisters of the second Baronet) continue to reside in the mansion.

In this great, though unostentatious liberality of these ladies that the newly-formed parish owes its separate existence, the endowment of its minister and the erection of a convenient and substantial vicarage. The crowning feature of their benefaction, however, is the Church represented by our Engraving, and which we shall describe in detail.

It is in the First Pointed, or Lancet Gothic style; and while externally a simple, but impressively characteristic composition is presented, the interior is studded with objects of the most graceful embellishments.

The walls are constructed of stone, well wrought, both inside and out; and, to our mind, a building is formed of native material, appropriated to the highest purpose, and treated in a way that indicates the devotedness of every one concerned in its erection, is well calculated to become an object of deep and peculiar veneration with the inhabitants.

REMARKABLE AURORA BORRALIS SEEN FROM THE DÆDALUS, IN THE ATLANTIC OCEAN, AUG. 9, 1849.

The plan is cruciform, without aisles; and above the cross rises a belfry tower, whose lines are continued downwards by bold buttresses; and the steeple is completed by a broach spire, with some picturesque accessories.

The western side of the Church is flanked by square turret buttresses, with corbelings and pyramided roofs, finished with metal crosses. Between these turrets is a series of arcaded panelling; over which is a rose window; and, higher in the gable, a pointed oval or vesica piscis.

Entering the edifice by the porch on the south side, the eye is attracted by the delicate and elaborate font; and in the western extremity of the nave is an organ case, of bold delineation, and designed and treated with great artistic care. The carvings have a peculiar richness and freedom; and, in conjunction with the diapered and burnished metal-work, give to this conspicuous object an appropriateness and beauty rarely equalled.

Turning our view to the eastward, the lofty walls and the high-arched timber roof, receding by well-marked severies through the whole length of the building, and aided by the bold arches of the tower and chancel, carry the eye by a pleasing perspective to the fine eastern triplet window, which throws the chancel, as it were, into a superior light, and relieves the massy articles of church furniture, clustered hereabout, and on which the architect appears to have exercised the most assiduous and successful attention—so much so, that, instead of confining his superintendence to the general fabric, the pulpit, the reading-desk, the stalls, the altar railing, the communion tabernacles, the table, and even the decoration writing and embroidery, bear the unmistakeable impress of the same pencil.

The architect is Mr. Railton, of Regent-street, London.

We understand that Mr. George Bridgart, of Derby, an experienced builder, had the general contract for the work; but the ornamental portions have been chiefly executed in London, by well-skilled artists, long accustomed to the architect's almost constant guidance.

The consecration was appointed to take place on Saturday last.

REMARKABLE AURORA.

We have been favoured by a Correspondent with the accompanying Sketch of a remarkable Aurora Borealis, seen, on the 9th of August, 1849, on the Atlantic, in lat. 25° N., long. 22° W.; wind northerly. A dark but thin long mass of clouds, separated by a slight stripe of glittering light from the horizon, and surmounted by several halos, or wide rays of light, ascending from a common centre of light below the horizon, produced a very strange effect, and one worthy of observation.

The same Correspondent describes another Aurora Borealis, seen, on the 5th of September, 1849, off Basque Island, in the top of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The remarkable feature here observed was an arc of light extending from N.W. to S.E. right across the heavens.

THE HONOURABLE ABBOTT LAURENCE.

This gentleman has just been appointed Minister from the United States to St. James's, and arrived by the Europa, Royal mail-steamer, at Liverpool, on Sunday.

THE HON. ABBOTT LAURENCE.

The Hon. Mr. Laurence was born in the state of Massachusetts, U.S., on the 13th of December, 1792. He received a liberal education, and at the age of 16, left his native town, and took up his residence in Boston. In a few years, he entered into partnership with his brother, as an importing merchant. Mr. Laurence has several times visited Europe, and has thus obtained a correct knowledge of foreign life and manners. The change of policy on the part of the United States' Government, in 1815, led to a change in Mr. Laurence's business views, and he forthwith aimed at establishing a great home manufacturing district. Lowell was the place selected: here he commenced building factories for the manufacture of calicoes; and although but comparatively few years have elapsed since the first establishment was raised, Lowell now numbers more than four hundred factories: the population of the city is about forty thousand; and, at the present time, it is one of the fastest growing cities in America. In November, 1839, Mr. Laurence was elected a member of the United States Congress, and the following four years fulfilled the duties of his office in the most satisfactory manner to his constituents. In 1842, Mr. Laurence was appointed one of the commissioners on the part of the state of Massachusetts, to aid in the negotiation of the North-eastern Boundary question, when he very ably performed that most arduous duty. In 1843 he again visited England, and was warmly received in some of the first circles of the metropolis. For many years his business has been very prosperous; he has amassed great wealth, and is styled "the American Merchant Prince."

He is remarkably liberal; and among his munificent donations is one of fifty thousand dollars to Harvard University, for the purpose of founding a scientific school. He has also aided much in founding churches, public schools, &c.; and his charities have been largely and judiciously bestowed. He has just been appointed by the President of the United States to the responsible post of Minister to England, which station he will, doubtless, adorn and uphold.

MEANWOOD NEW CHURCH, NEAR LEEDS.

MACBETH, MR. MACREADY. MACDUFF, MR. WALLACK.

SCENE FROM "MACBETH," AT THE HAYMARKET THEATRE.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.

The re-appearance at this Theatre on Monday of Mr. Macready, in the character of Macbeth, commencing therewith the series of his farewell engagements, is the great theatrical event of the week. Mr. Macready was welcomed by an overflowing house, and his reception was most enthusiastic. Each man appeared to be the friend of the performer, such was the spontaneous nature of the applause. That Mr. Macready is the greatest of living actors, seems now to be generally admitted. Those who are most inimical to his style, are willing to concede thus much ; impairing, perhaps, the value of the concession by a statement of general contempt for the present condition of the histrionic profession. In this, however, there is much antiquated prejudice. The amount of talent, both male and female, at present on the stage, is very large. Never was it more easy to get a working company together; and, even in the highest rôles, time and opportunity are only wanting to beget a taste in the public for more than one candidate now out of work. Young talent is daily springing up ; and there is every reason to hope that, with the enlargement of the arena, genius will not only find an increased market, but itself multiply with the demand for its production and exhibition. Mr. Macready must be looked on rather as the last survivor of the old school of acting than as the head of the new. The traditions of the stage cling to him, and his style is a kind of compromise between the Kean and Kemble schools, with some traces of Talma superinduced. From these sources, Mr. Macready seems to have contracted a composite style, which, highly artificial as it is, required incessant caution in the artist to conceal. For many years we saw this style forming, and could, on fit occasion, chronicle its different phases and modifications. It was not until he was lessee of Drury-Lane that Mr. Macready's manner became thoroughly fixed. There was much unsteadiness in it during his Covent-Garden management. We recollect that in the character of Prospero he could not make up his mind how the celebrated "cloud-capped tower" speech should be delivered. One night, it was familiar ; another, grandiloquent. His mind, too, was then struggling between the melodramatic and legitimate. He was half-convinced that the public were in favour of the former ; and could not, to the end, disabuse himself of the impression that spectacle was necessary (not expedient merely) to dramatic success. Hence his errors and his losses in those most disastrous experiments. We have lived to become wiser than Mr. Macready on these topics. We now known by experience, that, however aidant decoration may be to the stage, the sheet anchor of a theatre lies in a good working company, with due attention to the mise en scène, and a dependible regularity in the production of novelties or well-studied revivals. In the last the main attraction has lain in the restoration of the poet's text ; and the time will come, and that soon, when the most powerful inducement to see a Shakspearian drama will be, that it is acted in its integrity, without a single passage being omitted. We shall expect to see "Hamlet," with the whole background of Fortinbras restored, the omission of which is a serious injury to the acting effect of that admirable tragedy. To allow for the length, one five act piece only should be performed during the evening ; consequent upon which principle the classification of theatres, so desirable, will ensue. Our modern dramatic poets will then have that "ample room and verge enough," which gave to the old tragic writers such opportunity for the display of that inexhaustible variety which marks the highest genius. But to return to Mr. Macready's Macbeth. We are of those who always saw a radical defect in the stage representations of this hero, and who require the nobility of character and the courage to be exhibited which Shakspeare predicates of him in the earlier scenes of the play. Macbeth is not ambitious, but pursues a lost right, which he is urged by the ambition of his wife to revive. The full detail of the circumstances would, however, have appeared to justify too much the murder of Duncan ; and Shakspeare, therefore, only glances at them in the nomination of Malcolm as the successor to the throne—

> That is a step
> On which I must fall down, or else o'er-leap

And Macbeth does over-leap it, aiming at a right end by wrong means; means, as Lady Macbeth truly states, alien to his nature, though not to hers. Here is the source of antagonism between Macbeth's purpose and the remorse with which it is accomplished : neither, that of a vulgar homicide ; but both, those of a noble mind compelled, as it were by his destiny, to commit an abhorrent deed for a justifiable end. The Weird-sisters are the embodiment of this destiny. We therefore protest altogether against that prostration of soul and body with which Mr. Macready and others invest Macbeth throughout the first two acts of the play. It is a profane mistake, reducing the "noble, brave" and "peerless" Ideal of Shakspere to the level of a melo-dramatic murderer. It is too late now to call on Mr. Macready to amend his conception ; but we record ours for the benefit of his successors. Making allowance for this misinterpretation, Mr. Macready's performances on Monday was marked by his usual force of exertion. No decline of power was suggested, except in the appearance of extra effort to maintain the general effect ; in which, also, Mrs. Warner, as Lady Macbeth, was as conspicuous an offender. They both suffered in voice from untimely exertion. The three Witches were strongly cast—Mr. Stuart, Mr. Biand, and Mr. Selby being their representatives. The first-named gentleman was appropriately impressive. Mr. Wallack was the Macduff, looking it to admiration, but wanting the requisite passion for the fourth act. The plaudits of the audience were frequent and vehement ; and at the conclusion of the performance, Mr. Macready was summoned to receive the last honour of the evening before the curtain. Mrs. Warner and Mr. Wallack were afterwards recalled.

On Wednesday, the tragedy of "Hamlet" was performed. Here, Mr. Macready is more true to the Shakspearian ideal ; and we have, accordingly, to express our "unmitigated satisfaction" with his embodiment of the princely student. Mrs. Warner's Gertrude, also, retained its usual excellence. The house was crowded.

We have engraved the situation in the last scene immediately before the fight :—

> Macduff. Turn, hell-hound, turn !
> Macbeth. Of all men else I have avoided thee:
> But get thee back, my soul is too much charged
> With blood of thine already.

CENOTAPH TO THE MEMORY OF CAPT. M. L. DOSTAL, AT SOURABAYA, IN JAVA.

In our Journal for November 11, 1848, we gave a brief obituary of Captain Dostal, of the Netherlands army, who fell in the attack on Djaga Raga, on Bally, in the island of Java, in June, 1848 ; and the accompanying Engraving represents the Cenotaph erected to his memory in the new Cemetery at Sourabaya, in the same island.

The Cenotaph bears the character of a small temple, of the Doric order, and having a dome ; and as the bases of the pillars rest on a plinth about three feet from the ground, and which plinth in fact is the upper surface of the tomb, the pillars and dome form a canopy over the warrior's grave. The inscription to the memory of Captain Dostal is engraved on a brass plate, bedded on the upper surface of the tomb ; and on the small slab of marble, shown in our view between two of the piers, is an inscription to the memory of an infant son of the deceased. The device on the gate in the railing round the tomb is strictly emblematic of the soldier, and the Cenotaph has been much admired by the civil and military authorities at Sourabaya for its simplicity and neatness. The effect of the memorial is greatly heightened by a fine background of cocoa-nut, plantain, and mangoe trees, with thickly clustered bushes of bamboo.

CENOTAPH TO CAPT. M. L. DOSTAL, AT SOURABAYA, ISLAND OF JAVA.

FRONT OF SUN-FISH.

LARGE SUN-FISH.

To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

WHILE lying in Little Killary Bay, on the coast of Connemara, in her Majesty's surveying ketch Sylvia, we caught a large fish, of which the enclosed is a representation, drawn on the spot by Mr. J. E. Davis R.N. We were attracted by a large fin above the surface, moving with an oscillatory motion, somewhat resembling the action of a man sculling at the stern of a boat ; and knowing it to be an unusual visitor, we immediately got up the harpoon and went in chase. In the meantime, a country boat came up with the poor animal, and its crew inflicted upon it sundry blows with whatever they could lay their hands on—oars grappling, stones, &c.—but were unsuccessful in taking it; and it disappeared for some few minutes, when its gaping exhibited itself on the other side of the bay. The dull and stupid animal permitted us to place our boat immediately over it, and made no effort to escape. The harpoon never having been sharpened, glanced off without effect; but another sailor succeeded in securing it by the tail with a boat-hook, and passing the bight of a rope behind its fins, we hauled it on shore, under Salrock House, the residence of General Thompson, who, with his family, came down to inspect this strange-looking inhabitant of the sea. We were well nonsed by the splashing of its fins, and a dozen hands succeeded in transporting this heavy creature from its native abode to the shore, where it passively died, giving only an occasional movement of its fins, or uttering a kind of grunt.

LARGE SUN-FISH, CAUGHT ON THE COAST OF CONNEMARA.

This animal, I believe, is a species of the Sun-fish (Orthagoriscus). It has no bony skeleton; nor did we, in our rather hasty dissection, discover any osseous structure whatever, except (as we were informed by one who afterwards inspected it) that there was one which stretched between the large fins. Its jaws also had bony terminations, unbroken into teeth, and parrot-like, which, when not in use, are hidden by the encroachments of the gums. The form of the animal is preserved by an entire cartilaginous case, of about three inches thickness covered by a kind of shagreen skin, so amalgamated with the cartilage as not to be separated from it. This case is easily penetrable with a knife, and is of nearly uniform thickness throughout, resembling in colour and texture than anything else I can compare it with. The interior cavity, containing the vital part, terminates a little behind the large fins, where the cartilage was solid, to its tapered extremity, which is without a caudal fin. Within, and around the back part, lay the flesh, of a coarse fibrous texture, slightly salmon-coloured. The liver was such as to fill a common pail, and there was a large quantity of red blood. The nostril, top of the eye, and top of the gill-orifice are in line, as represented in the Sketch. The dimensions are as under:—

Eye round, and like that of an ox, 2½ inches diameter. Gill-orifice, 4 by 2½ inches. Dorsal and anal fins equal, 2 ft. 8 in. long, by 1 ft. 3 in. wide. Pectoral fins, 10 in. high by 8 broad. Length of fish, 6 ft. Depth, from the extremities of the large fins, 7 ft. 4 in. Extreme breadth at the swelling under the eye, only 20 in. Weight, 6 cwt. 42 lb.

I am, &c.,

Galway, Oct. 4. GEORGE AUGUSTUS BEDFORD, Commander, R.N.

THE THEATRES.

NEW STRAND.

M. Scribe's tragedy, founded on the story of the celebrated French actress of the eighteenth century, Adrienne Lecouvreur, has furnished Mr. Oxenford with a theme of a new three-act piece, under the title of "The Ringside Favourite," which was produced on Tuesday night, and received with considerable favour. A love affair with the famous Marshal de Saxe, then a Count, who was similarly related at the time to a lady of quality, who is supposed to have been instigated by jealousy to poison the mysterious woman. This lady, in the drama, is elevated to a Princess—the Princess Boski, a handsome and licentious coquette, with a rake for a husband. This worthy pair are indifferent to each others amours, and are thus ready for any intrigue that offers. The instrument of vengeance employed by the lady in the play is a poisoned bouquet, which, before it kills, has the power of elevating the mind of the victim into a highly imaginative state of delirium: a scene which is, of course, left for the final effect. The introductory part of the drama is rather of a comic character—familiar dialogue, with a vein of sentiment running through it. This feeling in the part, confided to Mr. Farren, is connected with senility, and produces an affecting picture of love in age, embodied admirably by the actor's art. Michanet, the prompter of the Comédie Française, has to struggle with an affection for Adrienne which his years make ridiculous. Nevertheless, he sacrifices his fortunes to procure her lover's release, adding his store to the produce of her jewels, in order to make up the requisite sum. (The fact of Adrienne thus releasing the Count de Saxe is historical.) Mrs. Stirling was the heroine—an ambitious rôle indeed, Mdlle. Rachel having been the original representative of the character on the French stage. She has two powerful scenes—one in the Princess' salon, in wh ch Adrienne recites verses from Racine's "Phèdre," which expose the lady's delinquency in the presence of her guests and the other when expressing the different phases of delirium in language borrowed from Corneil.e's "Psyche." Mrs. Stirling never appeared to greater advantage than in those scenes. The piece was deservedly successful.

SURREY.

Sir Bulwer Lytton's play of "Richelieu" has been acted all the week at this theatre, in a manner which reflects great credit on the management. The scenery, costumes, and stage groupings are all in good taste. Many passages in the text of the play, previously omitted in all representations of it, have been restored, on account of their poetic beauty; and the success of their delivery by Mr. Creswick fully justified their introduction. Richelieu is one of this actor's best parts, and he performed it with great and startling effect. At the end of the fourth act he was recalled before the curtain, such was the impression he had made on his audience. Mr. Mead's Baradas was a vigorous performance; and Mr. Shepherd's Count de Mauprat, a pleasing representation of juvenile ardour. Francois was entrusted to Miss Dickenson, who supported the part ummably. The Julie of Madame Fomist was exceedingly pleasing. The play was triumphantly reproduced.

MARYLEBONE.

Mr. Kemble's play of "The Point of Honour" was enacted here on Wednesday, with Mr. Davenport as Dorimel, in which he was successful.

MR. VANDENHOFF is about to give Readings from Shakespeare, at the Marylebone Literary and Scientific Institution, Portman-square.

MUSIC.

THE LATE HERR STRAUSS.

The decease of the eminent composer of dance-music, Herr Strauss, is much to be regretted. In the Illustrated London News of the 7th of last May, a portrait of Johann Strauss was published. He had a most successful season in London this year, being his second visit to this country, having been here eleven years previously. He returned to Vienna, and died of scarlet fever, in his forty-sixth year, being born at Vienna, the 14th of March, 1804. He was buried at Doelling, a village near Vienna, where the remains of Lanner, his rival, are interred. Lanner died about five or six years before Strauss. An impressive procession attended the funeral of the inimitable waltz writer. Strauss was brought up as a bookbinder, but at the age of nineteen he was admitted by Lanner, who was only two years his senior in age, into his orchestra. The gentleman's career was, however so apparent, that his separation from Lanner, and the formation of the famed Strauss's band, followed speedily. Mrs. Trollope, in her "Vienna and the Austrians," thus writes of the rivalry of Lanner and Strauss in 1836:—

"Vienna is, in truth, just now suffering severely from the rivalry of the Waltzes; and rococo Handel, Mozart, Hadyn, and the like are banished from 'ears polite,' while Strauss and Lanner rule the hour. Nevertheless, there is not one to whom you can speak on the subject, but will express the most hearty scorn of the waltz in honour of their immortal composers. Yet still, Strauss and Lanner write and play on, while all the world listens and applauds. A pretty waltz, well played, has great charms; and till now I have always considered that I had rather an overwhelming liking for this species of composition; but I am now fain to confess that I am weary of it, and would much rather have visited Vienna when every garden, every theatre, and every ball-room echoed to the solid hymn of Handel."

Mrs. Trollope's classical taste is unobjectionable; but she is wrong in the estimate she formed of the success of Strauss and Lanner. If we are to have dance music, secondary as it may be to the higher class of music, it is desirable that it should be of the best style. Strauss completely revolutionised the world of dance music; and, as an innovator, of extraordinary invention and facility, he merits the immortality his compositions will confer upon him. Lanner was a composer of waltz writers, and he raised the standard of taste of the dancing masses, by his fanciful inspirations. He made them sensible of the finesse of exquisite instrumentation—of the artistic combination of the syncopated dance, of which he was the inventor, and of novel rhythm. The melodies of Strauss were intensely passionate as well as joyful; his music, as Berlioz has justly remarked, was as full of melancholy as of mirth, and provoked a tear as often as smiles. Here in London we know how picturesque was his orchestration, and how wonderful was the precision with which he conducted his soul as well as feet-stirring themes. If there had been no Strauss, we should never have had Musard or Jullien. Many of imitators have sprung up since Strauss, but to him will remain the glory of originality, fancy, feeling, and invention.

FOREIGN MUSICAL NEWS.

(Private Correspondence.)

PARIS, Wednesday.

The new three-act opera, by MM. Scribe and Saint Georges, "La Fée aux Roses," the music composed by the composer of "La Jaive," "Guido et Ginevra," "Charles VI.," "L'Eclair," "Les Monquetaires de la Reine," "La Val d' Andore," &c., has been produced with the greatest success at the Théâtre National de l'Opéra Comique. The subject taken from the fairy lore of Mother Bunch, indicates, it is a fairy piece. Néraïda is the slave of a magician, Atabuzet; and she is so passionately attached to flowers, particularly roses, that the necromancer creates her Queen of the flowers, on the condition, however, that, if she should fall in love, and disclose her passion to the favoured object, she is to be transformed into an old decrepid woman. Néraïda, of course, disobeys the proviso, by love-making with a Prince of Ithis, and she pays the penalty by becoming a very ugly old fairy; but, ultimately, her youth and beauty are restored, by the influence of what may be termed counter-irritation—a kiss from the young Sultan, through talismanic agency, being the medium of winter being again supplanted by spring. The librettists have ingeniously interwoven with the above plot another incident of the love of the Princess Guinare, affianced to the Sultan, but who is attached to one of his Ministers, and thus enables the reigning Sovereign to marry Néraïda.

Halévy has composed charming music for this new work; and, as may be imagined, it is beautifully scored. There is a fine overture, in the symphonic form. The air of Néraïda, with clarionet obbligato, in the first act, was excellently sung by Madame Ugalde. There is also a remarkable trio. The concerted finale to the fairy changes is full of spirit. The air of the tenor (the Sultan) in the second act was much admired; and Néraïda has a delightful cavatina. A delicate quintet is also in this act, and a buffo duo, between Guinare and the Visier. A grand air of the Magician, for basso, and Néraïda's music, in the last act, are remarkable pieces

Madame Ugalde's success was immense; her vocalisation is wonderful. Batiille, the basso, shared the vocal honours with Madame Ugalde. The opera will no doubt have a great run.

The Italian Opera House will not open before next month. Ronconi is the director.

M. Meyerbeer has arrived here from Vienna; his "Prophète" will be revived shortly at the Grand Opera, with Madame Viardot, Madame Castellan, and M Roger.

Berlioz has just completed a grand religious work.

It is rumoured that Meyerer's "Camp of Silesia" will be mounted at the Opéra Comique, for Madame Ugalde.

MUSICAL EVENTS.—The Western Madrigal Society, under the presidency of J Evans, Esq., and G. Budd, Esq., hon. secretary, will commence the season the first Saturday in November (the 3rd). There are several applicants to join the society. A visit, by the way, to the National Hall, Holborn, will be interesting to the Madrigalian amateur. Several members of the chorus of the Royal Italian Opera have combined to give concerts every Wednesday in that locality, at which glees and madrigals may be heard artistically executed by an effective choir. It is also worthy of mention, that at the Western Literary Institution, Leicester-square, the practice of glee-singing on Monday evenings has commenced.—Mr. G. Tedder, a vocalist, gave a concert on Monday evening, at the Horns Tavern, Kennington.—Signor Ronconi will sing at the first of the London Wednesday Concerts, at Exeter Hall, on the 24th inst., of which Mr. Stammers is the director.—Mdlle. Jetty de Treffz is engaged as the vocal star of Jullien's Promenade concerts, which will be given at Drury-lane Theatre next month.—Mr. Costa is rusticating at the Isle of Wight, preparatory to the commencement of his arduous labours for the season 1849-50, as conductor of the Sacred Harmonic Society, the Philharmonic Society, and Royal Italian Opera.—Madame Sontag is singing at concerts at Edinburgh and Glasgow.—Mr. Balfe is at Frankfort, at which place his opera of the "Bohemian Girl" is to be performed, under his direction.—Mdlle. Lind, after a sojourn of some months at Colcorne and Erra, has returned to Sweden.—Mdme. Castellan is engaged for the Royal Italian Opera season of 1850; Mdlle. de Meric, now in St. Petersburgh, is to be the contralto.—Mr. Lumley has been in Paris, organising for the next season's campaign at Her Majesty's Theatre.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The racing community will have time to recruit themselves, after the fatigues of the second October meeting, the week intervening between that and the Houghton, or "hay and straw" meeting, being "blank." It is not much to the credit of the managers of the Isley and Leek races, that they should have selected the Houghton week for their races, instead of the open one. The coursing commencements include Caldecotte, and Wiltshire Champion, both to commence on Tuesday; the latter will occupy five days, with the certainty of plenty of excellent sport. A more favourable spot for enjoying it, and renovating the health, cannot be found than her Majesty's down-mutton. The steeple-chase season will commence on Thursday, with the Edgeware Trial Meeting.

TATTERSALL'S.—No betting this week.

NEWMARKET SECOND OCTOBER MEETING.—MONDAY.

HANDICAP SWEEPSTAKES of 50 sovs each.—Lord Clifden's Wallflower (G. Brown), 1. Mr. Ferrell Puece (Rodney), 2.

SWEEPSTAKES of 50 sovs each.—Mr. Greville's Clarisa (Flatman), 1. Colonel Peel's Irish Jig (F. Butler), 2.

SWEEPSTAKES of 200 sovs each. Lord Orford's Fire-King (Flatman), 1. Duke of Bed ord's Quasimodo (F. Butler), 2.

SWEEPSTAKES of 300 sovs each. Duke of Bedford's Sobraon walked over.

SWEEPSTAKES of 100 sovs each. Lord Clifden's Surpasse walked over.

TUESDAY.

SWEEPSTAKES of 500 sovs each.—Duke of Bedford's Sobraon (F. Butler), 1 Mr. Payne's Gaulyon (Flatman), 2.

CRAVEN STAKES of 50 sovs each, with 200 added.—Lord Stanley's Legerdemain (Hiett), 1. Mr. Meikham's Ruby (Arnold), 2.

CLEARWELL STAKES of 30 sovs each Mr. H. Bradshaw's Clincher (Marlow), 1. Captain Deime's Silk flower (R. Cotton), 2.

ROYAL STAKES of 200 sovs. each. Lord Orford's Fire-King (Robinson), 1. Colonel Anson's Champion (F. Butler), 2.

WEDNESDAY.

SWEEPSTAKES of 50 sovs each.—Duke of Richmond's Officious walked over.

SWEEPSTAKES of 10 sovs each.—Colonel Peel's f. by Glendower out of Isabella, 1. Mr. Merry's Countess (W. Oates), 2.

THE TOWN PLATE of £50.—Mr. Death's Antagonist (W. Abdale), 1. Mr. Drinkald's Sister Ann (Marlow), 2.

HANDICAP SWEEPSTAKES of 15 sovs each.—Mr. Udumny's Young Bamboo (Pettit), 1. Sir J. Hawley's Stang (Templeman), 2.

THE ROYAL STAKES of 50 sovs each.—Lord Exeter's Natshell (Marlow), 1. Mr. Neville's f. by Nutwith out of Agnes (Sly), 2.

THURSDAY.

SWEEPSTAKES of 10 sovs each; winner to be sold for £300.—Philosopher, 1. Rienbrai, 2.

SWEEPSTAKES of 10 sovs each; winner to be sold for £150.—Blondeize, 1. General Seddize, 2.

SWEEPSTAKES of 200 sovs each; T.Y.C. The Hero, 1. Cora, 2.

HANDICAP PLATE.—Wanota, 1. Tarn Wadlin, 2

THE BERTHY STAKES of 100 sovs each.—Lord Chesterfield's f by Don John out of Lampoon (Flatman), 1. Sir J. Hawley's Tingle, 2.

FRIDAY

SWEEPSTAKES of 200 sovs each. Mr. Goodwood walked over.

HANDICAP of 20 sovs each. T.Y.C.—Fuoco, 1. Bishop of Romford's Cob, 2.

MATCH.—The Wren received forfeit from Sparrowhawk.

SWEEPSTAKES for two-year-olds.—Eunuch, 1. Buzz fly, 2.

MATCH.—Slyson beat Goodwood.

THE FRENDERGAST STAKES.—Bolingbroke, 1. Nutshell, 2.

CHALLENGE EXTRAORDINAIRE.—The Jockey Club have received, through the medium of the English Consul-General in Egypt, a challenge from the Pacha to run a match for £10,000, to come off in Egypt; ten miles, the club to send as many horses and to put up what weight they please.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS FOR THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

The uncertainty existing upon the Turkish question, with the small amount of business transacted, has caused dulness to prevail in the English Market during the past week. Consols have fluctuated only between 93¾ and 94¾, closing at the lower quotation. The state of the foreign markets has produced a slightly improving effect upon prices on Wednesday it being coupled with a belief that the Turkish question would be ultimately settled amicably. Consols quoted 93¾ for Money, and 93¾ for the Account. The excess of amount of money in circulation, arising from the payment of the dividends to-day which is usually anticipated by the jobbers, who make a price for investments, has, at once, caused a slight improvement in the favourable feeling, and until confidence is re-established. At the close of the week there was rather more animation, prices standing for—Bank Stock, 196 ex d.; Reduced Annuities, 91¾ x d.; Consols, 93¾; New 3 per Cents, 93¾; Long Annuities, 9 7-16 x d.; India Bonds, £1000, 79 p.; Ditto, under £1000, 82 p.; Consols for Account, 93¾; Exchequer Bills, £1000, 64 p.; Ditto, £500, 64 p.; Small, June, 64 p.

Business in the Foreign Market has been on the most limited scale; prices, notwithstanding, as the week advanced, becoming tolerably firm, without any marked improvement, except in Peruvian Deferred, which, on Tuesday, improved to 19¾. This price has been since well maintained. Buenos Ayres Stock appears to have received the sudden fall of last week. There has not, however, been much doing in it since. The last prices of the other securities dealt in are—Spanish Bonds, 89 ex. div.; Mexican Five per Cents., 1846, ex. Coupons (Account), 25¾; Peruvian Bonds, Four per Cent., 53¾ ex. div.; Ditto, Deferred, 19¾; Portuguese Five per Cents, Converted (Account), 29¾; Ditto, Four per Cent., 20; Ditto, Annuities, 3; Russian Bonds, 105¾; Dutch Certificates, 74; Ditto, Account, 34¾; Venezuela, Deferred, 6¾; Belgian, Four-and-a-Half per Cent., 87¾; Dutch, Two-and-a-Half per Cent., 54; Ditto, Four per Cent. Certificates, 82¾ ex. div.

Shares were quiet at the opening of the week; but, at the close, are at depression existed, arising from the continued in ing off in the rails. Great Western, 84; Ditto, Half Shares, 41¾; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 20¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Shares, 62¾; Ditto, New, 19; Ditto, Fifths, 4; Ditto, Tenths, 2; Ditto, Twentieths, 1; Ditto, Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Eightieths, ¼; Ditto, Half New, 6; Ditto, Quarter New, ¾; Ditto, Eighth New, ¼; Ditto, Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Tenths, ¼; Ditto, Twentieths, ¼; Ditto, Fortieths, ¼; Ditto, Eightieths, ¼; Ditto, Half Fifths, ¼; Ditto, Half Tenths, ¼; Ditto, Half Twentieths, ¼; Ditto, Half Fortieths, ¼; Ditto, Half Eightieths, ¼; Ditto, Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fifths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Tenths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Twentieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Fortieths, ¾; Ditto, Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Eightieths, ¾; Ditto, Half Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-Quarter Three-

ADVERTISEMENTS.

MADEIRA.—YATES'S FAMILY HOTEL.

ROYAL HOTEL, LOWESTOFT.—GEORGE WOUSE respectfully infor... since to the delightful Watering-... that the abo... Five Acres each, and for the ... ing apartments it will be found to equal Hotels of the first character in the kingdom. Hot, Cold, and Shower Baths of Fresh and Salt Water, Look-up Coach-houses, Post-horses and Post-horse

NEW ZEALAND COMPANY.—LAND.—

The Company possesses, under Crown Titles, extensive Tracts of Land in its settlements of Wellington, Nelson, New Plymouth, and Otago.

These are offered for Purchase, in Town Allotments of a Quarter Acre (Suburban, in Otago only, of Ten Acres), and Rural of Twenty-five Acres each; and for the ... ing apartments it will be found to equal Hotels of the first character in the kingdom. Hot, Cold, and Shower Baths of Fresh and Salt Water, Look-up Coach-houses, Post-horses and Post-horse

Parsha and Land held by such Applicant.

The Terms and further particulars may be obtained at No New Zealand Chambers, 4, Bridge-street, Westminster, of Sectn Hanoverstreet, Edinburgh. By order of the Court of Directors,

THOMAS CUDDEF HARINGTON.

New Zealand House, 9, Broad-street, Buildings, London, August

THE BRIGHTON SCHOOL

DIRECTOR.

Rev ROBERT WINT A.

ORIENTAL SUPERINTENDENT.

Mr. G W LEY

RESIDENT BIBLICAL TUTOR

Rev JOSIAH WILKINSON

THE GREEK AND ROMAN CLASSICS, AND ANCIENT HISTORY.

Lecturer—Rev. JOSEPH PARKER SPINK

MATHEMATICS, NATURAL PHILOSOPHY, AND CHEMISTRY.

Lecturer—Rev. JOHN EYRE ASHBY, B.A., Fellow

CLASSICAL MASTER.

Mr. WILLIAM ELLING.

FRENCH MASTER

M. LOUIS DIREY, M.A., Ex-Professor in the University of Fr...

GERMAN MASTER.

NATHAN LOWENSTEIN, Esq.

DRAWING AND WRITING MASTER

Mr. G. W. EADY

ENGLISH COMPOSITION AND COMPOSITION

Mr. EDWARD BALDWIN

JOHN REEVES, Esq. for the Pianoforte, by Mr FREDERICK CHURCHILL.

WITH RESIDENT ASSISTANT MASTERS.

EXAMINER

Rev. JOSEPH SORAIN, B.A

JOSEPH GOUGE GREENWOOD, Esq (of London), B.A.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY

Mr. EDWARD WINTER.

The course of Instruction comprises Biblical Lectures, Reading, Writing—English grammar, literature, and Composition—History—Latin and Greek Classics, and Composition—French, German, and Hebrew—Arithmetic, Algebra, Geometry, Natural Philosophy—Geography—Model and Figure Drawing, Perspective—Mental and Moral Science—Chemistry, Natural History—Singing—Book-keeping, &c.

TERMS

Lower School ... £50 per annum.

Upper do ... £70

Pupils received into the Lower Sch of from Five to Ten years of age, and, under special circumstances, a little older. In the Upper school they will be received from the age of Ten years. Those who have been two years in the Lower Schoo...l will be transferred to the Upper, without any increase of the terms.

The Terms are payable quarterly in advance. They include Books, School Requisites, Washing, Sea Bathing, Few Rent, &c., in order to avoid any extra charge.

The Mansion and School Premises are situate on the Grand Parade, and, as regards quality, extent, and completeness, are pre-eminently of an old-fashioned character.

The Domestic Department is under the immediate superintendence of an experienced housekeeper.

VACATIONS

Midsummer, 7 weeks ... Christmas ... 4 w...

A Prospectus and Papers, together with a L... Rev. Gentleman, upon application to the Director.

Grand Parade, Brighton, August 29th, 1849

THE BRIGHTON SCHOOL.—The ensuing (Half) Session will commence on Monday, October 1st. At which time the Admission of Pupils is desired to be established one week before the commencement of each session

Grand Parade ROBERT WINTER, Jun

August 29th, 1849.

THE GROS CAILLOU MAISON DE SANTE,

No 222, Rue St Dominique, Faubourg St. Germain, Paris,

FOR THE TREATMENT OF NERVOUS AND MENTAL AFFECTION.

This Establishment, founded some years since by Dr. Leuret—known to the public by the name of a work entitled "Traitement Moral des Maladies Mentales," and other effections of the Nervous System. The situation in Paris, in one of the healthiest quarters—its vast extent, and the internal arrangements of the 4 different buildings of which the establishment consists, and its various outbuildings, allow of the application of every means of treatment that the said Nervous affections require.

Two Consulting Physicians are attached to the Establishment—Dr. ... formerly Physician at the Salpetrière; and Dr. Voisin, Physician to the Hospital St. Antoine, and Professor at the Medical ... Dr. Rostan attends at the Establishment on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, from four to six o'clock in the afternoon, and visits all the patients Dr Valleix attends on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, during the like hours, and is specially entrusted with the treatment of accidents of a surgical nature.

Doctor Leuret, one of the founders and managers of the Establishment, resides on the premises, and is to be seen, more especially, from two to six o'clock daily.

ELEGANT NOVELTIES.—BROOCHES, on black ground, equal to jet, surmounted with white raised flowers with gilt centres, a most elegant novelty in Paris and now produced. Sent free by post DIRECT from Mr MARY BROUGHAM, Bathers, Staffordshire, on receipt of 7s 6d.—Parties Brooches, 5s; Shawl Pins, 3s.

BOOKBINDING with the PATENT INDIA-RUBBER BACK, which renders flexible hinges to every leaf of the book, causes it to lie flat and open freely, without strain or breaking, as in the old binding. No paste, glue, or stitching. The India-rubber cements all sheets, and is unaffected by mildew or tropical heat. All kinds of Binding, including Music, Maps, Engravings, Albums, Autographs (which can be bound in no other way) promptly executed by Mr. S. WHOLHAM, 70 Castle-street East, Berners-street, Oxford-street. The "INDIA-RUBBER BOOK BACK," strongly bound, with India-rubber Backs, in the Ornamental Gilt Covers, with ALC Edges, as per Specimen, Imperial Octavo, when completed at 1s. per Number.—A List of Prices to be had on app lication

THE STAUNTON CHESS-MEN.

Registered No. 38,057, 5th and 6th of Victoria, cap 100.

The Subscriber, pursuant to a short time, these beautiful pieces do not entirely supersede the ungainly, inexpressive ones we have been hitherto using.—See Illustrated London News, September, 1849

The Nobility and Gentry are respectfully informed that these new and elegant CHESS MEN are now obtainable of W. LEUCHARS, 38, PICCADILLY, at the following prices, viz.:—

For the Finest Ivory, richly ornamented box ... £ s d of "Staunton Pieces," and a New Treatise on the Game, by the Author of "The Chess-player's Handbook" ... 5 5 0

In Box and Rosery, Large Size for Clubs, with a Solid Mahogany Box and the New Treatise ... 2 2 0

In Wedgewood's Carrara, with the Carton Pierre Box and the New Treatise ... 1 1 0

In Box and Rosery, Ordinary Size, with the 0 15 0

Box and the New Treatise ... 0 10 6

* * To secure the Public against Fraudulent Imitations, each Box has a Label Attached, with the Autograph of the Inventor and Player after whom the Pieces are named.

MR. J. S. LUCET, PROFESSEUR de LANGUE FRANCAIS, de BELLE-LETTRES, de DECLAMATION, &c., a l'honneur d'informer ses Elèves et le public en general, que les Premieres Seances de son COURS de LITTERATURE FRANCAISE DE LOUCHTON, sur un plan tout nouveau, et entièrement approprié aux besoins de la Jeune Noblesse qui veulent tout age leur sexe et leur rang) les Lundi, Mercredi, et Samedi, de 3 a 4, 37, WILTON PLACE, PORTLAND-PLACE, du Mardi 2 Octobre, et a dix heures precises le Jeudi suivant. Les Dames auront la premiere heure exclusivement reservée pour leur Instruction. Les Dames auront aussi exclusivement les mardi et jeudi de chaque semaine, de Midi a 2 heures, et a dix heures (seules) pour les Lundi, Mercredi, et Samedi suivant

RUINS OF THE LATE FIRE AT LONDON-WALL, SKETCHED FROM CARPENTERS' HALL.

EXTENSIVE FIRE.

A FIRE broke out on Saturday night, shortly after ten o'clock, and was not extinguished until nearly one o'clock the next morning. The premises were in the occupation of Messrs. Gooch and Cousens, wool-merchants, and were situated in London-wall. They were approached by a narrow gateway; but were adjoined on one side by the ancient building termed Carpenters' Hall, and Drapers' Hall was separated from the burning building by only the garden and fore-court in front.

When the alarm was first raised the destructive element had obtained so strong a hold that the whole of the lower part of the premises was completely enveloped in flames, so that it was utterly impossible for any one to render the least assistance in saving any of the valuable contents on the premises.

The flames shot forth from the various windows, and, through the roof, ascended so high into the air as to illuminate not merely the whole of the City, but the greater portion of the eastern division of the metropolis. At the same time the heat was so intense that the chimney-pots of the houses in Drapers' and Sadlers' places were broken and sent flying in sundry directions.

In spite of the most strenuous exertions of the firemen floor after floor in the immense building continued to fall a prey to the fury of the conflagration. The firemen, by mounting the roofs of the houses in Drapers' and Sadlers' places, succeeded in saving them from total destruction. The loss of property, however, sustained by the poor people there is considerable.

As far as has been ascertained, there were close upon 4000 bales of wool in the place when the fire began, averaging from 200 lb. to 250 lb. each in weight—value £80,000.

The property destroyed by this disastrous event, unless a great amount of salvage be collected, must reach, including the buildings, to nearly £100,000. It is understood that nearly the whole of the parties who had wool deposited in their premises were protected from loss by floating policies.

From the examination made on Monday by Mr. Hodsall, the assessor of losses, it is his opinion that the salvage in the ruins will amount, when collected together, to several thousand pounds; indeed, one gentleman in the wool line on business, who visited the ruins, offered the sum of £3000 for what remained, undertaking, at his own expense, to clear the same away. This offer was refused. How the fire originated, has not been ascertained.

OFFICIAL REPORT

Saturday, Oct. 6, 1849, a fire broke out at 65, London-wall, belonging to Messrs. Gooch and Cousens, wool merchants and brokers. Called by a stranger at a quarter past 10 P.M. The cause of fire unknown. The buildings were insured in the Royal Exchange Fire Office.

Engines that attended.—Six belonging to the A district of the London Establishment, one of the parish, and one of the West of England Insurance Company. The whole of the warehouses burned down.

Carpenters' Hall, No. 68, London-wall.—The end walls and windows burned out; staircase leading to court, room, and offices, also the roof damaged by fire. The furniture damaged by fire and water. The building is the property of the Carpenters' Company, and is insured in the Sun and Hand-in-Hand Fire-Office. The furniture, &c., were insured in the Union Fire-Office.

Sadler-place, London-wall, Nos. 1 to 18, all let out in tenements.—Roofs and back walls damaged by fire and breakage, and the furniture injured by hasty removal. The buildings, which belong to the Sadlers' Company, were insured in the Royal Exchange Office, but the furniture was not insured."

THE HYBRID MAIZE CROP IN ST. JAMES'S PARK.

On Wednesday, the Maize introduced into this country from the Pyrenees, and sown as an experiment in St. James's Park, by Mr. Keane, was harvested. It has fully succeeded. The grain is perfectly formed, full, and ripe: the cobs are much finer than those grown on the Continent; a result—peculiarly gratifying in a public point of view—of very high importance; because it sets at rest the doubts which, in the first instance, were entertained in some quarters, that the soil and climate of this country were not capable of the product. The particular situation was in no way especially favourable to the growth; on the contrary, almost, as it were, in the heart of the metropolis, and immediately surrounded by trees and shrubs, the ground was not at all enriched by manure at the time of filling.

BARBADOES CORN.

The amount of crop appears to be at the rate of about fifty bushels per acre: and, in the opinion of several experienced agriculturists present at the harvest, this quantity is producible on the average, from ordinary soil, in ordinary situations, and with the ordinary quantity and quality of manure. Some American corn and Barbadoes corn had been sown alongside Mr. Keane's maize, at the same time, and under exactly the same circumstances and conditions; but neither has ripened, nor, indeed, seems likely to come to maturity. They still remain standing. The result of this harvest is of great interest, when it is matter of fact that the bread from this corn, which forms not merely the chief but almost the only food of the fine peasantry on either side of the Pyrenees, is producible, even in England, at a halfpenny the pound.

A Correspondent from West Cowes, Isle of Wight, writes:—"About five years ago I sowed some seeds of Indian corn, from its native place, when a few ripened, but many failed. I have also planted the seeds of last year, and this year not one seed has failed: they are remarkably strong, and in full bearing; but I shall leave them to harden till the end of October. I should add, that this year I steeped the seeds in water, from six to eight days, before sowing, which both expedited their coming up, and saved them from the depredations of mice and vermin. I shall this year weigh the proceeds, and compare the weight with that of wheat and barley from a similar quantity of ground.

"I have no doubt of its acclimatising, just as well as many other articles of vegetation which have been brought to our shores. Of course, this can only be done by re-sowing the seed of European or English growth.

"Mr. Cobbett sent me some seeds from France—two sorts, twenty seeds of each: all came up, and one sort is now seven feet high (none the better for that); another is about two feet; others from three to four feet.

"The value, of course, depends on comparison. All cattle seemed greatly pleased with the little I could give them. This year, for the first time, from the flower, or feathery shoots on the top of them, there was on most of the plants a small cone or body of seeds, as also some few scattered on the feathery part; but this cone was not protected by leaves or sheath as the side cones are. These unprotected seeds the birds carried off quickly, showing the necessity of the guard of leaves. I saved a few for seed, to try if they would grow.

"In your article on Sept. 15, you state that the seed springs from the top, but it grows as above, from the sides, protected by a sheath-like case of leaves."

Another Correspondent, writing from Filey, Yorkshire, says: "I beg to make a few remarks on a letter in your paper of Sept. 22, wherein it states that disappointment would result from attempting to cultivate Indian corn or Maize in this country, the climate not being hot enough, &c. I have just returned from a tour in the United States of America, where the grain is grown in great quantities, and have ascertained that the price of this corn, as it is called there, is only 12½ cents, or 6d. the bushel of 56 lb., in any part of the West—Ohio, for example; and at this price, even, is grown at a good profit. In the present state of things, therefore, it may always be purchased in the home market for a less sum than it could be cultivated. A barrel of flour, 196 lb.—4½ to 5 bushels of wheat sells at New York, U. S., for 5 dollars, or 20s. sterling, English.

"Agricultural labour in Ohio is 50 cents per day—2s., with board and lodging. Navvies on railroads get 4s. per day, board and lodging included, in the United States. In 1848, the Americans grew 900,000,000 quarters of grain, and used only for themselves 300,000,000.

"I saw also large fields of Buck-wheat (not grown in England, I believe), which looks like white clover in flower, with a stalk of about one foot: also, fields of so-called Broom-wheat, grown solely to make brooms or brushes for general use in every house. The Americans have maiden land to any extent, and unlimited water-power at hand, for grist mills; all tending to teach us that their country will be the Granary of the World."

AMERICAN CORN.

FORTY-DAY MAIZE, AS PRODUCED IN ST. JAMES'S PARK.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1849.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 395.—VOL. XV.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1849. [SIXPENCE.

IRISH EVICTIONS.

THE state of Ireland has again become the one topic of paramount interest. All other subjects of foreign or domestic politics yield to its urgency. Nothing like the misery of the Irish people exists under the sun. Even the gleam of hope that appeared to brighten their prospects a few weeks ago, when a harvest more than usually abundant was ripe for the sickle, has disappeared. The very abundance of the crop has proved a new source of disquietude, of heart-burnings, of agrarian conflict, and of national misery. The transient hope has yielded to a more permanent despair. The landlords evict their miserable tenants by hundreds and by thousands; the miserable tenants go to the Union, or receive out-door relief at the rate of seven-eighths of a penny per day, till the munificent allowance lapses in the grave;—while the small farmers, still in possession of a portion of the soil, struggle with the landlords, and with the constabulary, for the crop. The Irish papers teem with accounts of outrages. Each day's struggle of the farmer with his landlord becomes more fierce than the struggle of yesterday. The landlords are at their wits' end, for to them, also, it is a question of ownership or confiscation—life or death. Their tenants cling with dishonest, but scarcely unnatural, tenacity to a crop, the whole of which is not sufficient to pay rent, poor's-rates, county cess, and arrears, but some portion of which is fairly due to the absolute necessities of the men who ploughed or dug the soil, and sowed the seed. The great bulk of the people either take the part of the farmers against the lords of the soil, or, to use the words of Mr. Poulett Scrope, bear the barbarities they suffer "with a patience and resignation which it is heart-breaking to witness, and which one scarcely knows whether to praise or to blame."

The prospects of the approaching winter are certainly not encouraging, when we reflect upon these things. Evictions become more numerous, as defalcations increase. How are they to be stopped? is the question that people ask. Mr. Poulett Scrope, in his valuable and interesting "Notes of a Tour in England, Scotland, and Ireland, with a view to inquire whether our labouring population be really redundant," describes the actual state of the case in forcible language:—"A moment's consideration," he says, "will shew the futility of expecting any mercy to be shewn to these poor people by those whom the law at present arms with the power of destroying them. It sounds very well to English ears to preach forbearance and generosity to the landowners. But it should be remembered that few of them have it in their power to be merciful or generous to their poor tenantry. They act under compulsion, usually of the severest kind. They are themselves engaged in a life and death struggle with their creditors. Moreover, the greater number of the depopulators are mere agents for absent landlords or for the law-receivers under the courts acting for creditors, and bound by the established rules and avowed practice of the Court o. Chancery itself (the fountain and head of justice) to make the utmost of the property entrusted to them, without regard to any other consideration than the pecuniary interest of the parties, which is committed to their care. Those landlords who have yet some voice in the management of their estates, seeing the highest court of judicature in the realm sanction this principle of action, think themselves justified—most of them, indeed, are compelled by the overwhelming pressure of their own difficulties—to follow the example. It is vain to expect mercy to be shown under such circumstances. All is done in the sacred name of the law. The Sheriff, the representative of the majesty of the law, is the actual exterminator. The officers of the law execute the process. The constabulary, acting under the orders of the magistracy, stand by to prevent resistance; and if any is expected, the Queen's troops are brought to the spot, to quell with all the power of the throne what would amount to an act of rebellion. It is absurd, then, to cast the blame or these foul deeds, and their horrible results, upon a few reckless, bankrupt, wretched landlords. It is to the law, or rather to the Government and Legislature which uphold it, and refuse to mitigate its ferocity, that the crime rightly attaches; and they will be held responsible for it by history, by posterity—aye, and perhaps before long, by the retributive justice of God, and the vengeance of a people infuriated by barbarous oppression, and brought at last to bay by their destroyers." These are strong words—but they are true. Yet it is impossible to see how evictions are to be entirely prevented. If a landlord's property swarms with a tenantry too ignorant and dispirited to cultivate the land, and too poor or too dishonest to pay the rent agreed upon, he must evict them, or become a pauper himself. Man for man, he will consider that his life is as valuable as theirs, and that there is no necessity why he and his family should starve, in order that his tenantry may be ed. No law that the Legislature could devise can force a landlord to let his farms to paupers, unless it should boldly confiscate his land once for all, for the benefit of the incompetent and the dishonest—a course of proceeding which the greatest foe of the eviction system would scarcely recommend; and which, even if acted upon, might not be to the advantage of the paupers it was intended to serve. The truth is, that these evictions, under the peculiar and most melancholy circumstances of Ireland, are not merely a legal, but a natural process; and, however much we may deplore the misery from which they spring, and which they so dreadfully aggravate, we cannot compel the Irish proprietors to continue in their miserable holdings the wretched swarms of people who pay no rent, and who prevent the improvement of property as long as they remain upon it.

WHALE CAPTURED IN THE THAMES, AT GRAYS, ESSEX.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

Two things, however, we can and must do, unless we intend to convert Ireland into a wilderness where grouse or deer may breed, but where no human foot may tread, save those of the gamekeeper and the sportsman. We must see whether the wholesale evictions of families may not be prevented, in degree, if not entirely, by rendering the landlords responsible for the lives of the people. The first of these things is supposed to be provided for by the operation of the present Poor-law. It is held that if the landlord deprive his tenants of their little holdings and drive them into the Union or upon the out-door relief lists, he shall be answerable for their maintenance, and pay an augmented poor-rate for the permission to clear his estates. But in practice the law does not work to this end. The evicting landlord manages to shirk his burden, and fix it upon the shoulders of others who do not evict, and upon those of such tenants and occupiers as can still contrive to make both ends meet. The evicting landlord, instead of bearing, as he ought to do, the whole burden which his own mismanagement or extravagance, or those of his ancestors and predecessors, brought upon his estate, contrives, by evicting, to shift the greater portion upon his neighbours, upon the Union, upon the Rate in Aid, or upon the National Treasury. It is competent to the State to make the eviction, and him only, responsible for the life and subsistence of the evictee. If the landlord, as we assert, is not bound to be merciful to the pauper tenant who does not pay rent, the Union or the Government, whichever it may be, is, upon the same principle, exonerated from being merciful to the bankrupt landlord who does not pay his full amount of poor-rates. The law is inexorable in the one case; it must be equally so in the other, if it intend to do justice.

The second thing to be done for Ireland is equally obvious to all who know her abundant resources and her natural fertility; resources and fertility so great as to be able to afford, with ordinary good management, a comfortable subsistence for double or even treble her present population. A starving people, and millions of waste but cultivable lands, are two co-existent facts which disgrace our civilization. The Irish rate-payers—aided by grants of public money, and by the benevolence of wealthy individuals in England —maintain upwards of a million and a half of paupers, of whom a third at the very lowest calculation are able-bodied, either in total idleness, or in unproductive and merely penal labour. On every side of the Union-houses where these hives of much-devouring pauperism exist, are thousands of waste acres that only require the expenditure of capital, skill, and labour upon them to feed all these people at a profit. The Unions are already capitalists. Some of them—that of Kilrush, for instance—spend £1000 per week, or £52,000 per annum, in feeding paupers who perform nothing in return but penal labour. Why should not these Unions expend some portion of that capital in the cultivation of bogs and mountain slopes? The skill cannot be supposed to be wanting, with Boards of Guardians to direct, and practised agriculturists to be had as bailiffs, for a decent salary. As for the labour, it is superabundant. The Unions have, therefore, all that is required—the money to expend, and the able-bodied men to employ. Aye! but the land? It is there the difficulty lies. The land is not purchaseable. Waste and all but worthless as it is, the title is complicated and cumbrous, and the real or nominal proprietors, though willing, are not able to sell, and Boards of Guardians are not able to purchase, without the intervention of the Legislature.

Under the law as it at present stands, Boards of Guardians are empowered to hire the maximum quantity of forty imperial or statute acres, for erecting their union houses, fever hospitals, school houses, &c., and for instructing children in an improved system of the cultivation of land." Wherever Boards of Guardians have tried to make the labour of paupers reproductive, they have succeeded; but, as they cannot purchase land in their corporate capacity, and the landlord from the fulness of the full payment of rates, and do not proceed to the seizure of such portion of his land as will satisfy their claims for arrears of poor-rate, the land lies waste, and paupers live in idleness—consuming and, in fact, destroying the country. By the act of last Session the full amount of the poor-rate is leviable from the landed property of the district, and the land itself is made saleable for the recovery of the amount. "Yes," says Mr. Poulett Scrope, "in the face of this liability, the Commissioners, that is, the Government, are satisfying themselves with levying only a small proportion, a fourth or a third, of the expenditure, making up the deficiency from other sources." The mercy shown to evicting landlords in this respect acts as a premium upon evictions, and increases the acreage of the waste lands in Ireland, and will end in the utter ruin of every interest in the country. Paupers, shop-keepers, farmers, professional men, and landed proprietors are all floundering in the slough of starvation. Five hundred thousand persons, strong-bodied, and accustomed to agricultural labour, are fed in Ireland without yielding an equivalent in productive labour. What can be the result of such a system? Ruin, and ruin only, and it seems to be fast approaching.

CAPTURE OF A WHALE IN THE THAMES.

In the afternoon of Tuesday week, several labourers in the employ of Messrs. Messon, lime-merchants, at Grays, had their attention drawn to a dark object floating in the Thames, which appeared to be a vessel keel upwards. Its violent plunging, however, soon caused the observers to change their opinion. The tide was low, and they forthwith perceived it to be a whale, hard and fast ashore on the Black Shelf, a shoal abreast of Grays. Boats were put off, and with much difficulty the whale was secured with ropes, when it proved to be a "finner," measuring fifty-eight feet in length, and thirty in girth. As the tide flowed, arrangements were made to haul it on shore; and as the water floated it, desperate were the attempts made by the creature to regain its freedom. The ropes, however, held it fast; it was dragged to land, and there killed with a sword. The labourers were of Trinculo's opinion that the monster would make a man, and not a holiday fool but would give a piece of silver to see it: a screen was soon raised about the carcase, and the captors were soon in the way of making a handsome sum by the exhibition of the prize.

This Whale, like other strange waifs, is likely to be the cause of litigation. On Saturday, the Lord Mayor, attended by the City solicitor, proceeded to Grays, for the purpose of officially asserting his claims to the crown, as Conservator of the River, and giving it up to the service of the captors, upon condition that they would not convey it to London or Gravesend for exhibition, nor allow it to become a nuisance anywhere. The Lordship, upon approaching the spot where the whale lay, experienced the desirableness of insisting upon the latter condition: for the stench had already become very great. No sooner was his Lordship's intention of giving up the prize announced, than there sprang up a number of claimants, at the head of whom was Captain Corbet, who, with his men, first pursued the whale, and, by aid of some watermen, secured it. The Lords of the Admiralty made no claim to it as a droit, having received experience from a precedent in 1809, when they were put to great expense in defending their claim to a whale taken in the river, but which was demanded by Sir Charles Flower, then Lord Mayor, as Conservator of the Thames and Medway, and entitled to all the "Royal fish" caught within the City limits; and to his Lordship the whale was ultimately adjudged.

There is no small animosity among the captors, the sum of £150 having been offered for the carcase, which is rich in oil; but they have been recommended to refer their claims to the arbitration of Captain Ronaldson, the principal harbour master. Meanwhile, the exhibition at Grays is flourishing at Trinculo's price 6d. a head.

ANTIQUARIAN DISCOVERY.—A short time since, as the ploughman of Mr. Michael Rose, of Long Crendon, Bucks, was ploughing, his plough came in contact with a large stone, which proved to be the lid of a cistern, about two feet square, containing three earthen urns, and a few bones. The urns are small, the largest standing about 8 inches, and are of a brown colour; the largest worked, the others quite plain.

The Church and State Gazette contains the following statement:—"We are informed, on good authority, that many Wesleyan ministers, dissatisfied with their system of church government, and not the least so with the recent proceedings, are meditating a resignation of their charge, and a course of study preparatory to offering themselves for ordination in our church."

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

Rumours, not quite groundless, of a Ministerial crisis, arising out of M. Thiers' report on the money-credits to defray the expense of the Roman expedition, prevailed in Paris in the early part of the week. M. Thiers had been appointed by the committee to which the question had been referred by the Legislative Assembly to draw up a report, and he had accordingly prepared the document, read it to the Assembly on Saturday last. It is of great length, and enters very fully and elaborately into the subject. It gives a description of the history of three years past, and their results in the year 184-. It refers to the liberal intentions manifested by the Pope on his accession, and the hopes excited in the breasts of all reasonable men, that the Italian States would be endowed with such liberty as they were fitted for. In some states administrative reforms simply would have been introduced as preparatory to political institutions; and, in the most advanced, the representative system would have been admitted. These fine expectations were overthrown; for "a disorderly faction, which placed the satisfaction of its own passions far above the true interests of its own cause, seized upon Italy, and plunged her into an abyss. Everywhere it exceited the populations to [illegible] sanguinary hatred in relation to the state of minds or manners. Everywhere those into republican institutions who were incapable at the moment of elevating themselves above municipal and provincial liberties; and it committed the worst fault of all—that which ends in the loss of every liberty—by attacking thereby the further fault of turning the arms of the people against their Governments. The capital of the Catholic world, deprived of the Pope, had thus become a Republic. "The Republic could not," says the report, "have escaped from Austrian influence. It was the duty of France, therefore, to intervene and to establish an equilibrium by preventing Austria from marching an army to Rome. Every interest imperiously called for this step. But then Rome was a Republic, and the constitution forbad France to arm itself against the liberty of a people. But, continues M. Thiers, "the constitution, though a bad one, did not, when it consecrated such a rule, intend that evil passions, even though they avowed themselves in a Republic, should not be chastised. The constitution was not violated, therefore, by the intervention of a French army. The expedition had cost France sacrifices, but the soldiers of France had been the admiration of all the world by their bravery." The report then proceeds to show that the mots propres to all that could be desired; that the Pope could grant no more; and that, as for the credits, they are small and economical compared with what might have been expected. The report thus sacrifices completely the letter of the President of the Republic, whose programme of Government reform for Rome seems entirely set at nought, no mention, in fact, being made of the letter in the document

In the Assembly, as soon as the spirit of M. Thiers' report was discovered by the enunciation of the principle that the Italian people were not fit for more than certain municipal privileges, a tempest arose amongst the members of the left benches, but not of so violent a character as to prevent the hon. gentleman from reading his report to the end.

In the Cabinet, the embarrassment created by the probability of the Assembly's adopting the report, and thus pronouncing against the avowed policy of Ministers who have taken the President's letter as the basis thereof, did not pass away quite so readily. It was stated, among other things, that the President of the Republic had made up his mind for a rupture with the policy indicated in the report of M. Thiers; and that a notification to that effect would appear in the columns of the Moniteur.

At a later date, however, a compromise was considered probable—that M. Thiers would make some allusion in the debate in the Assembly to the President's letter, and that the Government would not oppose the taking of the report into consideration. Up to the date of our latest advices, however, the differences between the President and M. Thiers' party were no adjusted. Several attempts at reconciliation had been made, but it does not appear that they had proved successful

Rumours of various kinds were afloat, but they were of no moment.

Another subject of embarrassment for the President and his Ministry is the proposition of M. Napoleon Bonaparte to repeal the laws excluding both branches of the Bourbon family from France. The committee of the Assembly to which the question has been referred, having asked the opinion of Ministers upon it, they said that they thought the moment inopportune, and that the proposal ought to be adjourned, and the inquiries decided on drawing up a report in that sense.

The project of law for the payment of the dowry of the Duchess of Orleans has been passed in the Assembly by a large majority

At the Versailles Assizes Fontaine was found guilty of the two charges brought against him, namely, 1st, of having on the 15th of May, 1848, committed an attentat, the object of which was to destroy or change the Government; and, secondly, of having, by the attempt to invade the Hall, excited war by inducing the citizens to arm themselves the one against the other. He was sentenced to transportation.

The train of the other prisoners are going on in a very quiet manner, interrupted only by an exciting scene which occurred on Tuesday. M. Girardin, editor of the Presse, was examined, and gave it as his opinion that the Constitution had been violated by the arrest of Fontaine, and that it was strictly legal. The Attorney-General controverted this declaration. M. Girardin was about explaining, when the Attorney-General rose and opposed the course that the witness was pursuing. The gravity of the Court was here disturbed by all the prisoners rising, and demanding that M. Girardin should be heard in justification of his views. The surprise and confusion became so great, that the business of the Court was suspended for some time, when, after an exchange of a few angry words between M. Girardin and the Attorney-General, the latter withdrew, and the trial proceeded.

A letter from Toulon of the 13th states that the French fleet had been ordered to put to sea, and would, it was rumoured, join that of Admiral Parker, off Smyrna.

GERMAN STATES.

The following convention between Prussia and Austria, relative to the establishment of a Provisional Central Power for Germany, has just been published. An introductory article to the convention, formally effecting the retreat of the Archduke Vicar, is followed by these paragraphs:—

1. The Governments of the German Confederation, in concert with the Vicar, agree on a provisional form or mode of exercising the rights of sovereignty, and the fulfilment of obligations of the central power for the German Confederation in the name of all the Governments of the Confederation, until the 1st of May, 850, unless this power should be transferred to a definitive power before that period.

2. The object of the interim is to maintain the German Confederation as a union founded on the right of the states appertaining to the German Princes and of the free cities, to having preserved the independence and the integrity of their states comprised in the Confederation, and to having maintained the internal and external security of Germany.

3. So long as the interim lasts, the affair of the German constitution is left to the free consideration of the individual states.

It is the same with those affairs which, by art. 6 of the Federative Act, belong to the full Assembly of the Diet.

4. If, at the expiration of the interim, the German constitutional question should be not yet settled, the German Governments will come to an understanding with respect to the prolongation of the present treaty.

5. The affairs hitherto carried on by the Provisional Central Power, in so far as, according to the legislation of the Confederation, they come within the competence of the Assembly, are transmitted for the entire duration of the interim to a dietary committee, to which Prussia and Austria appoint each two members. [illegible] Frankfort. The other governments are represented by plenipotentiaries accredited to the said committee, either by each individual state or by several states conjointly.

6. The committee of the Confederation carries on affairs in an independent manner, but are responsible to the powers represented in the committee. The seat of the committee of direction is common. If the members cannot agree, the decision takes place by means of negotiation between the Governments of Prussia and Austria, and which latter, in case of need, will refer to a judgment by arbitration. This judgment is pronounced by three plenipotentiaries of the Confederation. In such case, Austria will nominate each time one of the arbiters and Prussia the other. The two governments thus designated have to decide upon a third arbiter for completing the tribunal of arbitration. The members of the Committee of the Confederation decide the affairs submitted to them by a majority of votes according to the Legislature of the meeting Confederation, and especially according to the Military Constitution of the Confederation, they effect no innovation in or else direct any superintendence over the contingents thereon.

7. As soon as the ratification by the governments aforesaid of the present proposition shall have taken place, the Archduke Vicar will renounce his dignity and depose the rights and duties of the Confederation that have been confided to him into the hands of the Emperor of Austria and the King of Prussia.

This treaty between Prussia and Austria was signed at Vienna on the 30th of September, and ratified by Prussia on the 10th of October. The ratification of Austria is expected in some days.

ITALIAN STATES.

